A person who is under no duty to repair a highway or bridge has, as against the owner of the soil, no right to repair it (Campbell Davys v. Lloyd, [1901] 2 Ch. 518); if he does so without objection being taken, he cannot recover his expenditure from the party liable to do the repairs (Macclesfield Corporation v. G. C. Rail. Co., [1911] 2 K. B. 528; 75 J. P. 369). Nor, in general, is a member of the public entitled to abate a nuisance in a highway (Dimes v. Petley (1850), 15 Q. B. 276; Roberts v. Rose (1865), L. R. 1 Ex. 82; 30 J. P. 5). Under the L. G. A., 1894, s. 26, post, it is the duty of every district council to prevent as far as possible the stopping or obstruction of any public right of way. In Bagshaw v. Buxton L. B. (1875), 1 Ch. D. 220; 40 J. P. 197, the court refused to grant an injunction to restrain a local authority from removing an enclosure of the highway which amounted to a nuisance; but did not decide whether an authority as surveyor of highways could lawfully abate an obstruction before obtaining a judicial determination that it was in fact an obstruction. It has now, however, been expressly decided that an urban district council have power to remove an obstruction without any preliminary conviction, and to recover from the person who placed it on the highway the expenses of removing it (Reynolds v. Presteign U. D. C., [1896] 1 Q. B. 604; 60 J. P. 296); and it seems clear that a rural council is in the same position (Louth U. D. C. v. West (1896), 65 L. J. Q. B. 535; 60 J. P. 600; Harris v. Northamptonshire C. C. (1897), 61 J. P. 599). See the latter case as to the powers of a county council in this behalf. In Gaby v. Palmer (1916), 80 J. P. 212; 14 L. G. R. 491, which was a case decided under a local Act, it was held that an owner of land was liable to remove and otherwise make secure certain unsafe ground abutting upon a highway from which there was an apprehended danger of obstruction to the public using the highway. See also generally, National Telephone Co. v. St. Peter Port (Constables of), [1900] A. C. 317), and Webster v. Bakewell R. D. C. (1916), 80 J. P. 437; 14 L. G. R. 1109. As to the obstruction of a highway by the loading and unloading of carts, see Att.-Gen. v. Brighton and Hove Co-operative Supply Association, [1900] 1 Ch. 276; Att.-Gen. v. W. H. Smith & Son (1910), 74 J. P. 313; 26 T. L. R. 482, and cf. also Ruoff v. Long & Co., [1916] 1 K. B. 148; 80 J. P. 158, a case where damage was caused by the interference of third parties with a standing vehicle; and Simpson v. Metropolitan Water Board (1917), 15 L. G. R. 629. As to obstruction by theatre queues, see Lyons, Sons & Co. v. Gulliver, [1914] 1 Ch. 631; 78 J. P. 98.

Use of steam rollers.

The plaintiffs, a gas company, laid pipes beneath certain streets, as they were bound by statute to do, for the purpose of supplying gas to light the streets and houses therein. The streets were vested in the defendants by certain statutes which gave them the authority of the surveyor of highways, with the duty to repair, but prescribed no particular mode of repair. The defendants used steam rollers as being a mode of repair most advantageous to both the ratepayers and the public, but such rollers were so heavy as to frequently injure the plaintiffs' pipes, although laid sufficiently deep not to have been injured by the ordinary mode of repair if such rollers had not been used. The plaintiffs were held entitled not only to damages for the injury done, but also to an injunction to restrain the defendants from using steam rollers in such a way as to injure the pipes (Gas Light and Coke Co. v. St. Mary Abbotts, Kensington (Vestry of) (1885), 15 Q. B. D. 1; 49 J. P. 469; and see Gas Light and Coke Co. v. St. George's, Hanover Square (1887), 3 T. L. R. 581; Alliance and Dublin Consumers Gas Co. v. Dublin C. C., [1901] 1 I. R. 402). See also as to liability for an explosion due to the fracture of a gas pipe by a steam roller, Driscoll v. Poplar District Board (1897), Times, December 8th; as to liability for an explosion due to the fracture of a gas pipe in the course of laying a sewer, Hardaker v. *Idle D. Stopping up highways.

With reference to the powers and duties of a district council in stopping up highways, reference may be made to United Land Co. v. Tottenham L. B. (1884), 13 Q. B. D. 640; 48 J. P. 726. It was there held that the charges of a solicitor employed by an urban authority to conduct proceedings at the instance of an individual for the stopping up or diverting of a highway under the Highway Act, 1835, ss. 84, 85, are not "expenses" within the meaning of s. 84 of that Act so as to be recoverable under ibid. s. 101. And, semble, all the steps required by s. 85 to be taken for the purpose of obtaining the order of sessions, are ministerial acts which ought to be done by the surveyor of the authority appointed under s. 189, post, p. 447.

Trusts for repair of highways and bridges.

As to the right of a council to receive the income of a charity given for the repair of a road or bridge, see Att.-Gen. v. Day, [1900] 1 Ch. 31; 64 J. P. 88; In re Hall's Charity, Severn Commissioners v. Hall's Charity Trustees and Worcestershire C. C. (1912), 76 J. P. 9; 28 T. L. R. 32.

A local board had not, as surveyors of highways, any authority over turnpike roads (per BRAMWELL, B., in Nutter v. Accrington L. B. (1878), 4 Q. B. D. 375. And see s. 148, post, p. 269, and Lancashire JJ. v. Rochdale (Mayor of), cited in the notes thereto).

Limitation of actions.

It was held in Taylor v. Meltham L. B. (1878), 47 L. J. C. P. 12, that an action against a local authority as surveyors of highways might be commenced within the six months allowed by s. 264, post (now repealed), and need not be commenced within the three months prescribed by the Highway Act, 1835, s. 109. And, again, where a local board in repairing a road negligently left a heap of stones upon it, whereby injury was caused to the plaintiff, it was held that the board were acting under this Act and not under the Highway Act, and that the period of limitation was, therefore, six and not three months (Kay v. Atherton L. B. (1878), 42 J. P. 792). But where a corporation were surveyors of highways by a local Act, which made them subject to all such liabilities as any surveyors of highways were subject to by virtue of the law for the time being in force, and there was nothing to show that the corporation were acting under this Act, it was held that the period of limitation was three and not six months (Burton v. Corporation of Salford (1883), 11 Q. B. D. 286; 47 J. P. 614). This case was followed in Graham v. Newcastle-upon-Tyne (Mayor, etc. of) (No. 2), [1893] 1 Q. B. 643; 57 J. P. 596, and Taylor v. Meltham L. B. and Kay v. Atherton L. B. were expressly overruled, it being held that an urban authority constituted surveyors of highways by s. 144 of the P. H. A., 1875, were not liable to be sued for negligence in the management of highways unless the action was commenced within three months under s. 109 of the Highway Act, 1835. However, s. 264 of this Act and s. 109 of the Highway Act, 1835, are both now repealed by s. 2 of the Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893, post, by s. 1 of which a period of six months' limitation next after the act, default or neglect complained of, or in the case of a continuance of injury or damage, six months next after the ceasing thereof, is made generally applicable.

As to the discretion of a district council as surveyors of highways when it is sought to make a road in their district a public highway, see R. v. Dukinfield (1863), 27 J. P. 805; 4 B. & S. 158.

Highway Acts.

(d) The chief of these are 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50; 4 & 5 Vict. c. 51; 8 & 9 Vict. c. 71; 25 & 26 Vict. c. 61; 27 & 28 Vict. c. 101; 28 & 29 Vict. c. 107; 41 & 42 Vict. c. 77; 45 & 46 Vict. c. 27; 54 & 55 Vict. c. 63.

The provisions for making highway rates are contained in ss. 216, 217, post.

Limit on highway rate abolished.

(e) By the Highway Act, 1835, s. 29, the consent of four-fifths of the inhabitants of any parish contributing to the highway rate, at a meeting specially called for that purpose, was necessary before such rate might exceed 2*s.* 6*d.* in the pound on the whole in any one year. That section was held to be impliedly repealed by the provisions in the text in the case of a highway rate made by an urban authority under this Act (Dyson v. Greetland L. B. (1883), 47 J. P. 260; (1884), 13 Q. B. D. 946; 48 J. P. 596). Having regard to the L. G. A., 1894, s. 25, cited in note (b), this decision apparently applies also in the case of a precept for highway expenses made by a rural authority.

Ministerial acts.

(f) As to the construction of this paragraph, see United Land Co. v. Tottenham L. B., ante, p. 265. An urban district council must appoint a surveyor (s. 189, post, p. 447); there is no such obligation upon a rural district council, i.e., to appoint a surveyor for sanitary purposes as distinct from highway purposes. See notes to ss. 189 and 190, post. See also the definition of "surveyor" in s. 4. Note to Section 144.

Inhabitants of urban district not liable to rates for roads outside district.

145. The inhabitants within any urban district shall not in respect of any property situated therein be liable to the payment of highway rate or other payment, not being a toll, in respect of making or repairing roads or highways without such district: Provided that any person who in any place after the passing of this Act ceases under or by virtue of any provision of this Act, or of any order made thereunder, to be surveyor of highways within such place, may recover any highway rate made in respect of such place, and remaining unpaid at the time of his so ceasing to be such surveyor, as if he had not ceased to be such surveyor; and the money so recovered shall be applied, in the first place, in reimbursing himself any expenses incurred by him as such surveyor, and in discharging any debts legally owing by him on account of the highways within his jurisdiction; and the surplus (if any) shall be paid by him to the treasurer of the urban authority, and carried to the fund or rate applicable to the repair of highways within their district.

This section would appear to be now largely spent. Until rural district councils succeeded to the powers and duties of highway authorities under the L. G. A., 1894, s. 25, certain areas outside some urban districts were treated as forming part of such districts for highway purposes. See also notes to s. 216, post.

There may be cases in which it is reasonable that ratepayers in an urban district should bear the whole or part of the expense of making or repairing a road in another district, as for example a road which is principally required or used as an approach to a borough hospital. The Highways and Bridges Act, 1891, in App. I., post, Vol. II., may be referred to.

Power of urban authority to agree as to making of new public roads.

146. Any urban authority may agree (a) with any person for the making of roads within their district for the public use through the lands and at the expense of such person, and may agree that such roads shall become and the same shall accordingly (b) become on completion (c) highways maintainable and repairable by the inhabitants at large within their district; they may also, with the consent of two-thirds of their number, agree with such person to pay, and may accordingly pay, any portion of the expenses of making such roads (d).

As to the application of this section in rural districts, see the L. G. A., 1894, s. 25, cited ante, p. 254, and post.

(a) This agreement should be in writing and under seal: cf. Hoare v. Kingsbury U. D. C., in notes to s. 154, post, p. 323, and Tunbridge Wells Improvement Commissioners v. Southborough L. B., in notes to s. 148, post, p. 270; but see Bromley L. B. v. Lansbury, in note (c), infra. The section is incorporated from 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 39.

Application of section.

The section seems designed to meet the case of the construction of new roads, not the making up of existing roads, though the decision in Bromley L. B. v. Lansbury, infra, has a contrary tendency. In a case which came before them, the L. G. B. held that a rural district council who had not been invested with the powers of an urban authority under s. 150 in regard to a particular private street, had no power to enter into an agreement with owners under s. 146 for the making up of the street and the payment of expenses by the owners. See also note (d), infra.

(b) That is, in accordance with the agreement.

(c) See Saunders v. Brading Harbour Improvement, Railway and Works Co. (1885), 52 L. T. 426, cited at length in the notes to s. 152, post, p. 319.

In Bromley L. B. v. Lansbury (1894), Times, Dec. 5th, a new road was laid out in 1878; in 1884, buildings having been erected on each side of it, an arrangement, not under seal, was made between defendant, one of the frontagers, and the plaintiffs, that it should be made up to the satisfaction of the plaintiffs' surveyor, and should be kept in repair by the frontagers for six months, and that the plaintiffs should then adopt it. This arrangement was carried out, but the plaintiffs did not, after the expiration of six months, give the usual notice of adoption under s. 152. Subsequently, in consequence of heavy traffic, the road fell into disrepair, and the plaintiffs having paved it under s. 150, post, p. 286, sought to recover a share of the expense from the defendant in the county court. It was held there, and on appeal by GRANTHAM and LAWRANCE, JJ., that the plaintiffs were bound by the arrangement come to in 1884, having accepted the work then done by defendant.

By an agreement made in 1879 between owners of property and a local authority, it was agreed that a road should be dedicated to the public and accepted by the authority as a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, subject, nevertheless, to the authority retaining the power of calling upon the frontagers for the time being to make up such parts of it as were not already properly made up, and reserving to the authority all the powers under s. 150, post, p. 286. The roadway was properly made up at the date of the agreement, but the footway was not paved. At a later date the authority, who had by that time adopted the Private Street Works Act, 1892, proposed to pave the footway under that Act and to charge the expenses against the frontagers. Upon objections to the provisional apportionment by frontagers who had bought from the original owners, it was held that the powers sought to be enforced did not apply to a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, and that, the road having been accepted as such, the parties to the agreement could not thereby give jurisdiction to proceed under the Act (Mayor, etc. of Folkestone v. Marsh (1906), 70 J. P. 113; 94 L. T. 511). In a later case arising out of the same agreement, the authority sued a frontager for apportioned expenses. The frontager had taken no objection to the provisional or final apportionments under ss. 7 and 12 of the Act. Marsh's Case, supra, was apparently not cited; and it was held that if the meaning of the agreement was that the roads were, as between the parties, to be deemed highways repairable by the inhabitants at large, and that—by implication—the corporation undertook not to put into force the Private Street Works Act, 1892 against the frontagers, it was ultra vires. If the deed had no such meaning, it was no bar under the circumstances of the case to proceedings under s. 14 of that Act (Mayor, etc. of Folkestone v. Rook (1907), 71 J. P. 550; 6 L. G. R. 69).

(d) It will be noted that the first agreement mentioned in the section may be made by the authority, i.e., by a mere majority. But the latter agreement requires the consent of two-thirds of the members. The object is obviously to prevent jobbery in the matter. The L. G. B. held that this provision did not enable a district council to contribute towards the cost of putting a private street (i.e., an existing street) in repair. In such a case procedure should be under the Private Street Works Act, 1892, s. 15. See also note (a), supra.

Power of urban authority to construct or adopt public bridges, etc. over or under canals, etc.

147. Any urban authority may agree (a) with the proprietors of any canal railway or tramway to adopt and maintain any existing or projected bridge viaduct or arch within their district, over or under any such canal railway or tramway, and the approaches thereto, and may accordingly adopt and maintain such bridge viaduct or arch and approaches as parts of public streets or roads maintainable and repairable by the inhabitants at large within their district; or such authority may themselves agree to construct any such bridge viaduct or arch at the expense of such proprietors (b); they may also, with the consent of two-thirds of their number (c), agree to pay, and may accordingly pay, any portion of the expenses of the construction or alteration of any such bridge viaduct or arch (d), or of the purchase of any adjoining lands required for the foundation and support thereof or for the approaches thereto. Section 147.

As to the application of this section in rural districts, see the L. G. A., 1894, s. 25, cited ante, p. 254, and post, p. 933.

See also the Highways and Bridges Act, 1891, s. 3, in App. I., post, Vol. II., which enables a local authority to agree with any other local authority or county council for the construction, re-construction, alteration, or improvement, or the freeing from tolls of any main road, or other highway, or of any bridge within the jurisdiction of any of the parties.

(a) The agreement should be under seal, see note (a) to preceding section. This section is re-enacted from 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 40. It is not easy to see how the authority can adopt a projected bridge; but doubtless it means that if the projected bridge be made, the authority may adopt it afterwards. The L. G. B. stated that an agreement should be a permanent one, not one for a limited time.

(b) As to the liability of a railway company to construct bridges, see the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, ss. 46 et seq.; S. E. Rail. Co. v. R. (1853), 4 H. L. Cas. 471; Dartford R. D. C. v. Bexley Heath Rail. Co., [1898] A. C. 210; 62 J. P. 227. For decisions as to the obligations of railway and canal companies to maintain widen, raise or strengthen bridges (with their roadways, approaches and fences) and level crossings, see note (d) to the next section.

(c) Note the same difference as in the last section, note (d), with reference to the entering into these agreements.

(d) The bridge, viaduct, or arch must be one which will be part of a public street or road repairable by the inhabitants at large. Where a district council proposed to make a contribution to a railway company towards the cost of erecting a bridge which the company reserved power to close for one day in each year, or to remove without payment of any compensation to the council, the L. G. B. held that such an agreement was not authorised by the section, and declined to sanction a loan.

The L. G. B. held the provision of a subway beneath a railway to be within the section.

Power of urban authority to enter into agreements with persons liable to repair streets as to repair, etc. thereof.

148. Any urban authority may by agreement (a) with the trustees of any turnpike road (b), or with any person liable (c) to repair any street (d) or road, or any part thereof, or with the surveyor of any county bridge(e), take on themselves the maintenance repair cleansing or watering of any such street or road or any part thereof (f), or of any road over any county bridge, and the approaches thereto (e), or of any part of the said streets or roads within their district and may remove any turnpike gates, toll gates, or bars which may be situated within their district, and may erect other turnpike gates, toll gates, or bars in lieu thereof, on such terms as the urban authority and such trustees or person or surveyor as aforesaid may agree on:

Provided—

That where any mortgage debt is charged on the tolls of any such turnpike road, no agreement shall be made for the removal of any of the toll gates or bars thereon, unless with the previous consent in writing of a majority of at least two-thirds in value of the mortgagees; and

That where the terms arranged include any annual or other payments from such urban authority to the trustees of any such turnpike road, then the payments may be secured on any fund or rate applicable by such authority to any of the purposes of this Act in the same manner as other charges on any such fund or rate are authorised by this Act.

Any executors, administrators, guardians, trustees, or committee of the estate of any idiot or lunatic, who are as such for the time being entitled to Section 148. any money charged or secured on the tolls of any such turnpike road, may consent to any such agreement as aforesaid, as fully as if they respectively were so entitled in their own right, discharged of all trusts in respect thereof; and all executors, administrators, guardians, trustees, and committees so consenting are hereby severally indemnified for so doing.

The italicised portions of this section were repealed by the S. L. R. A., 1898, turnpike trusts being now obsolete.

As to the application of this section to rural district councils, see the L. G. A., 1894, s. 25, and note (b) to s. 144, supra.

(a) The agreement should be under seal (Tunbridge Wells Improvement Commissioners v. Southborough L. B. (1888), 60 L. T. 172). In that case the plaintiffs had covenanted with an individual to construct and maintain a road (along which he was giving them a right of way) in the district of the defendants. The plaintiffs and defendants subsequently agreed that in consideration of the former assenting to a transfer of area—subsequently sanctioned by Parliament—the latter would "adopt" the road and "dedicate" it as a public highway:—Held, that (apart from the want of seal) the agreement was not authorised by the words of this section.

As to how far an agreement made under this section with respect to the repair of the roadway on a railway bridge continues in force when a tramway company have widened the bridge under special statutory powers, see Teddington U. D. C. v. L. & S. W. Rail. Co. (1910), 74 J. P. 119; 102 L. T. 328.

Agreements as to turnpike roads.

(b) An agreement as to turnpike roads made before December 31st, 1870, under the corresponding section of the Act of 1858, was held not to prevent the roads from being still turnpike roads on December 31st, 1870, within the meaning of the Highway Act, 1878, s. 13 (West Riding JJ. v. R. (1884), 8 App. Cas. 781; 48 J. P. 228).

Turnpike trusts, after the commencement of this Act, continued in force as to turnpike roads within an urban sanitary district (per Lord BLACKBURN in Lancashire JJ. v. Rochdale (Mayor of) (1883), 8 App. Cas. 497; 48 J. P. 20). In that case the corporation of R. was the highway authority within the borough. Under ss. 47—50 of the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, the obligation to repair all public highways within the town was imposed upon the corporation, and the turnpike trustees were forbidden to lay out any money on any road within that area. By a local Act in 1872 the boundaries of the borough were enlarged, and all the provisions of the Act relating to the town were extended to the enlarged area. The effect was that further portions of turnpike roads were for the first time brought within the borough and within the operation of ss. 47—50. It was held that these further portions, being only parts of turnpike roads, had not "ceased to be turnpike roads," and were not to be deemed to be "main roads" within s. 13 of the Highways and Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878; and that the county authority were not liable to pay half the expenses of their maintenance.

By a local Act of 1855, incorporating the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, the maintenance of all highways within a district, including a turnpike road, became vested in the commissioners. The trustees of the turnpike road thereupon ceased to repair it within the limits of the district. The turnpike trust expired in 1877. The commissioners were the highway authority for the district, which was a highway area within the Highway Act, 1878, s. 13, post, Vol. II. It was held that, notwithstanding the special legislation in 1855, providing for the maintenance of part of the road by the commissioners, it only ceased to be a turnpike road within the meaning of s. 13, on the expiration of the turnpike trust in 1877, and must therefore be deemed to be a main road, and that consequently one-half of the expenses of the maintenance of the part within the highway area should be paid to the highway authority by the county authority (Newton-in-Makerfield Improvement Commissioners v. Lancashire JJ. (1884), 15 Q. B. D. 25; 49 J. P. 149).

Agreement with persons liable ratione tenuræ.

(c) This section enables an authority to agree with a person who is liable ratione tenuræ to repair some highway that, in consideration of a money payment, the authority shall take over in perpetuity the liability for such repair; such an agreement effectually discharges the land from the liability (In re Earl of Stamford and Warrington, Payne v. Grey (No. 2), [1911] 1 Ch. 648). The Highway Act, 1835,

Note to Section 148.

s. 62, and the Highway Act, 1862, s. 35, provided a procedure by which highways repairable ratione tenuræ in separate highway parishes and in highway districts respectively could become parish highways. That procedure, however, contains restrictions which are sometimes inconvenient, e.g., in the matter of the application of the compensation money, and in such cases it may be found desirable to proceed under this section. In the case of a settled estate a liability to repair rationæ tenuræ is not an " incumbrance " to the redemption of which capital moneys may be applied (In re Hodgson, [1912] 1 Ch. 784).

Bridges.

(d) A bridge which is not a " county bridge " (as to which see note (e), infra) is a " street " as defined by s. 4, ante, p. 15.

Obligations of railway and canal companies in respect of bridges, their roadways, approaches, etc., and level crossings.

Where, in order to fulfil their obligation under the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, s. 46 (see s. 147, note (b), ante, p. 269), a railway company make a bridge to carry a highway over the railway, they are bound to keep the surface of the highway on the bridge and its approaches in repair as being a necessary part of the bridge (L. & Y. Rail. Co. v. Bury (Mayor, etc. of) (1889), 14 App. Cas. 417 ; 54 J. P. 197 ; Glasgow Corporation v. Caledonian Rail. Co., [1909] A. C. 138). And see Buckley v. L. & N. W. Rail. Co. (1896), Times, June 12th. But this liability does not extend to a bridge over the railway which was not strictly made under s. 46 (L. & N. W. Rail. Co. v. Ogwen R. D. C. (1899), 63 J. P. 295 ; 80 L. T. 401) ; nor does it extend to a bridge made to carry an occupation road which has since become a highway (Glasgow Corporation v. Caledonian Rail. Co., supra). It has been held that when, to comply with s. 46, the railway is carried over a highway the company are not bound to repair the highway under the bridge, even though it has been lowered in order to give headway (L. & N. W. Rail. Co. v. Skerton (1864), 28 J. P. 518 ; 5 B. & S. 559) ; but the correctness of this decision has been doubted (Hertfordshire C. C. v. G. E. Rail. Co., infra).

As to a railway company's liability to repair the roadway on a bridge and its approaches when such bridge was made under a special Act prior in date to the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, see Att.-Gen. v. Midland Rail. Co. (1909), 73 J. P. 337 ; 100 L. T. 866).

As to their liability where a bridge originally built by them has been widened by a tramway company under special statutory powers, see Teddington U. D. C. v. L. & S. W. Rail. Co. (1910), 74 J. P. 119 ; 102 L. T. 328 ; and as to their liability in some cases to widen a bridge in accordance with the Railways Clauses Acts, see Rhondda Valley U. D. C. v. Taff Vale Rail. Co., [1909] A. C. 253 ; 73 J. P. 257.

A railway company were authorised to cross a highway by means of a level crossing ; and, the line being at a higher level than the road, they constructed permanent slopes in order to bring the road gradually to the level of the line, and so cross it. It was held that they were under no obligation to keep in repair the surface of these graded approaches (West Lancashire R. D. C. v. L. & Y. Rail. Co., [1903] 2 K. B. 394 ; 67 J. P. 410). In a later case, however, under exactly similar circumstances, except that the company's special Act was prior in date to the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, the company was held liable, and the correctness of the earlier decision was questioned (Hertfordshire C. C. v. G. E. Rail. Co., [1909] 1 K. B. 368 ; 2 K. B. 403 ; 73 J. P. 84, 353).

As to the liability of a canal company under a Canal Act to repair both the fabric of a bridge carrying a road over their canal and also the roadway on such bridge, see Macclesfield Corporation v. G. C. Rail. Co., [1911] 2 K. B. 528 ; 75 J. P. 369 ; as to their liability to repair the approaches to such a bridge, see Nottingham C. C. v. M., S. & L. Rail. Co. (1894), 71 L. T. 430, and Att.-Gen. v. Oxford Canal Navigation, post, p. 272. A statute passed after the Statute of Bridges (22 Hen. 8, c. 5) empowered a company to make a cut across a highway, and imposed upon them the obligation of making and maintaining at their own cost a bridge to carry the highway across the cut. It was held that the company was only liable to maintain the bridge and its actual approaches with the roadway thereon, the extent of the approaches being a question of fact ; and that their liability did not necessarily extend to a distance of 300 feet from each end of the bridge. The court held that the rule as to 300 feet laid down by the Statute of Bridges, applies to bridges repairable by the county or by prescription, but not to cases where the liability is directly imposed by a later Act (Herts C. C. v. New River Co., [1904] 2 Ch. 513 ; 68 J. P. 552). An appeal in this case was dismissed by consent, on July 2nd, 1906. See also an earlier case on the same point, R. v. Staffordshire and Worcestershire Canal Co. (1901), 65 J. P. 505.

By a private Act the defendants were not to be liable "to repair or amend any part of the roads approaching to any bridge or bridges made, or to be made, over the said canal . . . beyond or further than the extremity of the wing-wall" of the bridges, but nothing therein contained was to exonerate them from repairing the bridges and the "wing-walls, ramparts, and side-banks thereof":—Held, that the liability of the defendants to repair was limited to the bridges, and included nothing else; and that they were, therefore, not liable to repair fences by the side of approaches to bridges over their canal (Att.-Gen. v. Oxford Canal Navigation (1903), 72 L. J. Ch. 285; 67 J. P. 130).

A railway company were liable under their special Act to maintain a bridge over a canal at a specified height above the towing-path. Subsidence having taken place from causes beyond the control of the company, it was held that it was their duty to raise the bridge to its original height above the path (Rhymney Rail. Co. and Others v. Glamorgan Canal Navigation (1904), 91 L. T. 113; 20 T. L. R. 593). So, too, in another case of subsidence, North Staffordshire Rail. Co. v. Hanley Corporation (1909), 73 J. P. 477; 26 T. L. R. 20, it was held that the liability to repair a bridge over a canal (the bridge being in fact incapable of repair) involved the liability to reconstruct it at such a height as to avoid causing a nuisance to users of the canal.

For a case in which a canal company, liable to repair a bridge carrying a highway, were held to be only liable to keep the bridge in repair in the condition in which it was made in accordance with the requirements of the Commissioners as originally provided in a private Act of 1791, see Sharpness New Docks, etc. Co. v. Att.-Gen., [1915] A C. 654; 79 J. P. 305. The decision in this case was followed and applied in the case of a railway bridge in Att.-Gen. v. G. N. Rail. Co., [1916] 2 A. C. 356; 80 J. P. 337. In that case it was held that where a public highway is carried over a railway constructed under the provisions of s. 46 of the Railway Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, the railway company is liable to maintain the bridge in the condition as to strength in relation to traffic in which it was at the date of completion, and is not liable to improve and strengthen the bridge to make it sufficient to bear the ordinary traffic of the district which may reasonably be expected to pass over it according to the standard of the present day.

Reference may be made to In re Woking U. D. C. (Basingstoke Canal) Act, 1911, [1914] 1 Ch. 300; 78 J. P. 81, for a decision as to liability under a local Act in respect of bridges across an abandoned canal. And see also Att.-Gen. v. N. E. Rail. Co., [1915] 1 Ch. 905; 79 J. P. 500. In that case a swing bridge had to be provided by a Navigation Co. and on the merger of the navigation company with a railway company it was proposed to construct a fixed bridge instead of a swing bridge. It was held that as the swing bridge was clearly for the benefit of the public an injunction would be granted to restrain the alteration.

Towing paths.

The provisions of this section might apply to the towing-path of a canal Such a towing-path may be dedicated as a highway (Grand Junction Canal Co. v. Petty (1888), 21 Q. B. D. 273; 52 J. P. 692). The question to be determined when a dedication by a statutory body is alleged is: "Would a dedication of the land have been inconsistent with the enjoyment by the statutory body of the land for the purposes of their undertaking?" This question has been considered in the following cases: North London Rail. Co. v. St. Mary, Islington (Vestry) (1872), 27 L. T. 672, and Taff Vale Rail. Co. v. Pontypridd U. D. C. (1905), 69 J. P. 35; 93 L. T. 126 (bridges over railways); Stretford U. D. C. v. Manchester South Junction and Altrincham Rail. Co. (1903), 68 J. P. 59; 19 T. L. Co.*, on p. 272, ante. Note to Section 148.

(e) A bridge may be a "county bridge," whether it be repairable by the inhabitants of the county or by an individual (R. v. Chart and Longbridge (1870), L. R. 1 C. C. R. 237; 34 J. P. 454). In general, however, a county bridge is repairable by the inhabitants of the county. Where a bridge carrying a public highway was built prior to the County Bridges Act, 1803, the county council can only avoid their common law liability to repair it by pleading and proving that the liability to repair is upon some other person (Att.-Gen. v. West Riding of Yorks C. C. (1903), 67 J. P. 173; 19 T. L. R. 192; R. v. Norfolk C. C. (1910), 26 T. L. R. 269; R. v. Berks C. C. (1901), Times, June 24th). By the Highway Act, 1835, s. 21, "if any bridge shall hereafter be built which bridge shall be liable by law to be repaired by and at the expense of any county or part of any county, then and in such case all highways leading to, passing over, and next adjoining to such bridge, shall be from time to time repaired by the parish, person, or body politic or corporate, or trustees of a turnpike road who were by law before the erection of the said bridge bound to repair the said highways: Provided nevertheless that nothing herein contained shall extend to, or be construed to extend to, exonerate or discharge any county or any part of any county from repairing or keeping in repair the walls, banks, or fences of the raised causeways and raised approaches to any such bridge or the land arches thereof." In the case of a bridge repairable by the county but built before the passing of that Act, the roadway over it and the approaches for a distance of 300 feet from each end of such bridge, are repairable by the county. See 22 Hen. 8, c. 5, s. 7. Where for any reason a bridge in a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large is not considered a county bridge, and no other persons are by usage, prescription, or statute bound to repair it, it is repairable as part of the highway by the inhabitants of the parish. By 33 & 34 Vict. c. 73, s. 12, "where a turnpike road shall have become an ordinary highway all bridges which were previously repaired by the trustees of such turnpike road shall become county bridges, and shall be kept in repair accordingly: Provided that for the purposes of this Act such bridges shall be treated as if they were bridges built subsequently to the passing of the Highway Act, 1835." This section was discussed in R. v. Dorset (Inhabitants of) (1881), 45 L. T. 308. There a toll bridge was built over a river to connect the back streets of W. with the country districts on the other side. A turnpike road was made in connection with the bridge, both bridge and road being constructed under one Act. There were separate trusts of the bridge and the road, but the trustees of the one were trustees of the other. The bridge was within the borough of W. On the expiration of the trusts the county of D., in which the bridge was situated, repaired the road, but the bridge fell into disrepair. The county was thereupon indicted for its non-repair and was found guilty:—Held, that the county was rightly convicted, for, as there was nothing in the case to cast the liability to repair on the borough, it became on the expiration of the trust a county bridge repairable by the inhabitants of the county. See, for other decisions on the section, R. v. Somerset (1878), 42 J. P. 501; 38 L. T. 452; R. v. Buckingham (1878), 43 J. P. 175. "County bridges" and the roadways thereof.

(f) In Nutter v. Accrington L. B. (1878), 4 Q. B. D. 375, MELLOR, J., thought that these words did not authorise the division of the road into longitudinal sections, so that the local board should undertake the charge of the footpath, and the turnpike trustees that of the roadway. But COTTON, L.J., thought otherwise. "Part of a street."

Regulation of Streets (a) and Buildings.

149. All streets (b), being or which at any time become highways repairable by the inhabitants at large (c) within any urban district (d), and the pavements stones and other materials thereof, and all buildings Vesting of streets, etc. in urban authority.

Section 149. implements and other things provided for the purposes thereof, shall vest in and be under the control of the urban authority (e).

The urban authority shall (f) from time to time cause all such streets to be levelled paved metalled flagged channelled altered and repaired as occasion may require; they may from time to time cause the soil of any such street to be raised lowered or altered as they think fit (g), and may place and keep in repair fences and posts for the safety of foot passengers (h).

Any person who without the consent of the urban authority wilfully displaces or takes up (i) or who injures the pavement stones materials fences or posts of or the trees (k) in any such street shall be liable to a penalty (l) not exceeding five pounds, and to a further penalty not exceeding five shillings for every square foot of pavement stones or other materials so displaced taken up or injured: he shall also be liable in the case of any injury to trees to pay to the local authority such amount of compensation as the court may award.

Provisions of the P. H. A., 1907.

(a) Part II. of the P. H. A., 1907, contains several important provisions relating to highways repairable by the inhabitants at large, but they will only be operative when applied to any district by an Order of the M. of H. The provisions in question (for the full text of which see the Act, post), deal with the following subject-matters:

Crossing for cattle, etc. over footways (s. 18);
Damages to footways by excavations (s. 20);
Deposit of building materials or excavations (s. 29);
Dangerous places to be repaired or enclosed (s. 30);
Fencing lands adjoining streets (s. 31);
Hoards to be securely erected (s. 32);
Exemption of buildings of railway company and others (s. 33);

Reference should also be made to s. 22 (buildings at corner of streets), and s. 26 (entrances to courts, etc., not to be closed), of the same Act.

Other statutory provisions as to streets.

The Tramways Act, 1870 (in App. I., post, Vol. II.), contains provisions whereby a district council may be enabled to construct and maintain a tramway within their district. Their consent is also necessary to enable other persons to obtain a Provisional Order under the Act, unless such consent is dispensed with by the Board of Trade. The Act also contains important provisions as to the right of a tramway company to interfere with roads, sewers, etc., for the purchase of the undertaking by the local authority, etc.

See also (in App. I., post, Vol. II.), the Gas and Waterworks Facilities Acts, 1870 and 1873, as to the necessity for the consent of the local authority for a Provisional Order under these Acts, and the Electric Lighting Acts, 1882, 1888 and 1909, and the Electric Lighting (Clauses) Act, 1899, as to interference with streets under those Acts.

For the statutory provisions as to the use of locomotives and motor cars on public roads, see the Locomotive Act, 1861; the Locomotives Act, 1865; the Highways and Locomotives Amendment Act, 1878; the Locomotives on Highways Act, 1896; the Locomotives Act, 1898; the Motor Car Act, 1903; the Ministry of Transport Act, 1919, and the Roads Act, 1920. The Acts of 1865 and 1903 are "continued" annually by the Expiring Laws Continuance Act.

(b) See the definition of street in s. 4, ante, p. 15. See also the notes to s. 144, ante, p. 253, and note (b) to the next section, post, p. 288.

Highways repairable by the inhabitants at large.

(c) The fact that a road has been repaired by the public, is some evidence that it is a highway and repairable by them: but it is not conclusive evidence on the point (R. v. Thomas (1857), 7 E. & B. 399; R. v. Edmonton (1831), 1 M. & R. 24; R. v. Hawkhurst (1862), 26 J. P. 772; 7 L. T. 268; Ferrand v. Milligan (1845), 7 Q. B. 730; R. v. Wicklow C. C., [1908] 2 I. R. 116; Farquhar v. Newbury R. D. C., [1909] 1 Ch, 12; 73 J. P. 1).

A road may be none the less a highway, although not repairable by the public

Note to Section 149.

(Roberts v. Hunt (1850), 15 Q. B. 17), or indeed by anyone; and many roads dedicated since 1836, are, in fact, not repairable by anyone.

Before 1836 any road which was dedicated to the public and used by them became a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large (R. v. Westmark (1840), 2 Moo. & R. 305; R. v. Dukinfield (1863), 4 B. & S. 158; 27 J. P. 805, per BLACKBURN, J.; Eyre v. New Forest Highway Board (1892), 56 J. P. 517; 8 T. L. R. 648; R. v. West Sussex C. C. (1921), 85 J. P. 162; 19 L. G. R. 337). In that year, however, the Highway Act, 1835, came into operation, and s. 23 of that Act prescribes certain formalities which must be complied with before a landowner can dedicate a road so as to make it repairable by the public. A road which has been dedicated since 1836, but without the observance of the formalities prescribed by s. 23, and which has not become repairable by the public by virtue of one of the statutes mentioned infra, is not within s. 149, and the owners of adjoining property may be compelled to pave, etc., it under s. 150, post, p. 286. Some doubt has existed in the past as to whether s. 23 of the Highway Act, 1835, applied to a road not formally dedicated by the landowner. Thus, in Healey v. Batley (Corporation of) (1875), L. R. 19 Eq. 375; 39 J. P. 423, BACON, V.-C., held that s. 23 had no application to the case of a person who had not made the road at his own expense, who did not propose to dedicate the highway to the use of the public, and who did not intend, or undertake to make it, or to keep it in repair at his own expense for twelve months, in order at the end of that period to throw the future care and expense on the rates: see also R. v. Thomas (1857), 7 E. & B. 399; but it is now clear that it does apply where an owner allows the public to use a track over his land until it is no longer open to him to say that it is not a highway (Eyre v. New Forest Highway Board, supra; Cababé v. Walton-upon-Thames U. D. C., infra; Shearburn v. Chertsey R. D. C. (1914), 78 J. P 289; 12 L. G. R. 622; and Att.-Gen. v. Sewell (1919), 88 L. J. K. B. 425; 83 J. P. 92). As to the effect of the section where an occupation road is "awarded" on the line of an old footpath, see Reynolds v. Barnes, [1909] 2 Ch. 361; 73 J. P. 330, and Fuller v. Chippenham R. D. C. (1915), 79 J. P. 4. See R. v. Dukinfield, supra, as to what an urban authority may require under s. 23 when it is proposed to dedicate a new road in their district.

Highway Act, 1835, s. 23.

It will be seen from the foregoing remarks that in deciding whether some highway is or is not repairable by the inhabitants at large, the question whether it was in 1836 a highway, is often most material. In Att.-Gen. v. Watford R. D. C., [1912] 1 Ch. 417; 76 J. P. 74, PARKER, J., thus summarised the law as to proof of liability. Upon an indictment of the inhabitants of a parish for non-repair, the Crown must prove that the way is within the parish, and is a public highway. Proof of user of such a nature that dedication may be reasonably inferred therefrom is sufficient without proving that during the period of user there was a person legally capable of dedicating. It is for the inhabitants to prove that there was no such person if they rely on that fact. The absence of evidence that the inhabitants have ever repaired the way, though relevant on the question whether the way is a public way or not, cannot by itself displace their liability to repair when once the way is found to be a public one. The Crown, at any rate before the Highway Act, 1835, need give no evidence of the liability of the inhabitants to repair. This was presumed at common law in the case of all public roads, though it could be displaced by proof on the part of the inhabitants that the liability rested on someone else ratione tenuræ or otherwise. The proper mode of regarding s. 23 of the Highway Act, 1835, is to regard it as having opened to the inhabitants a new method of displacing their common law liability, and not as having imposed on the Crown a new onus of proof. It is for the inhabitants to prove that the road in question is one to which the section applies; but if they do so, the onus of proving that the formalities required to make the inhabitants liable have been observed may be shifted to the Crown. See also Att.-Gen. v. Godstone R. D. C. (1912), 76 J. P. 188.

At some date subsequent to 1835 a way, which had previously been set out in an inclosure award as a private bridlepath, became a public highway, but there was no evidence to show at what precise date, or how, or under what circumstances it became such. In the absence of evidence that the conditions of s. 23 of the Highway Act, 1835, had been satisfied, it was held that the way was not repairable by the inhabitants at large (Cababé v. Walton-on-Thames U. D. C., [1914] A. C. 102; 78 J. P. 129).

Note to Section 149.

In 1827, R., being tenant in tail with special statutory powers of setting out highways over the settled lands, made upon such lands a road, along which houses were erected on plots leased by him. There was no evidence that it was required for any purpose except the use of the occupiers, but from 1831 it was to some extent used by other persons. There was across the road a toll-house and gate where, from before 1836 to the present time, tolls for horses and vehicular traffic had been levied, but spaces were left on either side for foot passengers. Notice boards fixed the toll for horse and wheeled traffic, and prohibited the passage of motor cars, cattle and sheep, but did not prohibit the passage of foot passengers. There were also notice boards describing the road as a "private road." Before 1836 the road was not kept in proper repair, but since then it had been repaired by R. or his lessees, and had never been repaired by the local authority. There had been no formal dedication of the road as prescribed by s. 23 of the Highway Act, 1835. On proceedings under the Private Street Works Act, 1892, the justices found that it was not the intention of R. in 1827 or later to make and dedicate the road as a highway, that there was no dedication for either vehicles or foot passengers prior to 1836, and that since that date there had been no dedication as prescribed by s. 23. They therefore decided that no part of the road was a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large. The House of Lords held that their findings could not be disturbed (Folkestone Corporation v. Brockman, [1914] A. C. 338; 78 J. P. 273).

In a proper case it may be possible for the court to presume compliance with the statutory formalities (Leigh-on-Sea U. D. C. v. King, p. 293, post; but see as to this case, Cababé v. Walton-on-Thames U. D. C., ante, p. 275).

Other statutory dedications.

Highways repairable by the inhabitants at large may also come into existence under ss. 146 and 148, ante, pp. 267, 269; s. 152, post, p. 319; s. 154, post, p. 321; ss. 19 and 20 of the Private Street Works Act, 1892; ss. 62, 85 and 93 of the Highway Act, 1835; ss. 35 and 36 of the Highway Act, 1862; ss. 24 and 48 (2) of the Highway Act, 1864; the Highways and Bridges Act, 1891; s. 12 (3) of the Housing of the Working Classes Act, 1890; under s. 6 and the planning provisions of the Housing, Town Planning, etc. Act, 1909, and under the Development and Road Improvement Funds Act, 1909.

Repair of "awarded" roads.

Many highways repairable by the inhabitants at large have become such under awards made in pursuance of Inclosure Acts. It does not follow, however, that every way set out by an award is in law repairable in manner directed by the award. See R. v. Inhabitants of Cottingham (1794), 6 T. R. 20, where it was held that commissioners appointed by a local Act, which enacted that the private roads set out by them should be repaired by such persons as they should award, had no power to impose on the parish at large the burden of repairing such private roads: see also Att.-Gen. and Settle R. D. C. v. Lunesdale R. D. C. (1902), 86 L. T. 822, where an award directed one authority, the predecessors of the defendants, to repair some highways in the district of another authority, predecessors of the plaintiffs. The court held that the defendants were not liable. See also Att.-Gen. v. Tamworth R. D. C. (1901), 85 L. T. 190. Cases have also occurred where the inhabitants have been held not to be liable to repair owing to awarded roads never having been formed and completed: see R. v. Hatfield (1835), 4 A. & E. 156; R. v. Midville (1843), 4 Q. B. 240; R. v. East Hagbourne (1859), 28 L. J. M. C. 71; Cubitt v. Maxse (1873), L. R. 8 C. P. 704; R. v. French (1879), 4 Q. B. D. 507. See also Reynolds v. Barnes, supra.

Repair of diverted roads.

With reference to the repair of a diverted road under the Highway Act, 1835, s. 92, see Kingston Corporation v. Baverstock (1910), 73 J. P. 378; 100 L. T. 935, where the result of diverting an ancient footpath along a new street was to make the whole width of the street repairable by the public.

Authority's duty to repair.

Section 144, p. 253, ante, imposes upon an authority the duty of repairing any highway which is repairable by the inhabitants at large.

It was held under the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, s. 96, that a metropolitan vestry were bound to repair the pavement over vaults and cellars, although by s. 102 of that Act, the vaults, etc., and the openings into them are to be repaired by the owners of them (Hamilton v. St. George's, Hanover Square (Vestry of) (1873), L. R. 9 Q. B. 42; 38 J. P. 405); cf. Laing v. Paull and Williamson, [1912] S. C. 196; see Jones v. Rew, cited on p. 263, ante, as to the liability to repair a "carriage plate" bridging the channel of a road, and see also Horridge v. Makinson cited on

p. 263, ante, as to the liability where an opening was left in the footpath for access to a coal shoot, and M'Kibbin v. Glasgow Corporation, [1920] S. C. 590, where the cover of a water hydrant had been removed and the authority were held liable for negligence upon an accident arising therefrom. Note to Section 149.

As to the meaning of the words "repairable by the inhabitants at large," see further the next section, note (c), post, p. 291.

(d) This section, unlike the five preceding sections, is not applied to rural districts by the L. G. A., 1894, s. 25. The result is that a rural district council who succeeded merely to the powers of surveyors of highways are unable, without urban powers under s. 149, to undertake such a work as the alteration of the level of a road. Rural districts.

The M. of H. hold that a rural district council with the limited powers which were given by the Highway Acts to surveyors of highways are not empowered to provide a highway depôt, but that if s. 149 of the P. H. A., 1875, be put in force by order under s. 276 it may be held that a depôt, or place for the storage of materials, etc. is a consequential necessity, and can be provided under that Act.

(e) The presumption is that any man in possession of a plot of land adjoining a highway is in possession of the soil of the highway usque ad medium filum. See the cases collected in Mappin Brothers v. Liberty, [1903] 1 Ch. 118; 67 J. P. 91 (where, however, the presumption was held to be rebutted), and Central London Rail. Co. v. City of London Land Tax Commissioners, [1913] A. C. 364; 77 J. P. 289; Maclaren v. Att.-Gen. for Quebec, [1914] A. C. 258. Ownership and statutory "vesting" of soil of streets.

The words in s. 149, shall vest in, are future in signification, but as a similar provision was contained in previous Public Health Acts, the effect of the words in question was merely to continue the state of things which at the time of the passing of the Act existed in districts already constituted. See s. 326, post. But while the property mentioned in the section passed to the authority, it must be remembered that all outstanding liabilities also passed. See s. 12, ante, p. 43.

As to the meaning of the words "vest in," see the following cases: In Hinde v. Chorlton (1866), L. R. 2 C. P., at p. 116, WILLES, J., referring to the words vest in in a local Act, said: "There is a whole series of authorities in which words which in terms vested the freehold in persons appointed to perform some public duties, such as canal companies and boards of health, have been held satisfied by giving to such persons the control over the soil which was necessary to the carrying out of the objects of the Act without giving them the freehold. In Stracey v. Nelson (1844), 12 M. & W. 535, it was provided by an Act that certain lands should be vested in the Commissioners of Sewers, and the court held, notwithstanding, that only the control over the land, and not the freehold, passed to them." This decision was followed in a recent case (Nesbitt v. Mablethorpe U. D. C., [1918] 2 K. B. 1; 82 J. P. 161), and the case of West Norfolk Farmers' Manure Co. v. Archdale (1886), 16 Q. B. D. 754; 50 J. P. 500, was distinguished. The Mablethorpe Case was a decision as to the ownership of sandhills and as to the acquisition of title by possession by the exercise of acts of ownership thereon. In Bagshaw v. Buxton L. B. (1875), 1 Ch. D., at p. 222, JESSEL, M.R., said that by the term vested he meant vested sub modo, as far as a highway can be, not necessarily giving to the local authority the right to the soil. The words vest in do not give the property in the street, but merely the property in the surface of the street, and in such part of the soil as is or can be used for the ordinary purposes of a street (Coverdale v. Charlton (1878), 4 Q. B. D. 104; 43 J. P. 268). In that case, by an award made under an inclosure Act of 1766, two private roads, E. and H., were set out. About 1818 E. became a public highway. Down to 1863 the surveyor of highways for the parish had from time to time let the pasturage upon E. and H. to various persons. A local board was formed in 1863 for the parish, and the board in 1876 let the pasturage on E. and H. to the plaintiff. He thereupon commenced to depasture the herbage with his cattle. The defendant interfered with the plaintiff's enjoyment of the pasturage. It was held that the property in the soil of E., being a street, so far vested in the local board that they could demise the right of pasturage thereon to the plaintiff, who was entitled to maintain an action. It was held also that the local board having no power to demise H., being a private way, the plaintiff had not sufficient exclusive possession as occupier to enable him to maintain an action. In a subsequent case, JAMES, L.J., explained this decision as to the meaning of the words vest in, as follows: "What that case decided, and all that it was necessary to decide in that case, was that something more than an easement passed to the local board, and that they had some right of property in and on, and in respect of the soil, which would enable them as owners to bring a possessory action against trespassers. Now what was that something more? It is impossible to read any of the three judgments delivered on that occasion without seeing that in the view of the learned judges the soil and freehold in the ordinary sense of the words 'soil and freehold,' that is to say, the soil from the centre of the earth up to an unlimited extent in space, did not pass, and that no stratum or portion of the soil, defined or ascertainable like a vein of coal, or stratum of ironstone, or anything of that kind, passed, but that the board had only the surface, and with the surface such right below the surface as was essential to the maintenance, and occupation, and exclusive possession of the street, and the making and maintaining of the street for the use of the public" (Rolls v. St. George the Martyr, Southwark (Vestry of) (1880), 14 Ch. D. 785; 44 J. P. 680).

Where a street was carried across a railway in a cutting by a bridge erected under the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, ss. 46—51, it was held that the statutory vesting of streets in the vestry did not give them any property in the bridge or its fences, but merely vested in them the carriageway and footpaths and the materials of which these were made (G. E. Rail. Co. v. Hackney Board of Works, post, p. 299). In Sydney (Municipal Council of) v. Young, [1898] A. C. 457, it was held that an authority's statutory property in a street did not entitle them to compensation when part of it was appropriated for the purpose of a street tramway. In Foley's Charity Trustees v. Dudley Corporation, [1910] 1 K. B. 317; 74 J. P. 41, it was held that an urban authority have a determinable statutory fee simple in such portion of the soil of a road as is vested in them at all, and the defendants were held liable as terre-tenants to pay a rent-charge created (as the court inferred) on the original acquisition of the site of the road by turnpike trustees.

In Cavan C. C. and Bailieborough R. D. C. v. Kane, [1910] 2 I. R. 644; [1913] 2 I. R. 250, it was held that the plaintiff councils suing together could recover as "special damage," in respect of a public nuisance, the cost of repairing a highway cut up by the defendant's traction engine. Cf. Louth U. D. C. v. West, cited on p. 265, ante, Kilkenny C. C. v. Hayden (1911), 46 Ir. L. T. 95, and Donegal C. C. v. Robinson (1914), 48 Ir. L. T. 182. In Wednesbury Corporation v. Lodge Holes Colliery Co., Ltd., [1907] 1 K. B. 78; 71 J. P. 73; [1908] A. C. 323; 72 J. P. 417, a highway vested in the plaintiffs subsided in consequence of the working of the defendants' coal mines. The plaintiffs raised the highway to its former level, and sought to recover the expenses of so doing from the defendants, who contended that they were only liable to pay the cost of making the highway as commodious to the public as it was before, without raising it to its former level. It was held by the Court of Appeal that the plaintiffs, acting bonâ fide in the interests of the public, were entitled to raise the highway to its former level, and to recover the cost of so doing from the defendants. The House of Lords, however, held that they were not necessarily entitled to raise the road to the old level regardless of cost; and that, as in the view of the court they had acted under the mistaken belief that they were bound or at least entitled to so restore it at the colliery company's expense, and, so thinking, had not considered whether it was reasonably necessary to do so in the interests of the public, they were not entitled to recover more than the cost of making the highway as commodious to the public, within reasonable limits, as it was before. See also as to the meaning of the word "vest," Ystradyfodwg and Pontypridd Main Sewerage Board v. Bensted, [1906] 1 K. B. 294; 70 J. P. 240; [1907] A. C. 264; 71 J. P. 425.

Effect of statutory vesting on overhead wires, tunnels, pipes, etc.

The vesting of the streets in the urban authority under this section does not confer upon them such a property in the streets as to entitle them to maintain an action for an injunction against the erection of a telephone wire across a street, such wire being erected at a great height and causing no appreciable danger to the public or to the traffic in the street (Wandsworth District Board of Works v. United Telephone Co. (1884), 13 Q. B. D. 904; 48 J. P. 676). A road was constructed by turnpike trustees under a local Act of 1826. The site or part of the site of the road where the wires of an electric light company crossed it was in 1828 conveyed to the trustees in fee simple under the Turnpike Roads Act, 1822. The company carried across the road at a height of thirty-four feet two guide or supporting wires, intended to support a cable carrying a supply of electricity to the house of a customer. The road became vested in an urban sanitary authority under s. 149. It was held that the fact that originally the fee simple was conveyed to the trustees was no evidence that the soil ad inferos and the air ad superos were prior to or at the date of action brought, necessary for "street purposes" and so vested in the authority, and that the extent of the "area of user" is a question of fact; and that, so long as the company did not encroach upon that area, they were entitled to carry their wires across the street (Finchley Electric Light Co. v. Finchley U. D. C., [1903] 1 Ch. 437; 67 J. P. 97). In Postmaster-General v. Hutchings [1916], 1 K. B. 774; 80 J. P. 246, it was held that the freeholder of land over which highways which had not been taken over by the local authority ran was not entitled to attach a condition requiring payment to his consent for the erection of telegraph wires over such highways. Where an authority contracted with an electric lighting company for the lighting of the district, an injunction was granted to restrain a defendant claiming to own the subsoil of half a road, from interfering with poles erected in the road and electric wires. It was held that the road being a street within the above section, the local board were entitled to more than the surface; they had an area of user necessary for the exercise of their statutory powers, e.g., of lighting the district, and their contractors could justify under them (Farcham L. B. v. Smith (1891), 90 L. T. Jo. 467; and cf. Escott v. Newport Corporation, on p. 103, ante). As to the construction by the local authority of a urinal partly below the level of the street, see Tunbridge Wells (Mayor, etc. of) v. Baird, and Westminster Corporation v. L. & N. W. Rail. Co. (as to the metropolis), cited at length in the notes to s. 39, ante, p. 104. It was in the first of these cases held that this section does not vest the subsoil in the urban authority, and consequently that the urban authority could not excavate the soil and construct lavatories below the surface. See now, however, the P. H. A., 1907, s. 47, post. The statutory vesting of a road does not prevent the owner of the subsoil from tunnelling through it, provided that in an urban district the written consent of the local authority is first obtained (see s. 26, ante, p. 88) (Mayor, etc. of Poplar v. Millwall Dock Co. (1904), 68 J. P. 339; cf. Walker U. D. C. v. Wigham Richardson & Co., Ltd. (1901), 66 J. P. 152; 85 L. T. 579; Cunliffe v. Whalley (1851), 13 Beavan, 411; Cattle v. Stockton Waterworks Co. (1875), L. R. 10 Q. B. 453; 39 J. P. 791; Schweder v. Worthing Gas Light and Coke Co., [1912] 1 Ch. 83; 76 J. P. 3); and it has been held that an urban authority could not authorise private persons to lay pipes for trade purposes in a street vested in them, though the pipes were in the macadam or made ground of the street (Salt Union, Ltd. v. Harvey (1897), 61 J. P. 375; 13 T. L. R. 297; and cf. Goodson v. Richardson (1874), L. R. 9 Ch. App. 221; 38 J. P. 436; Wood v. Ealing Tenants, Ltd., [1907] 2 K. B. 390; 71 J. P. 456). See also, hereon, Att.-Gen. v. Barker, infra, and Att.-Gen. v. Mayo C. C., infra. Where an electric lighting company had wrongfully, and without authority, broken the surface of a street, and laid pipes and wires beneath it, it was held that they were not guilty of a continuing trespass against the local authority by allowing the pipes and wires to remain beneath the surface, and a mandatory injunction to compel the removal of the pipes and wires was refused (St. Mary, Battersea (Vestry of) v. County of London and Brush Provincial Electric Lighting Co., [1899] 1 Ch. 474). If a right to open the street for repairing mains is claimed, the local authority may obtain an injunction. See Hyde (Mayor, etc. of) v. Oldham, etc. Electric Tramway Co., Ltd. (1900), 64 J. P. 596; 16 T. L. R. 492. A suit by a telephone company against a local authority to recover damages for cutting down and removing telephone wires stretched across a public street, the claim being based on an alleged statutory right, failed on the ground that the company was not authorised by statute so to place their wires (National Telephone Co. v. St. Peter Port (Constables of), [1900] A. C. 317).

Presumably the "vesting" of a street extends to the entire highway which the public have the right to use, which, primâ facie, includes not only the via trita but the entire space between the fences; see as to the width of highways, R. v. United Kingdom Telegraph Co. (1862), 2 B. & S. 647, and cases cited therewith in notes to the L. G. A., 1888, s. 11 (1), post.

An authority who erect in a highway, though vested in them, a stand to view a procession are liable as for a nuisance to a householder whose view is obstructed (Campbell v. Paddington Borough Council, [1911] 1 K. B. 869; 75 J. P. 277).

Vesting of "main roads."

As to how much of a main road vests in a county council under the L. G. A., 1888, s. 11, see Curtis v. Kesteven C. C. (1890), 45 Ch. D. 504. And see Att.-Gen. v. Barker (1900), 83 L. T. 245, where FARWELL, J., said: "In my opinion Parliament has vested the soil of the roads in them (the county council) quâ roads, and simply to the extent necessary for the purpose of preserving and maintaining and using them as roads." The Irish courts have held that a county council cannot legally sanction the erection of a permanent structure not authorised by the necessities of the public service along or upon a county road (Att.-Gen. v. Mayo C. C., [1902] 1 I. R. 13), and in Att.-Gen. v. Barker, supra, it was held that a tramway laid across a county road by persons acting without statutory powers, and found to be a nuisance, was unlawful even though (as was assumed) it had been laid and continued under the licence of the county council. Cf. Matson v. Baird & Co. (1878), 3 App. Cas. 1082; 39 L. T. 304. Notwithstanding the text, a main road in an urban district is vested in the county council, unless the urban authority have elected to retain the control of main roads in their district. See the L. G. A., 1888, s. 11 (6), post.

Minerals beneath "vested" roads.

By the Highways and Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878, s. 27 (in App. I., post, Vol II.), notwithstanding anything contained in the P. H. A., 1848, s. 68, or in the P. H. A., 1875, s. 149, all mines and minerals of any description whatsoever under any disturnpiked road or highway which has or shall become vested in an urban sanitary authority by virtue of the said sections, or either of them, shall belong to the person who would be entitled thereto in case such road or highway had not become so vested, and the person entitled to any such mine or minerals shall have the same powers of working and of getting the same or other minerals as if the road or highway had not become vested in the urban sanitary authority, but so nevertheless that in such working and getting no damage shall be done to the road or highway. This section extends to the Isle of Wight and South Wales. As to the rights of the local authority under the latter part of this section, see Att.-Gen. v. Conduit Colliery Co., [1895] 1 Q. B. 301; 59 J. P. 70; Wednesbury Corporation v. Lodge Holes Colliery Co., ante, p. 278.

Divestment, if highway stopped up or diverted.

A plaintiff having, with leave of the Metropolitan Board of Works, made a new street over his land, on which were two old streets, N. and A., orders were made at quarter sessions for stopping up part of N. street as unnecessary, and for diverting a part of A. street and opening the new street in lieu thereof. The vestry of the parish gave notice to the plaintiff that he must not convert to his own use the stopped up part of N. nor stop up A., or convert any part of the soil of it to his own use until he had purchased the same from the vestry. It was held by the Court of Appeal that under the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, s. 96, all streets being, for the time being, highways, were vested in the vestry, but only so long as they were highways; and that when they ceased to be highways by being legally stopped up or diverted, the interest of the vestry determined. It was therefore held that the plaintiff was entitled to convert to his own use the stopped up part of N., and the diverted part of A., subject, as to A., to his first obtaining a certificate (under the Highway Act, 1835, s. 91) that the substituted street had been completed and put into good condition and repair (Rolls v. St. George the Martyr, Southwark, p. 278, ante). See also the observations of Lord HERSCHELL on Coverdale v. Charlton in Tunbridge Wells (Mayor, etc. of) v. Baird, ante, p. 104.

It was held that a rent-charge issuing from lands adjoining certain roads, and granted at a time when such roads were private in return for the use thereof and of a sewer, was not determined by the roads becoming highways repairable by the inhabitants at large and the sewer becoming vested in and discontinued by the local authority; and that it was immaterial that the grantee of the rent-charge had covenanted to keep the roads and sewer in repair (Merrett v. Bridges (1883), 47 J. P. 775).

The duty to repair, its enforcement and extent.

(f) This section is imperative as to keeping in repair. Section 299 does not apply to default of this character; but as by s. 144, ante, p. 253, the urban authority are the highway authority within their district, proceedings to compel repairs may be taken under the Highway Acts. See also the L. G. A., 1894, s. 16, as to default of a rural council in such a matter.

The duty to repair a highway entails as a general rule an obligation to keep it in such repair as to be reasonably passable for the ordinary traffic of the neighbourhood at all seasons of the year (R. v. High Halden (1859), 1 F. & F. 678, per BLACKBURN, J.; Mildred v. Weaver (1862), 3 F. & F. 30, per ERLE, C.J.; Burgess v. Northwich L. B. (1880), 6 Q. B. D. 264; 45 J. P. 256, per LINDLEY, J.; R. v. Henley (1847), 2 Cox C. C. 334). An authority ought to alter the standard of a road from time to time as the ordinary traffic upon it increases or alters (Chichester Corporation v. Foster, [1906] 1 K. B. 167; 70 J. P. 73; Kilkenny C. C. v. Hayden (1911), 46 Ir. L. T. 95; Donegal C. C. v. Robinson (1914), 48 Ir. L. T. 182; Sharpness New Docks, etc. Co. v. Att.-Gen., Att.-Gen. v. G. N. Rail. Co., p. 272, ante). But, as against the owner of the soil, the mere common law powers of surveyors of highways do not justify an authority in converting a path into one of a totally different kind (e.g., by making cuttings and bridges), under the guise of repairing it (Radcliffe v. Marsden U. D. C. (1908), 72 J. P. 475). The mode of repairing within legal limits is in the discretion of the authority (R. v. Claxby (1855), 24 L. J. Q. B. 223; Att.-Gen. v. Staffordshire C. C., [1905] 1 Ch. 336; 69 J. P. 97; R. v. Wilts and Berks Canal Co., [1912] 3 K. B. 623; R. v. Clare C. C., [1904] 2 I. R. 529). The court refused to quash resolutions of a corporation for the payment of money for paving a road with tarmac, the corporation having bonâ fide arrived at the conclusion that the work would improve the highway for use by the inhabitants of, and visitors to, the borough, although the immediate occasion for the work was a projected meeting of the Automobile Club for motor car speed trials (R. v. Brighton Corporation, Ex parte Shoesmith (1907), 71 J. P. 265; 96 L. T. 762).

The obligation imposed by s. 149 to repair streets repairable by the inhabitants was held not to impliedly repeal a section of a local Act under which an authority might call upon the frontagers of any street (whether so repairable or not) which was not completed to their satisfaction to complete it, and upon default of the frontagers might do the work and recover the expense from them (Ashton-under-Lyne (Corporation of) v. Pugh, and other cases cited therewith, on p. 291, post).

There is in this Act no section like s. 53 of the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, which (where in force) enables an authority to charge on frontagers the cost of making good any public highway, even though repairable by the inhabitants, if it has never previously been made good. See as to it, R. v. G. W. Rail. Co. (1859), 28 L. J. M. C. 246; Portsmouth Corporation v. Smith (1885), 10 App. Cas. 364; 49 J. P. 676; Crump v. Chorley Corporation (1908), 72 J. P. 334; 98 L. T. 805.

Raising, lowering, or altering streets.

(g) Boulton v. Crowther (1824), 2 B. & C. 703, established the principle that where a public body have conferred upon them by statute power to execute works for the public good, they are not liable to be sued in respect of damage which they cause to private individuals in the due and careful exercise of those powers. It was decided with reference to the Turnpike Roads Act, 1822, s. 83, which authorised the trustees to divert, shorten, alter, or improve the course or path of any of the roads under their management, and to divert, etc. any roads through or over any private lands, tendering or making satisfaction to the owners thereof and persons interested therein for the damage sustained thereby. It was held that under this clause the trustees were authorised to lower hills and raise hollows, and were not liable to an action for consequental injury resulting from their altering the level of the road opposite the entrance to certain premises. Where a local Act empowered a council to alter the level of any street, it was held that they had not exceeded their powers by erecting a bridge in the line of a street over a canal (Beaver v. Mayor, etc. of Manchester (1857), 8 El. & Bl. 44). In another case where an action was brought against a local board for lowering a highway and thereby obstructing the access to a house, the court held that the plaintiff had no right of action (Bold v. Williams (1857), 21 J. P. 84). In Wedmore v. Bristol (1862), 7 L. T. 459, an injunction to restrain the raising of a footway was refused though damage was shown, there being statutory power to alter the level of the footpath.

No action lies in respect of authorised works properly executed.

A highway, forming one of the approaches to a bridge, subsided by reason of pumping operations. The roadway over the bridge was vested in the county council, who resolved to raise the highway to its original level. A frontager sought to restrain the raising of the highway so as to interfere with the access to his premises, but the injunction was refused (Atherton v. Cheshire C. C. (1895), 60 J. P. 6).

A district board in the metropolis was held entitled to lower the surface of a street without making a corresponding alteration in the position of water-pipes in the street (Southwark and Vauxhall Water Co. v. Wandsworth District Board, [1898] 2 Ch. 603; 62 J. P. 756). And see Ferrár v. Commissioners of Sewers (1869), L. R. 4 Ex. 227; East Freemantle (Mayor of) v. Annois, [1902] A. C. 213; Ash v. Great Northern, Piccadilly, etc. Rail. Co. (1903), 67 J. P. 417; 19 T. L. R. 639.

But an authority would not be permitted to so alter the level of a street as to cause unnecessary damage, for (although there may be a compensation section in a statute) a private individual is not restricted to his right to compensation if the authority exercise their statutory powers unreasonably (Roberts v. Charing Cross, Euston and Hampstead Rail. Co. (1903), 87 L. T. 732; 19 T. L. R. 160). A local board in repairing and improving a road raised a footpath by its side a few inches, and the effect was to prevent water which fell upon the space between a warehouse of the plaintiff, in which needles were stored, and the road from draining into the road. On bill filed by the plaintiff, it was held that the board had no right to make improvements in a way calculated to cause unnecessary damage to him, that the evil complained of was one of easy remedy, and that the case was not one for pecuniary compensation; a mandatory injunction was granted to prevent the board from allowing such water to remain dammed up to the injury of the plaintiff (Milward v. Redditch L. B. (1873), 21 W. R. 429.) And see Shill v. Gloucestershire C. C., (1893), Times, October 30th, and Rochford v. Essex C. C. (1916), 85 L. J. Ch. 281; 14 L. G. R. 33.

A line of kerbing ran across a street above the plaintiffs' premises and guided surface water flowing out of a cross road to the plaintiffs' side of the street, and so past their premises. The authority substituted a retaining wall for the kerbing. Owing to the wrongful act of third parties on land over which the authority had no control, an unusual flow of water ran down the road and did damage to the plaintiffs' premises. It was held that the authority were not liable; the damage was occasioned by the unexpected flow of water for which they were not responsible, and they were not negligent in not so building the wall that it could not divert towards the plaintiffs' premises a flow which they had no reason to foresee (Ely Brewery Co. v. Pontypridd U. D. C. (1903), 68 J. P. 3; 2 L. G. R. 40).

Compensation provided for under this Act.

Section 308 of this Act provides, however, for the payment of compensation for injuries sustained by persons in consequence of the exercise of the powers conferred by this Act. Therefore, where an authority executed works under s. 150, post, p. 286, and in so doing altered the level of the street so as to make the access to one of the houses in the street difficult and dangerous, it was held that though the owner of the house was liable to pay his proportion of the expenses, he was nevertheless entitled to compensation under the P. H. A., 1848, s. 144 (corresponding to s. 308, post), for the special damage he had sustained in order that his neighbours and the district generally might be benefited (R. v. Wallasey L. B. (1869), L. R. 4 Q. B. 351; 33 J. P. 677). Abutting upon a highway the plaintiff had land on which an inn and stabling had been erected. These stood back from the highway, and in front of them was an open space forming part of the same land, which had been left open to and on a level with the highway. The defendants in exercise of their powers under this section, placed kerbstones and a raised footpath at the side of the highway, leaving openings so that carriages could still pass at convenient places to and from the plaintiff's premises. It was held that he was not entitled to a mandatory injunction directing the defendants to remove the kerbstones, and that in the absence of any unreasonable conduct his remedy for any injury caused by the kerbstones would be by compensation under s. 308 (Sellors v. Matlock Bath L. B. (1885), 14 Q. B. D. 928).

The footpath of a street which was a highway and also a turnpike road within the district of a local board was altered by them under an agreement with the turnpike trustees (see s. 148, ante, p. 269), so as to raise the level of the footpath in front of the plaintiff's house and cause him damage. It was held by BRETT and COTTON, L.JJ., reversing the judgment of the Queen's Bench Division (BRAMWELL, L.J., diss.), that a street which was also a turnpike road was not excluded by the definition (see s. 4, ante, p. 15), from the operation of the P. H. A., 1848, s. 68 (corresponding to this section), and that the plaintiff was therefore entitled to compensation under s. 144 of that Act (Nutter v. Accrington L. B. (1878), 4 Q. B. D. 375; 43 J. P. 635; affirmed in H. L. (1880), 43 L. T. 710; see also as to a turnpike road being a street, Thomas v. Roberts (1878), 43 J. P. 574). In the Accrington Case the majority of the court assumed that the alteration had been done in pursuance of the P. H. A., 1848, s. 68, corresponding to this section. But in the judgment of BRAMWELL, L.J., it was pointed out that had the act complained of been done by the turnpike trustees, no action would have lain against them on the principle established in Boulton v. Crowther, supra. "And," he continued, "usually, a person cannot raise or lower a road in front of another man's park gate, and so leave his park gate high up in the air, or below the level of the road, because any person having the right is not likely to interfere with the level of the road. But supposing that the owner of property adjoining a highway is not the owner of the soil in the highway, I do not think he has any right by the law of the land to have the road continued at a particular level. It may be a great inconvenience to him, no doubt, to have the road altered if he has built with reference to the level of the road; but it may be an inconvenience to the public not to have the road altered, and I do not know that he has any vested right in the road remaining at that level to the inconvenience of all mankind." In every case, therefore, where compensation is claimed it becomes material to consider whether the act causing the injury has been done pursuant to this section, or whether it is such an act as might be justified by the board under their general powers as surveyors of highways. See upon this question, Taylor v. Meltham L. B., and cases cited therewith, on p. 266, ante; Burgess v. Northwich L. B., and Pearsall v. Brierley Hill L. B., ante, p. 264; Douglass v. Rhyl U. D. C., [1913] 2 Ch. 407; 77 J. P. 373, and Rochford v. Essex C. C. (1916), 85 L. J. Ch. 281; 14 L. G. R. 33.

An authority were empowered by a local Act to acquire a bridge with the approaches thereto, with power to "alter," etc. the bridge and the approaches thereto, and for that purpose to acquire land by agreement under and subject to the provisions of the P. H. A., 1875. The approaches to the bridge were a highway. A. was the owner of a house bordering on and having a door giving access to the highway. The authority, without agreeing with A., proceeded to alter the highway and construct other works, so as to block the access to A.'s house and otherwise to interfere with her premises. A. brought an action to restrain the authority from continuing their operations. The authority alleged that A.'s only remedy was compensation under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 308. It was held that this was so, and that no action lay (Arnott v. Whitby U. D. C. (1909), 73 J. P. 64, 369; 101 L. T. 14).

Decisions upon points arising under local Acts.

Section 55 of a local improvement Act empowered commissioners to pave in a sufficient manner, on default of the owners or occupiers for six months after notice requiring them to do so, "the public streets, ways, and passages within the said township which are now built upon, but not made, paved, flagged, cleansed, or otherwise put into good order and condition, and all such other streets, etc., which are now making or being built upon or may hereafter be made, laid out, or built upon, or such thereof respectively as may require the same." Section 56 empowered the commissioners, after such streets should have been completed as to paving, etc., and the owners should have paid the expenses, to declare them highways. Section 53 empowered and required the commissioners to cause the present and future streets to be paved, etc., and the ground or soil thereof to be raised, lowered, or altered from time to time in such manner and with such materials as the commissioners should think fit. Section 54 enabled the commissioners to declare new streets to be highways, provided they were of certain width. The Act did not contain a clause giving compensation for damages occasioned by the exercise of the powers conferred by s. 53. It was held that the general powers conferred by s. 53 were to be exercised for the repair only of pavements in old streets and streets declared to be highways under the Act; that they were inconsistent with the specific powers conferred by ss. 55. 56; and that the lowering of the ground or soil of the streets described in ss. 55, 56 was an act of trespass not to be justified under s. 53 (Brown v. Clegg (1851), 16 Q. B. 681; 15 J. P. 609).

By s. 15 of a local Act, the local board were directed to cause offensive ditches to be cleansed, covered, or filled up; and s. 16 empowered them to cause the ditches at the sides of or across public roads to be filled up, and to substitute pipe and other drains, and from time to time to amend the same; and the surface of the land gained by filling up such ditches might, if the board thought fit, be thrown into the roads and ways, and be repairable as part thereof. The plaintiff was owner of a close adjoining a public highway, and between the close and the highway was a strip of land averaging nine feet in width. Upon the strip of land ran a ditch, the bank of which, on the plaintiff's side, was three feet in width, and covered with grass, and the bank on the roadside was one foot in width, and covered with grass. At the side of the road were posts and rails above two feet high. The plaintiff and his predecessors had usually repaired the posts and rails, but on two or three occasions the surveyors of the highways and the local board had repaired them without the plaintiff's knowledge. The board having removed the posts and rails, and covered the ditch, it was held that they had no power to do so, the ditch not being "at the side of a public road" within s. 16, and presumably belonging to the plaintiff as owner of the adjoining land (Tutil v. West Ham L. B. (1873), L. R. 8 C. P. 447; 37 J. P. 455. Cf. Chorley Corporation v. Nightingale, [1906] 2 K. B. 612; 70 J. P. 500, and Walmsley v. Featherstone U. D. C. (1909), 73 J. P. 322; 7 L. G. R. 806, for decisions as to whether roadside ditches, piped and filled up, formed part of the highway or not).

A public body, with statutory powers to stop up, alter, or use for the purpose of the authorised works, certain specified streets, were restrained by injunction from interfering, in excess of their powers, with the cellar of a house in one of the streets, the roadway in which was being lowered, until the amount of compensation for the whole house should have been ascertained and paid. An inquiry as to the damages sustained by the plaintiff, the owner and the occupier of the house, by reason of the works commenced by the defendants, having been directed by the decree, it was held that the plaintiff was not entitled to be compensated for the indirect injury to his trade resulting from the diversion of traffic caused by the authorised act of lowering the roadway, but only for direct structural injury occasioned by the unauthorised interference with his cellar (Bigg v. Corporation of London (1873), L. R. 15 Eq. 376; 37 J. P. 564).

Fencing highways.

(h) The owners of land adjoining a highway are not in general bound to fence it from the highway. Where a sewer belonging to the metropolitan commissioners adjoined a highway, it was held that they were not liable for an accident caused by its being unfenced (Cornwell v. Metropolitan Commissioners of Sewers (1855), 19 J. P. 313; 10 Ex. 771). And where a fence has been erected, there is no liability in respect of it, unless it is a nuisance (Gibson v. Plumstead Burial Board (1897), 13 T. L. R. 273; Harrold v. Watney, [1898] 2 Q. B. 320; see Barker v. Herbert and Smith v. Keys, on p. 167, ante, as to a defective area railing), and see Horridge v. Makinson, cited on p. 263, ante, as to the liability for an opening left in the pavement of a footpath to admit of access to a coal shoot. A duty is, however, cast upon those who in the exercise of statutory powers divert a public footpath, to protect, by fencing or otherwise, reasonably careful passengers from injury through going astray at the point of diversion (Hurst v. Taylor (1885), 14 Q. B. D. 918; 49 J. P. 359). A local Act provided, that if the corporation were of opinion that danger to the public was likely to ensue by reason of land abutting on streets not being fenced, the owner of any such land should, when required by the corporation, and to their satisfaction, fence off the land from the street, and should afterwards keep such fence in repair. It was held that the Act did not apply to the retaining walls of an old turnpike road, but applied only to new streets where there were no fences, and which, in the opinion of the corporation, were dangerous to the public (Rotherham (Mayor, etc. of) v. Fullerton (1884), 50 L. T. 364). See, now, as to dangerous places adjoining highways, and as to fencing lands adjoining streets, the P. H. A., 1907, ss. 30, 31, post, and see also the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, s. 83, in App. I., post, Vol. II.

The provision in s. 149, ante, p. 273, is permissive, and no compulsion or duty is cast upon the urban authority. Therefore, where a goit ran by the side of an ancient public footpath, it was held that the local board were not bound to fence the path from the goit to prevent accidents (Wilson v. Halifax (Mayor, etc. of) (1868), L. R. 3 Ex. 114; 32 J. P. 230). But if a council pull down a fence placed to protect passengers from falling into a ditch by the side of a road, in order to repair it, and before repairs are executed an accident occurs through want of a fence, they will be liable as for misfeasance (Whyler v. Bingham R. D. C., ante, p. 258).

Breaking open highways.

(i) In general no person or company may take up or interfere with a highway so as to create a nuisance. See R. v. Longton Gas Co. (1860), 29 L. J. M. C. 118; 24 J. P. 214; Ellis v. Sheffield Gas Consumers' Co. (1853), 2 El. & Bl. 767; Pudsey Coal Gas Co. v. Bradford (Mayor of) (1873), L. R. 15 Eq. 167; 37 J. P. 340; Stockport Waterworks Co. v. Manchester Corporation (1863), 9 Jur. (N.S.) 266; Att.-Gen. v. Wheatley & Co., Times, December 16th, 1903; Att.-Gen. v. Scott, [1904] 1 K. B. 404; 68 J. P. 137; Cavan C. C. v. Kane, [1910] 2 I. R. 644; [1913] 2 I. R. 250; Kilkenny C. C. v. Hayden (1913), 46 Ir. L. T. 95. In Stockport Waterworks Co. v. Manchester Corporation, supra, it was held that the taking up of the pavement and digging trenches in the roadway and footway of a public thoroughfare, in order to lay down service pipes for the supply of gas from mains to private houses, are not acts which can be justified at common law as done in the exercise of the right of every occupier of a house to make such a temporary obstruction of the highway as may be necessarily incidental to the enjoyment of his property; and a householder who authorises such acts, and they who do them, having no parliamentary powers for the purpose, are liable to be indicted for a nuisance. No lapse of time is an answer to an indictment for causing a nuisance on a highway (R. v. Cross (1812), 3 Camp. 224; R. v. Edwards (1847), 11 J. P. 602; Harvey v. Truro R. D. C. (1903), 68 J. P. 51; 52 W. R. 262). Nor is the consent of a local authority under this section an answer to an indictment, for the power to consent is limited to works authorised by the Act (Hawkins v. Robinson (1873), 37 J. P. 662; see also Harvey v. Truro R. D. C., supra; Att.-Gen. v. Mayo C. C., [1902] 1 I. R. 13; Preston (Mayor of) v. Fulwood L. B., infra). The consent of a highway authority to a tramway crossing a highway is of no effect, at any rate if the crossing is a nuisance (Att.-Gen. v. Barker (1900), 83 L. T. 245), and cf. Matson v. Baird & Co., (1878) 3 App. Cas. 1082; 39 L. T. 304.

The Court of Chancery refused to interfere by injunction where the injury done by the opening of streets was temporary and trivial (Att.-Gen. v. Sheffield Gas Consumers' Co. (1853), 22 L. J. Ch. 811; Att.-Gen. v. Cambridge Consumers' Gas Co. (1868), L. R. 4 Ch. 71; 33 J. P. 147); and see further as to nuisances of a trivial or negligible character, R. v. Lepine (1866), 15 L. T. 158; R. v. Tindall (1837), 6 A. & E. 143; R. v. Betts (1850), 16 Q. B. 1022; R. v. Russell (1854), 3 E. & B. 942; Att.-Gen. v. Mayo C. C., supra; R. v. Bartholomew, [1908] 1 K. B. 554; 72 J. P. 79 (coffee stall in street); R. v. Richmond JJ. (1860), 25 J. P. 340 (trestles to divert traffic); Wandsworth Board of Works v. L. & S. W. Rail Co. (1862), 31 L. J. Ch. 854.

An injunction was, however, granted under the following circumstances: The corporation of P., who had no parliamentary powers for the purpose, supplied water to the adjoining district of F., and claimed the right to enter upon and break up the streets of F., whenever occasion should require, for the purpose of repairing their pipes, relying, as regarded some of the streets, on alleged irrevocable licences granted by the predecessors of the local board of F. (i.e., the surveyors of highways), and as regarded other streets on prescription. It was held (1) that the claim of the corporation was to commit a nuisance; (2) that it was not in the power of the surveyors of highways to grant the alleged licences; (3) that, therefore, as a grant could not be presumed, the corporation could not obtain the right claimed by prescription (Preston (Mayor, etc. of) v. Fulwood L. B. (1885), 53 L. T. 718). See this case for an explanation of the decision in Edgware Highway Board v. Harrow District Gas Co. (1874), L. R. 10 Q. B. 92; 38 J. P. 806. There the plaintiffs, a highway board, agreed with the defendants, a gas company, that if the plaintiffs would give the defendants a licence to open a highway in their jurisdiction, the defendants should make good the surface of the road, and pay to the plaintiffs 1*s.* per yard of the highway so broken up. It was held that the contract was valid, for the agreement of the plaintiffs to allow the defendants to interfere with the surface of the road was a good consideration, and the contract was not illegal, as it did not necessarily contemplate the creation of a nuisance by the defendants. See also on this point Dublin C. C. v. P. M. G., [1914] 2 I. R. 208.

As to the right of a private individual to restrain the laying of pipes in a highway the soil of which belongs to him, see Goodson v. Richardson (1874), L. R. 9 Ch. 221; 38 J. P. 436, and Salt Union, Ltd. v. Harvey (1897), 61 J. P. 375; 13 T. L. R. 297. The right of a local authority to prevent the laying of pipes, etc. under a street does not enable them to require the taking up of such pipes, etc. once they have been laid, though laid wrongfully (see St. Mary, Battersea (Vestry of) v. County of London and Brush Provincial Electric Lighting Co., Ltd., ante, p. 279). It would be otherwise if the defendants claimed the right to open the streets from time to time for repairs, etc. (see Hyde (Mayor, etc. of) v. Oldham, etc. Electric Tramway, Ltd. (1900), 64 J. P. 596).

Where a company has a special Act, passed before this Act, the provisions in the text will not affect their powers. In London and Blackwall Rail. Co. v. Limehouse District Board of Works (1856), 26 L. J. Ch. 164; 20 J. P. 789, the general principle was laid down that when the legislature has vested special powers in a particular body for specified purposes, a subsequent general Act will not override those special powers. Therefore, in that case, a railway company were held empowered to build a station abutting on a street in the metropolis without the consent of the district board, their local Act, which preceded the Metropolis Management Act, empowering them to do so. See also Goldson v. Buck (1812), 15 East, 372; Att.-Gen. v. Eastern Counties Rail. Co. (1842), 10 M. & W. 263; City and South London Rail. Co. v. London C. C., [1891] 2 Q. B. 513; 56 J. P. 6; London C. C. v. London School Board, [1892] 2 Q. B. 606; 56 J. P. 791; Uckfield R. D. C. v. Crowborough Water Co., [1899] 2 Q. B. 664; Moran v. Marsland, [1909] 1 K. B. 744; 73 J. P. 114; Metropolitan Rail. Co. v. London C. C., [1913] 2 K. B. 249. For an instance of a power under a special Act to break up pavements to lay gas pipes, see Dover Gas Light Co. v. Mayor, etc. of Dover (1855), 1 Jur. (N.S.) 812.

As to the power to open streets for the purposes of laying mains or wires for the transmission of electricity, see the Electric Lighting Acts, in App. I., post, and Montreal (City of) v. Standard Light and Power Co., [1897] A. C. 527. As to the power to open streets for the purpose of laying drains, see Att.-Gen. v. Ashby, ante, p. 79. As to crossings over footways, see the P. H. A., 1907, s. 18, post. Reference may also be made to the Tramways Act, 1870.

See ss. 153 and 331, post, as to certain acts of interference with pipes, etc. authorised by this Act.

Trees in streets.

(k) The judgment of BRAMWELL, L.J., in Coverdale v. Charlton, ante, p. 277, leaves open the question whether a tree in a street vests in a local authority under this section, though they have power by inference to trim and maintain existing trees on highways. See also Surbiton Improvement Commissioners v. Metcalf (1888), Times, Nov. 14th. In the same judgment reference is made to trees planted by the local board, but it must not be assumed that an authority have power under this section to plant trees in streets. See a conviction for so doing in R. v. Lewes Corporation (1886), Times, March 9th. The planting of trees on or near highways was discouraged by the old Highway Acts, but where the P. H. A., 1890, post, has been adopted, the authority may plant trees (s. 43), and may place in any street refuges and cabmen's shelters; and they may also authorise the erection of statues or monuments (ss. 39, 40, 42).

The liability of the owner of a tree for damage done by an overhanging bough to a passing vehicle was discussed by a county court judge in Thorne v. Roberts (1909), L. T. Jo., Dec. 18th.

Power to compel paving, etc. of private streets (a).

150. Where any street (b) within any urban (a) district (not being a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large) (c) or the carriageway footway or any other part of such street (d) is not sewered levelled paved metalled flagged channelled and made good or is not lighted to the satisfaction (e) of the urban authority, such authority may, by notice addressed to the respective owners or occupiers (f) of the premises fronting adjoining or abutting (g) on such parts thereof as may require to be sewered levelled paved metalled flagged or channelled, or to be lighted, require them to sewer level pave metal flag channel or make good or to provide proper means for lighting (h) the same within a time (hh) to be specified in such notice.

Before giving such notice the urban authority shall cause plans and sections of any structural works intended to be executed under this section, and an estimate of the probable cost thereof, to be made under the direction of their surveyor, such plans and sections to be on a scale of not less than one inch for eighty-eight feet for a horizontal plan, and on a scale of not less than one inch for ten feet for a vertical section, and, in the case of a sewer, showing the depth of such sewer below the surface of the ground: such plans sections and estimate shall be deposited in the office of the urban authority, and shall be open at all reasonable hours for the inspection of all persons interested therein during the time specified in such notice; and a reference to such plans and sections in such notice shall be sufficient without requiring any copy of such plans and sections to be annexed to such notice (i). Section 150.

If such notice is not complied with, the urban authority may, if they think fit, execute the works mentioned or referred to therein (k); and may recover in a summary manner (l) the expenses (ll) incurred by them in so doing from the owners, in default (m), according to the frontage of their respective premises, and in such proportion as is settled by the surveyor of the urban authority (n), or (in case of dispute) by arbitration in manner provided by this Act (o); or the urban authority may by order declare the expenses so incurred to be private improvement expenses (p).

The same proceedings may be taken, and the same powers may be exercised, in respect of any street or road of which a part is or may be a public footpath or repairable by the inhabitants at large as fully as if the whole of such street or road was a highway not repairable by the inhabitants at large (q).

(a) This section will not apply to a district in which the Private Street Works Act, 1892, has been adopted. See that Act, s. 25, post.

Under the P. H. A., 1907, post, a district council in whose district s. 19 of that Act has been put in force, may, without "making up" the whole street, require owners to execute any repairs necessary to obviate or remove danger to passengers or vehicles. See that section and notes thereto, post.

See also s. 28 of the same Act as to the removal or use of old materials in streets.

Rural districts.

It will be observed that the section is only applied by the Act to urban districts, but if a rural district council desire to act thereunder they may apply to the M. of H. for an order under s. 276 putting the section in force. Orders of this kind are frequently issued, but it is the practice of the Ministry following that of the L. G. B. not to grant the powers in respect of whole rural districts or parishes, or (in view of the duties imposed upon district councils by ss. 15 and 229 of the Act to provide such sewers as are necessary for effectually draining their district at the cost of the respective contributory places) to give to rural district councils the power of requiring frontagers to defray the cost of sewers in private streets. In several cases the Ministry have relaxed their rule when it has been shown that a rural parish has in fact an urban character and has been provided with a main drainage system, or that other circumstances make it just that frontagers should provide sewers. Applications should, normally, be limited to streets or parts of streets in which all necessary sewers have already been laid (so as to avoid a second breaking up), and the Ministry should be furnished (for the purposes of the order if issued) with a statement giving their names, length and termini, and the names of the contributory places in which they are situate. A map or maps should also be forwarded, showing by colour the streets included in the application, the position of the sewers to which the properties are drained, and the extent to which the abutting lands are built upon. The Ministry require before issuing an order that the rural district council should give some evidence in the shape of a declaration by their clerk that the streets are not highways repairable by the inhabitants at large, and should formally undertake by resolution to adopt the streets, when made up, as highways so repairable. The application must, therefore, extend to the powers of s. 152 or s. 41 of the P. H. A., 1890. If a rural district council prefer to proceed under the Private Street Works Act, 1892, they may apply for the necessary order under s. 4 of that Act. The practice of the Ministry is similar in the two cases, except that in view of s. 20 of the later Act the Board do not require a rural district council, proposing to proceed thereunder, to pass a resolution undertaking to adopt the streets as public highways. If an application relates to streets which have no sewers and are not considered to require them, a full statement of grounds will be required, and it is advantageous to support the application by a report by the medical officer of health as to the existing means of drainage.

"Street."

(b) Street.—In discussing the definition of this term in s. 4, ante, p. 15, it was pointed out that the word "street," as used in this section, does not apply only to a street in the ordinary and popular sense, but has the wider meaning assigned to it by the interpretation clause. The decisions have not been uniformly to this effect, and it may be useful to set them out in chronological order. In Maude v. Baildon L. B. (1883), 10 Q. B. D. 394; 47 J. P. 644, the court held that the word "street" in this section was used in its ordinary sense of a road with houses more or less continuous. In Portsmouth (Mayor, etc. of) v. Smith (1883), 13 Q. B. D. 184; 48 J. P. 404, the MASTER OF THE ROLLS questioned that decision, pointing out that it had proceeded upon a mistaken view of R. v. Dayman (1857), 22 J. P. 39; 7 El. & Bl. 672; and the court decided that the word "street," as used in the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, s. 53 (which corresponds to the text), was to be interpreted according to the definition, and, therefore, includes a highway which was not a street in the ordinary sense. In Midland Rail. Co. v. Watton (1886), 17 Q. B. D. 30; 50 J. P. 405, it seems to have been assumed that the word "street" as used in the text meant a street as defined by s. 4. But in Cleckheaton L. B. v. Burnup (1886), 50 J. P. 598, the court held that the section applied only to streets in the ordinary and natural meaning of that term; that in summary proceedings under the section, it was for the justices to find as a fact, having regard to the surrounding circumstances, and to whether there was any intention of building along a road so as to convert it into a street, whether such road was a street in the ordinary and popular sense of the term; that it made no difference that the section had been applied, or might apply, to a portion of the road other than that in question; and that where the justices found a road, or a portion of a road, not to be a street in the ordinary and popular sense, they would be right in holding that the section was not applicable to the road or portion. All these cases were reviewed in Jowett v. Idle L. B. (1887), 57 L. T. 928; affirmed (1888), 36 W. R. 530. In that case the plaintiffs were owners of a private alley or court, and the defendants acting under this section sewered the same and paved the roadway thereof. The plaintiffs thereupon sued them for trespass. The alley or court led from a highway to a mill, and the portion sewered and paved by the defendants was bounded on each side by cottages, some twenty in number, and their gardens and yards. It was the only means of access to the cottages and mill; but the owners and occupiers of the adjoining property were the only persons having rights of road over it. The traffic in connection with the mill was very considerable. It was held that the words in the definition of "street" in s. 4 must be read into this section; that the question whether the alley or court was a street or not within the meaning of the section, was a question of law to be decided by the judge, and not a question for the jury; and that, upon the facts, the alley or court in question was a street within the meaning of the section. In Richards v. Kessick (1888), 57 L. J. M. C. 48; 52 J. P. 756, FIELD, J., after quoting the definition of a street in s. 4, said: "On looking at the 150th section, I cannot understand how any doubt can have arisen as to reading this definition into it; but we have not to decide that point now, because in Jowett v. Idle L. B., which is the last case on the point, it was decided that it must be read in." In the same case WILLS, J., said: "It was argued that s. 4 should not be read with s. 150, and the case of Maude v. Baildon L. B. was cited in support of that contention, and it was said to be followed by Cleckheaton L. B. v. Burnup. I always thought that decision of Maude v. Baildon L. B. was wrong . . . and it now appears that it lately has been decided in the Court of Appeal in the case of Jowett v. Idle L. B. that the definition of the word 'street' given in the fourth section must be construed along with the 150th section." Jowett v. Idle L. B. was again followed in Fenwick v. Croydon R. S. A., [1891] 2 Q. B. 216; 55 J. P. 470. There the appellant was summoned under this section for non-payment of expenses incurred by the authority in sewering and paving a road on which his premises abutted. An Order of the L. G. B. under s. 276 had declared this section to be in force as to the road in question, which the order also referred to as "a street." The road ran from a turnpike road to a bridge, where it passed into another parish, and was from that point repaired by the local board of that parish as a highway. It was about 900 feet long. It had on the south side several houses, including the appellant's house, abutting on it; on the north side there were none for 785 feet from the turnpike road. For the rest of its course it was bounded on that side by the authority's sewage farm, on which were two buildings. It was a public highway. There was no evidence of formal dedication of the road, but there was evidence of its use as a highway since 1835, and some evidence before 1835, but none inconsistent with its having been then merely an occupation road or footpath. The justices held that the Order of the L. G. B. was conclusive that the road was a street, and further held that, although, in their opinion, it was not a street in the popular acceptation of the word, it was a street within s. 4. On a case stated, it was held that the justices were wrong in holding that the Order was conclusive that the road was a street but that by the definition in s. 4 it was a street within the meaning of this section.

A path in Epping Forest was made up as a street under the Private Street Works Act, 1892. The case was decided upon another point; but it was apparently considered that the path was a "street" for the purposes of the Act, though it was necessary that the consent of the Epping Forest Conservators should be given before the work was done, the land being part of the forest and subject to the Forest Act (Woodford U. D. C. v. Henwood (1899), 64 J. P. 148).

Where a roadway runs over land acquired by a railway company under its compulsory powers, and the application of this section to such roadway would be inconsistent with the appropriation of the land to the objects of the company, the section cannot (semble) be put into operation; secus, where the making and dedication of such roadway, so far from being inconsistent with the company's objects, must have been contemplated by the framers of its special Act (Stretford U. D. C. v. Manchester South Junction and Altrincham Rail. Co. (1903), 68 J. P. 59; 19 T. L. R. 546). See also Glasgow and S. W. Rail. Co. v. Ayr Magistrates, [1912] A. C. 520, as to the site of an existing street acquired by a railway company by agreement.

A railway company built a bridge over their railway in the metropolis, with additions, on which their station was erected. They lighted the bridge with street lamps, and allowed the public for eighteen months to use it as a highway. They had made an agreement with a water company to allow water pipes to be carried over the bridge. It was held that the bridge had become by dedication a street; that the company could not close it so as to prevent the vestry paving it as a "new street"; and that the company as owners were liable to pay paving expenses (North London Rail. Co. v. St. Mary, Islington (Vestry of) (1872), 37 J. P. 341; 27 L. T. 672).

This section applies to all present and future streets, except when they are repairable by the inhabitants at large, and whether they have been dedicated to the public or not: per QUAIN, J., in St. Mary, Islington (Vestry of) v. Barrett (1874), L. R. 9 Q. B. 278; 38 J. P. 198, following Kingston-upon-Hull Corporation v. Jones (1856), 21 J. P. 37; 1 H. & N. 489. In a later case, JESSEL, M.R., said that the word "streets" as here used "clearly extends to places which are in all respects private, and over which the public have no right." And he added, "What is the Act for? It is a Public Health Act. The owners of these private courts and alleys are, of all the people in the world, the most averse to laying out money in sanitary works. It is in these places that the poor live, the very people who suffer most from the want of sewerage and drainage, which are so requisite for public health. Is it to be imagined that the legislature intended to except such places from the operation of the Act? I should say, if the Act were passed for anybody, it must have been to include those owners who, for the sake of gain and acquiring high rents in proportion to the annual value of the wretched tenements they allow the poor to occupy, neglect ordinary and necessary sanitary precautions. If I were to interpret it by what I might think to be the mind of the legislature, I should suppose that the first people to be included would be the owners of these crowded courts and alleys over which the public have no street rights whatever, but which are intended to be used for the dwellings of the poor and are unprovided with what, according to modern science, is known to be absolutely necessary for their well being" (Taylor v. Oldham (Corporation of) (1876), 4 Ch. D. 395). See also Midland Rail. Co. v. Watton (1886), 17 Q. B. D. 30; 50 J. P. 405, where, though the owner of the soil of a road put up bars and took tolls from passengers, it was held that such road might yet be a "street," and Walthamstow U. D. C. v. Sandell (1904), 68 J. P. 509; 2 L. G. R. 835, where a cul-de-sac passage, giving access only to the back premises of five houses, was held to be a "street" within this section. In the latter case, BUCKLEY, J., said: "I have no doubt I have to see what sort of a passage this is, whether it is a private approach to a man's house,—his avenue leading up to his house from the street, or . . . a passageway rightly open to any member of the public who is going along an adjacent highway, and as to which DAY, J., said, in R. v. Goole L. B., 'there is nothing to show that the public cannot pass along it.'"

D. owned a house, the back premises of which had a door leading into an alley or lane which had been used for fifty years by the tenants of nine houses as an access, but there was no thoroughfare through it. It was held that there was evidence justifying a finding that this was a new street within the meaning of the Metropolis Management Acts, so as to make the owners of the houses abutting on it liable for the expenses of paving it (Dodd v. St. Pancras (Vestry of) (1870), 34 J. P. 517).

Projected streets.

In Healey v. Batley Corporation (1875), L. R. 19 Eq. 375; 39 J. P. 423, it was held under the following circumstances that an owner of land in a suburb of a town who allowed the public to pass over his land, could not be compelled to pave and sewer under provisions similar to those contained in the text. He had in 1850 demised the coal under the land for six years to K., the owner of the adjoining land. In the lease was an agreement that a road, to be called Union Street, should within five years be made across the land under which the coal lay and K.'s land; that a sewer should be made under such road; that the lessor and lessee should, at their own cost, construct and repair so much of the said road and sewer as should extend along their respective lands; and that the road should be used as a public road for all purposes for ever thereafter, and should be maintained by each of the parties so far as the same should extend over his land until the same should be adopted by the surveyor of highways. The road and sewer were never made, and there was no dedication of a highway to the public by notice under the Highway Act. A brickfield and afterwards a colliery were opened on K.'s land, and gaps were opened in the fences to give access for carts and foot passengers. In 1869 posts and chains were placed across one of the openings, but after a few months the chains were removed. In 1870 K.'s land was sold, and in 1871 conveyed to the plaintiff in fee. In 1872 the local board called upon him to pave and sewer the alleged "street." It was held that the agreement in the expired lease had been abandoned, and could not be enforced, and that it did not amount to a dedication of a right of way to the public. In this case it will be seen that there never was anything which could be called a street. In another case H., lessee of land under a lease dated 1855, in 1865 laid out a proposed road across part of the land, and built six houses on one side of the road. In 1870 she abandoned her intention of making the road, and in 1874 she demised the remainder of the land, including the site of the abandoned road. In 1880 the urban authority called upon the representatives of H. to pave the road, and on their neglecting to do so entered on the land and began the work. It was held that the laying out of the proposed road was no dedication of a public right of way, and that an injunction must go against the authority (Hall v. Bootle Corporation (1881), 44 L. T. 873. In 1907 plans were passed showing an intended new street with a southern outlet into a highway but no northern outlet. The plans showed the land on the east side of the street plotted out for building. The street was constructed, and kerbed and channelled on its eastern side with a footpath, at the cost of the owner to the satisfaction of the authority, who laid a water main in it. A gas main was also laid. By 1910 the owner had disposed of all the plots except the two northernmost, and had granted to his lessees a right of way over the new street, and houses were built. In September, 1910, K. bought the two remaining plots and the north end of the new street so far as it was conterminous with the two plots, with a right of way over the new street up to the two plots, and erected a fence with an opening for gates across the new street in a line with the southern boundary of the two plots, thus enclosing the north end of the new street bought by him. The authority had not taken over the street or expended any public money upon it, but alleged that its entire length had been dedicated to the public, and threatened to pull down the fence. It was held, on the evidence, that the new street had not become a highway:—Held, also, that the byelaws and special Act of the authority dealt only with the width and level, and not with the length, of new streets, and therefore that, in the absence of an order under s. 17 of the P. H. A., 1907, the owner was entitled to deviate from the plans and to enclose the dead end of his private road (Kirby v. Paignton U. D. C., [1913] 1 Ch. 337; 77 J. P. 169). See also Sunderland Corporation v. Skinner, on p. 338, post; Mackett v. Herne Bay Commissioners, on p. 338, post; Rolls v. St. Mary, Newington (Vestry of), W. N. 1873) 168, and Tarrant v. Woking U. D. C. (1914), 3 K. B. 796; 79 J. P. 22, on p. 337, post.

A burn, having a public footpath on one side, was piped in, with the result that vehicles could be driven (though with difficulty) along its line from one street to another; but it was not intended that there should be any road, and no attempt had been made to form one:—Held, that the strip of land was not a street within somewhat similar provisions in a Scotch Act (Dunfermline Town Council v. Rintoul, [1911] S. C. 737).

R. agreed with an authority that when he used his land for building he would throw a strip eighteen feet wide into a road eighteen feet wide made by an adjoining owner along his boundary. Before he did so the authority called upon him as a frontager to join in sewering and paving the original road; and, upon the frontager's default, the authority did the work. After apportionment, R., as he had agreed, threw eighteen feet into the road, and (though he was not bound to do so by his agreement) paved and sewered his strip. It was held that the original eighteen foot road was a "street" which the authority had the right to require R. to sewer, pave, etc. (West Hartlepool Corporation v. Robinson (1897), 62 J. P. 35; 77 L. T. 387).

In Camberwell Borough Council v. Dixon, [1910] 1 K. B. 424; 74 J. P. 77, it was held that a metropolitan authority are not precluded from paving a street at the cost of the frontagers as a "new street," by the fact that it has been laid out or widened in contravention of some byelaw or statute.

In the case of a street down which the boundary between two districts runs, s. 150 does not seem to be applicable to the making up of the surface as a whole, though each council could probably make up the strip within its district and recover the expenses from frontagers upon its own side. See hereon Mayor, etc. of Hornsey v. Birkbeck Freehold Land Society, and cases cited therewith, on p. 300, post. The L. G. B. expressed the opinion that there was no provision in the P. H. A., 1875, which would enable two councils to carry out a joint scheme for the making up of a street so situated at the cost of the owners. The boundary may be altered under the L. G. A., 1888, s. 54 or s. 57, with the object of getting over the difficulty.

It is a question of fact whether a piece of ground, e.g., a strip of pavement separated from the roadway of a street by posts, is or is not part of the street which may be dealt with under this section (Bell & Sons v. Great Crosby U. D. C. (1913), 77 J. P. 37).

Repairable by the inhabitants at large.

(c) Repairable by the inhabitants at large.—The words "repairable by the inhabitants at large" were not in the corresponding section (s. 69) of the P. H. A., 1848, but were added by 15 & 16 Vict. c. 42, s. 13. The difficulty which arose in Sunderland v. Herring (1853), 17 J. P. 741, is thus obviated. There are, however, local Acts under which frontagers have been held liable for the expense of making up streets repairable by the inhabitants at large: see Ashton-under-Lyne Corporation v. Pugh, [1898] 1 Q. B. 45; 61 J. P. 788; Lodge v. Huddersfield Corporation, [1898] 1 Q. B. 847, 859; 62 J. P. 387, 515; Portsmouth Corporation v. Smith (1885), 10 App. Cas. 364; 49 J. P. 676; Crump v. Chorley Corporation (1908), 72 J. P. 334; 98 L. T. 805; Stockport Corporation v. Cheetham (1860), 24 J. P. 196; Rochdale Corporation v. Leach (1910), 74 J. P. 89; 101 L. T. 881; Birkenhead Improvement Commissioners v. Sansom (1876), 40 J. P. 406; 34 L. T. 175; Leeds (Corporation of) v. Hawke, Times, July 17th, 1897.

If a street is repairable by the inhabitants at large, there is no jurisdiction under this section. Therefore where a street was shown to have been a highway before 1835 (as to this date and its importance in this respect, see p. 275, ante), it was held that the frontagers could not be made liable (Rishton v. Haslingden Corporation, [1898] 1 Q. B. 294; 62 J. P. 85). And in the case of a highway dedicated since 1835, where from long user it was presumed that the requirements of ss. 84—92 of the Highway Act, 1835, had been complied with, the same result followed (Leigh-on-Sea U. D. C. v. King, p. 293, post; but see Cababé v. Walton-on-Thames U. D. C., p. 275, ante.)

The words "repairable by the inhabitants at large" appear to be used in contradistinction to highways repairable by individuals or corporate bodies by prescription, ratione tenuræ, ratione clausuræ, or under some statute or statutory award, or highways repairable by no one. In the case of highways repairable by individuals there may, in case of default, be an ultimate liability upon the inhabitants (see Pratt on Highways (16th ed.), pp. 78, 79, and cases there cited as to roads made under turnpike and other local Acts); but it is submitted that for the purposes of this section at any rate such highways cannot be said to be repairable by them: cf. Swansea Improvement Commissioners v. Glamorganshire County Roads Board (1880), 43 J. P. 798; 41 L. T. 583; Gibson v. Preston Corporation (1870), L. R. 5 Q. B. 218; 34 J. P. 342; Austerberry v. Oldham Corporation (1885), 29 Ch. D. 750; 49 J. P. 532; Wallington v. White, infra. As to what roads are repairable by the inhabitants at large, see pp. 274, et seq., ante; reference may also be made to the following cases:

A field belonging to B. was laid out for building, and a street formed in 1836, which had ever since been used as a public thoroughfare. B. had never formally dedicated it to the public, and, in 1848, he granted a licence to W. to lay down gas pipes, for which, and for preventing others from interfering, he received from W. a small annual rent. After 1853 the local board repaired the street, and in 1858 they put up notices under the P. H. A., 1848, s. 70 (corresponding to s. 152, post, p. 319), declaring it a highway. W. having been summoned for wilfully injuring the street, being a highway, it was held that there was ample evidence that the street had been dedicated by B., and was a highway (Thomas v. Williams (1860), 24 J. P. 821).

A new street had been repaired by the owners in 1828, and the public had ever since been allowed freely to pass through it, and great numbers had used it. There had been no express dedication, nor any certificate of justices rendering the township liable to repair, and it had never in fact been repaired by any one since the above date. The local board having called upon the adjacent owners to pave, sewer, and level it, and on their refusal having done so themselves, it was held that there was ample evidence that this was a highway dedicated to and adopted by the public before 1836, and therefore repairable by the public (Illingworth v. Montgomery (1860), 24 J. P. 101).

In 1825, by a local Act, commissioners were authorised and required to repair all streets and highways in a town; and it was enacted that when any new streets should be laid out and put in good order to their satisfaction, then the commissioners might declare such streets to be public highways, and were thereafter to repair them like the other streets in the town. In 1830 a new street was laid out and dedicated to the public, who thereafter used it as a highway, but it was never declared to be such by the commissioners. Subsequently the owners of land adjacent to the street were required to pave it under the P. H. A., 1848, s. 69 (corresponding to s. 150). It was held that they were liable, for the street was not a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, the local Act having prevented its becoming such a highway unless so declared by the commissioners. The common law liability of the inhabitants was taken away by a provision in the Act giving power to the commissioners to make rates, and exonerating every person assessed from the performance of statute duty for repair of the public highways within the town. It might have been otherwise had the ultimate liability of the inhabitants remained as in R. v. St. George's, Hanover Square (1812), 3 Camp. 222 (Wallington v. White (1861), 30 L. J. M. C. 209; 25 J. P. 358; affirmed sub nom. Willes v. Wallington (1862), 32 L. J. C. P. 86; 27 J. P. 295). This case was distinguished from Hirst v. Halifax L. B. (1870), L. R. 6 Q. B. 181; 35 J. P. 261. In that case, by a local Act of 1798, trustees were authorised to pave streets in the township of H. and levy rates on the inhabitants; and all who paid these rates were to be exempt from all other charges for paving. In 1816 A. laid out a street, which he dedicated to the public, and in 1819 it had been used by the public. In 1823 another local Act repealed that of 1798, appointed trustees, who were to have all the rights, duties, and obligations of highway surveyors, and exonerated the inhabitants from liability to repair the highways. The local board paved the street under the P. H. A., 1848, and charged the expenses on the adjoining owners. It was held that the street was a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, for there was nothing in the first Act to prevent a street becoming a highway by dedication and user prior to 1823, and that the second Act applied only to streets then in progress or afterwards laid out, and had no effect on streets already public. "Had the second Act been passed before the street became a highway, the case would have been exactly analogous to Wallington v. White, supra" per LUSH, J. Note to Section 150.

In Austerberry v. Oldham (Mayor, etc. of) (1885), 29 Ch. D. 750; 49 J. P. 532 A. sold to trustees a piece of land as part of the site of a road intended to be made and maintained by the trustees under the provisions of a contemporaneous trust deed (being a deed of settlement for the benefit of a company formed to raise the necessary capital for making the road), and in the conveyance the trustees covenanted with A., his heirs and assigns, that the trustees, their heirs and assigns, would make the road and at all times keep it in repair, and allow the use of it by the public subject to tolls. The land so conveyed was bounded on both sides by other land of A. The trustees made the road which afforded the necessary access to A.'s adjoining lands. A. afterwards sold such lands to the plaintiff, and the trustees sold the road to the defendants, both parties taking with notice of the covenant to repair. The Court of Appeal held that the plaintiff could not enforce the covenant against the defendants, for its benefit and burden did not "run with" the land. The promoters of the intended road by deed declared that the road should not only be enjoyed by them for their individual purposes, but "should be open to the use of the public at large for all manner of purposes in all respects as a common turnpike road," but subject to the payment of tolls by the users. It was held that the road was not "a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large" within the meaning of this section. The court intimated an opinion that an individual cannot, without legislative authority, dedicate a road to the public if he reserves the right to charge tolls for the user; and that the mere fact that a number of persons formed themselves into a company for making and maintaining a road, and erected gates and bars and charged tolls, did not make the road a turnpike road in the proper sense of the term. In Midland Rail. Co. v. Watton (1886), 17 Q. B. D. 30; 50 J. P. 405, the owners of a road put up bars upon it, and took tolls from the public for the passage of vehicles, horses, and cattle. It was held to be "a street" not repairable by the inhabitants at large.

A new highway substituted under the Highway Act, 1835, ss. 84 et seq., for an old one repairable by the public is similarly repairable (ibid., s. 92; see also s. 93, if the old road was not so repairable), and the same rule apparently applies to a substituted highway made by a railway company under the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, s. 56 (Friern Barnet L. B. v. G. N. Rail. Co. (1893), 57 J. P. 53; Mayor, etc. of Folkestone v. Marsh (1906), 70 J. P. 113; 94 L. T. 511): see also as to a new road substituted under a local Act, St. Giles, Camberwell (Vestry) v. Crystal Palace Co., [1892] 2 Q. B. 33; 57 J. P. 5. An order diverting a footpath repairable by the public along a new street may be so worded as to make the whole width of the new street (and not the pavement only) similarly repairable (Kingston-on-Thames Corporation v. Baverstock (1909), 73 J. P. 378; 100 L. T. 935). After long user by the public of a diverted or substituted way, it may be presumed that the change was effected with the proper formalities (Leigh-on-Sea U. D. C. v. King, [1901] 1 K. B. 747; 65 J. P. 243; but see Cababé v. Walton-on-Thames U. D. C., p. 275, ante). Substituted and diverted highways.

As to the admissibility and value of maps in questions as to the liability to repair a highway, see Vyner v. Wirral R. D. C. (1909), 73 J. P. 242; 7 L. G. R. 628; Att.-Gen. v. Horner (No 2), [1913] 2 Ch. 140; 77 J. P. 257; and cf. Fowke v. Berington (1914), 2 Ch. 308, and A.-G. v. Meyrick (1915), 79 J. P. 515.

Owners of land adjoining a road which a local authority have agreed to take over as a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, cannot by agreement between them and the authority confer jurisdiction to act under s. 150. See Mayor, etc. of Folkestone v. Marsh, cited on p. 268, ante; but cf. Mayor, etc. of Folkestone v. Rook, ibid.

An application to justices by a local board for the recovery of expenses from an owner under this section was dismissed on the ground that the street was a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large. The board some years later made an application against the same person for the recovery of further expenses subsequently incurred in respect of the same street. It was held by the Court of Appeal, reversing the decision of the Queen's Bench Division, that the adjudication of the justices that the street was a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large on the first application was beyond their jurisdiction, for they had only power to make or refuse an order for the payment of the expenses claimed; that, therefore, such adjudication did not estop the board from claiming the expenses claimed on the second application, and consequently that a magistrate could make an order for their payment (R. v. Hutchins (1881), 6 Q. B. D. 300; 45 J. P. 504). This decision was followed by a Divisional Court in a case arising under a local Act similar in terms to the Private Street Works Act, 1892 (Wakefield Corporation v. Cooke, [1902] 1 K. B. 188; 66 J. P. 232), and also in a case arising under the Metropolis Management Acts (Scott v. Lowe (1902), 66 J. P. 520). The Wakefield Case, was however, appealed; and it was ultimately decided in the House of Lords that the principle of the decision in R. v. Hutchins, supra, was not applicable (Wakefield Corporation v. Cooke, [1904] A. C. 31; 68 J. P. 225). See the notes to the Private Street Works Act, 1892, s. 7, post.

Part of a street.

(d) Part of such Street.—It was held with reference to the Metropolis Management Acts, 1855 and 1862, that, although the district board might have resolved that part only of a road should be repaired, yet as they had resolved that the whole should be repaired, there must be only one apportionment on all the owners along the entire road. Therefore, the surveyor having divided the road into four sections, and apportioned the cost of repairing each section amongst the owners of property in that section, it was held that the apportionments were bad, and unenforceable (Whitchurch v. Fulham Board of Works (1866), L. R. 1 Q. B. 233; 30 J. P. 229).

The owners of a field adjoining a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large used it for building, and threw open to the highway a strip of land in front of the new houses. It was held that the houses with the strip of land in front of them formed a street within the meaning of the section, which the authority could compel the frontagers to pave, channel, and kerb, to their satisfaction (Richards v. Kessick (1888), 57 L. J. M. C. 48; 52 J. P. 756). See the observations on this case in White v. Fulham Vestry (1896), 60 J. P. 327; 74 L. T. 425, and Property Exchange, Ltd. v. Wandsworth District Board of Works, [1902] 2 K. B. 61; 66 J. P. 435; and cf. Portsmouth Corporation v. Hall and Escott v. Newport Corporation, post, pp. 316, 323.

A "part of a street" may be such part as is not occupied by tram lines (Standring v. Bexhill Corporation (1909), 73 J. P. 241; 7 L. G. R. 670).

What works may be required: works of sewering.

(e) Sewered, Levelled, etc. to the satisfaction of the Urban Authority.—Where an owner had, with the sanction of the Metropolitan Board of Works, laid a sewer in a new street, and the district board afterwards took up this sewer and laid another for the drainage of the neighbourhood, it was held that the owner could not be charged with any portion of the cost of the second sewer (Fulham District Board of Works v. Goodwin (1876), 1 Ex. D. 400; 41 J. P. 134). Where a sewer had been laid in a street by private persons, and had vested in the urban authority under s. 13, ante, p. 45, it was held that the authority could not require the owners to lay a new sewer when a new system of drainage had to be adopted (Bonella v. Twickenham L. B. (1887), 18 Q. B. D. 577; affirmed, 20 Q. B. D. 63; 52 J. P. 356). See observations on those cases in Simmonds v. Fulham Vestry, [1900] 2 Q. B. 188; 64 J. P. 548.

It does not, however, follow because there is in a street a sewer which has become vested in the authority, that the street is sewered "to their satisfaction" so as to prevent their requiring it to be sewered under this section. In Barrow-in-Furness (Mayor, etc. of) v. Dawson (1890), 13 M. C. C. 13, SMITH, J., held that it was a question of fact to be decided on the evidence whether an authority had expressed satisfaction with, or were in fact satisfied with, the sewer as originally constructed; but he accepted the proposition laid down in the Twickenham Case, that "if after the lapse of a reasonable time after the vesting of sewers in a corporation they had done nothing and expressed no view on the subject, it must be taken to be conclusive as a matter of fact that at the time the sewer was originally constructed they were satisfied with it for the purpose for which it was then used." And see Walthamstow L. B. v. Staines, [1891] 2 Ch. 606. A road having been made by the owners of a building estate about 1859, a 12-inch pipe was laid by them along it from end to end. Houses were built from time to time in the neighbourhood of the road, and some of their owners connected their drains with the 12-inch pipe; but some of the earlier houses had a separate system of drainage into cesspools in a wood at the back of their premises. Drainage into the 12-inch pipe commenced at least as early as 1876. The pipe discharged into a culvert, and thence into a river. The plaintiffs' predecessors, the W. local board, were constituted in 1878, and could in that year have put into operation the provisions of this section (s. 150). There was evidence that in 1882 their surveyor knew of at least one connection of drains with this pipe, and that complaint having been made in 1892 as to the outfall into the river, the plaintiffs proposed a scheme by which the drainage was to be diverted from the 12-inch pipe and carried into septic tanks. It was held on the evidence as a finding of fact that the authority must be taken to have been satisfied with the sewer, and could not now resewer the road at the cost of the frontagers under s. 150 Wilmslow U. D. C. v. Sidebottom (1906), 70 J. P. 537; 5 L. G. R. 80). Semble, on the authority of Bonella v. Twickenham L. B., supra, when a sewer has thus existed for a long period of years, it must be inferred that the sewer has been accepted by the authority as a sewer laid to their satisfaction (ibid.).

In Hornsey L. B. v. Davis, [1893] 1 Q. B. 756; 57 J. P. 612, the owners of a building estate, predecessors in title of the defendant, deposited plans which were approved by the authority, showing a road to be drained by an intended sewer crossing the New River; and an agreement was made by the New River Company with the owners to divert the New River for the purpose of laying the sewer according to the plans. The sewer was laid as far as the New River, where it stopped, and the New River never was diverted according to the agreement, so that the sewer was never completed and had no outfall; but the work done was from time to time inspected during its progress by a servant of the authority, who authorised the covering in of the various sections, and made reports to the authority, who never expressed any dissatisfaction. The sewer was never used, and in five years became out of repair, whereupon the authority gave notice to the frontagers to construct a new sewer, and in default themselves constructed it. It was held that the authority had power to accept and did accept the original sewer, although it had no outfall and was incapable of being used as a sewer, and that the road having once been sewered to their satisfaction the expenses of constructing the new sewer were not chargeable on the frontagers.

A private street is not necessarily "sewered" within the meaning of this section where the houses in it are served either singly or in groups by private drains or sewers constructed by the several owners of the houses, but not forming one system. Accordingly, the authority may, although these private sewers are vested in them under s. 13, require the frontagers to sewer the street, unless they have, either expressly or by implication, determined that it is already sewered to their satisfaction, in which case their powers are no longer exercisable, and any new sewers required must be provided at their expense under ss. 15, 18 (Handsworth U. D. C. v. Derrington, [1897] 2 Ch. 438; 61 J. P. 518). This decision is in accordance with an earlier one (Handsworth U. D. C. v. Taylor (1893), [1897] 2 Ch. 442 n; 58 J. P. 9), where ROMER, J., said: "The owner of houses wished to exercise his right of draining those houses into the nearest sewer in the district, and what he did was to form a drain for the houses which, for his purposes, should drain them into the nearest sewer, and that he did. That was approved of and sanctioned by the board; but, looking at the circumstances of the case, I am satisfied that it was not intended by the owner or by the board, at the time, that this drain should be regarded as or accepted as a sewering of part of the street in which these houses were. What was done was merely a drainage of the particular houses by one drain instead of several into the nearest sewer. The board, in my opinion, never did approve of the drain as a sewer to their satisfaction for any part of this street." See also observations of CHANNELL, J., in Rishton v. Haslingden Corporation, [1898] 1 Q. B. 294; 62 J. P. 85, and Hanwell U. D. C. and Smith, In re (1904), 68 J. P. 496.

Up to 1881 the soil sewage in a private street was drained into cesspools, and the surface water was carried by channels constructed by the owners of the adjoining land into a river. In 1881 the authority made a contract for the construction of soil and surface water sewers in the street, but subsequently decided to omit the surface water sewer. The soil sewer was constructed at the expense of the rates, the surface water continuing to be carried away by the channels. In 1891 the authority resolved to serve notices under s. 150, requiring the frontagers to pave, metal, channel, and make good the street; but before the notices were served they accepted a guarantee from twelve frontagers to put and maintain the road in repair. In 1904 the authority served notices on the frontagers requiring them to provide a surface water sewer, and, on the frontagers making default, themselves provided the sewer. On proceedings to recover the expenses, it was objected that the street had been sewered to the satisfaction of the authority prior to 1904; but the justices found as a fact that it had not. It was held that there was evidence upon which they could arrive at that conclusion (Bloor v. Beckenham Urban District Council, [1908] 2 K. B. 671; 72 J. P. 325).

Works other than sewering.

In the metropolis, when a new street is paved at the expense of the owners, the authority is bound afterwards to keep it in repair, whether it has become a highway or not (R. v. Hackney District Board of Works (1873), L. R. 8 Q. B. 528; St. Giles, Camberwell (Vestry of) v. Hunt (1887), 56 L. J. M. C. 65), and in Walthamstow L. B. v. Staines, supra, CHITTY, J., appears to have held generally that the powers conferred by this section (s. 150) are exercisable once only: see also Derby (Mayor, etc. of) v. Grudgings, [1894] 2 Q. B. 496; 58 J. P. 685, per CHARLES, J., and Smith v. Croydon L. B. (1868), 32 J. P. 709. But in Barry and Cadoxton L. B. v. Parry, [1895] 2 Q. B. 110; 59 J. P. 421, it was held by Lord RUSSELL, C.J., and CHARLES, J., that an authority may call upon the frontagers to do any of the works (except sewering, as to which see the cases cited, supra) mentioned in this section from time to time, as occasion may require, unless and until the street has been declared to be a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, notwithstanding that such work may have been previously done at the expense of the frontagers to the satisfaction of the authority.

Levelling.

The power to "level" given by this section only attaches where the particular street requires to be levelled, looking at it as an isolated street. Where, therefore, the local board required the owner of a house to level the part of a street upon which his house fronted, so as to make it on a level with other streets, it was held that they could not recover from him the expenses incurred by them in doing the work (Carey or Caley v. Kingston-upon-Hull L. B. (1864), 29 J. P. 116; 5 B. & S. 815). See, however, in districts where the Private Street Works Act, 1892, is in force, s. 9, thereof.

Alteration of roadway and pavement.

An authority have no power when making up a street under this section to alter the respective widths of the carriageway and footway of the street (Robertson v. Bristol (Mayor, etc. of), [1900] 2 Q. B. 198; 64 J. P. 389; Wandsworth Borough Council v. Golds, [1911] 1 K. B. 60; 74 J. P. 464), except in cases where the relative proportions of carriageway and footway have been left undetermined by the owner of the soil (Stretford U. D. C. v. Manchester, etc. Rail. Co., ante, p. 289: per the VICE-CHANCELLOR of the County Palatine of Lancaster).

Widenings.

It will be observed that the authority are not empowered to call upon the owners to widen a private street; and notices which contain such a requirement would probably be held to be invalid. As to the circumstances under which the authority could themselves undertake a widening, see notes to s. 154.

Maintenance.

The L. G. B. held in a case which came before them that notices which required owners to maintain a street for a period after it was made up were of doubtful validity, and called in question the power of the authority to proceed upon default of the owners. The Board pointed out that the owners might have been willing to do all the works which they could be legally required to do under the section.

Lighting.

The previous Acts did not mention "lighting." Under this section the frontagers can only be required to provide "means of lighting," which presumably means structural works only, such as pipes or wires, lamps, etc., and does not include a supply of gas, etc. Under s. 161 the authority may, at the cost of the general district rate, provide such lamps, etc. as they think necessary for lighting the streets in their district. They may therefore provide lamps and other apparatus in private streets instead of using their powers under s. 150. The authority may also, if they think fit, and if the circumstances warrant such a course, defray the cost of lighting private as well as public streets.

The notice to pave, etc.

(f) Notice to pave, etc.—Note that the notice may be given to the owner or occupier, but that owners only are responsible for the expenses if recovered summarily. Unless notice has been given to the owner or occupier to do the work, the expenses cannot be recovered from the former (Jarrow L. B. v. Kennedy (1870), L. R. 6 Q. B. 128; 35 J. P. 248; and see also Pierson v. Altrincham U. D. C. (1917), 81 J. P. 149; 15 L. G. R. 228.

An authority incurred expenses in paving a street without having served a notice under this section upon the then owners of certain premises. They now claimed in an action against the present owners a declaration that the expenses were a charge on the premises (see s. 257, post). A predecessor in title of the defendants had paid to the authority an instalment of the expenses. It was held that the authority were not entitled to the declaration claimed, inasmuch as service of the notice was a condition precedent to liability on the part of the defendants, and the payment by their predecessors could not operate as a waiver of the omission (Farnworth L. B. v. Compton (1886), 34 W. R. 334; and see Bacup (Corporation of) v. Smith, ante, p. 14).

In January a local board passed a resolution for the paving and sewering of a street, and on May 11th notice was served on P. & Co., requiring them to pave, sewer, etc. P. & Co. had been owners of land abutting on the street, but by a conveyance of April 27th had conveyed their estate to the respondent. The board had no notice of this conveyance. In an action by the board to recover the paving expenses from the respondent, it was held that P. & Co. were not at the time of the service of the notice either owners or occupiers of the premises, and that as the proper steps prescribed by the section had not been taken, the respondent was not liable (Wallsend L. B. v. Murphy (1889), 61 L. T. 777; 6 T. L. R. 29).

According to a decision of KEKEWICH, J., the notice must be served on every frontager, and, if it is not, the expenses cannot be recovered even from those who have been served (Handsworth U. D. C. v. Derrington, [1897] 2 Ch. 438; 61 J. P. 518). Notices were given to all the frontagers in a street save one, and the omission was not discovered until the work had been begun. The work was then stopped and notice given to the frontager, who did nothing, and the authority completed the work. It was held that he could not be made liable as he had never had the opportunity of doing the work, as the statute required (Leeds (Lord Mayor, etc. of) v. Armitage (1899), 43 Sol. J. 203).

For definition of owner, see s. 4, ante, p. 8. As to authentication and service of the notice, see ss. 266, 267, post.

Service of the notice on a person who is de facto in receipt of the rent, is a service on the owner sufficient to satisfy the requirements of this section (Peek v. Waterloo and Seaforth L. B. (1863), 33 L. J. M. C. 11; 27 J. P. 807; and see St. Helen's (Mayor of) v. Kirkham, where an agent for the collection of rents was held to be an owner within the meaning of this section, and other cases cited therewith on p. 14, ante). Section 267, post, which contains provisions as to service of notices, was intended to aid those who have to serve notices, and was not meant to prevent a notice, otherwise perfectly good, from being good. Therefore, service at an owner's place of business, by delivering and reading it to his clerk, was held a good service (Mason v. Bibby (1864), 33 L. J. M. C. 105; 28 J. P. 121; and see Woodford U. D. C. v. Henwood (1899), 64 J. P. 148).

As to what work an authority may require frontagers to do, see preceding note.

As some difficulty had been experienced in framing notices under the corresponding P. H. A., 1848, s. 69 (Mayor of Blackburn v. Parkinson (1858), 28 L. J. M. C. 7; 33 L. T. (o.s.) 119; Bayley v. Wilkinson (1864), 16 C. B. (N. S.) 161); 24 & 25 Vict. c. 61, s. 17. enacted that the form of notice in Sched. A. to that Act, or one to the like effect, might be used. The form of notice under this Act will be found in Sched. IV., Form G., post, although no reference is made to it in the text.

In Acton L. B. v. Lewsey (1886), 11 App. Cas. 93; 50 J. P. 708, Lord BRAMWELL said: "Upon the point which occurred to me, that the board had no right to order the way in which the work should be done, I still have sufficient doubt to recommend local boards, when they do give orders that work shall be done, not to prescribe the mode in which it shall be done, but to content themselves with saying, that if done in a particular way, it will be satisfactory to them." A notice which is not in the form set out in Sched. IV., but merely refers in general terms to the provisions of the section and does not give particulars of the work to be done, or mention that plans and sections are deposited for inspection, is not sufficient (Stourbridge U. D. C. v. Butler and Grove, [1909] 1 Ch. 87; 73 J. P. 3).

A corporation paved three roads under a local Act and sued the frontagers for the expenses. One road was a "back road" and two were "cross roads" (as defined by the Act), but the notice called them all "back roads":—Held, that the mistake could not have misled the frontagers, and that, therefore, the notice was sufficient (Blackburn Corporation v. Sanderson, [1902] 1 K. B. 794; 66 J. P. 452).

See Acton L. B. v. Lewsey, Kershaw v. Sheffield Corporation, and Acton U. D. C. v. Watts, pp. 307, 308, post, as to the effect of an authority carrying out work not identical with that specified in their notice.

As to the time allowed by the notice for doing the work, see note (hh), post, p. 303.

A notice is not bad because it may involve the entering upon the soil of another person to execute the work comprised in it (West Hartlepool Corporation v. Robinson (1897), 62 J. P. 35; 77 L. T. 387. And see Lancaster v. Barnes U. D. C., [1898] 1 Q. B. 855; 62 J. P. 405).

A notice which is ultra vires as to part, but good as to the residue, may be enforceable in respect of the valid portion. Thus a notice to flag a street, referring to a plan which included a garden not dedicated to the public, was held to be valid so far as it applied to the street and enforceable accordingly (Hall v. Potter (1869), 39 L. J. M. C. 1; 34 J. P. 515).

Notice was given to the appellant and five others requiring them to sewer, pave, etc. the parts of a street in front of their premises within a specified time. Five of the owners executed the works, but the appellant made default. The board thereupon did the work, and, the surveyor having made an apportionment, gave her notice accordingly. It was held that the board were not bound before executing the work to give the appellant a fresh notice specifying the particular works remaining to be done by her (Simcox v. Handsworth L. B. (1881), 8 Q. B. D. 39; 46 J. P. 260. In this case it was argued that the notice was not a separate notice to each owner to do the work opposite his own premises, but was a notice to all the owners in respect of the entire work. But GROVE, J., in delivering the judgment of the court, said it was not meant that each owner may be called upon to execute the whole. And see Wakefield Sanitary Authority v. Mander (1880), 5 C. P. D. 248; 44 J. P. 522, the facts of which are stated in note (n), post, p. 312. But see, on the other hand, Handsworth U. D. C. v. Derrington, [1897] 2 Ch. 438; 61 J. P. 518; and Lancaster v. Barnes U. D. C., [1898] 1 Q. B. 855; 62 J. P. 405, where WILLS, J., said: "The notice is a general one: it is a notice to all the owners collectively to make up the street generally. No one ever saw a notice under s. 150 calling upon each owner to make up that part only which was opposite his own house." See also Leeds (Lord Mayor, etc. of) v. Armitage, ante, p. 297, and Denman v. Finchley U. D. C., p. 303, post.

No provision is made in this Act for the owners to object to the notice. Such a provision exists in the Private Street Works Act, 1892 (see post), and was to be found also in 26 & 27 Vict. c. 70, s. 10 (see R. v. Livesey (1870), 34 J. P. 645; 22 L. T. 470, as to the result of not taking objection at the proper time under that section).

Where a local board had duly proceeded under the Act, and had sewered, etc. a new street, and no notice had been given by an owner that he disputed the apportionment, it was held that it was still open to him to dispute his liability, and to show that the street was a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large (Hesketh v. Atherton L. B. (1873), L. R. 9 Q. B. 4; 38 J. P. 149; and see other cases cited therewith on p. 306, post).

Premises extra commercium.

(g) Premises Fronting, Adjoining, or Abutting.—As "ownership" is defined (s. 4) by reference to receipt of rack-rent, "where land is incapable of yielding a rack-rent by reason of its being subjected to some public user, the owner is not liable; for instance, where it has been dedicated as a highway, or where a church has been built upon it which has been consecrated according to English law for public worship, or where it has been appropriated by Act of Parliament to some public purpose. But, when the incapacity is created in favour of an individual or of a particular class of persons, then the owner does not escape liability; for instance, where the owner has covenanted not to use the land for any purpose of profit, or where he has voluntarily devoted it to a purpose which is inconsistent with the receiving of rent . . . The reason for the distinction seems to be that, in the one case, nothing short of an Act of Parliament can restore the land to its capacity to yield a rent, whereas, in the other case, the capacity can be restored by the mere act of the parties who for the time being have destroyed it" (per BIGHAM, J., in Hampstead Corporation v. Midland Rail Co., [1904] 2 K. For definition of premises, see s. 4, ante, p. 7. The term includes land. A railway in a metropolitan district was carried across a new street by an arch. On one side of the street the railway was carried forward on arches, and on that side a strip of land, left open for the purpose of repairing the arches, abutted for ten feet on the street. On the other side the railway was carried forward on an embankment; the sloping part of the embankment abutted on the street about thirty feet, and at the foot of the embankment were open spaces also abutting on the street, left for the purpose of allowing for slips of the embankment. It was held that the railway company were liable to contribute to the expenses of paving the street as owners of land abutting on it (Higgins v. Harding (1872), L. R. 8 Q. B. 7; 37 J. P. 677). This case may be usefully compared with L. B. and S. C. Rail. Co. v. St. Giles', Camberwell (1879), 4 Ex. D. 239. In that case a line of railway was situate in a deep cutting at a place where a road was carried across it on a bridge. The bridge was supported on stone piers erected on the slopes of the cutting. It was held that neither the railway under the bridge nor the slopes of the cutting could be said to abut on the road. Where a railway ran in a cutting alongside a new street which the vestry were about to pave, being separated from it by a wall, through which there was no communication between the street and the railway, it was held that the railway bounded or abutted upon the street (L. & N. W. Rail. Co. v. St. Pancras (Vestry of) (1868), 17 L. T. 654; followed in Caledonian Rail. Co. v. Magistrates of Edinburgh (1901), 3 F. 645). All these cases as to railway cuttings were discussed and approved by the House of Lords in a case where a railway company carried a road over a deep cutting by means of a bridge. The road having been paved by the board of works as a new street, the company were called upon to contribute to the cost of paving. It was held that the parapets of the bridge, though the property of the company, were not land of which they were "owners" for the purposes of the section; and that the slopes and bottom of the cutting did not "abut on or bound" the new street (G. E. Rail. Co. v. Hackney District Board of Works (1883), 8 App. Cas. 687; 48 J. P. 52; reversing 9 Q. B. D. 412; 46 J. P. 532). The decision of the House of Lords as to the parapet walls may perhaps be regarded as based on an application of the maxim de minimis non curat lex, for the decision in L. & N. W. Rail. Co. v. St. Pancras, supra, was approved. (See hereon Hackney Corporation v. Lee Conservancy Board, [1904] 2 K. B., per COLLINS, M.R., at p. 552.) Decisions as to railway property.

The decision in the Great Eastern Case was distinguished in Cameron v. Caledonian Rail. Co. (1904), 6 F. 763. There by a local Act, liability for paving a street was imposed upon all "lands or heritages" in it or fronting or adjoining both sides of the line thereof. A railway company, in order to carry their line under the street at right angles, bought and demolished houses on each side of the street; they then excavated the ground to form a cutting, and carried the roadway across on a bridge; this bridge with its parapets and steps leading down to a station in the cutting, was the property of the company. It was held that the company were owners of property "adjoining" the street.

Note to Section 150.

Where the Private Street Works Act, 1892, is in force, see s. 22 thereof for special provisions as to railway property.

Premises outside district or contributory place.

A local authority sought to recover from certain owners apportioned expenses incurred in the execution of works in a road not repairable by the inhabitants at large. The boundary of the authority's district ran along the kerb of one footpath, the carriageway and the footpath on the south side being within the authority's district, and the footpath on the north side being in the neighbouring urban district. The premises of the owners in question abutted on the footpath on the north side, and were wholly within the neighbouring district. The works were executed on the roadway and on the footpath on the south side; and it was sought to make the owners in question equally liable with the frontagers on the south side for the expense of making up the roadway. It was held that the authority had no power to apportion any part of the cost on frontagers not within their district (Mayor, etc. of Hornsey v. Birkbeck Freehold Land Society, [1906] 1 K. B. 521; 70 J. P. 140). See R. v. Cheshire JJ. (1909), 73 J. P. 499; 101 L. T. 683, for a case where part of a street lay in a contributory place to which s. 150 had not been applied by order of the L. G. B. Cf. also R. v. Warner (1858), 27 L. J. M. C. 144; Shoreditch Borough Council v. Wakeham (1905), 69 J. P. 239. The L. G. B. expressed the opinion that there is no provision in the P. H. A., 1875, which would enable two councils to carry out a joint scheme for the making up of a street so situated at the cost of the owners. The boundary may be altered under the L. G. A., 1888, s. 54 or s. 57, with the object of getting over the difficulty.

Premises "in" or "forming" a street.

A local Act empowered commissioners to pave streets and recover the expenses by rates from the occupiers of houses, etc., "situated or being within any of the streets" in the district. It was held that houses and buildings in a yard communicating with a street by a covered gateway, which houses and buildings abutted on houses in the street, were situated within the street so as to be liable to the rates (Baddeley v. Gingell (1847), 1 Ex. 319; 11 J. P. 838). This decision was followed in London School Board v. St. Mary, Islington (Vestry of) (1875), 1 Q. B. D. 65; 40 J. P. 310. In that case the school board were charged as owners of a school-house which did not immediately front the street, but stood back some seventy feet in a large yard, the whole area being about 29,500 square feet. There was a row of eleven small houses with gardens at the back of them between the yard and the street; but the only access to the school was by a private passage which ran along one side of the last house and garden into the yard, with gates opening from the street in question, the width of the passage being twenty feet and the length about sixty-four feet. It was held that the school-house, though not actually one of the houses "forming" the street, yet practically formed part of it, so as to render the board liable as owners for the paving expenses. The court held that benefit of access to the street was the foundation of the liability. But an opinion was expressed that this principle would not apply to the case of an old-established court, the access of which was common to the public and open to every one who liked to go in. The last-mentioned case was decided under the rather different words of the Metropolis Management Acts.

The owner of land adjoining a highway has a legal right of access to it at any point where it adjoins his premises. See St. Mary, Newington (Vestry of) v. Jacobs (1871), L. R. 7 Q. B. 47; 36 J. P. 119; Marshall v. Ulleswater Co. (1871), L. R. 7 Q. B., at p. 172; 36 J. P. 583; Chaplin v. Westminster (Mayor, etc. of), [1901] 2 Ch. 329; 65 J. P. 661; Rowley v. Tottenham U. D. C., [1914] A. C. 95; 78 J. P. 97, and Cobb v. Saxby, [1914] 3 K. B. 822; 83 L. J. K. B. 1817. See also Ramuz v. Southend L. B. (1892), 67 L. T. 169; Peache v. *Wimbledon L. As to vehicles crossing over pavements, see St. Mary, Newington v. Jacobs, and Rowley v. Tottenham U. D. C., supra, and s. 18 of the P. H. A., 1907, post.

There can be no liability under s. 150 if intervening land of a third person precludes possibility of access to the street; but, if there be no intervening strip, the fact that the street is private (and therefore cannot be used as of right unless or until it becomes a highway) appears to afford no defence (Walthamstow U. D. C. v. Sandell, infra: cf. Moubray Rowan and Hicks v. Drew, [1893] A. C. 295).

Paving expenses must be apportioned among all the owners of premises fronting, adjoining, or abutting on the street in proportion to the frontage, without any reference to direct or consequential benefit, which the Act assumes to be proportioned to the frontage. Therefore, a railway and canal company whose premises lay along one side of a street were held liable to pay their proportion of the expenses, although they had no immediate access to the street (R. (or Powell) v. Newport L. B. (1863), 3 B. & S. 341). So, too, the owner of ground at the end of a street forming a cul-de-sac was held liable under a local Act to pay the expenses of paving, notwithstanding that a wall divided his property from the street, which wall, however, he might at any time have removed wholly or partially so as to open access to the street (Manchester (Mayor, etc. of) v. Chapman (1868), 37 L. J. M. C. 173; 32 J. P. 582; see also Newport Sanitary Authority v. Graham, infra: Dodd v. St. Pancras Vestry (1870), 34 J. P. 517; Sheffield v. Fulham District Board of works (1876), 1 Ex. D. 395). In another case, premises facing W. street were divided from D. street by a small stream, but were connected with it by two bridges over the stream All communication with the street could be closed by gates. One of the bridges had been moved and reinstated by the owner of the premises. It was held that the premises fronted, adjoined, or abutted on D. street (Wakefield L. B. v. Lee (1876), 1 Ex. D. 336; 41 J. P. 54).

In a Scotch case under a similar Act it was held that the upper flat of a tenement held with a plot of garden fronting A. street on the west, and bounded by B. street on the north, was premises abutting on B. street, although the only entrance was from A. street (Campbell v. Edinburgh Magistrates (1891), 19 Ct. Sess, Cas. (4th ser.) 159).

An owner of premises abutting on a cul-de-sac passage was held liable to pay his apportioned share of the costs incurred in making it up, although he had at the time no door into the passage from his premises (Walthamstow U. D. C. v. Sandell (1904), 68 J. P. 509; 2 L. G. R. 835).

B. owned a house which had its front and only entrance in F. street, and behind it a garden with a dead wall at the further end. A new street was made parallel to F. street, alongside the dead wall at the end of B.'s garden. It was held that B.'s land abutted on this new street (Paddington (Vestry of) v. Bramwell (1880), 44 J. P. 815). A. owned three houses facing Y. place, and abutting at the rear upon a footpath at the end of a cul-de-sac called St. J. street. The ground at the back of these houses was five feet above the level of St. J. street, and the wall, which was A.'s property, was about 12 feet high on the outside. There was no access from A.'s premises to St. J. street. It was held that his premises adjoined or abutted on St. J. street within this section (Newport Sanitary Authority v. Graham (1882), 9 Q. B. D. 183; 47 J. P. 133). CAVE, J., said: "If it had been shown that the wall at the end of St. J. street did not belong to the respondent, or that a strip of land intervened between his premises and the street, they would not have been adjoining or abutting."

W. having a strip of land about four inches wide and 265 feet long abutting on the north side of a street, had erected a boundary fence upon the land along its whole extent, under a covenant to erect, and for ever after maintain, such a fence made with his vendor, who was owner of the land adjoining the strip on the north side. It was held that W. was the owner of the strip of land, and, as such, liable for paving expenses (Williams v. Wandsworth Board of Works (1884), 13 Q. B. D. 211; 48 J. P. 439, followed in Scott v. Investors' Property Corporation (1904), 68 J. P. N. 352; cf. Elsdon v. Hampstead Corporation, [1905] 2 Ch. 633; 69 J. P. 434; and Hampstead Borough Council v. Western (1907) 71 J. P. 565; Hall v. Bolsover U. D. C. (1909), 73 J. P. 140; 100 L. T. 372). The court pointed out in Williams v. Wandsworth Board of Works, supra, that, in the event of the owner of the adjoining property desiring to have access to the street, the strip would command a considerable rent. It was therefore capable of being let at a rack-rent. In Leith Magistrates v. Gibb (1882), 9 Ct. of Sess. Cas. (4th ser.) 627, the owner of property, which was separated from a street by a wall which belonged to some one else, was held not to be liable as the owner of property "fronting or abutting" on such street. The LORD PRESIDENT said there must be access, or an undoubted right of access, from the property sought to be charged to the street.

As to boundary walls in joint ownership, see L. & S. W. Rail. Co. v. Blackmore (1870), L. R. 4 H. L. 610, 618; 35 J. P. 324; Watson v. Gray (1880), 14 Ch. D. 192; 44 J. P. 537.

A. B. owned plots of land, with cottages thereon, separated from a street by a wall five feet high, which belonged, with the land on which it stood, to another person. A public footway ran between the plots of land and through an opening in the wall into the street about its middle. The backs only of the cottages fronted the street, and the only way for vehicles from the cottages to the street was by a small roadway, which, without touching that part of the street which had been paved, came into a highway which joined one end of such street. With the exception of the public footway, this roadway was the only access from the cottages to the street. It was held by the Court of Appeal that A. B. was not the owner of premises "fronting, adjoining, or abutting" on the street within the meaning of this section (Lightbound v. Higher Bebington L. B. (1885), 16 Q. B. D. 577; 50 J. P. 500).

"Abutting," "adjoining," etc.

In Barnett v. Covell (1903), 68 J. P. 93; 90 L. T. 29, it was held that "abutting means "in actual contact with." See this case distinguished in Rockleys v. Pritchard (1909), 74 J. P. 11; 101 L. T. 575; and see also, as to the meaning of the word "abut," London C. C. v. Collins (1905), 69 J. P. 401; 93 L. T. 540, per RIDLEY, J.; R. v. S. E. Rail. Co. (1909), 74 J. P. 137; 54 Sol. J. 233; and Stockport Corporation v. Rollinson (1910), 74 J. P. 236; 102 L. T. 567. With reference to the word "adjoining," BOWEN, L.J., said (in Lightbound's Case, supra): "You cannot define 'adjoin' as meaning benefit of access, or vice versâ, but in considering whether houses adjoin which are placed in close proximity to the part of the street which is to be paved, it is a most important fact, and, in many cases, a dominant fact, to see whether there is a substantial access and advantage which the houses enjoy from that portion of the street which is to be paved, and a substantial access and advantage of that kind, coupled with close proximity, may bring the case within the word 'adjoin' though there is no actual touch." Ordinarily, the word "adjoining" is to be read as equivalent to "actually contiguous, with nothing between." See per PARKE, B., in R. v. Hodges (1829, 1 Moo. & M., at p. 344; Vale v. Moorgate Street, etc. Buildings (1899), 80 L. T. 487; Withington L. B. v. Manchester (Corporation of), [1893] 2 Ch. 19, 57 J. P. 340, per CHITTY, J. Haynes v. King, [1893] 3 Ch. 439; 69 L. T. 855, and Ind, Coope & Co. v. Hamblin (1900), 84 L. T. 168). In a colonial case "adjacent" was contrasted with "adjoining," and was held to include places close to or near (Wellington (Mayor of) v. Lower Hutt (Mayor of), [1904] A. C. 773). Nevertheless, premises separated from some point by an intervening road or a house may, in some circumstances, be treated as "adjoining." See In re Bateman and Parker's Contract, [1899] 1 Ch. 599; 63 J. P. 345; Cave v. Horsell, [1912] 3 K. B. 533, distinguished in Derby Motor Cab Co., Ltd. v. Crompton, etc. Bank (1913), 29 T. L. R. 673.

Benefit of access in the case of premises not fronting, adjoining, or abutting on the street or part of a street to be paved, etc. is especially provided for under the Private Street Works Act, 1892, post. See s. 10 of that Act.

Soil of side streets.

The soil of private roads leading out of a new street was held to be "land bounding or abutting on such street" in Pound and Lord Northbrook v. Plumstead Board of Works (1871), L. R. 7 Q. B. 183; 36 J. P. 468. But in this case Lord N. had determinately reserved the property in the roads to himself. He had not dedicated them to the public, and nothing that he had done was past recall. In a subsequent case, this decision was distinguished. There the defendants, a land company, being owners of certain lands in 1863, laid them out for building purposes and made roads across them, and nearly the whole of the estate was sold in lots to different purchasers. Each lot had a frontage upon one of the roads. The roads had been dedicated to the public, as far as any act of the defendants could do so, but no proceedings were taken to make them repairable by the parish. The plaintiffs, the board of works for the district, from time to time paved the new streets formed by the houses on the estate, and apportioned the cost among the owners of houses forming the streets and the owners of land bounding and abutting on the street. In so doing they charged the defendants in respect of the new streets or roads when these bounded or abutted on the sides or ends of the streets paved, as being lands abutting on those streets. It was held by the Exchequer Chamber that, assuming the property in the soil of the roads to be in the defendants, they were improperly charged, for they were not in respect of roads which had been irrevocably dedicated to the public the owners of land within the meaning of the section (Plumstead Board of Works v. British Land Co. (1875), L. R. 10 Q. B. 203; 39 J. P. 376; reversing L. R. 10 Q. B. 16; 39 J. P. 133; and see Stretford U. D. C. v. Manchester South Junction and Altrincham Rail. Co. (1903), 68 J. P. 59; 19 T. L. R. 546, per the VICE-CHANCELLOR of the Country Palatine of Lancaster). The decision in Plumstead Board of Works v. British Land Co., supra, is illustrative of the principle referred to, ante, at p. 298, that premises cannot be charged unless thay are capable of yielding a rack-rent. It must be observed, however, as to Pound and Lord Northbrook v. Plumstead Board of Works, supra, that 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 77, makes the owners of houses and land in the street liable not only for the work done to the street proper, but for the paving, etc. to the intersections of the streets. This provision is not contained in the text, and it remains to be decided whether in an urban district the owners of the soil of a street (not dedicated to the public) abutting on a street within this section can be charged with a proportion of the expenses of paving, etc. the latter.

Means of lighting.

(h) Means of Lighting.—See note (e), p. 294, ante, as to these words and generally as to what work an authority may require frontagers to do.

Time limit for frontagers to do work.

(hh) On Nov. 17th, 1911, the frontagers of C. street received notices requiring them to make up the street, and, amongst other things, make connections with the sewer, within six weeks. At that time contractors were at work making up another road, to which C. street was the only access; and accordingly the plaintiff, after informing the authority of that fact, and that he proposed, with the consent of the other frontagers, to make up the whole of the road himself, waited until the work in the other road was finished. In March, 1912, such work being finished, he began the work in C. street, but the authority refused to supply the levels, or to co-operate unless he signed an agreement as to the making up of the street which they alleged he had agreed to enter into after the six weeks specified in the notice had run out. On May 1st the work was ready for the connections with the sewers to be made, but upon the plaintiff requesting the authority to make the same, they refused to do so, or to allow him to do so, on the ground that the works were not being done under the notice and that the agreement had not yet been signed. The plaintiff made a connection, which the council cut off. The plaintiff then issued a writ for an injunction, and subsequently an arrangement was come to by which the council made the connections at the plaintiff's expense:—Held, that the council had never intervened after the expiration of the six weeks or given definite notice of their intention to do so; that the plaintiff had bonâ fide endeavoured to comply with the notice; that there had been no unreasonable delay on his part; that he was entitled to have the connections made when he called upon the council to make them; and that the defendants must pay the costs of the action (Denman v. Finchley U. D. C. (1912), 76 J. P. 405; 10 L. G. R. 697).

The time specified in the notice within which the work shall be completed must be a reasonable time and must take into account the nature and extent of the work and the time which ought fairly and reasonably to be allowed for the completion of that work, under all the circumstances. The least time that can fairly and reasonably be allotted for the completion of the work, being ascertained, is the least time to be inserted in the notice; there is a discretion to allow further time for the completion of the work, but not to fix any shorter time (Bristol Corporation v. Sinnott, [1918] 1 Ch. 62; 82 J. P. 9. In that case a local authority served a notice under this section on frontagers of part of a street 1450 feet long, to sewer, level, pave, etc. the same within one calendar month. The frontagers did not commence the works nor object to the validity of the notice, and after three months the local authority began the works and completed them within four months, and served the frontagers with the usual demand for payment. In an action to recover payment, after an appeal to the L. G. B., which was later withdrawn and no order made by the Board, it was held that the notice was bad in not specifiying a reasonable time for the execution of the works, and that the local authority could not recover the expenses from the frontagers. And see also Macclesfield Corporation v. Governors of Free

(i) Deposit of Plans.—It has been held that the deposit of these plans is not a condition precedent to the recovery of the expenses from the owners (Cook v. Ipswich L. B. (1871), L. R. 6 Q. B. 451 ; 35 J. P. 565 : per BLACKBURN, J.). It should be observed, however, that in this case the plans were in fact deposited, though at the office of an official instead of at that of the authority, and, moreover, they were actually inspected. In Shanklin L. B. v. Millar (1880), 5 C. P. D. 272 ; 44 J. P. 635, a county court judge held that paving expenses could not be recovered from a frontager on the ground that the opportunities afforded to him for inspecting the deposited documents were not reasonable, the byelaws of the local board having provided that their office should be open only on Mondays and Thursdays from 10 till 3. The High Court reversed this decision on the ground that the provision as to deposit of plans was directory only, and not a condition precedent to the recovery of the expenses. In a later case, MANISTY, J., expressed the view that the provisions of the section as to deposit of plans were not merely directory (Manchester Corporation v. Hampson (1887), 35 W. R. 334, 591). It has been held that the omission to follow the plans in every respect does not affect the right to recover ; see Acton L. B. v. Lewsey and cases cited therewith, post, p. 307. A notice given under this section must, however, state that the plans are deposited at the offices of the local authority, and that they are open to inspection, unless the notice gives specific and precise details of the works to be done (Stourbridge U. D. C. v. Butler and Grove, [1909] 1 Ch. 87 ; 73 J. P. 3).

Contractor not affected by invalidity of notices.

(k) Execution of Works by Urban Authority.—Owners having made default, the local board of M. contracted with W. to do the work for them, the contractor to be paid for the work when the money was collected from the frontagers. By inadvertence the board had given bad notices, and were, therefore, unable to collect the money. W., having done the work, sued the board for the amount due to him by the contract. It was held that he was entitled to recover, as an undertaking must be implied on the part of the board that they were in a position to collect the money and pay it over to him (Worthington v. Sudlow (1862), 26 J. P. 453 ; 2 B. & S. 508). In another case the plaintiff had in 1858 entered into contracts with a local board for the execution of works under this section, to be paid for out of money to be collected from the frontagers. The contracts were duly performed by the plaintiff. The notices given by the board turned out to be bad, and many frontagers refused to pay the sums assessed upon them. This became known to the plaintiff in 1860, and he then demanded payment. The board were in hopes of being able to collect the money, notwithstanding the invalid notices, and by November, 1860, £800 was collected and paid over to the plaintiff, leaving a balance due of more than £3,000. The plaintiff sued for this sum and obtained judgment, and within six months afterwards commenced an action claiming a writ of mandamus commanding the board to levy a rate to satisfy the judgment. It was held that the delay in commencing the original action was reasonable, and that a peremptory writ might be granted (Worthington v. Hulton (1865), L. R. 1 Q. B. 63).

Before entering into a contract for the execution of work under this section, it is not necessary to obtain an estimate from the surveyor as to future repairs under s. 174 (3), post, p. 397 ; nor is such report as is there mentioned a condition precedent to the right to recover the amounts apportioned on the several owners (Cunningham v. Wolverhampton L. B. (1857), 21 J. P. 262 ; 7 El. & Bl. 107).

Power to agree with frontagers.

As to the power of an authority to agree with one or more owners to execute the works without observing the formalities required by the section, see Hall v. Batley (Corporation of), ante, p. 86. That case was decided with reference to s. 23, but the principle laid down in it appears to be equally applicable to this section. LUSH, J., said : " It is not permitted to them (the authority) arbitrarily to interfere and do the work at the owner's expense without first giving him the opportunity of doing it himself. But if they were to do so he is the only person who could complain. The Act requires that the work shall be done by the one party or the other, and surely the owner may waive the option given him by the Act if he pleases, and agree with the urban authority that the drain shall be made by them as if the preliminaries had been observed." And s. 257, post, evidently contemplates that there are works which may be done by agreement with the owner, so as to make the expenses recoverable from him and a charge on the premises as therein provided. In Lewis v. Cardiff Urban Sanitary Authority (1878), 47 L. J. M. C. 101, an owner having received notice to pave, indorsed on the notice an authority to the local board to execute the works, and an undertaking to pay the costs on completion. On default of payment after demand, the board proceeded to recover the expenses in a summary manner. It was held that the owner, having by the submission indorsed on the notice admitted the right of the authority to issue such notice, could not require proof before the justices of the fulfilment of the conditions precedent to the existence of such right. It was held, however, that the owner could not by such submission give jurisdiction to the authority if in fact they had none, but that he did thereby waive proof by them of the preliminaries to the notice, and made it incumbent on himself to disprove their original authority if he wished to dispute it. It was, therefore, open to him to show that the street was a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large. See further hereon Mayor, etc. of Folkestone v. Marsh, and Mayor, etc. of Folkestone v. Rook, cited in the notes to s. 146, ante, p. 268.

It must be noticed that the authority have a discretion as to whether they will execute the works or not. See Denman v. Finchley U. D. C., p. 303, ante, as to the position where frontagers have begun to do the works required before the authority take any steps in the matter.

See p. 296, ante, as to altering the respective widths of roadway and footpath, and see p. 307, post, as to departures from the deposited plans.

See the P. H. A., 1907, s. 28, post, as to the removal of materials in streets. The section will only be operative where it has been applied by an order of the L. G. B.

Loans.

The M. of H. are willing to entertain applications for sanction to loans for the execution of private street works repayable within the period which it is proposed to allow the owners for the payment of their apportionments. The Ministry rarely, however, allow a longer period than seven years for the repayment of such loans. Applications of this kind should be deferred until the period allowed to owners for the carrying out of the works has expired and default has been made.

As to the liability of the authority for any negligence of their contractor in executing the work, see the cases cited in the notes to s. 265, post.

Statutory remedy is exclusive.

(l) In a Summary Manner.—See s. 251, post. Where a statute provides a particular method of recovering such expenses, an action will not lie, the remedy given by the statute being exclusive (St. Pancras (Vestry of) v. Batterbury (1857), 21 J. P. 424; 2 C. B. (N.S.) 477. And see Lamplugh v. Norton (1889), 22 Q. B. D. 452, 456; 53 J. P. 389; Re Boor, Boor v. Hopkins (1889), 40 Ch. D. 572, 576; 53 J. P. 467; G. W. Rail. Co. v. Sharman (1892), 61 L. J. Q. B. 600; 40 W. R. 643). A special Act incorporating the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, and the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, provided that certain expenses incurred by commissioners in paving streets, etc. might be recoverable as damages. An action having been brought to recover expenses so incurred, it was held that it was not maintainable, the proper construction of the several Acts being, that the expenses were to be recovered as damages before justices under s. 140 of the Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (Blackburn (Mayor of) v. Parkinson (1858), 28 L. J. M. C. 7; 23 J. P. 262). But this Act provides for the recovery of amounts below £50 in the county court (s. 261), and makes the amount a charge on the premises (s. 257).

This section does not create the relationship of debtor and creditor between an owner and the authority. The only means of recovering the expenses are those provided by the Act. Therefore, a summons for leave to prove in an administration action for the amount awarded was dismissed in West v. Downman (1880), 14 Ch. D. 111. And see Re Boor, Boor v. Hopkins, supra. In Eccles v. Wirral R. S. A. (1886), 17 Q. B. D. 107; 50 J. P. 596, MATHEW, J., said: "By s. 261, jurisdiction is conferred on the county court in cases of this kind, when the amount is below £50, and although I cannot find any provision which in terms gives the superior court jurisdiction, I should infer that where the amount is above £50, an action would lie in the superior court." But this dictum was delivered without reference to the cases above cited, and there are dicta in later cases that no action lies in the superior court for the recovery of these expenses. See Willesden L. B. and Wright, In re, [1896] 2 Q. B. 412; 60 J. P. 708; Hanwell U. D. C. and Smith, In re (1904), 68 J. P. 496.

Note to Section 150.

In the case of expenses incurred under the Private Street Works Act, 1892, post, a right of action in any court of competent jurisdiction is given by s. 14.

As to the several methods of enforcing payment of these expenses under this Act, see the notes to s. 257, post, and especially the judgment of BRETT, L.J., in Tottenham L. B. v. Rowell, there quoted at length.

Summary proceedings having been taken against an owner for payment of his proportion of expenses, justices ordered him in default of distress to be imprisoned with hard labour. As they had no power to do so, quarter sessions on appeal quashed the order without going into the merits. Afterwards the authority obtained a new order to pay the same amount. It was held that the justices had jurisdiction to make the new order, the former having been quashed as null and void (Lister v. Hebden L. B. (1878), 42 J. P. 119).

Orders having been obtained by a local board against A. and L., for payment of paving expenses under this section, it was agreed that the order against L. should not be enforced for three months, in order to enable a case to be stated on a point of law. At the same time an understanding was come to that the order against A. should abide the decision in L.'s case. L., instead of taking his case to the Queen's Bench, went before quarter sessions, and the order against him was quashed on a technical ground (see Lister v. Hebden L. B., supra). A. was not informed of the course taken by L., and the three months having expired within which she should have appealed, the local board obtained a distress warrant against her to enforce payment. On motion by A. to restrain the board from enforcing payment until she had had an opportunity of stating a case for the opinion of the Court of Queen's Bench, it was held that the court had power to restrain the board, and on A. undertaking to consent to a case and to pay the money into court, the injunction was granted (Ashworth v. Hebden Bridge L. B. (1877), 47 L. J. Ch. 195; 37 L. T. 496).

Jurisdiction of court: defences available.

The court cannot entertain any question as to whether the work was necessary or proper under the circumstances, that being for the local authority to decide (Bayley v. Wilkinson (1864), 16 C. B. (N.S.) 160; Cook v. Ipswich L. B. (1871), L. R. 6 Q. B. 451; 35 J. P. 565. And see Chelsea (Vestry of) v. Evans (1870), 35 J. P. 23). They may, however, inquire into the original liability of the persons charged; for example, they may and ought to decide whether the street is or is not a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large (Hesketh v. Atherton L. B. (1873), L. R. 9 Q. B. 4; 38 J. P. 149. And see to the same effect Midland Rail. Co. v. Watton (1886), 17 Q. B. D. 30; 50 J. P. 405; Eccles v. Wirral R. S. A. (1886), 17 Q. B. D. 107; 50 J. P. 180; Cleckheaton L. B. v. Burnup (1886), 50 J. P. 598; Lewis v. Cardiff Urban Sanitary Authority, ante, p. 305). An objection that a street is a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large may properly be raised in proceedings to enforce payment of the expenses, for it goes to the jurisdiction of the authority to execute the work at the expense of the frontagers (Walthamstow L. B. v. Staines, [1891] 2 Ch. 606). If, however, there is any ground of liability, and the objection only goes to the extent of that liability and the principle upon which it is to be determined, the justices or other court cannot entertain the objection in proceedings to enforce payment. Thus, in Ex parte Wake, R. v. Recorder of Sheffield (1883), 12 Q. B. D. 142; 48 J. P. 197, a frontager objected that the plans referred to in the notice showed that part of the work was executed upon land belonging to private owners. It was held that as part of the work was executed in a street, the magistrate could only order payment of the apportioned sum, and the frontager's only remedy was by appeal to the L. G. B. under s. 268. The decision of the local board in determining to do the work was only erroneous, and not without jurisdiction. See, however, Bell v. Great Crosby U. D. C., p. 291, ante, as to how such an objection can be raised under the Private Street Works Act, 1892. Ex parte Wake, supra, was followed in Derby (Mayor, etc. of) v. Grudgings, [1894] 2 Q. B. 496; 58 J. P. 685. There the owner of premises fronting on a street having failed to comply with a notice under this section to sewer, etc., the authority did the work, and took proceedings before justices to recover the sum apportioned on him. The owner had given no notice under s. 257 disputing the apportionment within the specified time. At the hearing of the complaint it was shown that the carriageway of the street was a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, but that the footway on which the owner's premises fronted was not. It was held on the authority of Wake's Case that the authority had jurisdiction to give the notice and make the apportionment in respect of the footway, and that the owner having failed to dispute the apportionment under s. 257, it was conclusive against him, and he could not at the hearing before the justices dispute his liability to pay any part of the apportioned sum. In another case the objection taken before the justices was that part of the work (exceeding £50 in value) had been done by a contractor without a sealed contract, and it was urged that a payment under such a contract was illegal. SMITH, J., pointed out that the objection, if valid, could not be raised in this way (Bournemouth Commissioners v. Watts (1884), 14 Q. B. D. 87; 49 J. P. 102). So it is not open to a frontager to say that, while rightly assessed for certain premises, he has also been assessed for others which do not front or adjoin the street. Such an objection goes merely to the amount of the apportionment, and should be taken by way of objection to the apportionment under s. 257. "It was argued that there was an excess of jurisdiction by the surveyor in respect of part of the sum apportioned. But it seems to me that if he had jurisdiction to make an apportionment against the appellants, which it is admitted he had, then the only possible objection is that he has made such apportionment incorrectly; but that is only an erroneous exercise of jurisdiction, not an excess of jurisdiction. If he had made an apportionment on a person who was not a frontager in respect of any land, there would be an excess of jurisdiction, but that is not the present case" (per Lord ESHER, M.R., in Midland Rail. Co. v. Watton (1886), 17 Q. B. D., at p. 40). The result of the cases appears to be that an objection may be taken before justices that the defendant is not liable to pay anything, on the ground that he is not a frontager, or that the place is not a street, or that the place is a highway repairable, etc. Objections as to amount are not cognisable by the justices; they may be raised by an appeal to the M. of H. under s. 268, post, and in some cases also (see p. 313, post) by objection to the apportionment under s. 257. See Eccles v. Wirral R. S. A., ante, p. 306. "There can be no doubt that an apportionment under s. 150 is not conclusive of every defence which can be set up when the frontager is called upon to pay. He may say that the place is not a street, or that he has no premises fronting on the street, or that the place is a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large. He may set up all those defences, and, as it seems to me, any other defence which offers an answer to the whole of his legal liability. But where the question is only as to the amount of his liability, then the apportionment, if not challenged under s. 257, is conclusive" (per CHARLES, J., in Derby (Mayor, etc. of) v. Grudgings, [1894] 2 Q. B., on p. 504). These cases must be regarded as superseding the judgment of BACON, V.-C., in West v. Downman (1880), 14 Ch. D. 111. In Walthamstow L. B. v. Staines, ante, p. 306, the court seemed to think, and in Hanwell U. D. C. and Smith, In re, post, p. 309, it was expressly decided that the only way of raising an objection to the legality of part of the expenses (such as legal expenses, collection, etc.) was by way of appeal to the L. G. B. (now M. of H.) under s. 268. See also hereon Sandgate L. B. v. Keene, and the other cases (including the Hanwell Case), noticed in connection therewith at p. 312, post.

As to the effect of a decision that a street is a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, see R. v. Hutchins, the facts of which are set out, ante, p. 294, and cf. the cases cited therewith, which were, however, decided on other Acts.

The justices cannot inquire into the reasonableness of the expenditure or whether it has been incurred in point of fact. Nor is it a good objection before justices that the notices required the street to be paved in a particular way, that the plans differed from the notice, and the work done from both. These are only matters of appeal to the M. of H. under s. 268, post (Cook v. Ipswich L. B. (1871), L. R. 6 Q. B. 451; 35 J. P. 565). It has been held by the House of Lords that the omission strictly to follow the terms of their own notice does not prevent the authority from recovering from the owner his proportion of the expenses incurred (Acton L. B. v. Lewsey (1886), 11 App. Cas. 93; 50 J. P. 708). In that case the notice required the owner to pave part of a street, specifying the materials and mode, and (inter alia) requiring him to lay down concrete. The owner having made default, the local authority did his work, but, finding that the concrete would be an unnecessary expense, omitted it.

An authority gave notice to K., an owner of land adjoining a new street, to sewer the road, and lay an eighteen-inch pipe. Whilst carrying out the work upon his default they found a twelve-inch pipe sufficient, and used it, and thus saved expense to K. on the apportionment. It was held that the magistrate was right in holding that the apportioned expenses of the altered work were recoverable, the alteration not being a material matter nor invalidating the notice (Kershaw v. Sheffield (Corporation of) (1887), 51 J. P. 759). An authority served notices on frontagers requiring them to sewer a street as therein specified. On default the authority carried out more extensive sewage works, but including the work necessary for drainage of the street itself, and apportioned on the frontagers part of the cost of the more extensive works, being the amount which it would have cost to sewer the street in accordance with the notices. It was held that the amount so apportioned was recoverable (Acton U. D. C. v. Watts (1903), 67 J. P. 400; 1 L. G. R. 594).

Time limit for proceedings.

The provisions of the S. J. A., 1848, s. 11, which limit the time within which proceedings can be taken before justices to a period of six months from the time when the matter of complaint arises, apply to the recovery of these expenses by summary proceedings; and the six months cannot begin to run till after the expiration of the three months during which the apportionment may be disputed under s. 257, post (Jacomb v. Dodgson (1863), 27 J. P. 548; 3 B. & S. 461). See also Wilson v. Bolton (Mayor of) (1871), L. R. 7 Q. B. 105; 36 J. P. 405, per LUSH, J.; and West v. Downman (1880), 14 Ch. D. 111). Where a notice of apportionment was a nullity, and a second and valid notice was afterwards given, it was held that the time did not begin to run until after the second notice (Sykes v. Huddersfield (Mayor, etc. of) (1871), 35 J. P. 614). And the same limitation applies also to proceedings in the county court under s. 261, post. Therefore it was held that expenses could not be recovered by a county court action brought more than six months after the expiration of the three months allowed for disputing the apportionment (Tottenham L. B. v. Rowell (1876), 1 Ex. D. 514, following West Ham L. B. v. Maddams (1876), 1 Ex. D. 516 n; 40 J. P. 470, and see Metropolitan Water Board v. Bunn, [1913] 1 K. B. 134; 77 J. P. 156, 353). But it must not be assumed that at the expiration of nine months from the date of the notice of apportionment the expenses cease to be recoverable summarily, or in the county court under s. 261. Before any proceedings can be taken to recover them it is necessary that a demand of payment should be served upon the owner, and the time runs from the date of such demand, and not from that of the notice of apportionment, which is not a sufficient demand (see s. 257, post; Grece v. Hunt (1877), 2 Q. B. D. 389; 41 J. P. 356). The court pointed out that this decision was not inconsistent with Jacomb v. Dodgson, supra, for in that case there had been a demand at the expiration of the three months after the notice of apportionment. It may be reconciled with the other cases cited for the like reason. Consequently, there is no limitation of the time within which proceedings, whether summary or in the county court, must be taken unless a demand is made. and the demand may apparently be made at any time after the expiration of three months from the date of the notice of apportionment. Therefore, under the Metropolis Management Acts, when works were done and the amount apportioned in June, 1876, but no demand was made until December 31st, 1878, it was held that a summons for payment issued on May 14th, 1879, was in time (Marr v. Greenwich Board of Works (1880), 44 J. P. 424; Wortley v. St. Mary, Islington (Vestry of) (1886), 51 J. P. 166; Prescott v. Nicholson (1889), 53 J. P. 597; 60 L. T. 563). See also, as to the necessity for a demand for apportioned expenses in the metropolis, and as to the date upon which the Statute of Limitations, if it runs at all, begins to run, Hampstead Corporation v. Caunt, [1903] 2 K. B. 1; 67 J. P. 344).

The six months' limitation does not apply to the enforcing of the charge on the premises given for such expenses by s. 257, post (Tottenham L. B. v. Rowell (1880), 15 Ch. D. 378). Such a charge may be enforced by proceedings commenced within twelve years after the completion of the works (Hornsey L. B. v. Monarch Investment Building Society (1889), 24 Q. B. D. 1; 54 J. P. 391).

In West Derby L. B. v. Bell (1878), 42 J. P. 812; 27 Sol. J. 125, work had been done under this section, and notice of apportionment was served on March 29th, 1878. On the same day a demand was served. Proceedings to recover the amount were instituted in the county court on October 7th, 1878, and it then transpired that a second demand had been made on August 6th. The judge held that the first demand was premature and a nullity, as there was no liability to pay until the expiration of the three months after notice of apportionment. The second demand was, therefore, a good one, and the proceedings were in time. This he considered to be the result of Grece v. Hunt, supra. As for Wilson v. Bolton (Mayor of), post, p. 314, there the notice of apportionment and the demand had been served at the same time, but no objection was taken in argument on that ground, and so far as it was inconsistent with Grece v. Hunt, he considered it to be overruled. The correctness of this decision was established in Simcox v. Handsworth L. B. (1881), 8 Q. B. D. 39; 46 J. P. 260. It was there held that the notice of apportionment concluding with a demand of payment was not a notice of demand within s. 257, and that time did not begin to run from such demand. And in Re Bettesworth and Richer's Contract (1888), 37 Ch. D. 535; 52 J. P. 740, NORTH, J., said: "It is quite true that the owner cannot be compelled to pay till the total costs have been made out and apportioned between the owners, and notice has been served and he has had three months to dispute the apportionment, and at the end of the three months has had written demand served upon him." Note to Section 150.

If the complaint to recover the expenses is made in time, it is no objection to the validity of a summons that it is issued more than a year after such complaint (Simcox v. Handsworth L. B., supra). Of course, if a valid demand has been made and the time has therefore begun to run, it will not be extended by making a second or subsequent demand (see Harpin v. Sykes (1885), 49 J. P. 148).

Upon justices declining to make an order for payment the authority obtained a special case. The respondent took no part in its statement, and did not appear in support of the justices' decision. The court decided in favour of the appellants, and it was held that the respondent might be ordered to pay the costs of the appeal (Wednesbury L. B. v. Stephenson (1864), 33 L. J. M. C. 111; 28 J. P. 261). In a later case it was held that where it is the duty of a public body to take proceedings of a civil nature before justices, and the defendant raises an untenable point which succeeds, then, although he does not appear on the argument of a special case, it was proper that costs should be allowed against him (Usk U. D. C. v. Mortimer (1904), 68 J. P. 38). Special case.

It was held that when owners were liable for paving expenses under the Metropolis Management Acts, the vestry could not, in their discretion, charge the expenses upon the general rates (Dryden v. Putney (Overseers of) (1876), 1 Ex. D. 223; 40 J. P. 263; and see Taylor v. Oldham (Corporation of) (1876), 4 Ch. D. 395, per JESSEL, M.R.). Accordingly, a district board were ordered to restore to the general rate an amount so expended, and to levy the same upon the owners of the adjoining houses and land according to the Acts (Att.-Gen. v. Wandsworth District Board of Works (1877), 6 Ch. D. 539). See also Folkestone Corporation v. Rook, ante, p. 268. Authority cannot relieve frontagers of liability.

For a case in which a local board were held to be estopped by the terms of their notice from proceeding summarily, see Gould v. Bacup L. B., on p. 315, post.

As to the right to recover from a local authority sums paid under this section by mistake, see Midland Rail. Co. v. Withington L. B. (1883), 11 Q. B. D. 788; 47 J. P. 789; Moore v. Fulham Vestry, [1895] 1 Q. B. 399; 59 J. P. 596; Self v. Hove Commissioners, [1895] 1 Q. B. 685; 59 J. P. 103.

(ll) A metropolitan district board were held entitled to recover as costs incidental to paving, etc., the cost of serving apportionments, obtaining names of owners, collection of amounts, advertisement and printing expenses (Poplar Board of Works v. Love (1874), 38 J. P. 246; 29 L. T. 915). But this decision was given with reference to the Metropolis Management Act, 1862, s. 77, which enables the authority to recover incidental costs and charges, and in a recent case the court held that the words "all other incidental costs and charges" included only out-of-pocket expenses and charges (Ballard v. Wandsworth Borough Council (1906), 70 J. P. 331; 95 L. T. 118). In the text the sum which may be recovered seems to be confined to the expenses of executing the work, and quære whether this includes incidental expenses such as those above mentioned. In Walthamstow L. B. v. Staines, ante, p. 306, CHITTY, J., thought it was within the power of the authority to charge for preparation of contract and plans, 4 per cent. for incidental expenses and 4 per cent. for cost of collection. The Court of Appeal doubted whether these expenses could be charged, but did not decide the point. In Hanwell U. D. C. and Smith, In re (1904), 68 J. P. 496, CHANNELL, J., expressed the opinion that an authority were not entitled to make a charge of 5 per cent. to cover office and other incidental expenses. It would appear to follow also from the decision in Ballard v. Wandsworth Borough Council, supra, that an authority will not be justified in including a percentage in respect What expenses may be included in apportionment.

of their officers' time and labour. See an express provision in the Private Street Works Act, 1892, s. 9, post.

Owners in default.

Expenses under s. 150 cannot be recovered from one who, though the owner of premises when notice was first given by the authority, has ceased to be owner before the completion of the works (R. v. Swindon L. B. (1879), 4 Q. B. D. 305; 43 J. P. 431). "I cannot think it was ever intended by the legislature that when the owner has parted with his property, and somebody else is in possession of it, and therefore getting the benefit of the work done, and who ought, therefore, to pay the expenses incurred, it should be competent for the local authority to follow him up wherever he may have gone and hold him personally liable. I think that defect is remedied by s. 257, which treats owners upon whom notice was originally served and who are owners at the time the work is completed, and the expenses demanded, as the persons upon whom the local board shall be able to come for the expenses" (per COCKBURN, L.C.J.). These words were explained by NORTH, J., in Re Bettesworth and Richer's Contract (1888), 37 Ch. D. 535; 52 J. P. 740). He pointed out that in R. v. Swindon L. B. the same person was owner, both when the work was completed and when the demand was made. But he held that when there was a change of ownership after the completion of the works and before demand, the liability was upon the person who was owner when the works were completed. In that case leasehold houses in an urban district, abutting partly on a private road, were sold on an open contract. At the date of the sale, works had been done by the local board under this section. The final demand for payment of the sum apportioned in respect of the premises was served after the purchase ought to have been completed. It was held that the apportioned expenses became a charge on the premises at the date of the completion of the works, and as between the vendor and purchaser they were payable by the vendor. Compare with this decision Egg v. Blayney (1888), 21 Q. B. D. 107; 52 J. P. 517, a case as to the expenses of paving a new street in the metropolis, where such expenses are not a charge on the premises. It was held therefore, that if the owner sells the premises while the expenses are unpaid and conveys as beneficial owner, and the purchaser is compelled to pay the expenses, he cannot recover from the vendor under the implied covenant against incumbrances. See also Re Field, W. N. (1888), p. 36; and the observations on Re Bettesworth and Richer's Contract in Hornsey L. B. v. Monarch Investment Society (1889), 24 Q. B. D. 1; 54 J. P. 391. R. v. Swindon L. B. was distinguished in Tottenham L. B. v. Williamson (1893), 62 L. J. Q. B. 322; 57 J. P. 614, where it was held that under the provisions of a local Act (53 & 54 Vict. c. cxliv), the person who received the rack-rent at the date of the estimation and apportionment of the expenses was liable, notwithstanding that he had ceased to be the owner of the premises within the meaning of the local Act and s. 4 of this Act incorporated therewith before the completion of the works. See also Belfast Corporation v. Hill, [1904] 2 I. R. 105. The dictum of COCKBURN, L.C.J., in the Swindon Case, supra, was at length expressly disapproved by the Court of Appeal in Millard v. Balby-with-Hexthorpe U. D. C., [1905] 1 K. B. 60; 69 J. P. 13. There the appellant was the owner of certain premises in June, 1899, and as such had served upon him a notice under s. 150. The respondents, upon his default, executed the work, which was completed in December, 1901. Formal notice of the apportionment was served on the appellant in November, 1902, and on May 20th, 1903, a demand for payment was served upon him. In April, 1902, he had ceased to be the owner of the premises. It was held that as he was the owner of the premises when the works were completed, he was liable to pay the amount apportioned in respect thereof. In a later case it was held that a person who was the owner of premises at the date of the completion of the work was liable, although he was not the owner of the premises when the notice requiring the works to be executed was served and although he had ceased to be owner prior to service of notice of apportionment and demand for payment (East Ham U. D. C. v. Aylett, [1905] 2 K. B. 22; 69 J. P. 205). In Re Lewis (1908), 42 Ir. L. T. 210, compensation was allowed to a purchaser in respect of an outstanding sanitary notice not disclosed to him.

The Metropolis Management Act, 1862, ss. 77 and 96, make paving expenses recoverable by action from the present or future owners of the premises, or from any person who then or thereafter occupies the premises. The vestry of B. had recovered a judgment against a former owner of premises in respect of such expenses, which remained unsatisfied. It was held that such judgment was no bar to a subsequent action against the defendant, who occupied the premises as tenant to a succeeding owner (Bermondsey (Vestry of) v. Ramsey (1871), L. R. 6 C. P. 247; 35 J. P. 567). Under the same Act it was held that the expenses might be recovered from the mortgagee in possession as owner, notwithstanding that another person was owner at the date when the work was resolved upon, and that the amount could be recovered from future owners, although there had been no arrangement to accept payment by instalments (Plumstead District Board of Works v. Ingoldby and Others (1873), L. R. 8 Ex. 63, 174; 37 J. P. 759). See also Hampstead Corporation v. Caunt, ante, p. 308, as to the liability of future owners in the metropolis. As to the liability of "successive owners" under a local Act, see Blackburn (Corporation of) v. Micklethwait (1886), 50 J. P. 550; 54 L. T. 539.

The Crown is not bound by the provisions of this section. Therefore land owned and occupied for Crown purposes is exempt (Hornsey U. D. C. v. Hennell, [1902] 2 K. B. 73; 66 J. P. 613 (volunteer headquarters); cf. Dellar Bros., Ltd. v. Drury, [1912] 2 K. B. 209; 76 J. P. 239, as to territorial force property). P. 25; Gorton Local Board of Health v. Prison Commissioners, [1904] 2 K. B. 165 n; 68 J. P. 27; Edinburgh Corporation v. Lord Advocate, [1912] S. C. 1085, and Chare v. Hart (1919), 83 J. P. 54; 17 L. G. R. 233.

Apportionment: power to amend or substitute a new one.

(n) Apportionment.—An apportionment was made and notice given to an owner that his proportion was £20 2*s*. In answer to a summons for payment, he objected that the apportionment was bad, on the ground that the expenses of two streets had been lumped together, and the aggregate amount divided among the owners in the two streets; and the justices dismissed the complaint on that ground. The surveyor then made a fresh apportionment, and a notice was served on the owner that his proportion was £19 11*s*. He gave notice that he disputed the apportionment, and the matter came before justices under a section corresponding to s. 181, post, p. 432. On a case stated, it was held that the first apportionment was a nullity, and that the surveyor, not being functus officio, was right in making a fresh apportionment (Cook v. Ipswich L. B. (1871), L. R. 6 Q. B. 451; 35 J. P. 565). An apportionment was signed by B., who was not then surveyor, having been superseded previously. The authority on discovering the mistake treated it as a nullity, and issued a fresh apportionment signed by their actual surveyor. It was held that they had acted properly (Sykes v. Huddersfield (Mayor, etc. of) (1871), 35 J. P. 614). Where a local Act required the proportion in which expenses were to be apportioned to be ascertained and settled by the corporation, it was held that the fact that the apportionment had been corrected by their surveyor after it had been approved by them did not invalidate it (St. Helen's (Corporation of) v. Riley (1883), 47 J. P. 471). An authority acting under this section served the defendant and other frontagers with notices requiring them to execute works including certain work which could not be legally included in such notices. The notices not being complied with, the authority did the works, and apportioned the expenses among the frontagers. A summons to recover from the defendant £650, the amount charged to him, having been dismissed by the magistrates, the authority made a second apportionment, excluding the expenses of the work which had been wrongly included, the amount charged to the defendant therein being £579. They then brought an action under s. 257 to establish a charge on the defendant's premises for £579, or in the alternative for £650:—Held, that the authority had power to make a second apportionment, and that, notwithstanding the dismissal of the summons, they were entitled to a charge for £579 (Manchester (Mayor of) v. Hampson (1886), 35 W. R. 335, 591). See also as to the jurisdiction to make a second apportionment, Bishop v. Wandsworth District Board (1900), 69 L. J. Q. B. 632; 64 J. P. 630; Elsdon v. Hampstead Borough Council, [1905] 2 Ch. 633; 69 J. P. 434. The decision in Cook v. Ipswich L. B. was considered in Shanklin L. B. v. Millar (1880), 5 C. P. D. 272; 44 J. P. 635. In that case the apportionment was made in respect of five roads. The defendant had taken no steps to dispute the apportionment, and when proceedings against him were instituted in the county court he contended that the apportionment was bad in law. On a case stated, the High Court held that the defendant was liable. DENMAN, J., referring to the former decision, said that it was not intended to decide

Note to Section 150.

"that an apportionment which is otherwise good on the face of it, is necessarily a nullity, and may be treated as such in any court before which it may come, because two streets instead of one are included in the apportionment; but the court meant this, viz., that when that is the case, and the parties have come to the conclusion that the apportionment cannot be enforced and the surveyor makes a fresh apportionment, the former one becomes a nullity in the sense that it cannot be enforced, and is useless for particular purposes and cannot stand in the way of a good apportionment. That is, to my mind, the full extent of the decision, and it is not a decision that, if no steps are taken to set aside or dispute the apportionment on the ground that the party charged is not liable, it may be treated as a nullity when it comes before the court." See also Ex parte Wake; R. v. Recorder of Sheffield, and Derby (Mayor, etc. of) v. Grudgings, cited ante, p. 306, for discussions of Cook v. Ipswich L. B. It appears from these cases that an apportionment, if made in respect of the paving, etc. of more than one street, may be objected to under s. 257, post; but that, if this is not done, the owner is liable for the amount apportioned.

Two or more houses or plots belonging to one owner must not be grouped together in the apportionment; a share of the cost must be apportioned on each separately (Croydon R. D. C. v. Betts, [1914] 1 Ch. 870).

Apportionment on one side only of street.

Premises belonging to the defendants abutted upon a new street which a metropolitan vestry paved for half its breadth only, the side paved being that nearest the defendants' premises. The vestry apportioned the whole cost of paving upon the premises on the defendants' side of the street, omitting those on the other side. It was held that the apportionment was invalid, for the owners on both sides ought to have been charged (Mile End (Vestry of) v. Whitechapel (Guardians of) (1876), 1 Q. B. D. 680; 40 J. P. 565, affirming 45 L. J. M. C. 75). But this was a decision under the Metropolis Management Act, 1862, s. 77, which imposes liability on the owners of houses forming the street, and on the land bounding and abutting on such street. The language used in the text is different; and where an authority paved a footpath on one side of a street, and apportioned the cost among the owners on that side only, it was held that the apportionment was right (Wakefield Urban Sanitary Authority v. Mander (1880), 5 C. P. D. 248; 44 J. P. 522). See, however, the Private Street Works Act, 1892, s. 10, post, and a case decided thereon (Clacton-on-Sea L. B. v. Young, [1895] 1 Q. B. 395). And see now as to the metropolis, the Metropolis Management Act, 1862, Amendment Act, 1890, and Paddington Vestry v. North Metropolitan Railway and Canal Co., [1894] 1 Q. B. 633; 58 J. P. 413; White v. Fulham Vestry (1896), 60 J. P. 327; 74 L. T. 425; Property Exchange, Ltd. v. Wandsworth Board of Works, post, p. 315. See also Evans v. Newport Urban Sanitary Authority and the other cases cited therewith at p. 315, post, as to the method of apportionment when a strip is added to a road already repairable by the inhabitants at large.

It has been decided under the Private Street Works Act, 1892, that all the premises in a street must be included in the apportionment although some of them are extra commercium and have therefore no "owners" (Herne Bay U. D. C. v. Payne, [1907] 2 K. B. 130; 71 J. P. 282). This decision has, however, no application to an authority proceeding under s. 150, under which the total expenses should be divided amongst the persons who are statutory "owners," and can be made to contribute. See 71 J. P. N. 337.

Time for making apportionment.

There does not appear to be any limit to the time within which an apportionment must be made (Bradley v. Greenwich District Board of Works (1878), 3 Q. B. D. 384; 42 J. P. 725). But delay in making the apportionment will not extend the time for bringing an action to enforce the charge on the premises under s. 257. Such an action must be brought within twelve years after the completion of the works. See Hornsey L. B. v. Monarch Investment Building Society (1889), 24 Q. B. D. 1; 54 J. P. 391.

Notice of dispute.

(o) Arbitration.—Section 257, post, limits the time within which notice of any dispute is to be given. See Hesketh v. Atherton L. B. (1873), L. R. 9 Q. B. 4; 38 J. P. 149.

If a notice is given disputing the apportionment, no proceedings can be taken to recover the expenses of the works until the dispute has been determined by arbitration (Sandgate L. B. v. Keene, [1892] 1 Q. B. 831; 56 J. P. 484).

An owner, on receiving notice of apportionment, sent to the authority a letter which appeared to be rather an objection to the prime cost of the work than to the mode in which that prime cost was apportioned; but it was held that as the letter was treated by the authority in letters to the owner and in a resolution, as a good notice disputing the apportionment, it must be regarded as such, and that the authority were bound to go to arbitration before commencing an action to recover the apportioned amount. Another owner disputed the claim of the authority in general terms, and this was held a good notice (Folkestone (Mayor, etc. of) v. Brooks; Same v. Ladd, [1893] 3 Ch. 22; 58 J. P. 53). Where, however, an owner takes up the position that the authority have no jurisdiction at all to charge him with the expenses of making up a street, there is no dispute which must first go to arbitration (West Hartlepool (Mayor, etc. of) v. Robinson (1897), 62 J. P. 35; 77 L. T. 387).

The arbitration here referred to has reference not to a dispute between the frontagers generally on one side, and the authority on the other, but to one in which the owner of a particular set of premises complains of the apportionment as regards himself personally. There must be as many separate arbitrations as there are disputing owners, for every disputing owner may appoint an arbitrator. Therefore, an award between one of several frontagers called upon to pay the expenses of paving a street and the authority, by which the arbitrator has altered not merely the assessment upon the particular frontage, but the assessment in regard to all the frontages, is not binding upon a frontager not a party to the arbitration, so as to entitle the authority to recover from him the sum which would be due from him on the footing of the altered assessment (Tunbridge Wells L. B. v. Akroyd (1880), 5 Ex. D. 199; 44 J. P. 504).

The text only authorises an arbitration in respect of the proportion to be borne by a defaulting owner, and not in respect of any question as to the expenses being reasonable or properly incurred by the authority (Bayley v. Wilkinson (1864), 33 L. J. M. C. 161; 10 L. T. 543); and see also Re Stoker and Morpeth Corporation, [1915] 2 K. B. 511; 79 J. P. 201. Nor can the arbitrator inquire into details of the total amount certified by the surveyor (Cawston v. Bromley U. D. C. (1900), 64 J. P. 760; 17 T. L. R. 25). When a dispute as to the apportionment comes before justices as arbitrators under s. 181, post, p. 432, and equally when the matter comes before them on a complaint to enforce payment, they have no jurisdiction to inquire into the question whether the amount alleged has been actually incurred. If the appellant is aggrieved by the alleged overcharge, his remedy is by appeal to the M. of H. under s. 268, post (Cook v. Ipswich L. B., ante, p. 307). In Sandgate L. B. v. Keene, ante, p. 312, and in Bournemouth Commissioners v. Watts, ante, p. 307, there are dicta suggesting that an arbitrator may deal with any dispute that may arise, but in a later case the Court of Appeal decided that he has only jurisdiction to fix the amount, and cannot fix the liability (Willesden L. B. and Wright, In re, [1896] 2 Q. B. 412); and see Hanwell, U. D. C. and Smith, In re (1904), 68 J. P. 496, where CHANNELL, J., decided that the only power which an arbitrator has is to divide up the total sum which the authority have decided to be the cost of the work, and that he has no jurisdiction to entertain objections to the total cost of the work, as given by the surveyor to the authority. See also dicta of the Court of Appeal to the same effect in Ex parte Wake, ante, p. 306, and Walthamstow L. B. v. Staines, ante, p. 306. See, on the other hand, Handsworth U. D. C. v. Derrington, [1897] 2 Ch. 438; 61 J. P. 518, where it was held by KEKEWICH, J., that if the proportion of the expenses was referred to arbitration, all objections to the validity of the proceedings of the authority on the ground of insufficient notice, such as neglecting to serve every frontager, or otherwise, must be raised before the arbitrators, and that it is too late to raise them by action or other proceeding on the award. Cf., however, Hesketh v. Atherton L. B. (1873), L. R. 9 Q. B. 4, where it was held that the question of highway or no highway could not be raised before an arbitrator. The owner of two properties adjoining each other and abutting on a street, received a notice under s. 150. The notice referred only to one of the two properties. Upon his default the authority executed the works in the street adjoining both properties. The apportionment of the expenses only referred to the one property, though the owner's share of the expenses was calculated on the frontage of both. The owner having disputed the apportionment, the arbitrator held that it was bad, and that the owner's share should be reduced to a sum proportionate to the frontage of the one property to which the notice and the apportionment had referred. It was held that he had jurisdiction to so award (Thomas v. Hendon R. D. C. (1911), 75 J. P. 161 ; 9 L. G. R. 234). Under similar provisions in Ireland it has been held that an arbitrator cannot give effect to a frontager's claim that, where no footpath is provided on his side of the street, he ought not to be charged in respect of the opposite footpath, but only in respect of the roadway ; in such a case the frontager should appeal to the L. G. B. (now M. of H.) (Bangor U. D. C. v. McKee (1914), 48 Ir. L. T. 92). If there has been no arbitration an objection may be taken to the sufficiency of a notice on proceedings for the recovery of expenses (Stourbridge U. D. C. v. Butler, [1909] 1 Ch. 87 ; 73 J. P. 3). It has been held with reference to the Metropolis Management Acts, 1855 and 1862, that the principle upon which the expenses have been apportioned cannot be questioned before any tribunal (Nesbitt v. Greenwich District Board of Works (1875), L. R. 10 Q. B. 465 ; 39 J. P. 582 ; Stotesbury v. St. Giles, Camberwell (Vestry of) (1888), 57 L. J. M. C. 114 ; 53 J. P. 5 ; Davis v. Greenwich District Board of Works, [1895] 2 Q. B. 219 ; 59 J. P. 517 ; Metropolitan District Rail. Co. v. Fulham Vestry, [1895] 2 Q. B. 443 ; 59 J. P. 679). See, however, R. v. Marsham, [1892] 1 Q. B. 371 ; 56 J. P. 164 ; and Elsdon v. Hampstead Corporation, [1905] 2 Ch. 633 ; 69 J. P. 434.

It will be seen, on reference to s. 268, that a frontager may, if he pleases, refrain from having recourse to arbitration, and in lieu thereof make complaint to the M. of H. within twenty-one days from the "decision" of the authority. A notice to pave and a notice of apportionment are not, but a demand of payment is, a "decision" within the meaning of that section (R. v. Local Government Board (1882), 9 Q. B. D. 600 ; 46 J. P. 820 ; affirmed (1882), 10 Q. B. D. 309 ; 47 J. P. 228 ; Ex parte Wake ; R. v. Recorder of Sheffield ; Bournemouth Commissioners v. Watts, ante, p. 306).

For the provisions of this Act as to arbitration, see s. 179, post, p. 425. An award under this section cannot be summarily enforced under the Arbitration Act, 1889, s. 12 (Re Willesden L. B. and Wright, [1896] 2 Q. B. 412 ; 60 J. P. 708). Nor (semble) can an action be brought upon it (ibid.).

Private improvement expenses.

The construction of this clause is not clear, and it has been interpreted in two ways. Some consider that the declaring the expenses to be private improvement expenses should be done in respect of each separate premises ; in other words, that an apportionment should be made in any case in order to determine the extent to which each owner is liable according to the frontage of his premises. Upon this being done, the expenses so determined may either be recovered from the owners, or may be declared to be private improvement expenses in any one or more cases. The amount actually recovered from an owner would thus be the same, whether he had to pay the sum apportioned on him at once, or by means of a private improvement rate. This opinion is based on the ground that the object of the section is to impose a liability according to frontage, and that s. 215, which enables any owner to redeem private improvement expenses, implies that the expenses, so far as he is concerned, have been already fixed and determined. It is also argued that s. 257 contemplates an apportionment in every case, and that the contrary opinion deprives him of the important rights which the statute confers as to disputing the apportionment. The other view is that the authority have a discretion either to apportion in the ordinary way according to frontages, or to take the total expenses, ascertain the sum payable in each year with the addition of interest, and then make a rate upon the several premises according to their rateable value, frontage as an element in determining liability being rejected altogether. This opinion is supported by the punctuation of the clause, and it is not unworthy of observation that the language of the clause differs from that in the P. H. A., 1848, s. 69. It is by no means easy to decide between the two possible constructions. In the absence of express authority an opinion must be advanced with hesitation ; but it is submitted on the whole that the first is the more correct construction. The two following cases, in so far as they bear upon the point, are in favour of this view.

A local board demanded from an owner his proportion of the expenses in January, 1861. This amount not having been paid on August 25th, 1870, the board resolved that it should be declared private improvement expenses ; and in September, 1870, they declared it to be payable by annual instalments. It was held that the demand in 1861 amounted to an election to treat the amount due as a debt from the owner, and that they had no power to declare it to be private improvement expenses (Wilson

Note to Section 150.

v. Bolton (Mayor, etc. of) (1871), L. R. 7 Q. B. 105; 36 J. P. 405). An authority gave a notice in the form in Sched. IV., Form G, but added to it words to the effect that if the owner neglected to do the work they would do it, and declare the expenses to be private improvement expenses. It was held that they were estopped by the terms of their notice from taking summary proceedings for the recovery of the expenses (Gould v. Bacup L. B. (1881), 50 L. J. M. C. 44; 45 J. P. 325).

Part of road repairable by inhabitants at large.

(q) Part of Road Repairable by Local Authority.—The meaning of the paragraph was thus explained in Maude v. Baildon L. B. (1883), 10 Q. B. D. 394; 47 J. P. 644, by POLLOCK, B.: "Its effect is not to say that wherever there is a (public) footpath running parallel the rest of the ground is in such a case to be deemed a street. It merely means to say that in all those cases in which the magistrates could properly find the residue to be a street, that power of so finding is not to be taken away in consequence of the fact that there is a public footpath."

In proceedings under this section it appeared that the street was formed by an old footpath and strips of land alongside, which had been recently added to widen it. The old footpath was repairable by the inhabitants at large. The justices found that the road was in part an ancient footpath or highway, but that it had been altered, widened, and added to, and that houses having been built abutting thereon it was a street within the meaning of the section; that the frontagers were liable to contribute to the expenses of improving it; and an order was accordingly made for payment by the frontagers of such expenses. It was held that having regard to the terms of the section, the frontagers were chargeable with the expenses of improving the whole street, and not merely such part of it as had been added to the ancient highway (Evans v. Newport Urban Sanitary Authority (1889), 24 Q. B. D. 264; 54 J. P. 374). In 1883, the owners of an estate, through which ran an ancient highway about thirty feet wide, repairable by the inhabitants at large, agreed with the borough council, that as and when the estate should be laid out for building the owners would straighten and lay out the road so as to make it forty feet wide throughout. The agreement recited that it was entered into for the purpose of settling a question which had arisen as to the extent of the public rights over the road. When the whole of the road had been laid out in accordance with the agreement, the council made it up, and sought to recover the expenses from the owners of premises abutting on the road. JOYCE, J., held that the agreement did not constitute a purchase of the land thrown in to widen the road; and consequently, having regard to the latter part of s. 150, that the frontagers were chargeable with the expenses of improving the whole road and not merely such parts of it as had been added to the ancient highway (Portsmouth Corporation v. Hall (1907), 71 J. P. 299; 97 L. T. 43). This decision was reversed on appeal (71 J. P. 564; 98 L. T. 513), it being held that the agreement amounted to a purchase by the council under s. 154, and that the defendant was not liable for any expenses under s. 150. A street, sixteen feet wide, in the metropolis, had been a highway from the year 1815, and had become an "old street." On the south side were a number of cottages; the street was paved on that side, and from time to time substantial repairs were done to it; the frontagers on the north side took no part in the acts of repair. In 1898 a new strip of land, twenty-four feet wide, was dedicated to the public on the north side, houses were built on that side, and the authority paved the new part of the street and made an apportionment upon the frontagers on the north side only. The magistrate found, and the Divisional Court upheld his view, that the added strip on the north side was itself a separate "new street," with the result that the paving expenses were thrown upon the owners of property abutting on that new street. On appeal, it was held (following Richards v. Kessick, ante, p. 288, and White v. Fulham Vestry, ante, p. 294) that the paving expenses were thrown only upon the owners of property abutting on the north side of the new strip, whether under the Metropolis Management Acts or the Public Health Act (Property Exchange, Ltd. v. Wandsworth Board of Works, [1902] 2 K. B. 61; 66 J. P. 435). See also the argument in Chorley Corporation v. Nightingale, [1906] 2 K. B. 612; 70 J. P. 500 (affirmed on appeal on a point not material in this connection, [1907] 2 K. B. 637; 71 J. P. 441), and a considered judgment of the Leeds stipendiary magistrate (Mr. C. M. Atkinson), at 71 J. P. N. 53.

In Chorley Corporation v. Nightingale, supra, it was held that there is no rule of law that a ditch running alongside a road between the via trita and the fence cannot be dedicated as part of the highway; that whether it is part of the highway or not is a question of fact; and that where it is found that such a ditch has been included in the dedication, then upon its being filled up, and made available for passage, the road ought not to be treated as a street which consists partly of an old highway and partly of an added strip, so as to constitute a street of which "only a part" is repairable by the inhabitants at large, and therefore one in respect of which frontagers are liable for paving expenses under this section. From this case it would also appear that in construing the final paragraph of s. 150, the maxim de minimis may be applied.

In Chippendale v. Pontefract R. D. C. (1907), 71 J. P. 231, a county court judge found as a fact that the ditch there in question did not form part of the highway. Where a highway has been laid out under an award and is, exclusive of the ditches, still of the prescribed width, there is no presumption that either ditch forms part of the highway (Simcox v. Yardley R. D. C. (1905), 69 J. P. 66; 3 L. G. R. 1350). See also Walmsley v. Featherstone U. D. C. (1909), 73 J. P. 322; 7 L. G. R. 806, where it was held that the site of a ditch piped and filled up nine years before by the council with the owner's consent (to prevent accidents to persons walking on the footpath at night) had not been dedicated to the public.

It is difficult to reconcile with the cases which decide that strips of land added to a highway may be made up at the expense of the frontagers, a statement of Lord ALVERSTONE, C.J., in Escott v. Newport Corporation, [1904] 2 K. B. 369; 68 J. P. 135, to the effect that a strip of land added by an adjoining owner to an old highway and paved by him, and which the public had the right to use as a public footpath, was vested in the local authority. The land could only so vest under s. 149, ante, p. 273, if a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large. This statement was not however, necessary to the decision: and see a criticism by WARRINGTON, J., and the judgments of the Court of Appeal in Andrews v. Abertillery U. D. C., [1911] 2 Ch. 398; 75 J. P. 449.

The fact that, owing to the proviso to the section, the authority might as to a street, a part whereof is repairable by the inhabitants at large, put into operation their powers under this section, will not prevent them from being indicted under the Highways and Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878, s. 10, if the part repairable by the public is allowed to fall into disrepair (Rex v. Crompton U. D. C. (1902), 66 J. P. 566; 86 L. T. 762).

Exemption from expenses under last section of incumbent of church, etc.

151. The incumbent or minister of any church chapel or place appropriated to public religious worship, which is now by law exempt from rates for the relief of the poor (a), shall not be liable to any expenses under the last preceding section, as the owner or occupier of such church chapel or place or of any churchyard or burial ground attached thereto, nor shall any such expenses be deemed to be a charge on such church chapel or other place, or on such churchyard or burial ground, or to subject the same to distress, execution or other legal process; and the urban authority may, if they think fit, undertake any works from the expenses of which any such incumbent or minister is hereby exempted (b).

This section does not apply to a district in which the Private Street Works Act, 1892, has been adopted. See s. 25 of that Act, post; but a similar exemption is contained in s. 16 thereof.

Exemption of churches, etc., from poor rate.

(a) The statute exempting from poor rate churches and chapels is 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 30. By it "no person or persons shall be rated, or shall be liable to be rated, or to pay to any church or poor rates or cesses for or in respect of any churches, district churches, chapels, meeting-houses, or premises, or such part thereof as shall be exclusively appropriated to public religious worship, and which (other than churches, district churches, and episcopal chapels of the Established Church) shall be duly certified for the performance of such religious worship according to the provision of any Act or Acts now in force: Provided always, that no person or persons shall be hereby exempted from any such rates or cesses for or in respect of any parts of such churches, district churches, chapels, meeting-houses, or other premises which are not so exclusively appropriated, and from which parts not so exclusively appropriated such person or persons shall receive any rent or rents, or shall derive profit or advantage" (s. 1). "Provided always, that no person or persons shall be liable to any such rates or cesses because the said churches, district churches, chapels, meeting-houses, or other premises, or any vestry rooms belonging thereto, or any part thereof, may be used for Sunday or infant schools, or for the charitable education of the poor" (s. 2). See 18 & 19 Vict. c. 81, as to the certifying of places of religious worship, and 32 & 33 Vict. c. 40, s. 2, for a definition of Sunday school.

Churches were immune from rates prior to the passing of the above statute, and its object was to extend the same immunity to chapels, etc. In Winstanley v. North Manchester Overseers, [1910] A. C. 7; 74 J. P. 49, a churchyard or burial ground had been acquired under the Church Building Acts, at a distance of about 300 yards from the church. It was held (1) that the rector who received fees in respect of such burial ground was the "occupier" of it for rating purposes and was liable to be rated in respect thereof; and (2) that the burial ground was not exempt from rates under the Act of 1833.

A burial ground "not attached to" any church or chapel is not exempt under this section, though partially exempt from poor or local rates under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 128, s. 15.

Effect of the section.

The text only exempts an incumbent or minister; therefore, trustees, other than the incumbent or minister, will be liable. The defendants were the trustees of a chapel consisting of two floors. The upper floor was the chapel itself, and the lower contained a lecture hall and several smaller rooms. The upper floor was exclusively appropriated to public religious worship, and the premises as a whole were registered as a place of religious worship. The lecture hall was used for the purposes of a Sunday school and of an institute, the members of the latter paying a subscription, and lectures and concerts were from time to time given in the hall in connection with the institute, for which tickets were sold to persons who were not members; but the money received did not cover the cost of the entertainments. A bazaar and sale of work had also been held in the lecture hall, when a charge was made for admission. The money realised from the bazaar was handed to the defendant B., and appropriated by him to the chapel building fund, and the proceeds of the sale of work were devoted to the purchase of a piano for the institute. The defendants, who had no beneficial interest in the chapel, having failed to comply with a notice under s. 150 requiring them to pave the street upon which the chapel abutted, the complainants executed the work, and obtained an order of justices for repayment by the defendants of the expenses incurred. It was held that the defendants were the "owners" of the premises; that they were not within the exemption given by this section; and that the order of the justices was, therefore, rightly made (Hornsey L. B. v. Brewis (1890), 60 L. J. M. C. 48; 55 J. P. 389). Section 16 of the Private Street Works Act, 1892, post, specially provides for similar cases where that Act is in force.

Certain premises were formerly used as a church. A new church having been built on another site, Sunday services were held only in the new building. The old premises were used on Sunday for a Sunday school, and on week-day evenings for services and class meetings. A debating society met upon the premises once a week free of charge. Once a month a Rechabites society met in the vestry and paid £1 per annum for fuel and lighting. On one occasion a political meeting had been held on the premises, the organisers paying 2*s.* 6*d.* for light and heat. There had also been held on the premises an "At Home" in connection with church work, for which there was a charge for admission; and a dramatic entertainment for which there was a charge for admission. On each occasion the premises were open to the public, and the moneys paid for admission were received by the owners and used by them for current expenses, and to liquidate the debt on the new church. The premises had not in fact been rated for the relief of the poor. It was held that the premises were not exclusively appropriated to public religious worship; that they were not by law exempt from poor rate, and, therefore, were not exempt from private street works expenses under s. 16 of the Private Street Works Act, 1892 (Walton-le-Dale U. D. C. v. Greenwood (1911), 75 J. P. 541; 105 L. T. 547). Under the corresponding Scotch enactment it has been held that church and mission halls sometimes used for temperance meetings and for congregational social meetings are not "exclusively" appropriated to public religious worship, and do not fall within the exemption (Trustees of College Street United Free Church v. Parish Council of Edinburgh (1901), 3 F. 414). For a decision under a differently worded Irish Act, see R. v. Belfast (Recorder), [1913] 2 I. R. 431.

Under a local Act which required the churchwardens or chapelwardens for the time being of any parochial church or chapel to pay the paving rates assessed upon such church or chapel, it was held that a district church erected under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37, was not exempt from being rated, and that the churchwardens were liable to pay the rates although they had no parochial funds for that purpose (Mills v. Ryder (1854), 10 Ex. 67; 18 J. P. 633).

Churches and chapels in metropolis.

There is no such exemption as this in the metropolis. The trustees of a dissenting chapel were held liable under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 105 (Caiger v. St. Mary, Islington (1881), 50 L. J. M. C. 59; 45 J. P. 570; Wright v. Ingle (1885), 16 Q. B. D. 379). But it was otherwise held with respect to a church which was consecrated and so dedicated to permanent and unalterable uses (Angell v. Paddington (Vestry of) (1868), L. R. 3 Q. B. 714; 32 J. P. 742). In the case of a cemetery, part of which was consecrated, belonging to a company, such company were held liable (St. Giles, Camberwell (Vestry of) v. London Cemetery Co., [1894] 1 Q. B. 699; 58 J. P. 382).

By the Church Building Act, 1845, s. 13, the "freehold of the site of every church" of which the commissioners therein mentioned shall accept a conveyance under the Church Building Acts (as to any church not yet consecrated, when the same shall be consecrated), shall vest in the incumbent. Land having been conveyed under the Church Building Acts to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners as a site for a church, a church was afterwards erected on a part of the land, and the church and a part only of the land were consecrated. It was held that upon such consecration the whole of the land so conveyed to the commissioners vested in the incumbent; that the commissioners ceased to be the "owners" of it, and were, therefore, not liable under the Metropolis Management Acts, 1855 and 1862, to contribute in respect of it towards the cost of paving a new street (Plumstead District Board of Works v. Ecclesiastical Commissioners, [1891] 2 Q. B. 361; 55 J. P. 791).

Schools.

It was decided in Bowditch v. Wakefield L. B. (1871), L. R. 6 Q. B. 567; 36 J. P. 197, that a "national" school was not exempt, and that one of the trustees was liable to pay the proportion of the expenses in respect of such school. This decision was followed in Hornsey U. D. C. v. Smith, [1897] 1 Ch. 843; 76 L. T. 431; if, however, the school site was conveyed under the School Sites Act, 1841, difficulty may be experienced in seeking to make effective a charge upon the school (ibid.). A local education authority are also liable in respect of their schools (London School Board v. St. Mary, Islington (Vestry of) (1875), 1 Q. B. D. 65; 40 J. P. 310). 32 & 33 Vict. c. 40, provides that every authority having power to impose or levy any rate upon the occupier of any building used exclusively as a Sunday school or ragged school may exempt such building or part of a building from any rate for any purpose whatever which such authority has power to impose or levy. The exercise of this power is discretionary: see Bell v. Crane (1873), L. R. 8 Q. B. 481; 37 J. P. 711; and quære whether the proportion of expenses under s. 150 is a rate within the meaning of this Act.

By the Voluntary Schools Act, 1897, s. 3, no person shall be assessed or rated to or for any local rate in respect of any land or buildings used exclusively or mainly for the purposes of the schoolrooms, offices or playground of a voluntary school, except to the extent of any profit derived by the managers of the school from the letting thereof. By s. 4, "local rate" in that Act, unless the context otherwise requires, means "a rate the proceeds of which are applicable to public local purposes, and which is leviable on the basis of an assessment in respect of the yearly value of property, and includes any sum which, though obtained in the first instance by a precept, certificate, or other instrument requiring payment from some authority or officer, is or can be ultimately raised out of a local rate as before defined." The apportioned expenses of making up a street clearly do not fall within the definition, and therefore the decisions in Bowditch v. Wakefield L. B., and Hornsey U. D. C. v. Smith, supra, are still law.

(b) The previous section requires the authority to give notice to the owner or occupier of the premises to make the street, and in their default empowers them to do the work themselves. This proviso, therefore, deals with the case where, the minister being exempt, there may be no owner liable to do the work, and consequently no default. Under the Private Street Works Act, 1892, s. 16, the authority, where that Act is in force, are bound to pay the proportion of expenses in respect of which an exemption under that section is allowed. Note to Section 151.

152. (a) When any street within any urban district not being a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large (b) has been sewered levelled paved flagged metalled channelled and made good and provided with proper means of lighting to the satisfaction of the urban authority (c), such authority may (cc), if they think fit, by notice in writing put up in any part of the street, declare the same to be a highway, and thereupon the same shall become a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large (d); and every such notice shall be entered among the proceedings of the urban authority. Power to declare private streets when sewered, etc., to be highways.

Provided that no such street shall become a highway so repairable, if within one month after such notice has been put up the proprietor or the majority in number of proprietors (e) of such street, by notice in writing to the urban authority, object thereto, and in ascertaining such majority joint proprietors shall be reckoned as one proprietor (e).

(a) As to the application of this section to rural districts, see the early part of the note to s. 150.

Where the P. H. A., 1890, s. 41, post, is in force by adoption, the above section is repealed, and the provisions of s. 41 are substituted in lieu thereof.

(b) As to the meaning of these words, see ante, p. 274.

(c) Note the use of the copulative. This section is not a complement to s. 150. In order that an authority may declare a street not repairable by the inhabitants at large to be a highway, so that it may become so repairable, it is necessary that each of the works specified in s. 152 shall, at the time of declaration, have been executed upon the street to the satisfaction of the authority. An authority has not, under this section, any discretion as to which of the works mentioned in it they will require to be executed: their discretion is limited to being satisfied with the efficiency of each description of work when done. In Att.-Gen. v. Bidder (1881), 47 J. P. 263, it was suggested, if not decided, that kerbing a road did not answer the requirement of the section that the road must be flagged, this term meaning paved with flagged stones; and that wooden paving did not come within the meaning of any of the requirements of the section. But now, by the P. H. A., 1890, s. 11 (2), post, a street or part of a street which has been asphalted or paved with wood, tar paving, or artificial stone, or other improved paving of any kind, shall be deemed to have been paved within the meaning of the Public Health Acts: Provided that a street shall not be deemed to be paved to the satisfaction of the urban authority, unless it is paved with such kind of paving as the local authority shall consider suitable for the street. Compare the Private Street Works Act, 1892, s. 5, post. And see Allen v. Fulham Vestry (1898), 62 J. P. 548; 79 L. T. 190. Where s. 19 of the Act of 1892 is in force, it is not necessary that all the works in the Act mentioned should have been executed before the street is adopted: nor is it necessary where Part III. of the P. H. A., 1890, has been adopted, if the partial works have been executed by the authority. All the specified works must be done.

In Saunders v. Brading Harbour Improvement Railway and Works Co. (1885), 52 L. T. 426, the defendants agreed to construct a road over land of the plaintiff, who was to grant the defendants a right of way over the road when completed, and to permit it to be declared a public highway by the local board. The defendants were to make the road according to a plan and specification already approved by the local board, and to do all things necessary to carry out a resolution passed by the board that the road should six months after completion to their satisfaction be declared by the board a public highway. The specification provided that the pathways should be gravelled, and did not provide for means of lighting. After completion of the road the board were advised that the road did not comply with the requirements of this section, inasmuch as it was not flagged nor provided with means of lighting, and they withheld their sanction to its being declared a public highway. The plaintiff brought an action claiming specific performance by the defendants of the agreement on the ground that they had not done all things necessary to enable the board to declare the road a public highway:—Held, that inasmuch as to compel the defendants to construct the road so as to conform with the provisions of the Act would be to enforce performance of terms at variance with the agreement and entirely outside the contemplation of the parties, specific performance could not be ordered. Whether the plaintiff would have been entitled to damages if any had been shown, quære.

(cc) Under the Private Street Works Act, 1892, s. 20, post, (if in force) an authority may be compelled to "take over" a street. See also the P. H. A., 1907, s. 19, post.

Dedication under Highway Act, 1835, s. 23.

(d) This is a substitute for the provision in the Highway Act, 1835, s. 23, relating to the dedication of roads to the public. A landowner in a district under the P. H. A., 1848, gave notice to the local board of his intention to dedicate a certain road as a highway, to which the board replied that they would not adopt the road, as it had not been sewered, levelled, paved, flagged, and channelled to their satisfaction. The landowner, however, obtained and enrolled a certificate of two justices under the Highway Act, 1835, s. 23, and the public then used the road, which was kept in repair by the landowner for twelve months; after which, it being out of repair, an indictment was preferred against the parish. It was held that the inhabitants were not liable, for assuming s. 23 to apply to the case, the road had not been made to the satisfaction of the local board who were the surveyors. WIGHTMAN, J., expressed an opinion that s. 23 was not inconsistent with the P. H. A., 1848, for the board had a discretion as to the amount and kind of repairs to be done to the road, and they might require it to be paved, etc., having regard to the sections of the Act of 1848 corresponding with ss. 150, 152 (R. v. Dukinfield (1863), 27 J. P. 805; 4 B. & S. 158).

No right or liability to repair on the part of a highway authority exists in the case of a road dedicated to the public since August 30th, 1835, unless it has been dedicated or "taken over" in accordance with the Highway Act, 1835, s. 23, this section, one of the other enactments mentioned on p. 276, or some statutory inclosure award or local Act (Eyre v. New Forest Highway Board (1892), 56 J. P. 517). See Leigh-on-Sea U. D. C. v. King, and Cababé v. Walton-on-Thames U. D. C., p. 293, ante, as to presuming compliance with statutory formalities; and see generally upon the subject of public liability to repair, pp. 274, et seq., ante. As to the repair of diverted or substituted roads, see p. 293, ante.

The fact that a private road has been made up at the cost of the frontagers does not if it is not declared a highway, give a frontager any right of access to it which he did not already possess (Moubray, Rowan and Hicks v. Drew, [1893] A. C. 295).

"Proprietors'" power of veto.

(e) There is no definition of the word proprietor, which is not a legal term having any distinct meaning. See Lister v. Lobley (1837), 7 A. & E. 124, where it was held, in a clause giving compensation to owners or proprietors, that these words applied not only to the owners in fee simple, but to lessees for terms of years also. In Rossiter v. Miller (1877), 5 Ch. D. 648, JESSEL, M.R., said: "Is there any doubt that, according to ordinary language, the word proprietors means owners, and the word owners, proprietors?" Having regard to this and the preceding sections, the word as used in the text is probably equivalent to owners; and probably it means the owners of the soil of the street and not the frontagers in a case where the latter do not also own the actual street. See Steward v. Metropolitan Electric Tramways, Ltd., in notes to the P. H. A., 1890, s. 41 (2), post.

Where any part of a street belongs to two or more persons as joint tenants, they can give one vote between them; each person who owns a part in severalty can give one vote.

It is presumed that an objection may be withdrawn, and a declaration then made.

Section 153.

Power to require gas and water pipes to be moved.

153. Where for any purpose of this Act any urban authority deem it necessary (a) to raise sink or otherwise alter the situation of any water or gas pipes mains plugs or other waterworks (b) or gasworks laid in or under any street (b), they may by notice in writing (c) require the owner of the pipes mains plugs or works to raise sink or otherwise alter the situation of the same in such manner and within such reasonable time as is specified in the notice ; the expenses of or connected with any such alteration shall be paid by the urban authority ; and if such notice is not complied with the urban authority may themselves make the alteration required (d) :

Provided—

That no such alteration shall be required or made which will permanently (e) injure any such pipes mains plugs or works or prevent the water or gas from flowing as freely and conveniently as usual ; and

That where under any local Act of Parliament the expenses of or connected with the raising sinking or otherwise altering the situation of any water or gas pipes mains plugs or other waterworks or gasworks, are directed to be borne by the owner of such pipes or works, his liability in that respect shall continue in the same manner and under the same conditions in all respects as if this Act had not been passed.

(a) The power conferred by this section apparently imposes no liability upon an authority, if they cause the level of a street to be lowered under s. 149, ante, p. 273, to lower to a corresponding extent the pipes in the street (Southwark and Vauxhall Water Co. v. Wandsworth District Board, [1898] 2 Ch. 603 ; 62 J. P. 756).

(b) For definitions of waterworks and street, see s. 4, ante, p. 34, and p. 15.

(c) See, as to the authentication and service of the notices, ss. 266, 267, post.

(d) At their own expense.

(e) In the case of slight or temporary injury compensation may be claimable under s. 308, post.

Power to purchase premises for improvement of streets.

154. Any urban authority (a) may purchase any premises (b) for the purpose of widening opening enlarging or otherwise improving any street (c), or (with the sanction of the Local Government Board (d)) for the purpose of making any new street (e).

A somewhat similar power as regards the widening of streets is conferred upon urban authorities by s. 160 (2). In some cases roads may also be widened under he Highway Act, 1835, s. 82.

Rural authorities.

(a) Such rural district councils as succeeded to the powers of highway boards have powers for the widening of roads and the construction of new roads under the Highway Act of 1862. R. D. C.'s who succeeded Surveyors of Highways have only the limited powers given to surveyors by the Highway Act, 1835, and may find it desirable to apply to the M. of H. for the powers of s. 154. These powers are readily given except as to new roads. See also the P. H. Act, 1907, s. 95, post.

If the rural council are proceeding under the Highways and Bridges Act, 1891, by agreement with another highway authority, the powers of that Act are sufficient, and no Order under s. 276, post, is necessary.

Under the L. G. A., 1894, s. 8, parish councils have certain powers for the acquisition of rights-of-way. It is very doubtful whether such powers are sufficient to enable a parish council to undertake the contruction of a new road.

Note to Section 154.

Purchase of land.

(b) The word "purchase" includes "gift." If, therefore, land is given for the purposes of a new street, the sanction of the M. of H. should, in their opinion, be obtained. A distinct power to accept gifts may, however, be obtained under the L. G. A., 1894, see ss. 8 (1) (h) and 33. Under the Crown Lands Act, 1906, the Commissioners of Works may convey to a local authority land required for the purpose of widening, or improving, any bridge, including the approaches thereto and abutments thereof.

See the definition of "premises" is s. 4, ante, p. 7.

See St. Nicholas, Leicester v. Langton, [1899] P. 19; Re St. Anne's, Soho (1900), Times, July 20th; Re Rector, Churchwardens and Corporation of Bideford, [1900] P. 314; 64 J. P. 743; Sutton v. Bowden, [1913] 1 Ch. 518; Re St. Mary Abbot (1914), Times, May 4th; Ex parte Uxbridge U. D. C. (1914), 30 T. L. R. 448; and Re St. Anne's, Limehouse (1915), 31 T. L. R. 539, as to the grant of a faculty for widening a street by taking in a strip of a churchyard.

In a case arising under the Metropolis Management Acts it was held that a borough council has power to enter into an agreement with a landowner, as part of a scheme for widening a road, to remove a sign-post belonging to him to a position on the edge of the public footpath (Hoare & Co., Ltd. v. Lewisham Borough Council (1903), 67 J. P. 20; 87 L. T. 464).

As to the power to purchase the requisite land, see ss. 175 et seq., post, p. 412. Under the corresponding provision in the P. H. A., 1848, s. 73, land could only be purchased by agreement, and the urban authority had no compulsory powers. See Frewen v. Hastings L. B. (1867), 16 L. T. 553. Land may be acquired compulsorily for purposes of this section under s. 176, post, p. 417. Whether land is purchased by agreement or compulsorily it would appear that the vendor is entitled to insist on the council taking a duly executed conveyance of the land (Great Hospital Trustees v. Norwich Corporation, Local Government Chronicle, 1885, p. 860; In re Cary-Elwes' Contract, [1906] 2 Ch. 143; 70 J. P. 345). And, although a purchasing council are entitled generally to say by what description land purchased shall be vested in them, the vendor may require the description to be such as to give effect to the true contract (Monighetti v. Wandsworth Borough Council (1909), 73 J. P. 91).

The authority must in every case acquire the freehold of the premises or obtain the freeholder's consent to the land being thrown into the street. The M. of H. would not otherwise sanction any loan for the scheme.

In a borough any surplus of the borough fund may be applied towards enlarging the streets under the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 143.

Though the authority can, under this section, add land to a highway, they cannot take away any land from the highway, even if such land has, by reason of a part added, become unnecessary. A highway cannot, generally speaking, be stopped up or diverted except pursuant to the Highway Act, 1835, ss. 84—91 (R. v. Platts (1880), 49 L. J. Q. B. 848; 44 J. P. 765). Under special circumstances, however, highways may be interfered with under the Church Building Act, 1819; the Defence Act, 1860; Inclosure Acts; the Military Lands Act, 1892; the Military Manœuvres Acts, 1897 and 1911, and Railway Acts.

A town council, in connection with a street widening, proposed to exchange land forming part of the existing highway for other land required for the improvement. The L. G. B. pointed out that before the scheme could be carried out an order of justices was necessary under the Highway Act, 1835, ss. 85 et seq. They referred to Coverdale v. Charlton (1879), 4 Q. B. D. 104; 43 J. P. 268, and Rolls v. St. George, Southwark (1880), 14 Ch. D. 785; 44 J. P. 680, and observed that it was not clear to them that, even if an order for diversion was made, the council would possess such rights over the soil of the disused part of the highway as would enable them to exchange it for other land. It seemed to the Board that on the present roadway being legally stopped up the adjoining owner would without further action be the owner of the soil discharged of the right of the public to pass over it.

Liability for future maintenance of new or widened street.

Where an authority acting under this section make a new street it must be kept in repair by them, and they cannot subsequently make it up at the cost of the frontagers (Kingston-upon-Hull Corporation v. Jones (1856), 21 J. P. 37; 1 H. & N. 489). So, too, if by purchase, or by an agreement equivalent to purchase, they widen an old street repairable by them, they must keep in repair the added strip.

Note to Section 154.

In 1883, the owners of an estate, through which ran an ancient highway about thirty feet wide, repairable by the inhabitants at large, agreed with the local authority that as and when the estate should be laid out for building the owners would straighten and lay out the road so as to make it forty feet wide. The agreement recited that it was entered into for the purpose of settling a question which had arisen as to the width of the road. When the whole of the road had been laid out in accordance with the agreement, the authority made it up and sought to charge the frontagers, under s. 150, with the cost of so doing. It was held that the agreement amounted to a purchase by the authority under s. 154 of the land thrown in to widen the road, and the frontagers were not liable (Portsmouth Corporation v. Hall (1909), 98 L. T. 513; 71 J. P. 564). A contract by which an owner agrees to throw land into a street and the authority agree to adopt and make up the added strip should be under seal; otherwise the owner cannot obtain specific performance (Hoare v. Kingsbury U. D. C., [1912] 2 Ch. 452; 76 J. P. 401).

As regards the liability to make up strips of land thrown into a street, reference might also be made to the cases referred to ante, at pp. 315–316.

Metropolitan decisions.

Reference may be made to the corresponding powers of borough councils in the metropolis or of the common council of the city of London, as to which see Teuliere v. St. Mary Abbotts, Kensington (Vestry of) (1885), 30 Ch. For a case where it was alleged that the claim to purchase land for the purpose stated was not bonâ fide, see Marquess of Clanricarde v. Congested Districts Board for Ireland (1915), 79 J. P. 481; 49 Ir. L. T. 42.

(c) See the definition in s. 4, ante, p. 15. See also note (b) to s. 150, ante, p. 288. It will be seen that a council are not precluded from incurring expense in acquiring lands for the widening of a street by the fact that the street is not repairable by the inhabitants at large. But, presumably, the public must possess, or be about to obtain, an indefeasible right of way over it. As to the widening and improvement of main roads, see the L. G. A., 1888, s. 11, and notes thereto.

(d) The sanction required is now that of the Ministry of Health. Application should be by resolution of the council of which a copy should be forwarded with plans of the proposed improvement. Such applications are usually combined with proposals to borrow money.

(e) It may be noted that in questions of highway improvement and the formation of new roads the Ministry of Health now act in consultation with the Ministry of Transport. See the Ministry of Transport Act, 1919 (post), and notes thereto.

It is essential that the proposed new street should comply with the byelaws in force in the district as to new streets (see s. 157). In exceptional cases the L. G. B. confirmed a special exempting byelaw in order to regularise a scheme for a new thoroughfare of less than the prescribed width.

Power to regulate line of buildings.

155. When any house (a) or building situated in any street (b) in an urban district, or the front thereof, has been taken down (c), in order to be rebuilt or altered, the urban authority may prescribe the line (d) in which any house or building, or the front thereof, to be built or rebuilt in the same situation shall be erected, and such house

Section 155. or building, or the front thereof, shall be erected in accordance therewith (e).

The urban authority shall pay or tender compensation to the owner (f) or other person immediately interested in such house or building for any loss or damage he may sustain in consequence of his house or building being set back or forward, the amount of such compensation, in case of dispute, to be settled by arbitration in manner provided by this Act (g).

See the proviso as to railway buildings in s. 157, post, p. 327.

(a) See the definition of house in s. 4, ante, p. 20.

(b) For the definition of a street, see s. 4, ante, p. 15. See also note (c) under s. 3 of the Public Health (Building in Streets) Act, 1888, post. The word "street" is apparently used here in its ordinary sense of a road with buildings on each side.

Buildings destroyed by fire, etc.

(c) This means "substantially taken down." See Att.-Gen. v. Hatch, post, p. 325. The words "taken down" do not seem applicable to the case of buildings destroyed by fire or other casualty (cf. s. 23 of the London Building Act, 1894). If so, then apparently s. 3 of the Public Health (Buildings in Streets) Act, 1888, would be applicable, and it may be that no compensation would be payable for setting back.

As to the liability of owners under a local Act, relating to the "taking down to be rebuilt or repaired of part of a front wall," for an alteration not intended by them, and made by builders without their knowledge or instructions, see Yabbicom v. Bristol Brewery, Ltd. (1903), 67 J. P. 261; 1 L. G. R. 477.

Prescription of a building line.

(d) The "line" of a street need not be a strict mathematical line; it means substantially such a line as shall preserve uniformity of appearance (per WILLES, J., in Tear (or Fear, or Sear) v. Freebody (1858), 4 C. B. (N.S.), at p. 262).

The corporation of F. had power under a local Act to prescribe the line in which any house to be thereafter built or taken down for the purpose of being rebuilt or altered should be erected, on payment of compensation to the owner of any house required to be set back; it was also provided that no new street to be thereafter laid out should be of less width than 40 feet, inclusive of footways, and in the case of existing streets, houses to be thereafter erected were to be set back so as to allow of a width of 40 feet. A temporary church, fronting a road less than 40 feet wide, having been pulled down with a view to erecting a permanent church, the corporation gave notice to the clergyman in charge of a resolution passed by them that the road must be not less than 40 feet wide; but there was no statement that the additional width was to be gained on the side on which the church abutted, and it appeared that the street might have been widened on the side opposite without removing any buildings. Afterwards, but not until the foundations of the new church had been put in, the corporation prescribed a building line which intersected the church as designed:—Held, that they were too late, and could not restrain the erection of the church in the manner in which it had been commenced (Folkestone Corporation v. Woodward (1872), L. R. 15 Eq. 159; 37 J. P. 324).

Where a building has been taken down to be rebuilt, a building line may be prescribed under this section for any portion of it which has not been commenced, although other portions of it have been commenced, unless the portion commenced necessarily involves as a matter of construction a projection beyond the line afterwards prescribed. The defendants, being about to pull down a school and erect a new one, submitted plans to the local board. The local board objected to the plans, giving as a reason that they violated a byelaw requiring a person laying out a street to lay it out of a certain width. This byelaw was not applicable, as South Lane, on which the school fronted, was not a new street. The defendants disregarded the objection, commenced their works on January 5th, laid the foundations of the main wall towards South Lane on the 12th, and proceeded rapidly with the erection of it. On January 22nd the local board prescribed a building line which did not interfere with the main wall, but would prevent the erection of certain annexes not then commenced, lying between South Lane and the main wall, which annexes were shown on the plans laid before the board. The defendants had ground enough to allow of the annexes being erected elsewhere. The defendants proceeded with the annexes, and the board brought an action to restrain them from building beyond the line, and to compel them to pull down what they had built beyond it. It was held that the commencement of the main building did not preclude the board from laying down a line which would prevent the erection of the annexes which had not then been commenced. It was held also that as the notice given by the board, though ineffectual for the purpose of empowering them to pull down the erection under s. 158, post p. 353, gave the defendants to understand that the board objected on the ground that buildings according to the plan would make the street too narrow, the board had not done anything to induce the defendants to believe that they would not prescribe a building line, and that there was no equity to prevent the board from exercising their power under this section on the ground that they had misled the defendants (Newhaven L. B. v. Newhaven School Board (1885), 30 Ch. D. 350). The principle of this case was approved in Att.-Gen. v. Hatch, [1893] 3 Ch. 36; 57 J. P. 825, where, however, the main question was as to the meaning of the words "taken down," which the court of Appeal decided meant "substantially taken down." In that case the owner of a house took out the front wall of the ground and first floors and removed the first floor in order to convert the two lower storeys into one lofty shop, which was also to be extended behind the house. The second floor was not disturbed, but was shored up with timber, afterwards replaced by iron girders and brick piers. Shortly after the erection of the girders and piers had been completed the authority prescribed a building line, and commenced an action to restrain the owner from building in front of it. It was held by KEKEWICH, J., that the house had been substantially taken down, but that the authority had not prescribed the line in time. The Court of Appeal held that the house had not been substantially taken down, and that the power to fix a building line had, therefore, never arisen.

Scotch "building line" cases.

Several decisions have been given by the Court of Session in Scotland upon the provision in the corresponding Scotch Act (25 & 26 Vict. c. 101, s. 162), which is, however, limited to a house or building, "any part of which projects beyond the regular line of the street or beyond the front of the house or building on either side thereof," It was held that this section did not apply where the owner of a house which stood back from the line of the adjoining house proposed to bring it forward, and also that the wall and railing of his front garden (which did project beyond the line of the adjoining house) was not a "building" (Fraser v. Kennedy (1877), 4 Ct. of Sess. Cas. (4th ser.) p. 266; affirmed in H. L., 15 Sc. L. R. 765). Pending the appeal the owner brought an action for damages against the commissioners in respect of their having wrongfully prevented him from proceeding with his building operations, and it was held that such an action would lie, although there was no averment of malice and want of probable cause (Kennedy v. Fort William (Police Commissioners of) (1877), 5 Ct. of Sess. Cas. (4th ser.), p. 302). For decisions as to the meaning of the words "regular line of the street" in the Scotch Act, see Schulze v. Galashiels Corporation, [1895] A. C. 665; Robertson v. Greenock Police Board (1883). 11 Ct. of Sess. Cas. (4th ser.), p. 304. In the latter case, one division of a long street consisted on one side of public buildings (with a frontage four feet back from the general line of the street) and of two adjoining houses, Nos 2 and 4, occupied as one tenement, belonging to one proprietor (with a frontage in line with the general line of the street). In 1878 the proprietor applied for a warrant to rebuild the two houses on the same site, whereupon the commissioners served a requisition requiring the new buildings to be rebuilt four feet back, in line with the adjoining public buildings. The owner did nothing, but in 1881 he applied for a warrant to take down and rebuild No. 2, which did not adjoin the public buildings. A second requisition was then made requiring him, as owner of the house, or building numbered 2 and 4, "and which house or building, or a part thereof, is about to be altered or rebuilt, and which house or building projects four feet beyond the line" of the adjoining buildings, and beyond the line of the street from A. to B. (describing the division of the street), to set back the front of the buildings to be erected, to the line of the adjoining public buildings and of the street. In an action by the owner for a declaration that he was entitled to build up to the line of his former frontage, the court held that Nos. 2 and 4 were to be regarded as one building; that the line of the adjoining building was to be taken as the line of the street; and that, therefore, the requisition must receive effect (LORD CRAIGHILL, diss., held that Nos. 2 and 4 were to be regarded as separate buildings, and that the pursuer was entitled to rebuild No. 2 on its former site, as it did not project beyond No. 4, or beyond the general line of street, of which the adjoining public buildings formed a mere fraction).

Enforcement of prescribed line.

(e) An erection in violation of this section may be prevented by injunction, or, if complete, will subject the builder to an indictment. But where the owner of a factory, being desirous of rebuilding it, submitted his plans to the local board, and, on the plans being approved, proceeded to pull down the factory and re-erect it according to the plans, it was held that the board could not, under the corresponding provisions of the L. C. A. 1858, s. 35, require him to set back his premises, and they were restrained from interfering (Slee v. Bradford (Corporation of) (1863), 27 J. P. 612; 8 L. T. 491). In a similar case the owner of a house having, in accordance with a byelaw, left, on October 16th, a plan of an intended new building, the local board passed a resolution that the plan was approved of, and that he should be offered £40 for certain land of his thrown into the street. He refused to accept the £40, but proceeded with his works, and by October 26th had pulled down the front wall of his house. On the 27th, the board passed a resolution abandoning the terms before offered, and requiring him to set his frontage further back, notice being given under the above section. On November 27th the owner proceeded with his building, and on December 21st he was required to pull down his new building. It was held that, the board having approved a plan and having allowed the owner to pull down the front wall of his house, they could not afterwards avail themselves of the powers given by this section (Masters v. Pontypool L. B. (1878), 9 Ch. D. 677).

In Att.-Gen. v. Parish, [1913] 2 Ch. 444; 77 J. P. 391, the defendant, the owner of a house in P. Lane, on January 19th, deposited plans for the proposed rebuilding of the house, and its demolition was begun on January 26th. On February 5th at a meeting of the authority a plan was submitted by the surveyor showing a "street line" and "building line" for P. Lane, and a resolution was passed adopting such lines; it was further resolved that the defendant's plans be disapproved as not complying with the building line and certain byelaws. On February 15th the clerk wrote informing the defendant of the latter resolution. On February 24th the defendant's architect informed the clerk that he could not agree to the building line, and on February 26th the foundations of the new house were laid. On the same day the clerk wrote drawing the defendant's attention to the responsibility attaching to building contrary to a prescribed line. On March 12th the surveyor wrote giving the defendant formal notice not to proceed with the building, as the erection did not comply with the prescribed building line. The building was completed on April 27th in conformity with the byelaws, but about four feet in advance of the prescribed building line. At no time did the authority tender or offer to pay compensation to the defendant or give him notice that they had prescribed the building line under s. 155, or were purporting to exercise their powers under that section. In an action by the Attorney-General for a mandatory injunction to remove so much of the building as was in advance of the prescribed building line, it was held that the relators had duly prescribed a building line within s. 155; that there was no necessity for them to give the defendant notice that they were proceeding under that section; that the tender or payment of compensation was not a condition precedent to their taking any steps under the Act; and, the defendant having unsuccessfully challenged their right to do what they had done, that a mandatory injunction to pull down the building ought to be granted. See also Folkestone Corporation v. Woodward and Newhaven L. B. v. Newhaven School Board, in the preceding note.

In Sutton L. B. v. Hoare (1894), 10 T. L. R. 586, an action brought to restrain the defendant from rebuilding his premises so as to project beyond the line prescribed by the plaintiffs, the defendant alleged that the plaintiffs in prescribing the line had not acted bonâ fide in the exercise of their powers, because on each side of his premises there were comparatively new houses, and the plaintiffs had not laid down any general line in that part of the street to be enforced under the compulsory powers given by s. 154 for street widening. NORTH, J., granted an injunction, as there was no obligation upon the plaintiffs to proceed under s. 154. Note to Section 155.

(f) See the definition in s. 4, ante, p. 8.

(g) See s. 179, post, p. 425. As to the time for tendering compensation, see Att.-Gen. v. Parish, supra. For a case as to the method of calculating the compensation payable for a portion only of a front plot abutting upon a street about to be widened, but where the back land immediately adjoining is the property of the same vendors, see S. E. Rail. Co., v. L. C. C., [1915] 2 Ch. 252; 79 J. P. 545.

Buildings not to be brought forward.

156. It shall not be lawful in any urban district, without the written consent of the urban authority to bring forward any house or building forming part of any street or any part thereof beyond the front wall of the house or building on either side thereof, nor to build any addition thereto beyond the front of the house or building on either side of the same.

Any person offending against this enactment shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding forty shillings for every day during which the offence is continued after written notice in this behalf from the urban authority.

This section was repealed by the Public Health (Buildings in Streets) Act, 1888, which re-enacts it in an amended form. See the Act and notes thereto, post. A question arose as to whether rural authorities who were invested with the powers of s. 156 before its repeal, acquired the powers of the Act of 1888 without any further order. The L. G. B. considered the point to be a doubtful one and advised an application for a new order.

Power to make byelaws respecting new buildings, etc.

157. Every urban authority may make byelaws (a) with respect to the following matters; (that is to say),

(1) With respect to the level width and construction of new streets (b), and the provisions for the sewerage (c) thereof:

(2) With respect to the structure of walls foundations roofs and chimneys (d) of new buildings (e) for securing stability and the prevention of fires, and for purposes of health (f):

(3) With respect to the sufficiency of the space about buildings to secure a free circulation of air, and with respect to the ventilation of buildings (g):

(4) With respect to the drainage of buildings, to water-closets earth-closets privies ashpits (h) and cesspools in connection with buildings (i), and to the closing of buildings or parts of buildings unfit for human habitation, and to prohibition of their use for such habitation (j):

And they may further provide for the observance of such byelaws by enacting therein such provisions as they think necessary as to the giving of notices (k), as to the deposit of plans (l) and sections by persons intending to lay out streets or to construct buildings, as to inspection by the urban authority, and as to the power of such authority (subject to the provisions of this Act) (m) to remove, alter, or pull down any work begun or done in contravention of such byelaws (n): Provided that no byelaw made under this section (o) shall affect any building erected in any place (which at the time of the passing of this Act is included in an urban sanitary district) before the Local Government Acts came into force in such place, or any building erected in any place (which at the time of the passing of this Act is not included in an urban sanitary Section 157. district) before such place becomes constituted or included in an urban district, or by virtue of any order of the Local Government Board (p) subject to this enactment.

The provisions of this section and of the two last preceding sections shall not apply to buildings belonging to any railway company and used for the purposes of such railway under any Act of Parliament (q).

Further provisions of the P. H. A., 1890.

This section has been extended and amended by the P. H. A., 1890, s. 23, in places where Part III. of that Act has been adopted, see post.

Further provisions of the P. H. A., 1907.

There are also certain provisions of the P. H. A., 1907, post, which must be noticed in connection with the subject; but, of course, none of them will be in force in any district until applied thereto by Order of the Central Department, and an Order so applying them may impose conditions or make modifications. The sections in question are: s. 15, Deposit of plan to be of no effect after certain intervals; s. 16, As to plans deposited with local authority; s. 17, Power to vary position or direction and to fix beginning and end of new streets; s. 22. Buildings at corner of streets; s. 23, What to be deemed "new buildings"; s. 24, Byelaws as to height of chimneys, etc.; s. 25, Yards to be paved; s. 26, Entrances to courts, etc., not to be closed; s. 27, As to temporary buildings; and s. 33, Exemption of buildings of railway companies and others.

Position of rural authorities.

It will be seen that rural councils are not directly authorised to make byelaws for the regulation of buildings, but can obtain power to do so in the following ways:

(i) By adopting Part III. of the Act of 1890, thus acquiring power to make byelaws upon the subject-matters referred to in s. 23 (3), supra; or

(ii) By applying to the M. of H. to be invested with such of the powers conferred by the two Acts as they deem suitable to their district, or to some contributory place within it. Such an application can be made whether the council have adopted Part III. of the Act of 1890 or not, but in the former case it is merely a question of what additional powers are required. The application should be by resolution of the council authorising an application under s. 276 of the Act of 1875 or s. 5 of the Act of 1890, as the case may be, for an order putting the desired powers in force. The resolution should specify the provisions which are considered to be necessary, and the names of the contributory places in respect of which the powers are sought, and a copy of it should be sent to the Ministry with a brief statement of the grounds upon which the application is made. If such an application is made with reference to s. 157 of the Act of 1875 it should extend to s. 158 also (unless s. 23 (3) of the Act of 1890 is already in force) and the council should consider the desirability of including the powers of ss. 25 and 33 of the Act of 1890 in the application.

In connection with either of these steps, application may be made for an Order putting in force some provisions of the Act of 1907.

Model byelaws.

The Ministry issue several series of model byelaws for the guidance of local authorities in making byelaws under s. 157. These are (a) an urban code appropriate to the larger boroughs and urban districts; (b) a rural code containing the minimum requirements for sanitary purposes which are regarded as necessary in essentially rural areas, i.e., byelaws within the scope authorised by s. 23 (3) of the Act of 1890; and (c) an intermediate model which contains less detailed requirements as to the structure of walls and foundations of new buildings than are inserted in the urban model but is in other respects of the same scope. The last-mentioned series is intended for urban districts which have generally rural characteristics and for those parishes in rural districts where there is expected to be considerable building activity.

The Ministry have not issued any model forms of additional byelaws such as may be made under s. 23 of the Act of 1890 with respect to floors, roofs, etc., but model byelaws on the subject will be found in the work of Messrs. Mackenzie and Handford.

Periodical revision of byelaws

In a circular of August 29th, 1912, the L. G. B. pointed out the necessity for periodically revising byelaws so as to keep them up to date in view of modern methods of construction, and so as to prevent their restricting building operations by any excessive stringency. In this connection it should be noted that under s. 44 of the Housing, Town Planning, etc. Act, 1909, post, the Central Department can insist upon the revocation of unreasonable byelaws.

Power of M. of H. to revoke unreasonable byelaws.

The model byelaws are so drawn as not to apply to certain classes of buildings (see p. 330, post); the last paragraph of s. 157 exempts certain railway buildings (see also as to railway, canal, pier and dock companies, s. 33 of the P. H. A., 1907); and by the Education (Administrative Provisions) Act, 1911, s. 3, "The provisions of any byelaws made by any local authority under section one hundred and fifty-seven of the Public Health Act, 1875, as amended by any other Act, with respect to new buildings (including provisions as to the giving of notices and deposit of plans and sections), and any provisions in any local Act dealing with the construction of new buildings, and any byelaws made with respect to new buildings under any local Act, shall not apply in the case of any new buildings being school premises to be erected, or erected, according to plans which are under any regulations relating to the payment of grants required to be, and have been, approved by the Board of Education." As to the meaning of the words "provisions . . . dealing with the construction of new buildings," see Higgs and Hill, Ltd. v. Stepney Borough Council, [1914] 1 K. B. 505; 78 J. P. 134; Holliday and Greenwood, Ltd. v. District Surveyors' Association, [1914] 2 K. B. 803; Akers and Co. v. Daubney, (1915) 79 J. P. 516. On the subject of schools, reference may be made to the Board of Education's "Building Regulations" of June 18th, 1907, and a memorandum of the L. G. B. (February, 1910) upon the sanitary arrangements of schools.

Buildings exempt from operation of byelaws.

See also the power to relax byelaws given by the Ancient Monuments Consolidation and Amendment Act, 1913, s. 18 (App. I., post, Vol. II.), to permit the erection of buildings in a style harmonising with other buildings of artistic merit.

Even in the absence of express exemption (such as is found in the Model Byelaws) the byelaws do not bind the Crown (Gorton L. B. v. Prison Commissioners (1887), [1904] 2 K. B. 165 n.; 68 J. P. 27).

A water company, empowered by their special Act merely to erect a high-service water tower in a particular situation, were held not to be exempt from byelaws under the text requiring the delivery of certain notices before work was commenced (Uckfield R. D. C. v. Crowborough Water Co., [1899] 2 Q. B. 664; see also London C. C. v. Wandsworth and Putney Gas Co. (1900), 64 J. P. 500; 82 L. T. 562, and cognate cases collected in Moran & Sons, Ltd. v. Marsland, or cited therewith on p. 24, ante).

Where byelaws contained an exemption for any building (not being a dwelling-house) erected or intended to be erected in connection with any mine, or intended to be used exclusively for the working of such mine, it was held that the exemption covered a brick kiln used for firing bricks got out of a fireclay mine which would not have been worked at all unless the kiln had been used (Tylecote v. Morton (1901), 66 J. P. 136; 85 L. T. 692). Buildings of certain dimensions not constructed or adapted to be used either wholly or in part for human habitation, or as a place of habitual employment for any person in any manufacture, trade or business, were exempted from certain byelaws. A building, of which one end was used as a cement store, the middle portion as a timber store, and the other end as a stable, was held to come within the exemption (Linzell v. Felixstowe and Walton U. D. C. (1904), 68 J. P. 208; 90 L. T. 388).

(a) See as to the making, confirming, and publication of byelaws, ss. 182—186; and as to enforcing them, s. 251.

Though an urban authority be otherwise empowered to make byelaws on these subjects, presumably they may nevertheless act under this section: see s. 341, post.

Authority cannot dispense with

The byelaws made under this section, extended as above stated, are the most important with which a local authority have to deal. It may be opportune, therefore, to remark here that unless the byelaws themselves, or some statute (e.g., the Ancient Monuments Consolidation and Amendment Act, 1913, s. 18, noted supra), give the authority a dispensing power or discretion, the authority are bound by them and cannot waive their requirements (Baxter v. Bedford (1885), 1 T. L. R. 424; R. v. Newcastle-upon-Tyne (Mayor, etc. of) (1889), 53 J. P. 788; 60 L. T. 963; In re Macintosh and Pontypridd Improvement Commissioners (1891), 61 L. J. Q. B. 164; 8 T. L. R. 128; affirmed (1892), 8 T. L. R. 203; Att.-Gen. v. Folkestone Corporation, p. 338, post), but see s. 24, Housing, Town Planning, etc. Act, 1919, as to relaxation of byelaws in carrying out a housing scheme.

Therefore the approval by an authority of building plans which contravene the byelaws made by that authority is illegal and inoperative (Yabbicom v. King, [1899] 1 Q. B. 444; 63 J. P. 149). Even where a local Act contains in a section repealing previous byelaws a proviso saving approved plans, such saving refers only to plans legally approved (ibid.).

Ratepayers issued a writ claiming an injunction (1) to restrain the authority from approving plans deposited for a rival place of amusement and alleged to contravene the byelaws, (2) to restrain the authority from refusing to allow inspection of such plans by the plaintiffs, and (3) to restrain the owners from carrying out the plans. An interim injunction was refused, as to (1), because the plans had in fact been approved while the motion was pending; as to (2), because the injunction asked for was in effect mandatory, and could not be granted on an interlocutory application; and as to (3), because the Attorney-General was not a party, and an amendment would not be allowed for the purposes of an interlocutory motion (Dover Picture Palace, Ltd. v. Dover Corporation and Others (1913), 11 L. G. R. 971).

The fact that byelaws contain no proviso enabling an authority to make an exception in an exceptional case does not render them unreasonable and therefore invalid (Salt v. Scott-Hall, [1903] 2 K. B. 245; 67 J. P. 306; Pomeroy v. Malvern U. D. C. (1903), 67 J. P. 375). The M. of H. are, in fact, opposed to byelaws which reserve a discretionary power to the authority or their officers (see p. 440, post). They state that byelaws in such a form are uncertain in their operation (see cases in note to s. 182, post, p. 434, as to the necessity for "certainty" in byelaws), and that in their opinion byelaws, enforceable by penalties, should, as far as possible, prescribe definite requirements, and should not be dependent in any way upon the exercise of a discretionary power by the authority or their officers. It must be presumed that in a proper case the authority will not prosecute for a trivial breach, or that the justices will take advantage of the provisions of s. 1 of the Probation of Offenders Act, 1907 (Pomeroy v. Malvern U. D. C., supra; Leyton U. D. C. v. Chew, [1907] 2 K. B. 283; 71 J. P. 355; and cf. Dunning v. Trainer (1909), 73 J. P. 400; 101 L. T. 421).

Authority should consider whether owner is able to carry out plans as submitted.

An authority should be careful to see that a builder, whose plans they sanction, is able to comply with the byelaws. T., having land upon which he proposed to build six houses, sent in a notice and plan showing what he intended to do, and, where a new street ten yards wide was to be. The local board sanctioned the houses, and they were built. Some years afterwards T. was summoned for disobeying a byelaw in not leaving a space thirty feet wide for the street. The fact was that his land extended only nine feet in front of the houses, but this was not known to the board until afterwards. T. having been convicted, it was held that the conviction was wrong, and that the board ought to have satisfied themselves before sanctioning the plan that he had land of sufficient width to make the proposed new street when the houses should be completed (Thompson v. Failsworth L. B. (1881), 46 J. P. 21).

A building owner deposited plans showing, inter alia, a new street of the minimum width allowed by the byelaws. Part of the site of such new street was a field subject to a restrictive covenant which would prevent it being used for a street. It was held that the authority were entitled to disapprove the plans on the ground that the existence of the covenant made it impossible to construct the street of the width shown on the plans (R. v. Tynemouth Corporation, [1911] 2 K. B. 361; 75 J. P. 420); see also cases in note (d) to s. 158, post, p. 354.

Buildings specially exempted by model byelaws.

The Model Byelaws (Urban Code) of the M. of H., which have been carefully edited by Messrs. Mackenzie and Handford, provide for the exemption of the following buildings from their operation:

(a) Buildings in the possession of or used or intended to be used for the purposes of the Crown.
(b) Lunatic asylums.
(c) Prisons.
(d) Buildings (not being dwelling-houses) belonging to statutory bodies authorised to navigate on or use any river, canal, dock, harbour, or basin;
(e) Buildings (not being dwelling-houses) in connection with mines;

Note to Section 157

(f) Buildings approved by the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries for the improvement of land;
(g) Buildings appoved by a Secretary of State;
(h) Plant-houses, greenhouses, or conservatories;
(i) Orchard-houses, summer-houses, poultry-houses, boat-houses, coal-sheds, garden-tool houses, potting-sheds, cycle-sheds, or aviaries, under certain conditions;
(j) Buildings which shall not exceed in height 30 feet, and in extent 125,000 feet, not public buildings, and not constructed for human habitation, or employment in manufacture, trade, or business, and which are distant at least 8 feet from the nearest street, and at least 30 feet from the nearest building, and from the boundary of any adjoining premises;
(k) Similar buildings exceeding in height 30 feet, distant at least 20 feet from nearest street and 50 feet from nearest building.
(l) Similar buildings exceeding the dimensions mentioned in the exception (j) supra, which are 30 feet from the nearest street, and at least 60 feet from the nearest building, and from the boundary of any adjoining premises;
(m) Temporary hospitals for infectious cases.
(n) Tuberculosis hospitals.

The "intermediate" and "rural" exemption clauses differ from the above. The latter contains an exemption in favour of any building which shall not be a public building or a building of the warehouse class, and shall not be constructed or adapted to be used either wholly or partly for human habitation, or as a place of habitual employment for any person in any manufacture, trade, or business, and which if intended for use as a pigstye or a cowhouse shall be detached from any dwelling-house.

Further clauses may be added to allow the use of galvanized, corrugated, or sheet iron buildings, subject to precautions against their use for human habitation and for the prevention of fire.

See also the other exemptions and the decisions noted on p. 329, ante.

"New street."

(b) It has already been noticed that an ancient highway may become a new street within the meaning of this and other sections of the Act if houses are built along its sides so as to make it a street in the ordinary acceptation of the term (Pound v. Plumstead District Board of Works; Dryden v. Putney (Overseers of); Robinson v. Barton Eccles L. B., ante, p. 17; Att.-Gen. v. Rufford, post, p. 334. See also Hampstead Vestry v. Cotton (1885), 16 Q. B. D. 475; 50 J. P. 453; (1886), 12 App. Cas. 1; 51 J. P. 340; Holden v. St. Mary, Islington (Vestry of) (1886), 2 T. L. R. 740). In Robinson v. Barton Eccles L. B., supra, JESSEL, M.R., said (21 Ch. D., at p. 632): "There are two ways in which a street may come into existence where there was no street before. A person may take a grass field, or a country lane (for, in my opinion, it makes no difference whether or not there was a public highway and lane, or a foot-path existing before, which is thrown into the street, and is utilised, or whether there was nothing but a mere plot of grass land out of which a new roadway is made), he may take it and build continuous lines of houses so as to form what is commonly known as a street. When I say continuous lines, I do not mean that there are to be no breaks or intervals, but there must be a certain degree of continuity. A new street may arise in another way, and that is, where it is not from the first laid out as a street in a formal manner, but may be considered to grow up, so to say, of itself. This often happens where there is an existing highway, and people build houses along the sides of that highway, so that without any intention of laying out a street, the street grows. When does it become a street? This question cannot be answered until you know the locality. It must be a question in each particular case when the road becomes a street. At some time or other it becomes a street, and as soon as it does so it is a new street and not the less a new street because some of the houses were built before it was a street." In the same case, when before the House of Lords, Lord SELBORNE, L.C., referring to the definition of "street" in s. 4, ante, p. 15, said that "the definition was not meant to prevent the word receiving its ordinary, popular, and natural sense whenever that would be properly applicable; but to enable the word as used in the Act, when there was nothing in the context or the subject-matter to the contrary, to be applied to some things to which it would not ordinarily be applicable." And he continued: "I look upon this portion of the interpretation clause as meaning neither more nor less than this, that the provisions contained in the Act as to streets, whether new streets or old streets, shall, unless there be something in the subject-matter and the context to the contrary, be read as applicable to these different things. It is perfectly consistent with that that they should be read as applicable, and should be applied to those things to which they in their natural sense apply, and which do not require any interpretation clause to bring them in; and in the natural and popular sense of the word street, or the words new street, I should certainly understand a roadway with buildings on each side (it is not necessary to say how far they must or may be continuous or discontinuous), and by new street a place which before had not that character, but which by the construction of buildings on both sides, or possibly on one side, has acquired it" (8 App. Cas. 798, at p. 801; 48 J. P. 276). And see also St. Giles, Camberwell (Vestry of) v. Crystal Palace Co., [1892] 2 Q. B. 33; 57 J. P. 5; approved in Davis v. Greenwich District Board of Works, [1895] 2 Q. B. 219; 59 J. P. 517; Allen v. Fulham Vestry, [1899] 1 Q. B. 681; 63 J. P. 212; Clerkenwell Vestry v. Edmondson, [1902] 1 K. B. 336; 66 J. P. 324.

In Att.-Gen. v. Gibb, [1909] 2 Ch. 265; 73 J. P. 343, PARKER, J., held that the words "new street" in s. 157 were not confined to new streets in the popular sense of roadways with houses on either side, but may include lanes, alleys and passages, not intended to have houses on either side. In that case G. employed a builder to erect cottages, and the builder deposited plans showing that he intended to erect them sixty-seven yards from the road with an approach consisting of a footpath five or six feet wide. The surveyor pointed out to the builder that such an approach would not satisfy the "new street" byelaws; and the builder, without consulting G., said that a roadway of the required width would be made at the termination of a tenancy over other land belonging to G., and sent in an amended plan showing such road. The surveyor and chairman gave provisional consent to the plans and allowed the work to be commenced, and subsequently the plans were approved subject to a condition that the road should be made up, and the builder wrote saying that the road would be made in due course, but for the present paths would be made. In the result a pathway was formed 202 feet long, and no road was made within a reasonable time. In an action against G. and the builder for (1) a declaration that they had laid out a "new street" in contravention of the byelaws by reason of the same not being thirty-six feet wide and not having been constructed for use as a carriage road, (2) a mandatory injunction or order requiring them to widen the said new street, it was held that the footpath was a new street, that the builder was G.'s agent, and that an injunction should be granted against G.; as against the builder the claim was dismissed.

By the Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1903, s. 11, a warrant is not to be granted for the erection of any buildings abutting on a "new street" until a warrant has been granted for the formation of such street. An owner of land abutting on an unformed road over which the public had a right of passage for all kinds of traffic proposed to build thereon. An opinion was expressed that the erection of houses along the road would not cause it to become a "new street" (Glasgow and S. W. Rail. Co. v. Hutchinson, [1908] S. C. 587).

Dedication not necessary.

It is not necessary that the new street should be dedicated to the public (St. Mary, Islington (Vestry of) v. Barrett, ante, p. 289). See also Bowles v. St. Mary, Islington, ante, p. 18. In general, whether ground forms part of a street, or is private property, is a question of fact (Bell v. Great Crosby U. D. C. (1913), 77 J. P. 37; 108 L. T. 455).

What amounts to "laying out" a new street.

Decisions under Metropolitan Acts.

By the Metropolis Management Act, 1862, s. 98, no existing road, etc. might be "formed or laid out for building as a street" for carriage traffic until widened to forty feet. With reference to this provision, BLACKBURN, J., said: "Whether an intended building is sufficient to make a street is a question of more or less; one house would not be sufficient. Whether the intended houses are sufficiently numerous and continuous is a question of degree, and must be a question of fact for the magistrate. When may the owner be said to have begun to lay out the road for that purpose? I do not think that if a person merely puts up a hoarding or leaves the way without any fence, or leaves the old fence untouched while he is building, he can be said to have laid out the road; but as soon as he begins to put up fences, and marks out the boundary, which he intends to be the permanent boundary between his building and the road, then he may be said to have begun to lay out the road for the forming of the street; and this also is a question of fact for the magistrate" (see Taylor v. Metropolitan Board of Works (1867), L. R. 2 Q. B. 213; 31 J. P. 581). In that case plots of land had in 1864 been sold for building purposes. These plots abutted on a lane which was an ancient carriageway, and had old buildings at intervals on both sides. The lane varied in width from forty-one to twenty-eight feet; opposite the plots it was twenty-eight feet only, and on the other side of the road was a permanent enclosure belonging to a church, and other old buildings. In July, 1865, A. bought the plots, houses having been erected on two of them, the front walls of the houses being twenty-seven feet from the old wooden fence of the lane. On September 26th he began to remove the fence, which had been left untouched, and to substitute a permanent wall and railing. The magistrate found that he thereby commenced to form and lay out the road for building as a street. It was held that he was properly convicted under s. 89 of the Act of 1862, but that the section would have been satisfied had A. set back his fence to a distance of twenty feet from the crown of the road, although the result would have been to leave the road less than forty feet wide. This case may be compared with one decided in the following year under the same section. The respondent was the owner of land upon which he had in 1866 erected some houses. The gardens at their backs abutted upon an ancient lane, and some of the owners of land adjoining this lane had in 1867 begun to form it into a street for carriage traffic within the meaning of the section. The respondent himself had done no act towards forming or laying out the lane as a street for the purposes of carriage traffic, except that in 1866 he removed an old bank and thorn fence and substituted an oak fence three feet within his own land, nor had he any intention of doing any such act, or of putting up any building fronting towards the lane:—Held, that he had not infringed the section, and was not bound to set back his oak fence so as to leave a space of twenty feet between it and the centre of the lane (Metropolitan Board of Works v. Clever (1868), L. R. 3 C. P. 531). It had previously been held that the section did not apply when new buildings abutted in the rear upon an old lane of less width than forty feet (Metropolitan Board of Works v. Cox (1865), 19 C. B. (N.S.) 445).

The widening of an old approach to a block of buildings newly erected for workmen's dwellings, and let out in separate tenements, was held not to constitute "the formation or laying out of a new street" within the meaning of the Metropolis Management Act, 1882, s. 8, being intended only for the occupiers' use (Metropolitan Board of Works v. Nathan (1885), 50 J. P. 502; 54 L. T. 423). For later decisions under London Acts, see p. 335, post.

Decisions under byelaws.

W. had ground abutting on one side of a lane, 250 feet long and six feet wide, adjoining a town. There were no houses in the lane. W. built six cottages standing back fifteen feet from the lane. The lane was within an urban district, the byelaws of which required new streets (not being carriageways) to be eighteen feet wide. W. was convicted of having "laid out a new street" contrary to the byelaws. It was held that the conviction was wrong, the mere fact of six cottages being built in the lane not making it a new street (Williams v. Powning (1883), 47 J. P. 486; 48 L. T. 672).

The subsequent erection of piers and gates in a street which had been laid out eight years previously was held not to be the construction of a "new street" (Tarrant v. Woking U. D. C., post, p. 337).

In a case where five houses had been built fronting a new road or way seven feet wide, the defendant acquired the land opposite the houses and built along the edge of the land a wall 170 yards long. He was held rightly convicted of "laying out a street" of less width than that prescribed by the byelaws (Roberts v. Richards (1890), 54 J. P. 693). Lord ESHER, M.R., said: "I think what the defendant did was to construct a new street under the circumstances . . . He seems to think that the person who takes the first step towards a new street should so lay it out that it should be for the benefit of others who afterwards join in completing the street. Why should the previous owners be made to contribute to the requirements of the new street if what they did at the time was nothing unlawful?" With reference to what amounts to the laying out of a new street, the same learned judge said, in Robinson v. Barton Eccles L. B. (1882), 21 Ch. D., at p. 636: "It is often a difficult thing to say when a street begins to be a new street—that is, when it begins to alter its character. New streets may be made under different circumstances. The whole land on both sides may belong to one owner. Then suppose he conceives a design of making a new street, and has a plan drawn. To my mind, that does not begin the laying out of the street within the meaning of the Act of Parliament. The Act of Parliament is not concerned with what people do upon paper, but with what they do in point of fact and upon the land. When would such an owner begin to lay out and form a street? To my mind, he would do so when he built his first house, having the intention to go on to make a street. He would then have begun to lay out and form a street, and it would from that moment begin to be a street. But streets may be formed in another way. Supposing that along the line of that which would eventually be considered a street there are a great many owners. No one of them could make a plan for the whole, but it may be clear that all of them are intending to build with regard to and so as to utilise an existing roadway. How, then, will those people lay out and form a street? Each of them, by what he does on his own land, would be taking part in laying out and forming a street. Which of them begins? I should say the one who first begins to build begins to form a street, and if you find that there are several proprietors along a line, each of whom acts so that the tribunal comes to the conclusion that all of them intend to build in the same direction, then the tribunal would have the right to say that there is a common intention amongst all these prople to build in a particular course which will produce a street, and, therefore, the first of them who, in virtue of that common idea, begins to build, is beginning to form and lay out a street, and he and all others are subject to the jurisdiction of the board. There is another case to which my lord has alluded, where there are several proprietors along a long line, but no tribunal could say that there ever was at the same time an intention amongst them all to build. One man at the end of the street may have begun to build, but the others have not built nor laid out their land as building land, nor advertised it as building land, nor done anything to show an intention to build. Then the street really forms itself, as it were, by gradual accretion without any common intent. In such a case you have to wait until you can see by the course of building that there is a common intent to build. The moment you see that, you come to the conclusion that a street has begun to be formed."

Byelaws provided that every person who should lay out a new street exceeding 100 feet in length, should lay out such street as a carriage-road, with footways, and of a width of not less than thirty-six feet. The appellant was lessee of a plot of land with a right of way over an adjoining road fifteen feet wide for a distance of more than 100 feet. He commenced to build two houses on the plot, but did not widen the road over which he had a right of way. He was summoned for "laying out a new street" of width of less than thirty-six feet, contrary to the byelaws, and convicted; but it was held on appeal that what he had done in commencing to erect the houses on the plot adjoining the road did not amount to laying out a new street, and the conviction was quashed (Gozzett v. Maldon Urban Sanitary Authority, [1894] 1 Q. B. 327; 58 J. P 229). In another case, under similar byelaws, an authority sought to restrain the defendant from "laying out a new street" contrary to the byelaws under the following circumstances. There was a narrow passage or lane, about eight feet wide and 175 feet long, ending in a cul-de-sac. On its eastern side was a row of cottages, to the front entrances of which it gave access, and on its western side was a strip of land formerly used as gardens for the cottages on the eastern side. The defendant bought this strip of land, and built on it three houses fronting into a public thoroughfare out of which the passage or lane in question led, and the side of the corner house of the three abutted on the passage or lane. It was held that the question was entirely one of fact, and that there was no evidence that the defendant had made or was intending to make a new street, and an injunction was refused (St. George's L. B. (Bristol) v. Ballard, [1895] 1 Q. B. 702; 59 J. P. 131).

By s. 63 of the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, it is not permissible to lay out or make any new street unless it is of a prescribed width. A country lane 580 yards long, near a town, had hedges on both sides. The defendants owned buildings extending along one side of the lane for 160 yards, and they proposed to erect on the other side directly opposite other buildings with a frontage of 110 yards to the lane:—Held, that to do so would convert the lane into a new street, and that the requirements of s. 63 as to width must be observed (Att.-Gen v. Rufford, [1899] 1 Ch. 537; 63 J. P. 232).

B. was the owner of a piece of land on one side of a road which was 160 yards long and of less width than that required by the byelaws for a new street. On the roadside of B.'s land was a wooden fence. This fence B. removed, and on its site built a wall and subsequently proposed to build a house inside the wall. The opposite side of the road was defined by a wall enclosing a dwelling-house. The justices were of opinion that B. had defined the line of road and had converted the road into a new street, and convicted him of "laying out a new street" not in accordance with the byelaws. It was held that there was no evidence of laying out a new street and the conviction was quashed (Bushell v. Creer (1900), 64 J. P. 600).

Effect of more recent decisions; physical interference with soil of street necessary.

The more recent decisions appear to show that the "laying out" of a street referred to in the byelaws means something in the nature of a "physical" laying out—some work being actually done to the surface of the new street,—and that a mere "metaphorical" laying out—closing in a lane by erecting buildings alongside it—is not sufficient. The owners of a triangular plot of land, two sides of which abutted upon public highways, erected thereon certain houses without removing the fences, in which they made openings here and there so as to provide access from the roads to the houses. They did not attempt to alter or interfere with the roadways. The local authority claimed an injunction to restrain them from laying out or constructing the roads as new streets in breach of byelaws as to width, etc. The Court of Appeal held that the judge was justified in drawing the inference that the owners were not laying out or constructing a new street within the meaning of the byelaws (Devonport Corporation v. Tozer, [1903] 1 Ch. 759; 67 J. P. 269). The same conclusion was arrived at by a Divisional Court upon the following facts: An owner of a strip of land fronting an occupation road fifteen feet wide (the soil of which did not belong to him) cut up the land into plots, but reserved a strip six feet wide along the whole of the frontage to the lane. He sold four of the plots; and after the erection of houses thereon, took away the hedge between the reserved strip and the road opposite the plots sold, throwing the portions of the reserved strip opposite the plots sold into the lane (Fellowes v. Sedgeley U. D. C. (1906), 70 J. P. 412; 4 L. G. R. 970). See also Greenwood v. Queensbury U. D. C. (1906), 3 Architects' L. R. 145, and cf. Mason v. Rodger, [1913] S. C. 52.

The defendant, a builder, bought some land abutting on H. Road. It was then a field, surrounded by a hedge. The defendant built a row of houses on the side abutting on H. Road, and put gates in the hedge as each house was completed, with cement paths leading from the gates to the doors. The strip of land between the houses and the road was not made part of the road, nor did the defendant propose to make it so. It was held that he was not "laying out" H. Road as a new street (Att.-Gen. v. Dorin, [1912] 1 Ch. 369; 76 J. P. 181).

Decisions under London Building Act.

Reference may also be made to the following decisions under the London Building Act, 1894, ss. 7, 8, 10, as to "commencing to lay out or form" and "adapting for use" streets: London C. C. v. Dixon, [1899] 1 Q. B. 496; 63 J. P. 390; Armstrong v. London C. C., [1900] 1 Q. B. 416; 64 J. P. 197; London C. C. v. Davis (1904), 68 J. P. 520; 91 L. T. 555; *London C. "New street" a question of fact.

It is to be observed that in Williams v. Powning, ante, p. 333, the court considered the evidence and decided that there was no evidence to justify the finding of the justices that the street was a new street. But, if there is any evidence, the court will not inquire into its sufficiency, for the question is one of fact for the justices. See R. v. Shiel (1884), 50 L. T. 590. See also Gozzett v. Maldon Urban Sanitary Authority and St. George's L. B. (Bristol) v. Ballard, ante, p. 334, and the observations on this subject in the notes on s. 4, ante, p. 17.

Person "who lays out" a new street.

An owner of land gave notice to the authority of his intention to lay out certain new streets, including a certain back street, and deposited plans of such streets. Notice was also given by a builder of his intention to dig and lay out the foundations of four cottages in the back street, and a plan of such street was deposited by him. In the plans deposited by the owner and builder, the back street, in which it was intended to build the cottages, was shown to be only twelve feet wide, whereas the minimum width required by the byelaws was eighteen feet. The authority gave to both the owner and the builder notice of their disapproval of such plans, and on the builder proceeding to build the cottages according to the disapproved plans, they summoned him for laying out a new street of insufficient width, contrary to the byelaws. It was held that such summons was rightly dismissed, as the owner, and not the builder, was the person who had laid out the street (Sunderland (Mayor of) v.

Byelaws as to "width and construction" of streets.

An authority made the following byelaw: "Every person who constructs a new street shall cause the kerb of each footpath in such street to be put in at such level as may be fixed or approved by the urban sanitary authority. No person shall commence the erection of a new building in a new street unless and until the kerb of each footpath therein shall have been put in pursuant to the preceding requirement. Every person offending against this byelaw shall be liable for each offence to a penalty of forty shillings." It was held that this byelaw was void as being unreasonable (Rudland v. Sunderland Corporation (1884), 49 J. P. 359; 52 L. T. 617). "If it applied only to the particular piece of the street opposite to that on which a man might be going to build, there might be some ground for arguing that it was reasonable; but it is not so, for if it means anything it means that each owner must wait until the whole kerb is put in": per GROVE, J. "I doubt whether the authority has power to make these provisions with respect to matters which have been specifically provided for by s. 150, since they amount to imposing on landowners an absolute duty to do certain things under pain of incurring a penalty, while that section merely provides that if they decline to do them there shall be no penalty, but the authority shall themselves do them and recover the expenses": per HAWKINS, J. In connection with the latter dictum, reference may be made to Leyton U. D. C. v. Chew, [1907] 2 K. B. 283; 71 J. P. 355. There, the authority had made a byelaw that in the case of certain classes of streets there should be constructed on each side of the street a proper channel of a given size "either of granite cubes laid on a bed of cement concrete at least six inches in thickness, or otherwise in a suitable manner and with suitable materials." It was held that such byelaw was not bad for being inconsistent with s. 150 of the P. H. A., 1875, and ss. 6 and 7 of the Private Street Works Act, 1892.

By the Sunderland Improvement Act, 1885, by s. 37, it shall not be lawful for any person, except with the consent of the corporation, to erect or build, or begin to erect or build, any new building abutting upon any new street or part of a new street, unless the corporation shall have previously approved of the level and available width of such new street or part of a new street, nor until the carriageway and footway of such new street, or part of a new street, shall have been formed to such a level and of such a width, and constructed and sewered to the satisfaction of the corporation, in accordance with s. 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875. The appellants, who were builders, gave notice to the corporation of their intention to lay out a certain new street, and the plans for its construction were approved. They subsequently gave notice that they intended to erect four new houses in that street, and the plans for these were also approved. The appellants began to erect these houses abutting upon a part of the new street which had been sewered, paved, flagged, and channelled to the satisfaction of the corporation. The rest of the new street had not been constructed and made good to the satisfaction of the corporation within s. 37 of the local Act. The appellants were summoned for infringing that section, and were fined:—Held, that the conviction was right, for, as the appellants had given notice to lay out the whole of a new street, the corporation, under the local Act, were entitled to withhold their consent to the erection of any house or building abutting on it until the whole was constructed and sewered to their satisfaction (Woodhill v. Sunderland (Mayor, etc. of) (1887), 52 J. P. 5; 57 L. T. 303).

In Baker v. Portsmouth Corporation (1878), 3 Ex. D. 157; 42 J. P. 278, BRAMWELL, L.J., said that "the words of sub-s. (1) include the construction of the buildings, and the buildings themselves and front gardens, or whatever else, is at the side of the roadway." See also Robinson v. Barton Eccles L. B., p. 331, ante, per Lord SELBORNE, L.C. In the Portsmouth Case a byelaw was held to be valid which provided that no building should be erected by the side of any new street, or to which any new street would form the only carriage approach, until such street had been constructed to the approval of the authority; but see Rudland v. Sunderland Corporation, supra, and Leyton U. D. C. v. Chew, supra, per PHILLIMORE, J. The

Note to Section 157.

Barton Eccles Case apparently decides that a byelaw cannot be made under this subsection for the purpose of regulating the line of buildings, for the word street as here used means the public way, and not the distance from the external wall of a house (as distinct from its curtilage) on one side of the street to the external wall of the opposite house (if there is one) on the other side. The byelaw in that case provided that every new street should be laid out and formed of such width and at such level as the authority should in each case determine. The House of Lords held, reversing the decision of the Court of Appeal, that the word "width" in the section and in the byelaw meant width of roadway, and not width between houses on each side of the street; and that the authority were not entitled under the byelaw to disapprove of and pull down houses in the course of erection in a new street on the ground that the building line was too near the roadway.

The Ministry of Health do not consider that an urban authority has power to prescribe a building line in new estates by means of a byelaw under s. 157. See also the case of Robinson v. Barton Eccles L. B., supra.

Byelaws provided: ". . . (4) Every person who shall lay out a new street shall so lay out such street that the width thereof shall be forty feet at least . . . (6) Every person who shall construct a new street shall provide at one end, at least, of such street an entrance of a width equal to the width of such street, and open from the ground upwards":—Held, that the sixth byelaw was intra vires and reasonable, and that it prevented a landowner from constructing a new street upon his land until he had provided an entrance to the new street of the specified width, even though the entrance could only be made upon the land of another person over whom he had no control:—Held, also, that the "construction" of a new street included the building of the houses abutting on it, and, consequently, that the landowner could not, until an adequate entrance had been provided, erect houses abutting on the proposed new street (Hendon L. B. v. Pounce (1889), 42 Ch. D. 602).

In Bromley L. B. v. Lloyd (1892), 56 J. P. 278; 66 L. T. 462, a person desired to construct a new street upon his own land. The proposed entrance to it was a public lane of a width varying from twelve to twenty feet upon byelaws similar to those in the last case. Kekewich, J., held that the person proposing to construct the new street was under an obligation, before constructing it, to provide an entrance of the width prescribed by the byelaws, and, further, that the fact that the entrance proposed was a public road did not alter such obligation if that road was of less than the prescribed width, and he, therefore, granted an interim injunction. But when the case was tried before Wills, J., he gave judgment for the defendant on the ground that the entrance required by the byelaw meant merely a practicable way into the street (1893), 9 T. L. R. 306).

Where byelaws required that the entrance to any new street should be thirty-six feet wide at the least, the local authority were held justified in refusing to pass plans for the construction of a new street showing an entrance of less than thirty-six feet wide, consisting of an existing street outside their district (Barton Regis R. D. C. v. Stevens (1896), 61 J. P. 598; 12 T. L. R. 347).

When a new street has once been constructed of the width required by the ordinary byelaws, it is not an offence thereunder to subsequently narrow it, e.g., by the erection of gate piers therein; and, semble, a byelaw prohibiting any alteration of the original width would be ultra vires (Tarrant v. Woking U. D. C., [1914] 3 K. B. 796; 79 J. P. 22).

The byelaws of a local board required that every person laying out a new street should, if it were a principal street, lay it out at least thirty-six feet wide. In 1875 the board approved the plan of an estate showing a street as intended to be laid out thirty-six feet wide. In 1887 the relator built three houses in the street according to plans approved by the board; and in 1895 he sought an injunction to restrain the defendant Bell from building so as to cause the street to be of less width than thirty-six feet. North, J., refused an injunction because there was nothing to show that this was a "principal" street within the meaning of the byelaws (Att.-Gen. v Pudsey L. B. and Bell (1895), 59 J. P. 329; 39 Sol. J. 315).

In the town of Goole certain ways existed communicating with the backs of houses, and used by the authority (who did the scavenging of the town) for the purpose of obtaining access to privies and ashpits in order to remove the contents thereof. Plans were submitted for approval showing ways, such as above described, of the width of six feet; but the authority, who had made a byelaw prescribing ten feet as the minimum width of "new streets," refused to approve such plans. It was held, discharging a rule for a mandamus to compel approval, that the ways in question were "passages" within the meaning of s. 4, and, therefore, "streets" within the meaning of that section, and that, therefore, the authority had power by s. 157 (1) to make byelaws with respect to their width and construction, and the byelaw was valid (R. v. Goole L. B., [1891] 2 Q. B. 212; 55 J. P. 535).

The Manchester Improvement Act, 1845, s. 29, provided that no street should be made of less width than twenty-four feet; and s. 20 provided that it should not be lawful to build within the borough any houses with their fronts facing each other, which should be separated from each other by a space of less than twenty-four feet wide. It was held that these provisions prohibited the erection in a street of two houses at the same time, with their fronts facing each other, within the prescribed distance, but did not affect the erection of buildings not in a street (R. v. Sidebotham (1859), 28 L. J. M. C. 189; 23 J. P. 342).

The F. Improvement Act incorporated the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847. By s. 69 of the former Act, it was provided that no new street to be thereafter laid out, should be of less width than forty feet, but by the general Act, which came into operation in cases which were not provided for by any special Act, the extreme width of new streets intended for the use of carriages was fixed at thirty feet. A street had some years previously to 1873 been laid out with a roadway of twenty-five feet, but the corporation had given notice that they should enforce the clause providing for a width of forty feet. They subsequently, upon the application of the defendant, waived that notice and approved a carriageway of twenty-five feet. It was held that s. 69 was imperative, and that the corporation could not permit a deviation from the Act. It was also held, that though the road had been laid out previously, the corporation were not bound to interfere until the building operations were actually commenced and the width of the road definitely fixed (Att.-Gen. v. Folkestone (Corporation of), W. N. (1873), p. 127).

In 1830, A. projected the formation of a seaside town to be built on his land, and a plan was prepared showing the sites of various proposed roads, streets, and squares. In 1833 a private Act was passed, whereby the lands described on the plan were made a distinct parish for the purposes of the Act, and commissioners were appointed in whom were vested all roads, streets, and ways, then made and used by the public, or thereafter to be made and adopted by the commissioners under the Act. Before this Act passed, A. had sold to B. several of the plots described on the plan. Before and after the Act numerous houses had been built, and some of the streets shown on the plan had been wholly or partially formed and adopted by the commissioners; but no houses had been erected on the land sold to B., which was still used as agricultural land. In 1868 the commissioners gave to B.'s devisees notice of their intention to take possession of the sites of the proposed streets, etc. on the land sold to B., and in 1871 they proceeded to take such possession. It was held that they had no right to do so, there being no roads actually made for them to adopt, and the sites as such not vesting in them (Mackett v. Herne Bay Commissioners (1877), 37 L. T. 812).

S., having an old farmhouse with a shop front abutting on a lane, and other property near, gave notice to the authority of his intention to lay out a street, and submitted a plan, which was approved, showing the alteration and proposed width of the new street, which involved the setting back of the shop and garden. He did nothing to carry out the plan, and two months later, put in a new shop front and rebuilt the garden wall on the old site. It was held that S. had done nothing contrary to the byelaw relating to the width of new streets, for he was entitled to abandon his plan notwithstanding the approval thereof (Sunderland (Mayor, etc. of) v. Skinner (1889), 53 J. P. 660).

A line of railway situate in a deep cutting was crossed by a bridge carrying a road. A line of houses terminated at the eastern end of the bridge; across the bridge there was but one cottage, and the roadway ceased to be a public thoroughfare, being closed by a private gate. It was held that the road ceased to be a new street within the meaning of the Metropolis Management Act, 1862, at the eastern extremity of the bridge (L. B. & S. C. Rail. Co. v. St. Giles, Camberwell (Vestry of) (1879), 4 Ex. D. 239).

Note to Section 157.

A street which leads out of and afterwards back into a public carriageway "communicates at both ends with a public carriageway" (London C. C. v. Edmundson (1892), 56 J. P. 343; 66 L. T. 200). Whether a street affords "direct communication between" two streets within s. 9 (4) of the London Building Act, 1894, is a question of fact (Woodham v. London C. C., [1898] 1 Q. B. 863; 62 J. P. 342).

A street sixty feet wide, out of the further end of which leads a lane twenty feet wide, cannot be said to "terminate in a cul-de-sac" (Stevenson v. Lee, [1910] S. C. 14).

Where s. 17 of the P. H. A., 1907, post, has been applied to any district the authority may vary the position or direction and fix the beginning and end of new streets.

S. was convicted for non-compliance with a notice specifying certain irregularities in respect of the "laying out or construction" of a new street. The conviction was quashed on the ground that it was either void for uncertainty or bad as being for two offences (R. v. Slater (1903), 67 J. P. 299).

Byelaws as to sewerage.

(c) The model byelaws contain no clauses requiring the provision of sewers for the drainage of houses in new streets. "The reason for this is that the conditions which such byelaws must satisfy are, to so great an extent, dependent upon the varying circumstances of different localities" (L. G. B. Circular). The Board did not consider the matter to be one in regard to which byelaws could usefully be made. "It may be doubted," they said, "whether any powers which, under such byelaws, may be lawfully assumed by sanitary authorities, will, as regards extent and efficacy, compare with the powers which they derive from the express provisions of the Public Health Act." Of course under s. 150 of this Act, or under the Private Street Works Act where that Act has been adopted, an urban council can require owners to defray the cost of sewers before a street is taken over as a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large. The position of a rural council in this matter will be seen from the notes to s. 150, ante, p. 287.

But although the Central Department does not encourage the making of byelaws which require persons laying out new streets to provide soil sewers, they do not apparently object to a byelaw which requires a person voluntarily providing such a sewer to construct the same in a satisfactory manner. The latest model form requires a person constructing a new street to provide for the carrying off of surface water.

In the absence of any provisions in byelaws on the subject of sewerage, the authority cannot refuse to approve plans of new streets not showing any system of sewerage, but being in all respects in accordance with the byelaws (R. v. Tynemouth R. D. C., [1896] 2 Q. B. 451; 60 J. P. 804).

A council were empowered to require the owner of land laid out for building on which any watercourse or ditch was situate, or which abutted on any watercourse or ditch, to execute such works as were in their opinion necessary to wholly or partially fill up or cover over such watercourse or ditch before proceeding to build. R. agreed to purchase some land abutting on a watercourse, and submitted plans for a factory which were approved subject to his culverting the watercourse. R. agreed to sell to O. a strip of land abutting on the watercourse, and conveyed it to O. on the same day as the land was conveyed to himself. The council, after the date of the conveyance, gave R. and O. notice to culvert the watercourse, but both ignored the notice and R. erected the factory. The council claimed against both a declaration that they were not entitled to commence, proceed with or maintain the factory without doing the works required by the council, and an injunction:—Held, that R.'s land did not abut on the watercourse, and that O., whose land did abut on it, did not intend to build, and that the action failed (Att.-Gen. v. Rowley Bros. (1911), 75 J. P. 81; 9 L. G. R. 121).

Chimneys and flues, etc.

(d) See the requirements of the Chimney Sweepers and Chimneys Regulation Act, 1840, as to chimneys. By s. 6 of that Act, "all withs and partitions between any chimney or flue . . . shall be of brick or stone, and at least equal to half a brick in thickness," upon pain of forfeiting a sum of money. A subsequent local statute enacted that in the borough of H. "the chimney and flues of every new building shall be constructed in such mode and of such materials and dimensions as shall from time to time be determined or approved by the corporation," and then, if no direction should be given by the corporation as to constructing chimneys, prescribed certain directions different from those in s. 6 of the Act of 1840. The appellant, within the borough of H., built a chimney which was not in accordance with the provisions of s. 6, and was convicted thereunder:—Held, that the subsequent local statute had not repealed s. 6, within the borough, and that the conviction was right (Hill v. Hall (1876), 1 Ex. D. 411; 41 J. P. 183). As to flues against party structures in London, see Aërated Bread Co. v. Shepherd (1897), 13 T. L. R. 311. See now as to chimneys, s. 24 of the P. H. A., 1907, post.

A byelaw provided: "Every person who shall erect a new building shall cause the back of every chimney opening in a party wall to be at least nine inches thick, and he shall cause such thickness to be continued at the back of the flue; such person shall cause the back of every other chimney opening to be at least four and a-half inches thick if such opening be in an external wall and nine inches thick if such opening be elsewhere than in an external wall, and he shall cause such thickness to be continued at the back of the flue. Provided that where flues are constructed back-to-back the thickness at the back of such flues may be not less than four and a-half inches." It was held that the proviso did not apply to flues in a party wall dividing adjoining houses (Miller v. Field (1914), 78 J. P. 5).

The sub-section does not refer to rooms nor to the interior of buildings beyond what may be necessary in connection with the subjects mentioned. See now as to the height of buildings, s. 24 of the P. H. A., 1907, post.

(e) As to what may be a "new" building, see s. 159, post, p. 361, and the P. H. A., 1907, ss. 23, 33, post, and notes thereto. In R. v. Foot's Cray U. D. C., [1916] 1 K. B. 246; 79 J. P. 521, the appellants who were the owners of an old building pulled down part of it including certain outer walls but left the remaining part of the premises standing, which part had been erected before byelaws came into existence. As required by the defendants' byelaws the appellant gave notice of their intention to erect a new part on the site of the part pulled down, and they submitted plans and sections of such new part to the defendants but gave no notice, plans and sections of the whole building, that is, the part left standing and the new part. It was held (overruling Leonard v. Hoare & Co., [1914] 2 K. B. 798; 78 J. P. 287) that under s. 23 of the P. H. A. (Amendment) Act, 1907, the whole building, that is, the old part and the new part, was not to be deemed a new building, and therefore the appellants were not bound to send notices as to, and plans and sections of the whole building to the local authority. And see also Repton School Governors v. Repton R. D. C., [1918] 2 K. B. 133; 82 J. P. 257, cited at p. 346, post.

Observe that in the sub-section the word "site" is not used. The use of that term in the 41 & 42 Vict. c. 32, s. 16, gave rise to the difficulty which came before the court in Blashill v. Chambers (1884), 14 Q. B. D. 479; 49 J. P. 388, where it was held upon the definition clause that the term did not include the subsoil below the foundation level. It is clear that the word "site," if used in any byelaw made under this Act, would not have the same limited meaning as in the Act above referred to.

As to buildings exempt from the operation of the byelaws, see pp. 329, 330, ante.

"Public building."

An ambulance station not structurally connected with any building, and from which the public were rigorously excluded, was held not to be a public building within the meaning of the Metropolitan Building Act, 1855, s. 3. This decision may be useful in construing byelaws referring to or excepting from their operation public buildings (Josolyne v. Meeson (1885), 49 J. P. 805; 53 L. T. 319. See also Moses v. Marsland, [1901] 1 K. B. 660; 65 J. P. 183).

"Domestic building."

As to the meaning of the term domestic building, see Collins v. Greenwood, on p. 345, post.

What is a "building."

An advertising company, the occupiers of a plot of land, which was already enclosed by wooden hoardings, raised these hoardings to a height of from thirteen to nineteen feet, putting inside stout uprights with stays, and connecting opposite hoardings by cross-pieces which acted as ties. The land within was used for preparing wood for hoardings to be used elsewhere. It was held on appeal from a conviction under a byelaw that the structure was not a new building; that the byelaws pointed to a building with a roof capable of affording protection or shelter, and that the word "building" in the byelaw meant some structure containing some feature contemplated by and dealt with in the byelaws (Slaughter v. Sunderland (Mayor, etc. of) (1891), 60 L. J. M. C. 91; 55 J. P. 519).

B. was summoned for building over an open space in his brewery without giving notice, and without approval, contrary to a byelaw. The so-called "building" was a boiler, substituted for a smaller one, partly sunk in the ground with a casing of nine-inch brickwork, four feet high, leaving the top of the boiler uncovered. It was held that this was not a new building within the meaning of the statute and byelaw (Gery v. Black Lion Brewery Co. (1891), 55 J. P. 711). As to roofing over a space between walls or buildings, see now the P. H. A., 1907, s. 23, post.

A conservatory, fifteen feet long and nine feet deep, made of wood and glass, and built against the side of a house, was held not to be a "building" within the usual byelaw relating to the construction of walls of new buildings (Hibbert v. Acton L. B. (1889), 5 T. L. R. 274). But, in Brown v. Leicester Corporation (1892), 62 L. J. M. C. 22; 57 J. P. 79, it was held that a photographer's advertisement case, made of wood and glass, nine feet long, three feet wide, and seven feet high, erected in his garden might be a "building" within the Public Health (Buildings in Streets) Act, 1888, s. 3. See notes to that section, post.

In South Shields Corporation v. Wilson (1901), 65 J. P. 294; 84 L. T. 267, a wooden shed intended for use only as a stable was held to be a new building within a byelaw. So, too, in Richardson v. Brown (1885), 49 J. P. 661, a wooden building, thirty feet by thirteen feet, on wheels, stationed at the corner of a new street, used as a butcher's shop, and having a supply of gas, spouts and a fall-pipe.

And see, generally, as to the word "building," notes to s. 4, ante, p. 22.

As to the re-erection or conversion of buildings, see notes to s. 159, post, p. 361.

Re-erection or conversion of buildings.

It may sometimes be difficult to say whether a new structure is to be regarded by itself as a "new building," or is to be regarded as merely an addition to an old building. Thus, in Shiel v. Sunderland Corporation, on p. 361, post, an annexe to an hotel built partly on the site of a demolished coach-house was held to be an addition to the old building, and not itself a new building; and see also R. v. Foot's Cray U. D. C., ante, p. 340, and Repton School Governors v. Repton R. D. C., post, p. 346. Cf. also Hibbert v. Acton L. B., supra. But as to additions to buildings, see now the P. H. A., 1907, s. 23, post.

Additions to buildings.

By s. 111 of the Hastings Improvement Act, 1885, "the making of any addition to an existing building by raising any part thereof . . . shall for all the purposes of this Act and of any other local Act for the time being in force within the borough and of the Public Health Acts and of any byelaw made thereunder respectively be deemed to be the erection of a 'new building' and the word building shall for all such purposes include an erection or building of a permanent character of whatever material constructed." By byelaw 81 under this section, "Every person who shall intend to erect a building or otherwise to execute any work to which any of the byelaws relating to new buildings may apply, shall before beginning to erect such building or to execute such work, deliver or send, or cause to be delivered or sent, to the surveyor of the sanitary authority notice in writing in which shall be specified the date on which such person will begin to erect such building or to execute such work"; and by byelaw 87 a penalty is imposed for offences against the byelaws. The respondent, a builder, had built a house with a conservatory on the first floor, in accordance with plans duly passed by the authority. Subsequently he pulled down the conservatory, and in its place built a bedroom, a portion of one of the external walls of the house being raised for that purpose; the bedroom was of the same height as, and occupied no greater space than, the conservatory for which it was substituted. He sent no notice under byelaw 81 to the surveyor before the erection of the bedroom. Upon a summons charging him with not giving such notice before beginning to erect a building to which the byelaws relating to new buildings applied, the justices held, that as the bedroom when erected did not occupy any greater space than was previously occupied by the conservatory, the respondent had not by the erection of the bedroom made an addition to an existing building within the meaning of s. 111 of the local Act. It was held that the justices were wrong, and that the mere fact that the bedroom occupied no greater space than the erection for which it was substituted, did not necessarily prevent its being an addition to an existing building within the meaning of the section (Meadows v. Taylor (1890), 24 Q. B. D. 717; 54 J. P. 757).

By the Metropolitan Building Act, 1855, s. 27, r. 4, every warehouse or other building used for the purposes of trade or manufacture containing more than 216,000 cubic feet was required to be divided by party-walls. By s. 8, r. 2, no buildings might be united, if when so united they would be in contravention of the Act. The respondent added to a building previously erected a new building, without separating them by party-walls; the addition was made by taking down one of the external walls of the old building, and then erecting the new building against the old one. The addition contained less than 216,000 cubic feet, but the two buildings taken together contained more than that quantity. It was held that the buildings had been united in contravention of the statute, and must be separated by a party-wall (Scott v. Legg (1876), 2 Ex. D. 39). But this decision was reversed in the Court of Appeal, on the ground that the old building was not subject to the Act, and the new one only to the extent of the addition ((1877), 10 Q. B. D. 236; 41 J. P. 773).

Therefore it would appear that byelaws would by virtue of the proviso in the text have the like limited application. See Shiel v. Sunderland (Mayor of), cited in the notes to s. 159, post, p. 361.

"Erection"; "structure."

A coffee van on wheels was held to be an "erection" within the meaning of that word in a byelaw (Williams v. Weston-super-Mare U. D. C. (1910), 74 J. P. 370; 103 L. T. 9).

A fence may be an "erection" (Adams v. Bromley L. B., p. 344, post).

The Metropolis Management and Building Act, 1882, s. 13, required a licence to be obtained for the erection of "wooden structures or erections of a movable or temporary character." A steam roundabout, shooting gallery, and caravans were held not to be "structures or erections" within the meaning of this section (Hall v. Smallpiece (1890), 59 L. J. M. C. 97; 54 J. P. 710).

A similar decision was given in the case of a builder's office constructed of wood and roofed with zinc, placed upon iron wheels to enable it to be wheeled about to any place where building operations were being carried on, and kept, when not required at any such place, in the builder's own yard, and used as a pay-office for his men (London C. C. v. Pearce, [1892] 2 Q. B. 109; 56 J. P. 790). So, too, in the case of a bungalow constructed of wood and corrugated iron and erected on a piece of land for purpose of exhibition and sale, but not for occupation in the place where it was so erected (London C. C. v. Humphreys, [1894] 2 Q. B. 755; 58 J. P. 734). See also on the construction of the same section, London C. C. v. Candler (1891), 60 L. J. M. C. 114; 55 J. P. 679.

Upon the meaning of the term "building or structure" as used in the London Building Act, 1894, see the cases as to projections from buildings, cited in notes to s. 3 of the Public Health (Buildings in Streets) Act, 1888, post; Moran & Son v. Marsland, [1909] 1 K. B. 744; 73 J. P. 114, as to a covered reservoir; and the following decisions as to electric lighting street boxes: Whitechapel District Board of Works v. Crow (1901), 65 J. P. 549; 84 L. T. 595; Charing Cross and Strand Electricity Supply Corporation v. Woodthorpe (1903), 67 J. P. 286; 88 L. T. 772; County of London Electric Supply Co. v. Perkins (1908), 72 J. P. 133; 98 L. T. 870. See also Goddard v. Greig, [1917] 2 K. B. 397; 81 J. P. 214, as to distinguishing between the terms "necessary repair" and "alteration or other work," in s. 209 of the London Building Act, 1894.

The appellant, without giving any notice or delivering plans, erected certain structures which from their description could not be intended for residential purposes, and which were found by the justices to have been erected for a temporary purpose only (the storing of tools, etc. during the erection of other buildings), and to have been intended to be pulled down by the appellant when that purpose was answered:—Held, that the byelaws as to new buildings did not apply to such a structure, but that if they did they were unreasonable and bad (Fielding v. Rhyl Improvement Commissioners (1878), 3 C. P. D. 272; 42 J. P. 311).

Structures erected for temporary purposes not having the character of buildings used or intended to be used for purposes of human habitation, are not new buildings. See Southend-on-Sea Corporation v. Archer; Same v. Romanis (1901), 70 L. J. K. B. 328; 65 J. P. 292. The structures in these cases were (1) a movable wooden weighing machine house erected on an esplanade at the seaside as a shelter for a weighing machine, which contained also a table and two chairs; and (2) a movable wooden refreshment stall. Both of these were open for the use of the public during the summer months. But the mere fact that structures are not intended for human habitation, does not of itself take them out of the category of new buildings (South Shields Corporation v. Wilson, ante, p. 341). The important point is whether they are of a mere temporary character or not (Dublin Corporation v. Irish Church Missions, [1901] 2 I. R. 387; Dublin Corporation v. Allen (1904), 38 Ir. L. T. 78). On the ground that it was only put up for a temporary purpose, the VICE-CHANCELLOR of the Lancaster Palatine Court held that a portable theatre constructed of wood, and erected for a short period only, where the intention of the proprietor was to remove to another locality within a short time, was not a building within the above section (Newell v. Ormskirk U. D. C. (1907), 71 J. P. 119). See now as to temporary buildings, the P. H. A., 1907, s. 27, post. S. was summoned under that section for erecting a temporary building without having first applied to the local authority for permission. The structure in question, which was known as a "houp-la" and was used for the amusement of persons who paid for the privilege of throwing hoops amongst certain articles or prizes, was octagonal, and had an upright central pole about 13 feet high. From the top of the pole radiated beams supporting a canvas roof. The structure was closed in except on one side by a canvas screen. It was easily taken to pieces for removal. The justices having found that it was not a "building," the court refused to interfere with their decision (Whitehorn v. Smelt (1910), 74 J. P. 102; 102 L. T. 35). Note to Section 157.

A structure may be a new building under the P. H. A., 1875, and at the same time a temporary building under the P. H. A., 1907: see Andrews v. Wirral R. D. C., [1916] 1 K. B. 863; 80 J. P. 257.

In Hubbard v. Bromley R. D. C. (1905), 69 J. P. 437, it was held that buildings in course of erection when certain byelaws came into force were not subject to the byelaws as regards work carried out on them after the byelaws came into operation. Buildings in progress when byelaws made.

(f) With regard to the prevention of fire, it may be noted that the words "incombustible materials," as used in s. 19 of the Metropolitan Building Act, 1855, have been held to mean wholly incombustible materials and not to include duroline (Payne v. Wright, [1892] 1 Q. B. 104; 56 J. P. 120). And see Badley v. Cuckfield R. D. C. (1895), 64 L. J. Q. B. 571; 59 J. P. 582, where it was held that a building consisting of a wooden framework covered with a skin of galvanised iron lined with felt and match-boarding, was not constructed with walls constructed of hard and incombustible materials within the meaning of a byelaw made under this section. Cf. ss. 5 (36) and 74 of the London Building Act, 1894, and Carritt v. Godson, [1899] 2 Q. B. 193; 63 J. P. 644; Dicksee v. Hoskins, [1901] 2 K. B. 660; 65 J. P. 612. Prevention of fire, stability, purposes of health, etc.

In Hendon U. D. C. v. Martin (1900), Times, January 13th, it was held that a building roofed with vulcanite covered with one and three-quarter inches of soil and a like thickness of burnt ballast was externally covered with incombustible material within the meaning of a byelaw following the terms of the London Building Act, 1894.

With regard to the meaning of the term "party-wall" when used in byelaws, see the judgment of FRY, J., in Watson v. Gray (1880), 14 Ch. D. 192; 44 J. P. 537, and the definition given in the London Building Act, 1894, s. 5 (16), considered in Drury v. Army and Navy Auxiliary Co-operative Supply, [1896] 2 Q. B. 271; 60 J. P. 421; Irving v. Turnbull, [1900] 2 Q. B. 129; and London, Gloucestershire and North Hants Dairy Co. v. Morley, [1911] 2 K. B. 256; 75 J. P. 437. As to party-walls "defective" through damp, see Barry v. Minturn, [1913] A. C. 584; 77 J. P. 437; and as to flues built against party structures, see Aërated Bread Co. v. Shepherd (1897), 13 T. L. R. 311, and Miller v. Field, p. 340, ante; and as to a party-wall rendered unsafe by removal of adjoining premises, see Selby v. Whitbread & Co., [1917] 1 K. B. 736; 81 J. P. 165.

With reference to the meaning of the expression "topmost storey" when used in byelaws, see Foot v. Hodgson (1890), 25 Q. B. D. 160, where it was held that a "topmost storey" need not necessarily be contained within four vertical walls, and that floors or rooms enclosed on three sides by vertical walls and in front by the sloping roof of the house were storeys. And see the definition in the London Building Act, 1894, s. 5 (14).

The respondents were summoned for infringement of a byelaw that "every person who shall erect a new building, and shall construct any room therein so that it may be used for human habitation . . . if such room is not intended to be used as a sleeping room . . . shall construct such room so that it shall be not less in any part thereof than nine feet in height." They had constructed three cottages, each of which contained a scullery only eight feet three inches in height. The sculleries contained a slopstone and stone bench but no fireplace or flue, and they were not of sufficient size for taking meals or sleeping. The justices found that the sculleries were not rooms which might be used for human habitation. It was held, that as there was no rule of law that they must find that the sculleries, being without fireplaces, were constructed so that they might be used for human habitation, their decision was right (Bain v. Compstall Co-operative Society, Ltd. (1911), 75 J. P. 76 ; 103 L. T. 759). As to the height of buildings, see now the P. H. A., 1907, s. 24, post.

Persons liable for breach of building byelaws.

B.*, and cases cited therewith on p. 357, post, and Welsh v. West Ham Corporation, and cases cited therewith on p. 358, post ; and cf. Sunderland Corporation v. Brown, p. 335, ante.

Air space and ventilation.

(g) As to the ventilation of buildings, see the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, ss. 110—115. These sections are not, however, incorporated with this Act, and are, therefore, applicable only when there is a local Act in force.

A clause in a town planning scheme which prescribed a building line was held not to be a provision which prescribed the space about buildings within the meaning of s. 157 (3) (Re Ellis and Ruislip-Northwood U. D. C., [1920] 1 K. B. 343).

A byelaw provided that, wherever any open space had been left belonging to any building, it should never afterwards be built upon without the consent of the council, and without having an open space of a specified size and dimensions. It was held that if it applied to old buildings it was invalid (Tucker v. Rees (1861), 25 J. P. 789 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 629).

A local board made a byelaw that every building to be erected and used as a dwelling-house, should have an open space exclusively belonging thereto to the extent at least of 500 square feet, free from any erection thereon above the level of the ground :—Held, a valid byelaw, and that justices might find as a fact that a small wooden fence, three feet six inches high, erected round the house, was an "erection" within the meaning of the byelaw (Adams v. Bromley L. B. (1872), 37 J. P. 662).

The L. Improvement Act enacted that no one should, without the previous consent of the local board, erect dwelling-houses in blocks of eight houses back to back, and that an open space should be left at the end of each block, on the land of the owner, not less than fifteen feet wide, or that such houses should have at their front or back a space of 154 square feet. R. added two back-to-back houses to eight which had been built before the passing of the Act by the owner of the adjacent land :—Held, that R. had erected a block of houses within the meaning of the enactment, and that it was immaterial whether the houses were all built by the same owner or some were built before the Act :—Held, also, that the enactment as to open spaces was additional to and not in substitution for the first part of the section (Robshaw v. Leeds (Mayor of) (1875), 39 J. P. 149).

In Reay v. Gateshead Corporation (1886), 50 J. P. 276, 821 ; 55 L. T. 92, the following byelaw was held good : "The yard space shall not be less than one half of the entire area of the house or building and out offices, and no building whatever shall be erected in or over such yard space except the privy, ashpit, and coalhouse in connection with the house or building, and these only in such a position as the board shall approve. The yard space shall be left upon such portion of the ground as the board may order."

A local Act authorised byelaws for sufficiency of space about buildings. One of such byelaws provided that every new building should have at the rear or side thereof an open space of at least 150 square feet, and that wherever any open space had been left when the building was approved, such space should not afterwards be built upon without approval :—Held, that the byelaw was invalid so far as it prohibited future buildings in the space in the rear (Quinby v. Liverpool (Mayor, etc. of) (1888), 53 J. P. 213). The ground of this decision appears to have been that under the byelaw as it stood the open space could never have been built upon, whatever its extent might be.

A byelaw provided that every building to be erected, and used as a dwelling-house, should during such use have at the rear or side thereof an open space exclusively belonging thereto to the extent of at least 150 square feet, free from any erection above the level of the ground other than a privy ; but that where there was a water-closet and no other privy, an open space of not less than 100 feet might be allowed, and that the distance across such open space between every such building and the opposite property at the rear or side, exclusive of any common passage, should be ten feet at least; if such building were two storeys in height above the level of such open space, the distance across should be fifteen feet; if three storeys, twenty feet; if more than three storeys, twenty-five feet:—Held, that the space required to be left between the building to be erected and the opposite property must be co-extensive with the line of demarcation between such building and the opposite property, and that at no point should a less distance than that prescribed by the byelaw intervene between them, exclusive of any common passage (Anderton v. Rigby (1863), 13 C. B. (N.S.) 603; S. C., Anderton v. Birkenhead Improvement Commissioners (1863), 32 L. J. M. C. 137; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1058).

A byelaw provided that every person erecting a new building to be used as a dwelling-house should provide in the rear thereof an open space exclusively belonging thereto, to the extent of at least 150 square feet, free from any erection thereon above the level of the ground, and should cause the distance across such open space between every such building and the opposite property at the rear to be ten feet at least, and if such building be twenty-five feet in height, should cause such distance across to be at least twenty feet. It was proved that P. had erected a new building to be used as a dwelling-house, twenty-five feet in height; that there was in the rear of the building an open space exclusively belonging thereto to the extent of 700 square feet; that the distance across such open space between such building and the boundary of the opposite property at the rear thereof, including the width of the street which divided the building from the opposite property, was fifty-two feet; that the land exclusively belonging to such building was bounded in the rear by a public street, and that the distance across the open space between the building and the public street was eight feet:—Held, that on the true construction of the byelaw, the public street was the "opposite property," and that as P. had not caused the distance across the open space between his building and the opposite property to be at least twenty feet, he had committed a breach of the byelaw (Jones v. Parry (1887), 52 J. P. 69; 57 L. T. 492).

The respondent was convicted of unlawfully permitting to be used as a dwelling-house a certain building, contrary to the West Hartlepool Improvement Act, 1870. In 1867, one L., wishing to convert his dwelling-house into a lock-up shop and warehouse, applied to the commissioners for permission, which was granted on condition that if again used as a dwelling-house it should be altered so as to leave an open space at the back. The premises were bought by the respondent in 1878, and he knew nothing of the condition. In 1883 it was let for five years, and was latterly used as a restaurant. It was held that the justices were right, as the local Act applied to then existing buildings retrospectively (West Hartlepool Commissioners v. Levy (1886), 50 J. P. 196).

A brewery company erected outbuildings on land adjoining their hotel, stables and yard, by sufficiently excavating a steep bank sloping down to the high road to enable them to place the buildings on the level of the high road. The back wall of these buildings was built close up against the portion of the bank remaining unexcavated, and the top of the bank was about one foot higher than the level of the back wall of the buildings. The rural district council had refused to approve plans of these buildings, as contravening their byelaws. The company having nevertheless erected the buildings, were convicted of a breach of the byelaws and fined; and on a case stated the High Court affirmed the conviction. In an action for an injunction to restrain the company from continuing to contravene the provisions of the byelaws:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the injunction asked for, the construction of the byelaws having been already determined by a court of co-ordinate jurisdiction (Att.-Gen. v. The Friary, Holroyd, and Healy's Breweries, Ltd. (1907), 71 J. P. 348; 23 T. L. R. 487).

G., without the authority's approval, built a stable on the vacant space beside a dwelling-house, and was summoned for contravening a byelaw providing for purposes of ventilation, that an open space should be left in the rear of every new domestic building. "Domestic building" was defined as "a dwelling-house or an office building or other outbuilding appurtenant to a dwelling-house, whether attached thereto or not, or a shop, or any other building not being a public building or of the workhouse class." The plans showed that the stable was not intended for human habitation:—Held, that the byelaw did not apply to the stable (Collins v. Greenwood (1910), 74 J. P. 327; 103 L. T. 36). See also R. v. Preston R. D. C., p. 355, post, as to air space where a barn is erected at the back of and adjoining a farmhouse.

In Repton School Governors v. Repton R. D. C., [1918] 2 K. B. 133; 82 J. P. 257, the plaintiffs proposed to build an addition to the front of one of their school buildings. The local byelaws provided that "every person who shall erect a new domestic building shall provide in the rear of such building an open space exclusively belonging to such building of an aggregate extent of not less than 150 square feet."

It was admitted that under s. 23 of the P. H. A. (Amendment) Act, 1907, the addition was a new building, and the defendants refused to approve the plans as the above byelaw would be thereby infringed. It was held that the byelaw was unreasonable and therefore bad in that it was impossible to provide an open space at the rear of a new building which consisted of an addition to an existing building.

A building was constructed in three blocks of two storeys each and two blocks of one storey each, all structurally united, and designed for use as stables and coach-houses. There was only one entrance, from which a continuous way ran through all the blocks. The building could easily be adapted for use by more than one person. It was held, in an action to restrain the defendants from building so as to contravene the byelaws in respect of air space, and also in other respects, that the building, although it might be adapted for use by more than one person, was structurally constructed as, and must be treated as being, one building, and that being such, it complied with the byelaws (Att.-Gen. v. Melville (1905), 70 J. P. 17; 93 L. T. 612).

A decision under the London Building Act, 1894, may also be referred to. The respondent was a builder, and on February 6th, 1902, he served an amended notice upon the district surveyor, that he proposed to erect in a street called West Hill a domestic building, 500 feet in depth, to be used as private residences. In April, 1902, the surveyor served a notice of objection on the ground (inter alia) that the respondent proposed to unite the buildings in contravention of s. 77 (1) of the London Building Act, 1894. In October, 1900, the respondent was proposing to erect six separate blocks of eight flats each, named on a plan, A., B., C., D., E. and F. Blocks A. and B. were to front on West Hill, and blocks C. and D. and blocks E. and F. were to have separate entrances from West Hill. Objection was then taken by the surveyor that the erection of blocks C., D., E. and F. would be laying out a street. Various proposals were made by the respondent and objected to by the surveyor. At the time of the notice, in February, 1902, block A. was completed and block B. partly completed. By the notice of February, 1902, it was proposed to erect each of the four other blocks, C., D., E. and F., to contain its own staircase leading from the basement to the top, and to be provided with an entrance leading from the space outside to such staircase. Each pair of adjacent blocks was to be connected by a door leading from the bathrooms of one to the bathrooms of the adjacent block, and there was a passage-way under the roofs from one end of the four blocks to the other end. Each block was capable of being let separately, and none of the blocks were constructed, adapted, or intended to be occupied with any other block. It was held that what the respondent intended to erect was a separate building in itself, and not a union under one roof of separate buildings; and that s. 77 (1) applied only to the union of buildings which had in the first instance been completely erected as separate structures, and did not apply to the union of several buildings in the course of erection for the purpose of transforming them and finishing them as a separate structure (Goodchild v. Matthews (1903), 67 J. P. 296; 89 L. T. 369).

A byelaw provided that fifteen square feet air space should be left open in the rear of a new building. It was held that where a person built in contravention of this byelaw within the fifteen feet, the local authority might pull down the offending building so long as they did it so as not to cause unnecessary damage (Jagger v. Doncaster R. S. A. (1890), 54 J. P. 438).

In Southend (Mayor, etc. of) v. Ramuz (1895), Times, August 6th, an action was brought for an injunction to restrain the defendant from permitting premises erected by him to be occupied. It was alleged that he proposed to let certain unoccupied rooms in a shop as separate shops, and that though the building, treated as a whole, had, in the rear, a sufficient air space, yet each room, if treated as a separate shop, would not have a sufficient air space. Romer, J., gave judgment for the defendant on the ground that there was nothing in the byelaws to prevent a building with several rooms erected in accordance with deposited plans from being let or occupied in parts.

The Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892, s. 170, enacts that every building erected for the purpose of being used as a dwelling-house shall have all the rooms sufficiently lighted and ventilated from an adjoining street or other open space directly attached thereto equal to at least three-fourths of the area to be occupied by the intended building, and such space shall be free from any erections thereon other than water-closet, ashpit, coalhouse, or other conveniences, all which conveniences shall, as to height, position, and dimensions, be erected subject to the consent and approval of the commissioners. Where a proprietor proposed to build in a burgh two rows of dwelling-houses parallel to one another, both facing public streets and separated by an open unbuilt-on space belonging to him:—Held, that in calculating the open space required by the above section to be attached to the back of each row of houses, the whole area between the tenements was to be taken into account (Hoy v. Magistrates of Portobello (1896), 23 Ct. of Sess. Cas. (4th ser.) 1039, approved and followed in Bryce v. Lindsay (1901), 4 F. 241).

See also McDougall v. Whyte; Raeside v. Whyte (1896), 33 Sc. L. R. 630, decided on the provisions of the Glasgow Police Act, 1866, and Glasgow Building Regulation Act, 1892, as to free and open space in front of the windows of sleeping apartments in buildings at the corner of two streets.

(h) The P. H. A., 1890, s. 11, provides that the expression "ashpit" shall include any ashpit or other receptacle for the deposit of ashes, fœcal matter, or refuse. Ashpits.

(i) A toll-house erected under a turnpike Act was held to be within the corresponding provisions of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 53 (Tunstall Turnpike Trustees v. Lowndes (1856), 20 J. P. 374), being thus included within the term "building."

A byelaw that no dwelling-house shall be erected without having at the rear or side a sufficient roadway for the purpose of affording efficient means of access to the privy or ashpit belonging to the house, was held not to be legal (Waite v. Garston L. B. (1867), L. R. 3 Q. B. 5; 32 J. P. 228). Per Cockburn, C.J.: A proviso at the end of such a byelaw which leaves it in the discretion of the local board to enforce it or not does not render it valid. The provision of "secondary means of access" to premises may now, however, be enforced if the P. H. A., 1890, s. 23 (1), is in force in a district. Drainage, etc. of buildings.

B. was charged with erecting new buildings not in accordance with the deposited plans, in that certain tub-closets were not in the position shown on the plans, having been erected from fifteen to twenty-seven feet distant from the main building instead of two and a-half feet. It was held that the tub-closets were privies, and that the defendant was rightly convicted on a charge of executing works without having previously deposited plans (Burton v. Acton (1887), 51 J. P. 566). Where a byelaw required that every person intending to erect a building should send in complete plans and sections of every floor, showing the position, form, and dimensions of every part of the intended building, but there was no byelaw against building contrary to deposited plans, and the respondent sent in plans which were approved, but afterwards, without sending in fresh plans, made substantial alterations by diminishing the height of the floors of the building, it was held that he ought to be convicted of a breach of the byelaw requiring the deposit of plans (James v. Masters, [1893] 1 Q. B. 355; 57 J. P. 167).

An urban authority made the following byelaw: "No new house shall be occupied until the house drainage has been made and completed, nor until such house has been certified by the local board, or their officer authorised to give such certificate, after examination, to be in every respect fit for human habitation in their or his opinion":—Held, that the byelaw was reasonable and not inconsistent with any of the provisions of the Act, and, therefore, valid: (Horsell v. Swindon New Town L. B. (1888), 52 J. P. 597; 58 L. T. 732).

An owner of a new house, who has allowed it to be occupied by a caretaker rent free, cannot be convicted of having "let" it in contravention of a byelaw prohibiting the letting or occupation of a new house before it is certified as fit for habitation (Gowen v. Sedgwick (1904), 68 J. P. 484).

Note to Section 157.

The power of a rural authority under the text, as amended and extended by the P. H. A., 1890, s. 23 (2), to make byelaws with respect to (inter alia) cesspools in connection with buildings, extends to old buildings in existence before the making of the byelaws, as well as to new buildings. And a byelaw providing that "every person who shall construct a cesspool in connection with a building shall construct such cesspool at a distance of fifty feet at least from a dwelling-house" is not unreasonable merely because in a particular case it is not possible to construct a cesspool at the prescribed distance (Simmons v. Malling R. D. C., [1897] 2 Q. B. 433; 61 J. P. 502).

Where a byelaw provided that works for the sewerage of new streets were not to be carried out otherwise than in accordance with a specification of the surveyor, it was held that a specification requiring separate surface water and sewage sewers was obligatory, although express power to require such separate sewers was only conferred by a local Act passed after the byelaws were made (Airey v. Smith, [1907] 2 K. B. 273; 71 J. P. 285). As to whether such power exists under s. 157, supra, see Matthews v. Strachan, [1901] 2 K. B. 540; 65 J. P. 789: per RIDLEY, J. The L. G. B. in some cases allowed byelaws requiring the provision of separate drains for sewage and surface water in new houses erected within 100 feet of sewers, etc., but they expressed the opinion that such byelaws could not properly be made in a district which was not provided with separate sewers for surface water. See hereon the provisions of the P. H. A., 1907, s. 36, post.

The owners of industrial dwellings in the metropolis substituted iron pipes for the ordinary tile drain pipes ultimately connecting the water-closets in such buildings with the drains, but the perpendicular soil pipes from the closets were not altered. At the same time several pans and pipes connected therewith which were found to have been broken were replaced. It was contended that in carrying out such alterations the owners were "constructing a water-closet" within the meaning of byelaws 17 and 21, which were confirmed after the erection of the buildings. The first provided that "any person who shall construct any water-closet, the soil pipe of which shall communicate with any sewer, and shall be in connection with any other water-closet," shall cause certain things to be done; and the second provided that "these byelaws shall so far as is practicable apply to any person who shall construct or reconstruct any pipe or drain or other means of communicating with sewers or any trap or apparatus connected therewith so far as he shall effect any such works in any building erected before the confirmation of these byelaws, as if the same were being constructed in a building newly erected." It was held that the owners had not "constructed a water-closet" within the meaning of byelaw 17, and that what was done was not within the purview of byelaw 21 (Metropolitan Industrial Dwellings Co. v. Long (1903), 68 J. P. 113; 20 T. L. R. 103).

A byelaw (No. 5) made under the P. H. (London) A., 1891, s. 39 (1), provided that "a person who shall newly fit or fix any apparatus in connection with any existing w.c. shall as regards such apparatus and its connection with any soil pipe or drain comply with such of the requirements of the foregoing byelaws as would be applicable to the apparatus so fitted or fixed if the w.c. were being newly constructed." Byelaw 14 provided that "every person who shall intend to construct any w.c. earth-closet or privy or to fit or fix in or in connection with any w.c. earth-closet or privy any apparatus or any trap or soil pipe shall before executing any such works give notice in writing to the clerk of the sanitary authority." A railway company, finding that the pans and traps of two existing water-closets at a station required renewal owing to ordinary wear and tear, removed the same and refitted or fixed two new pans or traps. In carrying out the work they complied with all the requirements of the byelaws as referred to in byelaw 5, but gave no notice as provided by byelaw 14. It was held that byelaw 14 did not apply only to new water-closets, but applied also to the fixing of an apparatus, trap, or soil pipe in connection with any existing water-closet (L. & S. W. Rail. Co. v. Hills, [1906] 1 K. B. 512; 70 J. P. 212).

For other cases where byelaws in the metropolis relating to drain "traps" have been construed, see Kingsland v. Haben (1904), 68 J. P. 159; 90 L. T. 449; Treasure & Co. v. Bermondsey Borough Council (1904), 68 J. P. 206; 2 L. G. R. 488.

A byelaw provided that a soil pipe constructed in connection with an existing building should whenever practicable be outside the building and be constructed in drawn lead or of heavy cast iron, but that where it was necessary to construct such soil pipe within such building it should be constructed in drawn lead:—Held, that the byelaw was applicable to a case where the soil pipe was constructed partly inside and partly outside the building, and did not deal merely with soil pipes which were entirely outside or entirely inside a building (Marylebone Borough Council v. White (1912), 76 J. P. 382; 10 L. G. R. 767). Note to Section 157.

A byelaw forbidding the construction of any cesspool so that it shall have by drain or otherwise any outlet into or means of communication with any sewer is not violated by connecting together a series of cesspools (Button v. Tottenham U. D. C. (1898), 62 J. P. 423; 78 L. T. 470).

See also the P. H. A., 1890, s. 23, as to the power to make byelaws as to keeping water-closets supplied with sufficient water for flushing. And see the P. H. A., 1907, ss. 39 et seq., post.

(j) See as to this subject, ss. 46 and 97, ante, pp. 115, 185; the Housing of the Working Classes Acts, 1890 and 1903, and the Housing, Town Planning, etc. Act, 1909, post, Vol. II. Buildings unfit for habitation.

(k) It was held under the L. G. A., 1858, s. 34, that a local board could not make a byelaw that before beginning to dig or lay the foundation of any new building, a written notice of one month at the least should be left with the clerk at one of the monthly meetings of the board, accompanied with the plans and sections. It was also held that if a person gave notice of intention to build, and left plans and sections, he might at once commence the building, subject to the right of the board to pull down or alter it, if not in conformity with the byelaws (Hattersley v. Burr (1866), 14 L. T. 565). This case and the previous one of Young v. Edwards, post, p. 352, were discussed in Hall v. Nixon (1875), L. R. 10 Q. B. 152; 39 J. P. 341. There a byelaw was held good which required every person intending to erect a new building to give fourteen days' notice, and to deliver plans and sections to the surveyor of the board, and provided that any person erecting a new building without delivering such notice and plans, or without having the plans approved by the board, should be liable to a penalty. Hattersley v. Burr was distinguished on the ground that, under the byelaw in that case, a builder might be delayed two months. The provision for giving notice is not inconsistent with the power to pull down buildings erected in contravention of the byelaws under a byelaw or under the next section, for the beginning to build without notice may subject the builder to a penalty, while the buildings erected in contravention of the byelaws may be pulled down (per QUAIN, J., in Hall v. Nixon, supra, and see the next section). Notices before building.

It has been held that penalties for building in contravention of a byelaw without the approval of the authority, cannot be recovered unless the authority have exercised their power of disapproval within the month prescribed by the next section (Clarke v. Bloomfield (1885), 1 T. L. R. 323; but see the cases collected with this case in note (d) under s. 158, post, p. 355). With reference to the time within which proceedings under the byelaw must be taken, see the cases cited in the notes to the next section as to continuing offences.

A byelaw providing that every person who should intend to erect a building or to rebuild any existing house should give notice in writing of his intention to the authority and should accompany such notice with a plan, was held good (Ballymena (Commissioners of) v. McKay (1886), 17 L. R. Ir. 605).

(l) A byelaw requiring plans of new buildings showing the position of such buildings and of adjoining buildings, was held good in Slee v. Bradford (Mayor of), ante, p. 326. Byelaws made under this section may require plans of a similar kind. It has been held that it is reasonable to make byelaws enabling the authority to retain the plans of intended buildings, although such plans be disapproved (Gooding v. Ealing L. B. (1884), 1 T. L. R. 62). See now the P. H. A., 1907, s. 16, post, which refers, however, only to approved plans. Deposit of plans.

Section 99 of a local Act provided that every house to be thereafter erected on vacant land, except corner houses, should have a back-yard or other vacant ground or area of not less length than eight feet extending from the main building for the whole length of such building; and s. 101 required a plan to be furnished to the local board by persons intending to build, showing the particulars required by the Act, and provided that the plan should not be carried into execution, nor the building commenced, until the plan should have been approved. A builder submitted a plan of four new houses having vacant ground at the side, but not at the back. The board disapproved the plan as not complying with s. 99, but he commenced to build notwithstanding. It was held that whether s. 99 required the vacant space to be at the back or not, he was rightly convicted of an offence against s. 101 (Pearson v. Kingston-upon-Hull L. B. (1865), 35 L. J. M. C. 36; 29 J. P. 711).

A byelaw, made under local Acts, providing that any person erecting a new building before approval of the plans required by the byelaws to be sent to the authority twenty-one days before commencing building should be liable to a penalty, was held valid where it was also provided by the byelaws that the plans so required to be sent in should be approved or disapproved by the authority within the twenty-one days, and by the local Acts a right of appeal to quarter sessions was given to any person aggrieved by any determination of the authority. And it was held that a person might be convicted of an offence against such byelaws if he commenced to build after notice that his plans had been disapproved by the authority within the twenty-one days, although no evidence was offered by the prosecution that the plans did not comply with the requirements of the local Acts and byelaws (Cook v. Hainsworth, [1896] 2 Q. B. 85; 60 J. P. 439).

When an owner is allowed to deposit a specimen plan and afterwards proceeds to erect houses of the type shown therein, the specimen plan may be regarded as a plan applicable to each house (Balby-with-Hexthorpe U. D. C. v. Millard (1903), 68 J. P. 81).

A builder who executes work substantially departing from his approved plans may be convicted for executing it without having previously deposited plans (Burton v. Acton, James v. Masters, ante, p. 347). The owner of a building estate had deposited a specimen plan, in accordance with the byelaws, of certain types of houses intended to be erected. He deviated from such plan in regard to one of the houses in four respects, and was summoned; but the justices dismissed the summons on the ground that the deviations were not substantial. Subsequently he was summoned for deviation from the deposited plan in regard to two other houses in the same row, on the ground (as found by the justices) of similar deviations. The summons was dismissed on the ground that the matter was res judicata. It was held that the justices were bound to hear the summons on its merits, and that the matter was not res judicata (Balby-with-Hexthorpe U. D. C. v. Millard, supra).

An urban authority had, in 1877, made byelaws for the regulation of new streets and new buildings, and M., an intending builder, submitted plans which were approved. Some of the plans were carried into execution. In 1893 the byelaws were superseded by new ones, and the latter contained a proviso saving the validity of anything duly done or suffered under the old byelaws. In 1896 M. intimated to the authority that he intended to begin building some more houses in accordance with the plans approved under the old byelaws. In an action to restrain him in the County Palatine Court, HALL, V.-C., held that he was entitled to proceed according to the plans approved under the old byelaws. The decision was based upon the ground that the authority were attempting to make retrospective a byelaw which was not intended to be retrospective (Withington U. D. C. v. Moore (1896), 60 J. P. 408).

In the year 1897, a "street" plan, showing a street to be called Colchester Terrace, was deposited by a landowner, and approved by the authority, and the plan was re-deposited and re-approved in January, 1902. In 1900 a plan for thirty-one houses, part of Colchester Terrace shown in the first plan, was deposited and approved. On April 19th, 1902, notice was given on behalf of the appellant, a builder, of his intention to build twenty houses in Colchester Terrace. On June 6th, 1902, new byelaws with respect to buildings were confirmed, and they imposed fresh conditions as to thickness of walls, etc., but it was therein provided: "From and after the date of the confirmation of these byelaws, the following byelaws and parts of byelaws relating to new streets and buildings, shall be repealed, except as regards any work commenced before the date of the confirmation of this byelaw." On the date of such confirmation, some of the thirty-one houses set out in the plan approved in 1900, had not been commenced; and on August 6th, 1902, the appellant commenced, on some of the vacant sites, work which was in accordance with the old, but not with the new, byelaws. It was held that the plan approved in 1900 was not one plan for the whole of the buildings shown thereon, but in effect a number of separate plans for separate buildings; that if the work on any particular building was not commenced before June 6th, 1902, such approval did not authorise its erection in contravention of the new byelaws; and that it was a question of fact whether in any particular case work on a building had been commenced (White v. Mayor of Sunderland (1903), 88 L. T. 592; 67 J. P. 199).

The P. H. A., 1907, s. 15, post (when in force), limits the time within which approved plans may be carried out.

A local Act provided that the deposit with the corporation of any plan of any building should be null and void if the execution of the work specified in such plan was not commenced within a certain period. In 1894 the defendant deposited, and the corporation approved, two plans showing eleven houses and two stables and coachhouses. Some of the buildings shown upon the approved plans were erected within the specified period, and, after the expiration of that period, the defendant commenced to erect other buildings shown upon such plans, without depositing fresh plans. It was held that the plan of every house, or stable and coachhouse, was a separate plan, although they were all included on the two sheets deposited with the plaintiffs; and that, therefore, the deposit was null and void so far as such plans related to the buildings which were not commenced within the period specified in the Act, and that fresh notices and deposits of plans were necessary (Harrogate Corporation v. Dickinson, [1904] 1 K. B. 468; 68 J. P. 202).

A local Act provided that an undertaking in writing given by an owner of property on the passing of plans should be binding on his successors; but intending purchasers were entitled upon inquiry of the authority to information as to unfulfilled undertakings. It was held that having regard to the terms of the section, a purchaser could not dispute the validity of such an undertaking (to give up land for street widening) on the ground of "remoteness"; and that, his inquiries having been restricted to the existence of paving charges, and having been truthfully answered, the authority were not estopped from enforcing the undertaking (Crane v. Wallasey U. D. C. (1912), 76 J. P. 326; 107 L. T. 150). Apart from such a provision, a restrictive covenant entered into by an owner with an authority who own no land adjoining, or affected by the covenant, cannot be made to bind his successors (London C. C. v. Allen, [1914] 3 K. B. 642; 78 J. P. 449, and cf. Millbourn v. Lyons (1914), 111 L. T. 388).

The deposit and approval of plans does not bind the owner to build or lay out or dedicate the proposed building or street: see Mackett v. Herne Bay Commissioners, and Sunderland Corporation v. Skinner, on p. 338, ante; Hall v. Bootle Corporation; Healey v. Batley Corporation, and Kirby v. Paignton U. D. C., on pp. 290, 291, ante.

(m) See the next section and the provisions as to expenses contained therein.

Power to pull down.

(n) This power is not confined to byelaws relating to structure, but may be extended to and incorporated in byelaws as to the giving of notices and the deposit of plans (see s. 158, post, p. 353, and cf. Baker v. Portsmouth (Mayor of) (1878), 3 Ex. D. 4, 157; 42 J. P. 278, decided under the earlier Acts). Where a byelaw provides for the pulling down of a new building erected in contravention of the byelaws, the authority may cause a new building so erected to be pulled down, although no plans of it have been deposited, and the authority have consequently not disapproved plans (Fairbrass v. Canterbury Corporation (1902), 67 J. P. 181; 1 L. G. R. 181), and the right to exercise such power does not cease on the expiration of six months from the completion of the building (ibid.).

A byelaw required every person erecting a new building to cause it to be constructed in the manner therein specified. By another byelaw the council were empowered to remove, alter or pull down "work" done in contravention of (inter alia) the first-mentioned byelaw. A man did work on an old railway carriage placed in a field, converting it into a dwelling-house, but leaving untouched the main portion of the shell. It was held, that by virtue of s. 159, post, p. 361, he had erected a new building; and that as the whole building was erected in breach of the first byelaw, the council were entitled under the second byelaw, to pull down not only the work done in converting the carriage into a dwelling-house, but the whole carriage (Hanrahan v. Leigh-on-Sea U. D. C., cited with other cases on p. 362, post). Cf. Andrews v. Wirral R. D. C., [1916] 1 K. B. 863; 80 J. P. 257.

A byelaw made by an urban authority provided that every new street should be laid out and formed of such width and at such level as the authority should in each case determine:—Held, that width in the text and in the byelaw meant width of roadway and not width between houses on each side of the street; and that the authority were not entitled under the above byelaw, or any other of their existing byelaws, to disapprove of and pull down houses in the course of erection in a new street on the ground that the building line was too near the roadway (Robinson v. Barton Eccles L. B. (1883), 8 App. Cas. 798; 48 J. P. 276).

When the byelaws are contravened, the remedies contained in them are not the only remedies available. The court can enforce compliance with them by an injunction in an action by the Attorney-General (Att.-Gen. v. Ashbourne Recreation Ground Co., [1903] 1 Ch. 101; 67 J. P. 73; Devonport Corporation v. Tozer, [1903] 1 Ch. 759; 67 J. P. 269; Att.-Gen. v. Dorin, [1912] 1 Ch. 369; 76 J. P. 181; Att.-Gen. v. Kerr and Ball (1915), 79 J. P. 51; 12 L. G. R. 1277), and this jurisdiction exists, in the case of a continuing offence, although an offender against the byelaws has been previously convicted and fined (Att.-Gen. v. Wimbledon House Estate Co., [1904] 2 Ch. 34; 68 J. P. 341). The cases just referred to establish, however, that such proceedings are not open to the local authority in the absence of the Attorney-General, and the earlier cases where such proceedings were so brought, but in which the right of the plaintiffs to sue alone was not questioned, can, probably, be no longer relied upon. See e.g., Hendon L. B. v. Pounce, and Bromley L. B. v. Lloyd, cited at p. 337.

(o) These words remove the ambiguity which gave rise to Brown v. Holyhead L. B. (1862), 32 L. J. Ex. 25; 27 J. P. 184; Young v. Edwards (1864), 33 L. J. M. C. 227; 11 L. T. 424; Burgess v. Peacock (1864), 10 L. T. 617; 16 C. B. (N.S.) 624.

(p) A workhouse may apparently be such a building. See Leeds (Mayor, etc. of) v. Hunslet Union (1901), Times, August 3rd, and R. v. Maude (1901), Times, November 9th.

(q) Railway arches, enclosed and let for use as a stable, were held to be still buildings belonging to a railway company, so as to be exempt from the provisions of the Metropolitan Building Act, 1855, s. 49 (Re Badger (1858), 8 El. & Bl. 728; S. C., sub nom. North Kent Rail. Co. v. Badger, 27 L. J. M. C. 106; 22 J. P. 160. See Coole v. Lovegrove, [1893] 2 Q. B. 44; 57 J. P. 647).

A wooden structure erected by coal merchants at their own expense with the permission of a railway company in the company's coal yard or depôt, occupied by the coal merchants rent free and without any agreement of tenancy, and used by them for the clerical work connected with the delivery of coal to them by the railway, consignments by rail, and the sale of such coal to customers, was held to be "used for the purposes of or in connection with the traffic of" the railway company within the meaning of the London Building Act, 1894, s. 86, because the use of the office was a matter of convenience to the company in that it contributed to the speedy clearing of trucks from their line (Elliott v. London C. C., [1899] 2 Q. B. 277; 63 J. P. 645).

See also the London and Blackwall Rail. Co. v. Limehouse Board of Works (1856), 26 L. J. Ch. 164; 20 J. P. 789, and the other cases noticed in the notes to the Public Health (Buildings in Streets) Act, 1888, post.

But this proviso does not enable a railway company to build cottages for their servants without complying with the byelaws, for such buildings are not "used for the purposes of" the railway within the meaning of the proviso (M. S. & L. Rail. Co. v. Barnsley Union (Guardians of) (1892), 56 J. P. 679; 67 L. T. 119).

The respondents, on land leased to them by a railway company for the purpose, erected a coal order office, consisting of a brick building which went beyond the general line of buildings certified by the superintendent architect of metropolitan buildings. The land had been acquired by the railway company under a private Act of 1862, which provided that nothing in the Act should take away any of the rights or powers of the Metropolitan Board of Works (the predecessors of the appellants). It was held (BRAY, J., dissenting) that the respondents were liable to a penalty; per CHANNELL, J., on the ground that the London Building Act, 1894, s. 31, which provides that nothing in Part III. of the Act shall affect the exercise of any powers conferred upon any railway company by any special Act of Parliament for railway purposes, did not protect the respondents, as the private Act did not authorise the erection of buildings on that margin of the land which went beyond the general building line; and per SUTTON, J., on the ground that the respondents had failed to show that the railway company were exercising some special power conferred by some special Act (London C. C. v. Coal Co-operative Society, Ltd. (1907), 72 J. P. 68): but with this case compare Metropolitan Rail. Co. v. London C. C., [1913] 2 K. B. 249; 77 J. P. 190 (an accumulator shed).

Note to Section 157.

158. Where a notice, plan, or description of any work is required by any byelaw made by an urban authority (a) to be laid before that authority, the urban authority shall, within one month (b) after the same has been delivered or sent to their surveyor or clerk, signify in writing (c) their approval or disapproval (d) of the intended work to the person proposing to execute the same; and if the work is commenced after such notice of disapproval, or before the expiration of such month without such approval, and is in any respect not in conformity with any byelaw of the urban authority, the urban authority may cause so much of the work as has been executed to be pulled down or removed (e).

As to commencement of works and removal of works made contrary to byelaws.

Where an urban authority incur expenses in or about the removal of any work executed contrary to any byelaw, such authority may recover in a summary manner (f) the amount of such expenses either from the person executing the works removed or from the person causing the works to be executed, at their discretion (g).

Where an urban authority may under this section pull down or remove any work begun or executed in contravention of any byelaw, or where the beginning or the execution of the work is an offence in respect whereof the offender is liable in respect of any byelaw to a penalty, the existence of the work during its continuance in such a form and state as to be in contravention of the byelaw shall be deemed to be a continuing offence (h), but a penalty shall not be incurred in respect thereof after the expiration of one year from the day when the offence was committed or the byelaw was broken.

This section is in force in every urban district, and in the district of every rural authority who have adopted Part III. of the P. H. A., 1890. It is also in force (in combination with powers under s. 157) in many other rural districts or parts of districts in pursuance of Orders of the L. G. B. or M. of H.

When work must be begun.

The L. G. B. stated that they did not consider that an urban council could make a byelaw under the P. H. A., 1875, to the effect that their approval of plans of new streets or buildings shall be inoperative unless the works approved of shall be commenced within a stated period. See now, however, s. 15 of the P. H. A., 1907, post, upon this point.

Fee for examining plans.

The L. G. B. expressed the opinion that there is no authority for a byelaw under the P. H. A., 1875, requiring fees for the examination of deposited plans, or for the certificate given by the surveyor on the completion of buildings, etc. and that no such fees can be legally charged under the general law.

(a) These words are general, and are not limited to byelaws made under this Act. They appear to apply equally to byelaws made by any previously existing authority. See s. 326, post.

(b) This means a calendar month (52 & 53 Vict. c. 63, s. 3). The time cannot be extended by the byelaws (Clarke v. Bloomfield (1885), 1 T. L. R. 323).

(c) As to authentication of notice of approval or disapproval, see s. 266, post.

Powers of authority: remedies of builders, if plans disapproved.

(d) The disapproval will be of no avail if the builder can show that he has not disobeyed any byelaw, but it will, of course, be perilous to proceed until approval. See per WILLS, J., in R. v. Tynemouth R. D. C., [1896] 2 Q. B., at p. 230. See also Cook v. Hainsworth, ante, p. 350.

The authority must either approve or disapprove. It has been said that they cannot inquire into the right or title of a person to build on the land to which his plans relate (Ex parte Crosby (1877), 41 J. P. 740); but see Thompson v. Failsworth, p. 330, ante. They may at any rate take into consideration matters brought to their notice which show that a plan cannot in fact be carried out (R. v. Tynemouth Corporation, post, p. 355).

Where plans for a new street submitted to a corporation complied in all respects with the provisions of the local Act in force in the borough, it was held that the corporation could not refuse to pass them because they did not approve of the site (R. v. Preston (Corporation of) (1887), 3 T. L. R. 665). So too where, though the plans did not disclose any breach of the byelaws, the authority disapproved on the ground that a house of the nature and character proposed would be unsuitable to the locality and would tend to depreciate the character of the adjoining property, the court granted a mandamus directing the authority to approve the plans (R. v. Newcastle-upon-Tyne (Mayor, etc. of) (1889), 53 J. P. 788; 60 L. T. 963). In R. v. Harrogate, Q. B. D., April 16th, 1890, the court refused a writ of mandamus under similar circumstances, holding (on the authority of R. v. Lambourne Valley Rail. Co. (1888), 22 Q. B. D. 463; 53 J. P. 248), that the proper remedy was by action for a mandamus. But semble, if the case is a proper one for mandamus, a motion for the prerogative writ is now recognised as a correct course of proceeding: see R. v. St. George, Southwark (Vestry of) (1892), 61 L. J. Q. B. 398; 56 J. P. 821, and the more recent cases cited below. In R. v. Llandudno Improvement Commissioners, Times, January 28th, 1892, upon cause shown against a rule nisi for a mandamus to the defendants to approve plans of a new theatre to be built by the applicants, the court (LAWRENCE and WRIGHT, JJ.) overruled a preliminary objection that the proper remedy was by action of mandamus, though the rule was discharged on another ground.

Where an owner of land in a rural district proposed to lay it out as a building estate and to erect on it blocks of houses arranged in streets, and deposited with the authority plans of the proposed buildings, from which it appeared that each of the houses was to be drained with a separate drain ending in the middle of one of the proposed new streets, it was held that the authority were not entitled to attach to their approval a condition that the owner would undertake to construct, at his own expense, the sewers with which the drains were intended to communicate, and also the necessary main outfall sewer (R. v. Tynemouth R. D. C., [1896] 2 Q. B. 451; 60 J. P. 804).

In Smith v. Chorley R. D. C., [1897] 1 Q. B. 678; 61 J. P. 340, the Court of Appeal held that where a local authority have in good faith refused to pass building plans on the ground that the erection of the proposed houses would amount to the laying out of a new street of a width insufficient under their byelaws, no action will lie for a mandamus to compel them to approve the plans. And in R. v. Chiswick U. D. C. (1908), 72 J. P. 165; 6 L. G. R. 605, it was held (following R. v. Eastbourne Corporation (1900), 64 J. P. 724; 83 L. T. 338) that a prerogative writ of mandamus will not be granted to compel a local authority to approve plans which they have in good faith refused to approve on the ground that they infringe the statutory provisions as to the building line. A mandamus was also refused where a local authority refused to pass plans on the ground that the proposed buildings would obstruct a public highway (R. v. West Hartlepool Corporation (1901), 18 T. L. R. 1).

In R. v. Bexhill Corporation (1911), 75 J. P. 385; 9 L. G. R. 641, a builder submitted plans for a cottage close to the sea showing a drain and cesspool for dealing with the sink water; the plans satisfied all the authority's byelaws, but the surveyor advised the authority that the drain and cesspool were at such a level that at certain states of the tide they would become filled with percolating sea-water and therefore be useless. The authority disapproved the plans on the ground that no satisfactory system of drainage was proposed. It was held that they were not justified in disapproving on the ground of some general objection outside the merits of the plan itself. Thus in R. v. Mayor, etc. of Cambridge, [1922] 1 K. B. 250; 86 J. P. 13, it was held that a local authority were not entitled to refuse their approval of plans (which complied in every respect with their byelaws) merely on account of the narrowness of adjoining streets and the congestion of traffic therein. The plans were for the erection of a picture house in a congested part of the town. In R. v. Preston R. D. C. (1912), 76 J. P. 65; 106 L. T. 37, the owner of a farm submitted plans for the erection of new buildings. It was proposed to erect a barn attached to the kitchen at the back of the house, but there was to be no door between the kitchen and the barn. The byelaws provided that a new "domestic building" must have an open space at the rear. The definition of "domestic building" was as follows: "'Domestic building' means a dwelling-house or an office building, or other out-building appurtenant to a dwelling-house, whether attached thereto or not, or a shop, or any other building not being a public building, or of the warehouse class." The authority rejected the plans on the ground that they infringed the byelaws, because it was proposed to build the barn immediately in the rear of and adjoining the dwelling-house. It was held that the dwelling-house and barn constituted together one domestic building, and that therefore there was no obligation to have an open space immediately in the rear of the house, and a mandamus was granted; and see also R. v. Foot's Cray U. D. C., [1916] 1 K. B. 246; 79 J. P. 521, ante, p. 340.

A plan for laying out a building estate showed that the greater part of a new street was to be laid out on a certain meadow field. The authority were advised that the field must, under certain covenants, be kept for ever as arable or pasture land, or as lawns, shrubberies or gardens, and for no other purpose whatsoever, and they disapproved the plan on the ground (inter alia) that it was not practicable to lay out the street as shown in the plan. It was held that the authority had jurisdiction to refuse approval on the ground that in view of these restrictive covenants the plan could not in fact be carried out (R. v. Tynemouth Corporation, [1911] 2 K. B. 361; 75 J. P. 420).

A builder, whose plans are disapproved, may, assuming them to in fact comply with the byelaws, either proceed to build, or apply for a mandamus, if the ground of refusal or conduct of the authority justifies such a course, as to which see the cases, supra. In some cases he may, under a local Act, have an appeal to quarter sessions, see Cook v. Hainsworth, ante, p. 350. An action for damages will not lie against a local authority for maliciously refusing to approve plans; but in a proper case a mandamus will be granted to hear and determine the application (Davis v. Bromley Borough Council, [1908] 1 K. B. 170; 71 J. P. 513).

If an authority have assented to the erection of a building on condition of its being removed within a given time, it would seem that they have no power to enforce the fulfilment of such a condition unless they have taken a bond with sureties conditioned for such removal. See Parsons v. Timewell (1879), 44 J. P. 296, decided with reference to the Metropolitan Building Act, 1855, ss. 45, 46.

Where an authority has not within the month prescribed by the section signified its disapproval of the plans laid before it, there is authority for the proposition that it cannot afterwards object to the building according to the plan (Masters v. Pontypool L. B., ante, p. 326). And see Slee v. Bradford (Mayor of), ante, p. 326; Clarke v. Bloomfield (1885), 1 T. L. R. 323. According, however, to a later decision, this proposition is open to question, for it was there held that an actual approval of plans affords no answer to a charge of building contrary to the byelaws: see Yabbicom v. King, ante, p. 330. And, notwithstanding any default by the authority, the Attorney-General might in a sufficiently important case intervene to enforce compliance with the byelaws by an action for an injunction. See Att.-Gen. v. Ashbourne Recreation Ground Co., ante, p. 352, and Att.-Gen. v. Kerr and Ball (1915), 79 J. P. 51; 12 L. G. R. 1277.

Removal of work.

(e) There may be a provision to this effect in the byelaws: see s. 157, ante, p. 327; and cf. Robinson v. Barton Eccles L. B., on p. 333, ante. Notwithstanding the power of given by this section, the authority may impose a penalty for breach of any byelaw; see Hall v. Nixon, ante, p. 349, and see Andrews v. Wirral R. D. C., infra.

As to other remedies for infraction of byelaws, see note (n) under s. 157.

Notice must be given to the person erecting the building, and an opportunity afforded him of being heard before the authority can legally demolish the same (Cooper v. Wandsworth District Board of Works (1863), 32 L. J. C. P. 185; 8 L. T. 278; and see Masters v. Pontypool L. B., ante, p. 326), and Andrews v. Wirral R. D. C., [1916] 1 K. B. 863; 80 J. P. 257. These cases were followed and approved in Hopkins v. Smethwick L. B. (1890), 24 Q. B. D. 712; 54 J. P. 693; and see Att.-Gen. v. Hooper, [1893] 3 Ch. 483; 57 J. P. 564; see, however, Cheetham v. Manchester (Mayor of) (1875), L. R. 10 C. P. 249; 39 J. P. 343, where, in the case of a dangerous house, notice was not required under the provisions of a local Act, the certificate of the surveyor being conclusive as to the fact of the danger. For a case where it was held that a man had had an "opportunity of being heard" although a letter addressed to him had been returned through the Dead Letter office, see James v. Institute of Chartered Accountants (1908), 98 L. T. 225; 24 T. L. R. 27.

A byelaw (No. 98) provided that where a person executed any work to which the building byelaws applied he should "receive notice in writing specifying any matters in respect of which . . . the execution of such work may be in contravention of any byelaw relating to . . . buildings" and requiring him to obey the byelaw. F. received a notice, purporting to be given under the byelaw, from the surveyor of the council to the following effect: "I am directed by this council to draw your attention to the fact that a wooden erection has been made in the backyard of your property, situate at No. 20, Avondale Terrace, Chester-le-Street, contrary to byelaws Nos. 53 and 96 of the byelaws relating to new streets and buildings in force in this district, and you are hereby requested," etc. On an information against F. it was proved that he had contravened the byelaw No. 53, which related to the amount of open space required at the rear of any new domestic building, the required distance from the said building to the boundary of adjoining premises, and the required freedom from erection within the limits of this open space, but the justices dismissed the information on the ground that the notice was bad in that it did not, as required by byelaw No. 98, specify the matters in respect of which the erection of the building contravened the provisions of the byelaws referred to in the notice. It was held that the notice was sufficient (Dickinson v. Forsyth (1904), 68 J. P. 170; 90 L. T. 30). See also R. v. Slater (1903), 67 J. P. 299, where a notice alleged contravention of byelaws in "laying out" a new street, and a conviction in respect of "laying out or constructing," was quashed as being uncertain or disclosing two offences.

When an authority are entitled to pull down a building under the byelaws or this section, they may do so in any way they please so long as it is not dangerous; where an authority had pulled down rather more of a building than they were strictly entitled to do, they were held liable, the damage done not being appreciable (Jagger v. Doncaster R. S. A. (1890), 54 J. P. 438).

(f) See s. 251, post. This provision was contained in many byelaws, but it does not appear that such a byelaw was legal. Hence the provisions in the text.

As to the time within which these expenses may be recovered, see the note to s. 252, post.

In R. v. Morris (1883), 31 W. R. 609, it was held that on a certiorari to quash an order of justices for payment of expenses under this section costs might be granted, as the proceedings were civil, not criminal. This case was not followed in R. v. Parlby (1889), 53 J. P. 774, but it has now been decided by the Court of Appeal that the King's Bench Division and Court of Appeal have power to award costs to a successful applicant for a writ of certiorari (R. v. Woodhouse, [1906] 2 K. B. 501; 70 J. P. 485). The decision on the main point in this case was afterwards reversed (sub nom. Leeds Corporation v. Ryder, [1907] A. C. 420; 71 J. P. 484), but the decision as to the power to award costs on certiorari was not discussed.

Person causing work to be executed.

(g) B. contracted with W., the owner of land, to erect seventy-six houses thereon, and lodged plans with the authority. After erecting fifty-nine houses, B., with the owner's consent, agreed, on September 1st, with C., that C. should erect the rest of the houses at a cetain price and C., in erecting them, made the walls insufficient, and not in compliance with the byelaws. C.'s infringement of the byelaws was after September 1st, when B. had ceased to have anything to do with the buildings :—Held, that B. was not "the person erecting the buildings" which C. was building, and was not liable for the infringement of the rules as to thickness of walls (Brown v. Edmonton L. B. (1881), 45 J. P. 553). But quære whether under such circumstances, if a building were pulled down by virtue of this section, the expenses might not have been recovered from B. as the person causing the works to be executed.

B., the owner of waste ground, put a wooden fence along the boundary without floor or roof. He let the place to R., who sold toys during the season, but he forbade R. to fix anything to the structure. R., without B.'s knowledge, stretched some canvas across the top of the fence, but removed it when he left the premises. Three days after R. left, B. was charged with erecting a wooden building contrary to the byelaws. It was held that the justices were wrong in convicting B., the fact that he was owner not making him responsible for R.'s offence (if any) (Bennett v. Skegness L. B. (1890), 54 J. P. 469).

The respondent, a plumber, was summoned under London byelaws (1) for not executing certain works of redrainage in the manner prescribed by the byelaws, and (2) for not depositing plans of the alteration as required by the byelaws. He was employed by the owner of a house, a builder, to execute certain sanitary works; and the works executed by him included the works complained of. Before executing the works he did not deposit the plans required by the byelaws, which were expressed to apply to any person who should construct or reconstruct any drain or apparatus connected therewith. It was held, on the facts, that as there was nothing to show that the respondent was not merely carrying out the orders given him by the owner of the house, he could not be convicted (Kershaw v. Brooks, [1909] 2 K. B. 265; 73 J. P. 231). See also, as to the person liable for an infringement of byelaws, Sunderland Corporation v. Brown, and Att.-Gen. v. Gibb (as to laying out streets), on pp. 332, 335, ante, and Welsh v. West Ham Corporation (as to continuing offences), p. 358, post, and cases cited therewith.

Continuing offences.

(h) These words provide a means of meeting the decision in Marshall v. Smith (1873), L. R. 8 C. P. 416; 37 J. P. 471. In that case byelaws were made under the P. H. A., 1848, s. 115, and the L. G. A., 1858, s. 34, by one of which (No. 12) all party-walls, except in houses of one storey, were required, under a penalty of 40*s.*, to be nine inches at least in thickness, whilst another (No. 42) provided that "in case any offence under any of the foregoing byelaws shall continue, the person offending shall be liable to a further penalty of not exceeding 40*s.* for each day during which such offence may continue after written notice of the offence has been given by the local board to the offender." The appellant having been fined for an offence against byelaw No. 12, in building a party-wall four and a-half inches thick, was afterwards convicted upon an information charging him, under byelaw No. 42, with continuing the offence. It was held that suffering the party-wall to remain unaltered was not a continuing offence within byelaw No. 42, or, if it was, that the byelaw was unreasonable, the appropriate remedy being the removal of the structure by the board, as authorised by the L. G. A., 1858, s. 34. The court pointed out that while continuing to build might be a continuing offence, the failure to destroy after the building was completed could not.

Byelaws were made for the borough of S. under the L. G. A., 1858, s. 34. That Act was repealed by the present Act, but by s. 326 (post) all byelaws duly made under any of the repealed Sanitary Acts, and not inconsistent with any of the provisions of this Act, are to be deemed byelaws under this Act. The 27th byelaw provided that every person intending to erect any new building should give one month's notice of such intention, and send a plan to the surveyor. The 31st byelaw provided that if the owner or person intending to construct any new building failed to give the required notices, or constructed or caused to be constructed, any building contrary to any provision of the byelaws, he should be liable for each offence to a penalty not exceeding £5, and should pay a further sum not exceeding 40*s.* for each day such buildings should continue or remain contrary to the said provision. The appellant contended that he was not bound to give notice, or send a plan of alterations which he proposed to make in his house, as the alterations merely consisted in raising the old walls a storey higher; but he sent a plan, as he said, out of courtesy. This plan was disapproved, and notice of disapproval was sent to the appellant, but he went on with the buildings. He was then summoned by the surveyor for neglecting to give notice and send plans according to the byelaws. The magistrate found that the structure was a comfortable, good-looking dwelling-house, which before the work it was not. He also found, as a fact, that the old building was partly pulled down to the ground floor, and that the buildings erected on the site thereof formed a new building intended for occupation, and that they were a new building within s. 159, post, p. 361. The appellant was convicted and fined 40*s.* and costs, and a further sum of 20*s.* for each day the work should continue or remain contrary to the provisions of the byelaws. It was held, affirming the conviction, that the question whether the alterations constituted a new building was one of fact for the magistrate; that he had decided as a fact that they did constitute a new building; and that the penalty of £5 was payable in addition to the penalty of 40*s.* a day, though the information laid against the appellant was only for not having given the notice and plans under the 27th byelaw (James v. Wyvill (1884), 48 J. P. 725; 51 L. T. 237).

A builder who, between March and October in one year, had commenced and completed buildings without obtaining such approval of the plans as was required by byelaws framed under the Acts of 1848 and 1858, received in October notice to pull down such buildings; and upon non-compliance was, in December, summoned, and upon conviction fined £5, and, in addition, 5*s.* for every day from the date of the above notice down to the day of the summons, under the following byelaw: "That if any person shall build, without the approval of the local board, or do anything contrary to the provisions of the byelaws, he shall be liable for such offence to a penalty not exceeding £5, and shall pay a further sum, not exceeding 40*s.*, for every day during which such works shall continue to remain contrary to these provisions, and the board may cause the work to be pulled down." The court quashed the conviction: per DENMAN, J., the imposition by a byelaw of continuing penalties was not justified by the earlier Acts under which this byelaw was framed; and being, therefore, ultra vires it was not validated by s. 326, post; per HAWKINS, J., a good byelaw imposing continuing penalties might have been made, but this particular byelaw was bad, because it imposed a penalty of 40*s.* "for every day that the work shall continue," instead of "for every day that the offence shall continue," as authorised by s. 115 of the Act of 1848 and confirmed by s. 326, post; the offence only dating from the notice given by the board to discontinue the work. As to the conviction for the original offence it was held that the summons was out of time because there was no evidence that the acts complained of took place within the six months prior to December. Per HAWKINS, J., a byelaw in part good and in part bad is severable (Reay v. Gateshead (Mayor, etc. of) (1886), 50 J. P. 805; 55 L. T. 92).

An information was laid against a builder for carrying out work in a new street contrary to building byelaws and s. 158. The magistrate inflicted a penalty of £5, and a further penalty of £2 a day for each day that the offence continued. It was held, affirming the conviction, (1) that the construction of the works and their maintenance were not separate offences under the section, when, in fact, done by one person, and that they might, therefore, be included in the same information and summons; (2) that the appellant having received notice prior to the date of the information that he was offending against the byelaws, and that he was liable to an additional daily penalty during the continuance of the offence, he had sufficient notice that he was being proceeded against for the additional penalty (Airey v. Smith, [1907] 2 K. B. 273; 71 J. P. 285).

A byelaw as to the ventilation of buildings imposed a penalty on any person erecting a building in contravention of its provisions, and a further penalty for every day during which the offence continued after notice by the authority. A builder having been convicted of erecting a building in contravention of the byelaw, notice was duly given him by the authority. The builder had never been owner of the building; and since the conviction he had not been in possession of it, nor entitled to enter upon it. The building having been suffered to remain unaltered after the notice, it was held that the builder was not liable for the continuing offence under this section (Welsh v. West Ham Corporation, [1900] 1 Q. B. 324; and see Att.-Gen. v. Gibb, [1909] 2 Ch. 265; 73 J. P. 343). The respondent purchased a house from a builder who had in building it committed an offence against the Public Health (Buildings in Streets) Act, 1888, s. 3. It was held that the respondent had not committed an offence against the section by maintaining the house after notice from the authority in the same state as it was in at the time he bought it (Blackpool Corporation v. Johnson, [1902] 1 K. B. 646). The section under which the last-mentioned case was decided is, however, differently worded to s. 158. Cf. Hull v. London C. C., [1901] 1 Q. B. 580; 65 J. P. 309.

In Reay v. Mayor, etc. of Gateshead, ante, p. 358, HAWKINS, J., said: "This s. 158 really seems to have been pointed to the making that a continuing offence by law which the two learned judges who decided Marshall v. Smith held not to be a continuing offence. It reversed their judgment as to the existing state of the law, so that if this section had been passed before the decision in Marshall v. Smith, there would have been no doubt at all that the penalties there would have been properly imposed. At all events, since 1875 the offence is a continuing offence, and the continuing penalties may now be inflicted." But CHANNELL, J., in Welsh v. West Ham Corporation, supra, pointed out that the observations of HAWKINS, J., were not strictly accurate; for in Marshall v. Smith the defendant had sold the premises long before he was summoned, and the court, whilst holding no "continuing offence" to have been committed, did not decide that he would have been the person liable, if such an offence had been committed. And CHANNELL, J., said: "I think the section (s. 158) means that the person liable for the continuing offence must be the person who actually continued it. The local authority must find out the owner of the premises, and . . . they are assisted to this by s. 306 of the Act."

A brother and sister were convicted of permitting a new building, erected in contravention of a byelaw, to continue to exist in such state as to be in contravention of the byelaw. The only evidence given was that the brother had been convicted of originally erecting the building contrary to the byelaw, that it was still in the same condition, and that both appellants resided in the house to which the building was attached:—Held, that the conviction for the original offence was not evidence of the continuing offence (Pomeroy v. Malvern U. D. C. (1903), 67 J. P. 375; 89 L. T. 555).

In Reay v. Mayor, etc. of Gateshead, ante, p. 358, HAWKINS, J., also said: "But there is another short sentence in this section, which rather refers to the Statute of Limitations: 'But a penalty, . . . broken.' The limitation of time within which the penalty is to be sued for does not seem to me to affect the procedure at all. It simply provides that in the case of a continuing offence, no penalty shall be incurred for a greater period than twelve calendar months; but it does not limit the time of proceeding to twelve calendar months, or extend the six months given by Jervis's Act, under s. 11. It merely provides a limitation to the extent of the amount of the penalty which may be incurred."

A conviction for a continuing offence which imposes a fine in respect of every day during a period exceeding six calendar months is bad (R. v. Slade, [1895] 2 Q. B. 247; 59 J. P. 471).

It appears from the judgment in Reay v. Mayor, etc. of Gateshead, ante, p. 358, that it may, in many cases, be important to decide whether the period of the six months' limitation is to be reckoned from the commencement of a work or from its completion, and that in cases under byelaws made before 1875 the continuing existence of a work done in contravention of the byelaws is not, in general, a continuing offence. The expression "continuing offence" seems to have been first used by COCKBURN, L.C.J., in Mayer v. Harding (1867), 32 J. P. 421; 17 L. T. 140. See notes to s. 252, post. "Continuing nuisance" was also used by MELLOR, J., in Higgins v. Northwich Union (1870), 34 J. P. 806; 22 L. T. 752. It may be useful to append here some of the more recent cases subsequent to Marshall v. Smith, supra, as to what amounts to a continuing offence. Where, under a local Act, it was provided that if buildings should be erected contrary to the requirements of the corporation, the corporation might make complaint thereof to a justice, who was thereupon empowered to make an order directing the demolition of the building, it was held that, pursuant to the S. J. A., 1848, s. 11, the complaint must be made within six months after the completion of the building erected contrary to the provisions of the Act (Morant v. Taylor (1876), 1 Ex. D. 188; 40 J. P. 501). Under 27 & 28 Vict. c. 101, s. 51, which enacts that if any person shall encroach by making, or causing to be made, any building or fence on the side of any carriageway within fifteen feet from the centre thereof, he shall be subject to a penalty not exceeding

Note to Section 158.

40*s.*; the encroachment is not a continuing offence, and the six months' limitation commences from the completion of such building or fence (Coggins v. Bennett (1877), 2 C. P. D. 568). The 3 Geo. 4, c. 126, s. 118, enacts that any person causing an encroachment within a certain distance of the centre of a highway shall be subject to a penalty (see as to the meaning of this provision, Copestake v. West Sussex C. C., [1911] 2 Ch. 331; 75 J. P. 465). By 9 Geo. 4, c. 77, s. 18, no person may be convicted of an offence against s. 118, after the expiration of six months from the time when such offence shall have been committed. It was held that the period of six months began to run from the time when a substantial encroachment on the highway had been caused, and not from the final completion of the encroaching building or other encroachment (Hyde v. Entwistle (1884), 48 J. P. 820; 52 L. T. 760). Rumball v. Schmidt (1882), 8 Q. B. D. 603; 46 J. P. 567, was decided with reference to s. 156, now repealed, and is cited in the notes to the substituted enactment, 51 & 52 Vict. c. 52, post. R. v. Catholic Fire and Life Assurance Co. (1883), 48 L. T. 675, was a decision to the same effect on very similar words in ss. 26 and 27 of the Companies Act, 1862. Where an offence is in the nature of continued disobedience to, or default in conforming with, requirements that contemplate the execution of works necessarily taking some time to execute, the time of limitation cannot be said to run from the date of the requirement itself (Chepstow Electric Light Co., Ltd. v. Chepstow Gas Co., Ltd., [1905] 1 K. B. 198; 69 J. P. 72). It is doubtful whether the time of limitation can be said to begin to run when a person is continuing to disobey an order which is always operative until it is obeyed (ibid.). Where a temporary structure was erected without the licence of the Metropolitan Board of Works, but no complaint of such erection was made until after the expiration of six months from its completion, it was held that the offence was a continuous one, and that proceedings for the recovery of penalties might be taken within six months of the time when it continued to exist (Metropolitan Board of Works v. Anthony (1884), 54 L. J. M. C. 39; 49 J. P. 229). It is to be observed that this case was decided upon the 45 Vict. c. 14, s. 13, which not only imposes a penalty for the offence but also imposes a penalty "for every day on which such structure, etc. continues erected." L. was summoned by the Metropolitan Board of Works for laying out a new street of less than the width required by 25 & 26 Vict. c. 102, s. 98. L. gave notice of his intended building in May, 1883, to the district surveyor, and paid his fees, but the surveyor did not give notice to the board till November, 1883. The complaint was made in March, 1884. It was held that the notice to the district surveyor was the date of the discovery by the board, and that the complaint was too late, being more than six months after such discovery (Metropolitan Board of Works v. Lathey (1884), 49 J. P. 245). G., the builder of a new house in the metropolis, on April 1st, sent notice to B., the district surveyor, with plans. On August 4th, B. served forty-eight hours' notice on G. to amend the work and leave sufficient air space pursuant to 45 Vict. c. 14, s. 14. The house was then covered in, and nothing was done under the notice. On February 1st following, information was laid by B. It was held that the offence was the refusal to do the work ordered on August 4th, and that the information was within the six months (Bovill v. Gibbs (1887), 51 J. P. 485. And see London C. C. v. Worley, [1894] 2 Q. B. 826). An appellant was convicted on an information charging him with unlawfully extending a projection beyond the general line of buildings in a street without the permission of the London County Council contrary to the London Building Act, 1894, s. 73 (8), the projection complained of being a wooden case attached to the external wall of a building by iron brackets, and used as an advertising sign. It had been put up more than six months before the information was laid. It was held that the conviction was wrong because, first, the sign was not a projection within the meaning of the Act and, secondly, the prosecution was barred by s. 11 of the S. J. A., 1848 (Hull v. London C. C., [1901] 1 K. B. 580; 65 J. P. 309). In Hole v. Chard Union, [1894] 1 Ch. 293, it was held that continued pollution of a stream running through the plaintiff's land by permitting sewage to fall into it, was a continuing cause of action within R. S. C., Order XXXVI., r. 58. Reference may also be made to the cases of Heard v. Heard, [1896] P. 188; 60 J. P. 426, and Ellis v. Ellis, [1896] P. 251; 60 J. P. 823, decided under the Summary Jurisdiction (Married Women) Act, 1895; and Verney v. Fletcher, [1909] 1 K. B. 444; 73 J. P. 131, decided under the Factory Act, 1901.

159. For the purposes of this Act the re-erecting of any building pulled down to or below the ground floor, or of any frame building of which only the framework is left down to the ground floor, or the conversion into a dwelling-house of any building not originally constructed for human habitation, or the conversion into more than one dwelling-house of a building originally constructed as one dwelling-house only, shall be considered the erection of a new building. Section 159. What to be deemed a new building.

See notes on p. 340 et seq., ante. This section does not exhaust the definition of a "new" building. It only describes what shall be considered to be a new building in particular cases. Although it provides for the conversion of a "house" (see the definition in s. 4, ante, p. 20) into a dwelling-house, it makes no provision for the conversion of a dwelling-house into a house for other purposes, such as a factory or hall for concerts and entertainments. Such a conversion would not, apparently, amount to the erection of a new building, within the meaning of the byelaws, under this Act. But see the P. H. A., 1890, s. 23 (4), infra, and Morgan v. Kenyon, p. 363, post; and as to the reconversion of a converted building, see West Hartlepool Commissioners v. Levy, on p. 345, ante; Hall v. Eastbourne Corporation, and other cases cited therewith on p. 362, post, and the P. H. A., 1907, s. 23, post; and see Davison v. Birmingham Industrial Co-op. Society (1920), 90 L. J. K. B. 206; 85 J. P. 73, as to the meaning of the word "adapted" in s. 6 of the Housing (Additional Powers) Act, 1919. Alteration or conversion of buildings.

The P. H. A., 1890, s. 23 (4), provides that every local authority may make byelaws to prevent buildings which have been erected in accordance with byelaws made under the Public Health Acts from being altered in such a way that if at first so constructed they would have contravened the byelaws.

And s. 33 of the same Act provides that: "(1) Where the plan of a building has been, either before or after the adoption of this part of this Act in any district, deposited with a local authority in pursuance of any Act of Parliament or byelaw, and that building is described therein otherwise than as a dwelling-house, any person who wilfully uses or knowingly permits to be used such building or any part thereof for the purposes of habitation by any person other than the person placed therein to take care thereof, and the family of such person, shall be guilty of an offence under this section, and shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds, and to a daily penalty not exceeding forty shillings. (2) Provided that if such building has in the rear thereof and adjoining and exclusively belonging thereto such an open space as is required by any Act of Parliament or byelaw for the time being in force with respect to buildings intended to be used as dwelling-houses, and if such part of the building as is intended to be used as a dwelling-house has undergone such structural alterations, if any, as are necessary in the opinion of the local authority to render it fit for that purpose, the owner may use the same as a dwelling-house."

These sections of the Act of 1890 (for notes to which see the Act, post) are adoptive only; but, where they are in force, they meet some of the cases for which the text does not provide.

See also for a further extension of the definition of "new buildings," the P. H. A., 1907, ss. 23, 33, post.

The Act contains no definition of a dwelling-house. Reference may be made to the cases decided upon the term as used in the Parliamentary Registration Acts. See, for example, Lawson v. Fraser, ante, p. 22; Thompson v. Ward (1871), L. R. 6 C. P. 327; Boon v. Howard (1874), L. R. 9 C. P. 277.

The owner of an old house used as an hotel which had a coach-house and stable attached to it in its back yard, pulled these down and re-erected them as a three-storied annexe to the hotel, partly on the same site and partly on a piece of the yard. The arrangement of passages and staircases made the annexe practically part of the old house. It was held, under the corresponding provisions of 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 34, to be an addition thereto, and not in itself a re-erected and therefore "new" building (Shiel v. Sunderland Corporation (1861), 6 H. & N. 796). But where a stable in a yard at the rear of premises was pulled down and re-erected of smaller superficial dimensions, but somewhat higher, in another part of the same "New building" or not a question of fact.

yard, the old materials, with some addition, and the boundary walls of the yard, being made use of in such re-erection, it was held to be a "new building" within the same provisions (Hobbs v. Dance (1873), L. R. 9 C. P. 30; 38 J. P. 56).

See also James v. Wyvill, cited on p. 358, ante. In that case, Lord COLERIDGE, C.J., said: "The question whether a building is a new building or not has been decided over and over again to be a question of fact; it is a question of degree. For instance, if a building were nearly all taken away and then rebuilt, it clearly would be a new building; on the other hand, it is quite clear that by a small addition of, say, a door, the building would not thereby become a new building. Between these two extreme cases there may be thousands of cases, and it would be impossible to give a definition in each particular case as to what is or is not a new building, and it must be left to the discretion of each judge to decide for himself what is a new building." So, too, in Redruth Brewery Co. v. Redruth R. D. C. (1905), 69 J. P. 78; 3 L. G. R. 130, it was held that the question whether the re-erection of an old building amounts to the erection of a new building is one of fact, and that s. 159, supra, is not an exhaustive enumeration of all the instances where the re-erection of an old building should be considered the erection of a new building. A wooden shed had its roof removed and reconstructed; certain brick piers were raised, wooden props were replaced by iron pillars, a new end wall was erected, and two wooden walls were replaced by iron. The only portions of the old building left were the wooden principals of the roof, portions of the brick piers and a wall. The court held that it must be regarded as a new building (Lee v. Barton (1909), 73 J. P. 509; 101 L. T. 600). The appellant for three years occupied two vans as a dwelling-house; he then removed them, and having built a low wall took the vans back again and placed them partly on the wall and partly on blocks of wood. He then built a chimney stack into the side of one of the vans and occupied them as a dwelling-house. He was summoned under bye-laws for failing to give notice of his intention to erect a new building, and for occupying a new dwelling-house before it had been certified as fit for human habitation. The justices convicted; and it was held that there was evidence that he had erected a new building, and that the vans constituted a new dwelling-house, and that, therefore, the convictions must be affirmed (James v. Tudor (1913), 77 J. P. 130).

A man, who bought a field with an old railway carriage in it, converted such carriage into a dwelling-house by altering its internal arrangement, but left untouched the main portion of its shell. It was held that by virtue of s. 159 he had erected a "new building," and that as that building was erected in breach of a bye-law, the council were entitled under another byelaw, to pull down not only the work done in converting the carriage into a dwelling-house, but the whole structure (Hanrahan v. Leigh-on-Sea U. D. C., [1909] 2 K. B. 257; 73 J. P. 308). See also Andrews v. Wirrall R. D. C., [1916] 1 K. B. 863; 80 J. P. 257; and cf. Att.-Gen. v. Kerr and Ball (1915), 79 J. P. 51; 12 L. G. R. 1277.

Where a portion of an old building is taken down for the purpose of re-erection, only that portion is a new building within the meaning of s. 23 of P. H. A., 1907. See R. v. Foot's Cray U. D. C., [1916] 1 K. B. 246; 79 J. P. 521, ante, p. 340.

A local Act provided that the conversion of one dwelling-house into two or more, and the reconversion into a dwelling-house of a building discontinued as a dwelling-house, should be deemed to be the erection of a new building. A block of three shops with dwelling-rooms over each was converted into one shop in 1892; the upper part of the whole block was occupied as one dwelling from 1900 to 1903; in 1903 the shop was again divided into three shops, and the upper part correspondingly divided into three dwellings. It was held that the alteration of the upper part into three dwellings was the erection of a new building within the meaning of the Act (Hall v. Eastbourne Corporation (1905), 69 J. P. 369); and see also Cammell, Laird & Co. v. Brownridge (1919), 83 J. P. 190; 17 L. G. R. 441; and cf. Alexander v. Tracy (1915), 79 J. P. 458; 14 L. G. R. 65.

In Harding v. Larne U. D. C. (1911), 45 Ir. L. T. 182, it was held that the conversion without any structural alteration of a harness room into a living room, was the "conversion into a dwelling-house" of a building not originally constructed for human habitation, that therefore a penalty was incurred by not depositing plans, and that to continue to use it as a living room after conviction was a continuing offence.

By a local Act "the conversion of a dwelling-house into any other building not intended for human habitation shall . . . be deemed to be the erecting of a new building." Premises occupied as two separate dwelling-houses were compulsorily closed by order of the corporation as being unfit for human habitation, and they were then let to the respondents who, without making any structural alterations, occupied them as two warehouses for two and a-half years. Then the respondents, without giving any notices, made interior alterations so as to convert the two warehouses into one. On the hearing of an information against them for infringing a byelaw by beginning to erect a new building without giving notice, it was agreed that if the premises were warehouses at the time of conversion no notice was required, but that if they were dwelling-houses at that date notice should have been given. The court by a majority held that the work was in the conversion of a building of the dwelling-house class into a building of the warehouse class, and that therefore the respondents had committed the offence charged (Morgan v. Kenyon (1914), 78 J. P. 66).

Incorporation of certain provisions of 10 & 11 Vict. c. 34.

160. The provisions of the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, with respect to the following matters, that is to say,

(1) With respect to naming the streets and numbering the houses; and

(2) With respect to improving the line of the streets and removing obstructions; and

(3) With respect to ruinous or dangerous buildings; and

(4) With respect to precautions during the construction and repair of the sewers streets and houses, shall, for the purpose of regulating such matters in urban districts, be incorporated with this Act (a).

Notices for alterations under the sixty-ninth, seventieth, and seventy-first sections, directions under the seventy-third section, and orders under the seventy-fourth section of the said Towns Improvement Clauses Act, may, at the option of the urban authority, be served on owners (b) instead of occupiers, or on owners as well as occupiers, and the cost of works done under any of these sections may, when notices have been so served on owners, be recovered from owners instead of occupiers; and when such cost is recovered from occupiers so much thereof may be deducted from the rent of the premises where the work is done as is allowed in the case of private improvement rates under this Act (c).

This section is applied by the Act to urban districts only, but the several powers may be applied to rural districts by order of the M. of H. under s. 276. An application for such an order should set out the precise powers desired, the names of the rural parishes in which such powers are considered to be necessary, and (shortly) the grounds upon which the application is made.

Forms for use under this section will be found in the Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. XI., at pp. 89—101.

(a) No. (1) includes ss. 64, 65; No. (2), ss. 66—74; No. (3), ss. 75—78; No. (4), ss. 79—83. All these sections are set out in App. I., post, Vol. II. As to the effect of such an incorporation of a statute, see the cases cited in note (b) to s. 57, ante, p. 132.

With regard to some of these subjects, special provisions will be found in the Act (compare, e.g., s. 154 with s. 67 of the Act of 1847), and it will be important to ascertain whether these provisions in any respect conflict with those in the incorporated Act. Where that may be the case, the present statute should afford the rule to guide, as containing the latest legislation on the particular subject. See as to s. 64 of the Act of 1847, the P. H. A., 1907, s. 21, post; as to s. 80, the (b) See the definition in s. 4, ante, p. 8. And as to the authentication and service of notices, see ss. 266, 267, post.

(c) See s. 213, post, p. 493. As to the effect of special covenants and agreements between lessor and lessee, see s. 226, post, p. 506, but that section does not apply to the case mentioned in the text.

Lighting Streets, etc.

Powers of urban authority for lighting their district. 12 & 13 Vict. c. 94, s. 8.

161. Any urban authority may contract (a) with any person (b) for the supply of gas, or other means of lighting the streets, markets, and public buildings in their district (c), and may provide such lamps, lamp posts, and other materials and apparatus as they may think necessary for lighting the same (d).

Where there is not any company or person (b) (other than the urban authority) authorised by or in pursuance of any Act of Parliament, or any order confirmed by Parliament (e), to supply gas for public and private purposes, supplying gas (f) within any part of the district of such authority, such authority may (g) themselves undertake to supply gas for such purposes or any of them throughout the whole or any part of their district; and if there is any such company or person so supplying gas, but the limits of supply of such company or person include part only of the district, then the urban authority may themselves undertake to supply gas throughout any part of the district not included within such limits of supply.

Where an urban authority may under this Act themselves undertake to supply gas for the whole or any part of their district, a provisional order (h) authorising a gas undertaking may be obtained by such authority under and subject to the provisions of the Gas and Waterworks Facilities Act, 1870 (i), and any Act amending the same; and in the construction of the said Act the term "the undertakers" shall be deemed to include any such urban authority: Provided that for the purposes of this Act the Local Government Board shall throughout the said Act be deemed to be substituted for the Board of Trade.

Rural districts.

This section applies to urban authorities only, but the M. of H. and their predecessors the L. G. B. have issued many orders under s. 276 empowering rural authorities to undertake (by contracting for) the lighting of streets and public places in rural parishes (not of course private houses). An application for such an order should be by resolution of the council, of which a copy should be forwarded to the Board with a short statement of the grounds upon which the application is made, and explaining the arrangements which are proposed for lighting the particular parish or parishes referred to. The lighting need not necessarily be by gas, but if electric lighting is proposed the council should consult the Electricity Commissioners, as an order may be procurable under the Electricity (Supply) Act, 1919, which will dispense with any Order of the M. of H.

As under the Lighting and Watching Act, 1833, action may also be taken parochially for the lighting of rural parishes, the clerk should state in connection with any application for urban powers whether that Act has been adopted in the area in which the rural council propose to act. In this case the application must extend to s. 163, and it must be explained why it is proposed to supersede the existing lighting authority (Parish Council or Inspectors), and what is their attitude towards the proposal. See below as to the provision made in such orders for expenses.

Note to Section 161.

Orders of the M. of H. authorising the lighting of rural parishes by the district council confer only the powers of the first paragraph of s. 161, relating to contracts for the supply of gas or other illuminant for lighting streets, etc. The Ministry and the L. G. B. held that there were practical difficulties which precluded rural councils from carrying on a gas undertaking even if they were invested with power to establish or purchase one. The difficulty arose not in conferring powers under ss. 161 and 162, but from the fact that, in addition to such powers, an urban authority, in ordinary cases, required the powers of a Provisional Order under the Gas and Waterworks Facilities Acts, and in the case of a rural council there was no express statutory authority enabling them to apply for such an order. It may be noted here that by Order in Council of December 9th, 1920, the powers and duties of the M. of H. in relation to gas undertakings have been transferred to the Board of Trade. See also the provisions of the Gas Regulation Act, 1920, which, however, continue the disability. See the Electricity (Supply) Act, 1919, in the Appendix, post, Vol. II.

(a) See s. 174, post, p. 397, as to the regulations regarding the contracts. As to the meaning in a contract of the words "actual cost of generating the light," see Buluwayo Municipality v. Buluwayo Waterworks Co., Ltd., [1908] A. C. 241.

During the recent war because of the restrictions requiring reduced lighting of streets in compliance with orders under the Defence of the Realm Act, full performance of lighting contracts was rendered impossible. The legal position under such contracts was considered by the courts in the following cases: Leiston Gas Co. v. Leiston-cum-Sizewell U. D. C., [1916] 2 K. B. 428; 80 J. P. 385; Wycombe Borough Electric Light and Power Co. v. Chipping Wycombe Corporation (1917), 15 L. G. R. 658; 33 T. L. R. 489.

(c) It must be noticed that this power is limited to the district of the authority. A contract extending to any place outside the district would be ultra vires.

By the Metropolis Gas Act, 1860, s. 6, a certain district was assigned to each metropolitan gas company, and it was provided that no other company or person should "supply gas for sale within the said limits." By s. 14, the supply of gas to owners or occupiers of premises within or partly within the company's district requiring such supply was made compulsory. A railway company had a station which was partly within the district of the appellants and partly within that of the respondents. The respondents, on being required to do so by the company, provided a meter at a point within their own district, from which they supplied gas which was used for lighting the whole station, including the part which was in the appellants' district, to which it was conducted through pipes laid on the premises of the company. It was held that this was an infringement of s. 6 (Gas Light and Coke Co. v. South Metropolitan Gas Co. (1890), 54 J. P. 373; 62 L. T. 126). See also Att.-Gen. v. West Gloucestershire Water Co., [1909] 2 Ch. 338; 73 J. P. 453, as to the point at which "a supply is given."

It was held in Fareham L. B. v. Smith (1891), 90 L. T. Jo. 467; 7 T. L. R. 443, that an urban authority might authorise their contractor to put up posts and wires in streets vested in them, for the purpose of lighting such streets by electricity, and might restrain by injunction the owners of adjoining land who claimed the subsoil of the street from cutting or otherwise interfering with the electric wires and poles.

The streets lighted need not necessarily be highways repairable by the inhabitants at large. See note to s. 150, ante, p. 296.

Expenses in case of a rural council.

The L. G. B., by an order under s. 276, post, declared that the provisions of the first paragraph of s. 161 should be in force within certain portions of a rural sanitary authority, and invested the rural sanitary authority with all the powers, rights, capacities, etc. of an urban sanitary authority "under those provisions" within such portions of the district. The rural authority incurred lighting expenses under this order, and treated them as general expenses under s. 229. A poor rate having been made to defray the expenses, a railway company was assessed in respect of the full rateable value of the property which consisted of land occupied and used as a railway:—Held, that upon the true construction of the order the rural authority was invested only with the power of an urban authority to incur lighting expenses under the provisions of the first paragraph of s. 161, and not with the rating powers applicable to an urban authority; that the expenses were rightly treated as general and not as special expenses under s. 229; and that the company was not entitled to be rated under s. 211 in the proportion of one-fourth part only of the rateable value (L. & Y. Rail. Co. v. Bolton Union (1890), 15 App. Cas. 323; 54 J. P. 532).

It may be noted, however, that most orders putting the first paragraph of the section in force in a rural parish contain a provision that the expenses of the rural council in executing the powers shall be chargeable as special expenses upon the parish.

Liability for negligence in respect of lighting.

Where trustees of a public road were empowered to place lamps along the road, but failed to do so, it was held that they were not liable in an action to a person injured by reason of the road not being lighted (Harris v. Baker (1815), 4 M. & S. 27). In a case where a brougham ran against a lamp post at a dangerous point, the court held that the failure to light the lamp was not negligence, there being no statutory obligation to do so (Mellor v. Heywood (Mayor, etc. of) (1884), 48 J. P. 148).

Harris v. Baker was followed in Cowley v. Newmarket L. B., ante, p. 255. By the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, s. 130, the lighting authority have a discretion as to the time during which public street lamps shall continue lighted, and when they have bonâ fide exercised their discretion in that respect they are not liable on the ground of either nonfeasance or misfeasance for any accident, caused through the lights having been turned out at the hour ordered (Young v. St. Mary, Islington (Vestry of) (1896), 60 J. P. 821). On the other hand, where the defendants, who were both the highway and the lighting authority, had erected a post in the centre of a footpath at its entrance to prevent cattle straying upon it, and had placed a lamp near the post, which they were in the habit of lighting at night, and the plaintiff, passing along the footpath at night, when the lamp was not lighted, came against the post and was injured, it was held that the defendants were liable (Lamley v. East Retford (Mayor, etc. of) (1891), 55 J. P. 133. In Sheppard v. Glossop Corporation, [1921] 3 K. B. 132; 85 J. P. 205, a lamp which had been placed on a retaining wall was extinguished every night. The plaintiff whilst the light was extinguished missed his way without negligence, strayed on to private land and fell over the retaining wall into the street and was injured. It was held in an action for negligence against the authority that s. 161 imposes no obligation on a local authority to light the streets in their district, that the defendants, although they had begun, were not bound to continue the lighting of the street and that not having done anything to make the street dangerous they were not bound to give warning of danger. See also Martin v. Blackburn Corporation (1907), 71 J. P. N. 124 (a county court case), and McClelland v. Manchester Corporation, on p. 257, post, where street lights were misleading; and see Ryan v. Tipperary C. C. and other cases on p. 256, ante, as to the duty of a highway authority to provide for the safety of the public during any interference with a road.

See also the following cases during the recent war of accidents where negligence was alleged arising out of the restrictions in public lighting imposed by order under the Defence of the Realm Acts, Brown v. Lambeth Borough Council (1915), 32 T. L. R. 61; Gt. Central Rail. Co. v. Hewlett, [1916] 2 A. C. 511; 80 J. P. 361; Morrison v. Sheffield Corporation, [1917] 2 K. B. 866; 81 J. P. 277; Baldock v. Westminster City Council, (1919) 83 J. P. 98; 17 L. G. R. 190; Carpenter v. Finsbury Borough Council (1920), 84 J. P. 107.

Discretion as to site for lamp posts.

The authority have a discretion where to erect lamp posts, and the proper exercise of their discretion will not be interfered with at the suit of adjoining owners even though they complain of such posts obstructing the access to their premises (Chaplin v. Westminster Corporation, [1901] 2 Ch. 329; 65 J. P. 661; and cf. Goldberg & Sons, Ltd. v. Liverpool Corporation (1900), 82 L. T. 362; 16 T. L. R. 320; Escott v. Newport Corporation, [1904] 2 K. B. 369; 68 J. P. 135).

(e) See s. 52, note (b), ante, p. 126. There is no reference here to personal pecuniary profit.

Companies without statutory powers.

It will be observed that the section gives no protection to gas companies who are not regulated by parliamentary powers. The L. G. B. once stated, however, that although there is no insuperable difficulty in the way of the issue of a Provisional Order enabling an urban council to set up and maintain gasworks in opposition to an existing company, and without purchasing their undertaking, the Board would not be disposed to issue a Provisional Order for that purpose unless some very exceptional reasons were shown for the application. As already pointed out the Board of Trade, not the M. of H., now exercise the powers formerly vested in the L. G. B. and the provisions of the Gas Regulation Act, 1920, must be considered, post, Vol. II.

(f) It will be observed that the statutory company must be actually supplying gas within the district, as well as empowered by their Act or order to do so. In a case in which part of the district of an urban council applying for a Provisional Order was found to be within the gas limits of the council of a neighbouring borough, though gas had never been supplied within the area, the L. G. B. required the observations of the town council upon the subject of the application, and eventually inserted a provision in the order to the effect that the town council's powers should not be prejudiced or affected if at the expiration of five years from the passing of the confirming Act the urban council were not furnishing, or prepared on demand to furnish, a supply of gas in the area.

Companies not actually supplying.

(g) This is only an enabling power. There is no obligation upon the urban authority to undertake these works, but they are not to set up gasworks to compete with companies or other bodies under statutory powers. But though they may not themselves undertake a supply in opposition to a company, they may apparently contract with a person other than the company under the first paragraph of the section. As to an authority's liability for a nuisance caused by their gasworks, see Wood v. Conway Corporation (1914), 78 J. P. N. 171.

It would seem that an authority to whom the undertaking of a company supplying gas under statutory powers has been transferred is in the same position as the company for purposes of this section. See Wolverhampton (Corporation of) v. Bilston (Commissioners of), [1891] 1 Ch. 315).

Gas Orders.

(h) Now see the Gas Regulation Act, 1920, s. 10, post, Vol. II. It is not absolutely necessary for the urban authority to procure an order to enable them to set up gasworks, but they would have none of the powers which are given by the general gas statutes for carrying on such works unless they procured such an order. Whether, if they acquire the undertaking of a company established under a private Act, they can, without such order, avail themselves of all the powers of such Act, is open to doubt. See Richmond Waterworks Co. v. Richmond Vestry, ante, p. 126. See also notes to s. 162, post, p. 368.

Regulations as to Orders.

The Board of Trade have made rules dated November 16th, 1920, with respect to applications for special orders under s. 10 of the Gas Regulation Act, 1920, which supersede the general order of the L. G. B. dated September 7th, 1891, under the Acts of 1870 and 1873. This later order must be carefully studied by any council contemplating an application for powers to establish a gas undertaking.

Supply outside district.

An Order issued by the Board of Trade may authorise the urban council to supply gas beyond the limits of their district. See s. 10 (2) (e) of the Gas Regulation Act, 1920, post, Vol. II. If special reasons exist why such powers should be granted the council may possibly secure the insertion of a clause in the confirming Bill.

Income tax.

As to the assessment to income tax of an authority supplying gas for public and private purposes, see Dillon v. Haverfordwest (Corporation of), [1891] 1 Q. B. 575; 55 J. P. 392.

(i) 33 & 34 Vict. c. 70, amended by 36 &37 Vict.c. 89. The earlier Act incorporates the Gasworks Clauses Act, 1847, which was amended by the Gasworks Clauses Act, 1871. The Conspiracy and Protection of Property Act, 1875, s. 4, deals with breaches of contract by persons employed in supply of gas or water. See the above Acts in App. I., post, Vol. II.

Power for sale of undertaking of gas company to urban authority.

162. For the purpose of supplying gas within their district or any part thereof either for public or private purposes any urban authority may (with the sanction of the Local Government Board) buy, and the directors of any gas company (a), in pursuance, in the case of a company registered under the Companies Act, 1862 (b), of a special resolution of the members passed in manner provided by that Act, and in the case of any other company, of a resolution passed by a majority of three-fourths in number and value of the members present, either personally or by proxy, at a meeting specially convened with notice of the business to be

Section 162. transacted, may sell and transfer to such authority, on such terms as may be agreed on between such authority and the company (c), all the rights powers and privileges and all or any of the lands premises works and other property of the company, but subject to all liabilities attached to the same at the time of such purchase.

The powers of the M. of H. (as successors to the L. G. B.) under this section were transferred to the Board of Trade by Order in Council dated November 9th, 1920.

Rural districts.

See note to preceding section as to the position of rural councils.

Purchase of gas undertakings.

Compulsory powers for the purchase of gas undertakings cannot be obtained otherwise than by special Act of Parliament.

(a) It has been observed that this section is confined to companies. As regards private individuals who may be owners of such works, no provision seems to be requisite. But the section does not in terms apply to public commissioners or trustees holding gasworks.

(b) See now the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908.

(c) A gas company supplied gas in a district, a portion of which was not within their statutory limits of supply. By an agreement made between the gas company and the urban council of the district outside the limits of supply, it was agreed that the company should sell, and the council should purchase, all and singular the works, pipes, mains, meters, and other gas apparatus, and all other the real and personal property (if any) and all effects of the company of whatsoever kind laid down or situate within the district, freed and discharged (as between the company and the council) from all debts, outgoings, and liabilities and all easements, rights, powers, authorities and privileges (if any) enjoyed or exercisable by the company, at a price to be agreed upon, or, in default of agreement, to be determined by arbitration. The agreement further provided that in the case of arbitration, and in the event of the council not continuing to take a supply of gas in bulk from the company, the arbitrators should take into consideration, in fixing the purchase-money, the value of any mains or pipes laid down by the company outside the district of the council for the purpose of supplying gas within the district of the council, which, by reason of the sale, would be rendered useless to the company. By a second agreement, terminable upon twelve months' notice, it was agreed that the council should take a supply of gas in bulk from the company. It was held that the purchase-money was to be assessed on the basis that the sale was a sale of a part of the gas company's undertaking as a going concern, including goodwill. And, further, that the arbitrator should take into consideration the contingency of the council not continuing to take a supply of gas from the company, and should assess compensation in respect of the mains and pipes outside the district of the council provided by the company for supplying gas within such district upon that basis (In re Hucknall U. D. C. and South Normanton, etc. Gas Co., Ltd. (1905), 69 J. P. 329; 3 L. G. R. 704). See also p. 121, ante, for other decisions upon the construction of "purchase clauses."

Lighting and Watching Act, 1833, to be superseded by this Act.

163. Where in any place which after the passing of this Act becomes constituted or included in an urban district, or which by virtue of any order of the Local Government Board becomes subject to this enactment (a), the Act passed in the fourth year of the reign of King William the Fourth, intituled "An Act to repeal an Act of the eleventh year of his late Majesty King George the Fourth, for the lighting and watching of parishes in England and Wales, and to make other provisions in lieu thereof," has been adopted, the said Act shall be superseded (b) by this Act; and all lamps lamp posts gas pipes fire engines hose and other property vested in the inspectors for the time being under the said Act shall vest in the authority having under this Act jurisdiction in such place.

Note to Section 163.

As to the circumstances under which this section is sometimes put in force in rural parishes, see note to s. 161.

(a) This appears to refer to ss. 272 and 276, post.

(b) This unusual word is introduced from 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 46. It is not the same as repealed, and, therefore, so much of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 90, i.e., the Lighting and Watching Act, 1833, as relates to watching is not, as it seems, affected by this section. The watching provisions are, however, obsolete, though s. 44 as to fire engines is still operative in some rural parishes.

The Lighting and Watching Act, 1833, enabled the inhabitants of parishes, or defined parts of parishes, to adopt the Act and appoint inspectors for carrying into execution its powers for the lighting of streets and public places. Those powers did not extend to the establishment of gas works or the supply of gas to private consumers. Under the L. G. A., 1894, the power of adopting the Act is now vested in the parish meetings of rural parishes, and upon such adoption the parish council, if there is one, becomes the authority for carrying it into execution. If it is desired to limit the incidence of the expenses, as well as the actual lighting, to part only of a rural parish, a parish meeting for the adoption of the Act may be called for that part only. All lighting inspectors who were acting for entire rural parishes having parish councils were, upon the date of operation of the Act of 1894, superseded by such councils, and as regards inspectors who were acting for parts of parishes, provision was made that either the parish meeting, or the inspectors themselves, might transfer the inspectors' powers to the parish council. There are now very few lighting inspectors.

In cases where a rural district council possess urban powers under s. 161 (first paragraph), in regard to a parish, and have exercised those powers, it would seem that that council should carry out any necessary lighting, and that an adoption of the Act of 1833 by the parish meeting would be of no effect. The rural council may, however, delegate their powers to the parish council. If such urban powers, though granted, have not been exercised by a rural council, and the parish meeting desire to adopt the Act of 1833 with a view to the required lighting being regulated under that Act, the parish council should approach the rural council and the M. of H. with a view to the rescission of the urban powers order. Exceptional circumstances should, however, be shown to justify such an Order, as action by a Rural Council has advantages over the other procedure. Under s. 161 no separate assessment to a special lighting rate has to be made and the parish meeting has not to vote an annual maximum sum for lighting purposes.

PUBLIC PLEASURE GROUNDS, ETC.

164. Any urban authority may purchase (a) or take on lease lay out plant improve (b) and maintain lands for the purpose of being used as public walks or pleasure grounds (c), and may support or contribute to the support of public walks or pleasure grounds provided by any person whomsoever. Urban authority may provide places of public recreation.

Any urban authority may make byelaws for the regulation of any such public walk or pleasure ground, and may by such byelaws provide for the removal from such public walk or pleasure ground of any person infringing any such byelaw by any officer of the urban authority or constable (d).

This section, it will be observed, applies to urban districts only, but a rural council may apply to the M. of H. for urban powers enabling them to provide public walks or pleasure grounds in a particular parish. An alternative method, however, of providing a place for public recreation for the inhabitants of a rural parish is afforded by the L. G. A., 1894, s. 8 (1) (b), which enables parish councils to provide recreation grounds. Such councils moreover possess powers as to village greens, open spaces, and public walks which are for the time being under their control, or Rural districts.

Note to Section 164.

to the expense of which they have contributed. See ss. 6 (1) (c) (iii) and 8 (1) (d) of the Act of 1894.

See also, as to the powers of a county council in this behalf, the Open Spaces Act, 1906, s. 14, post, Vol. II.

Purchase.

(a) For the sections of this Act as to the purchase of land, see 175, 176, post, pp. 412, 417.

Land outside district.

On the question of the power of a local authority to provide a pleasure ground outside their district, the L. G. B. expressed the view that, while they were not aware of any legal objection to the purchase by an authority under the P. H. A., 1875, of land outside their district for purposes of a pleasure ground, difficulties might arise in recovering penalties under the byelaws, since under s. 253, post, proceedings could only be taken by a party aggrieved, or by the council of the district in which the ground was situate, except with the consent of the Attorney-General.

Restrictive covenants.

A corporation acquired land by private contract for the purpose of a public park, and covenanted to keep the land as an open space for the enjoyment of the public, "subject to no buildings or erections of any kind being put thereupon except such structures as summer houses, a bandstand or shelters not exceeding twelve feet in height for the accommodation and convenience of the public." The corporation were in the course of erecting shelters which contained places of convenience, such as lavatories and retiring rooms, for the use of the public. Under their local Act the corporation were authorised to erect conveniences in any public park, and under the P. H. A., 1875, they had a general power to erect conveniences, and also to purchase land for public parks. In an action by the vendors on the covenant, it was held (1) that a public convenience was not ejusdem generis with a shelter, and that the covenant had been infringed; (2) that the covenant was not void as imposing a fetter upon the corporation in the exercise of powers conferred upon them by statute for the public benefit (Stourcliffe Estate Co., Ltd. v. Bournemouth Corporation, [1910] 2 Ch. 12; 74 J. P. 289).

For a case arising out of the erection of a bandstand in breach of a covenant, see Palliser v. Dover Corporation (1914), 58 Sol. J. 379.

When purchasing land for a pleasure ground, a local authority should take care that third parties do not possess rights which will prevent its being used by the public (Deane v. Ramsgate Corporation (1892), 8 T. L. R. 199).

Extent of powers as to "laying out," etc.

(b) Prior to the P. H. A., 1907, the L. G. B. were decidedly liberal in their interpretation of the words "lay out, plant, improve," and they sanctioned loans upon estimates which included such items as greenhouses, reading-rooms, bandstands, gymnastic appliances, shelters, cycle-tracks, bowling-greens and lakes. Questions sometimes arose, however, as to whether a proposed building or appliance could properly be provided as an adjunct to a public pleasure ground, more especially if it was intended to make a charge for its use. See now, however, ss. 76 and 77 of the P. H. A., 1907, which largely extend the powers of a district council when declared in force in their district by order of the M. of H.

Subject to any restrictive covenants or conditions affecting the land, an authority in whose district the P. H. A., 1907, s. 76, is in force, can apparently set apart a portion of a public park or recreation ground for golf (or any other game). It would seem, however, that, unless they obtain special powers under a local Act, they cannot make any charge for the use of the links (or ground), their powers in the matter of charges being limited by paragraphs (c) and (g) of the section. The L. G. B. took this view.

The Wallasey Urban District Council had, under Parliamentary sanction, become the owners, at a cost of over £90,000, of certain property facing the Mersey at New Brighton, and were authorised to construct a promenade and marine park on the foreshore. In 1909 they promoted a Bill (which passed the House of Commons), by which they sought powers to erect, behind the promenade, a floral hall, pavilion, tea gardens, and concert-hall for the purpose of affording high-class entertainments to visitors to New Brighton. The cost of the buildings, with their equipment, was estimated at £33,900, and provision was made in the Bill for meeting any deficiency arising under the scheme out of the rates. A report from the L. G. B. was presented to the committee in which it was pointed out that some of the powers proposed to be taken were very exceptional, but, in answer, it was stated in evidence that similar powers had been granted by Parliament to Bridlington, Rhyl, Birkdale, Clacton, and Margate. The Committee of the House of Lords decided that this portion of the Bill ought not to be allowed to proceed.

Foreshore.

It occasionally happens when a local authority become lessees of the seashore, that they are confronted with claims which conflict with their right of control and management. It was held that a prescriptive right to go upon a foreshore which had been leased to a corporation, and to place and let on hire chairs and seats on the sands for profit could not be claimed, as the Prescription Act, 1832, does not apply to easements in gross (Ramsgate Corporation v. Debling and Others (1906), 70 J. P. 132; 22 T. L. R. 369). As to the rights of the public on the foreshore, see Brinckman v. Matley, [1904] 2 Ch. 313; 68 J. P. 534; Brighton Corporation v. Packham, p. 374, post; and cases on pp. 374, 375, post, as to byelaws regulating the user of the foreshore; and for a case where a custom to spread nets on land above highwater mark was established, see Mercer v. Denne, [1905] 2 Ch. 538; 70 J. P. 65. See also as to the rights of the public over a promenade made under local Acts, Att.-Gen. v. Blackpool Corporation (1907), 71 J. P. 478, and Walker v. Murphy, [1915] 1 Ch. 71; 79 J. P. 137, as to a "town moor."

The plaintiff agreed with the defendants to supply a band to perform on the sea front. It was a term of the contract that the defendants should hire out 500 chairs to the plaintiff for a certain period at a fixed rental. The plaintiff was entitled to let these chairs to the public, and was under covenant to repair and redeliver them in good order at the end of the term. The plaintiff alleged that many of the chairs as delivered were unfit for use, and that the defendants had been guilty of a breach of an implied term in the contract by allowing persons to use free seats near the band. In an action for damages, the jury found that some of the chairs as delivered were unfit for use, and that the plaintiff had suffered damage owing to the use of the free seats. It was held that there was an implied warranty that the chairs as delivered should be fit for use, but that it was not a further implied term of the agreement that the defendants should not let out free seats (Dare v. Bognor U. D. C. (1912), 76 J. P. 425; 28 T. L. R. 489).

User of pleasure ground: alienation for different purpose.

(c) Where, by Act of Parliament, a corporation was directed to cause a piece of land to be drained and levelled, and kept in proper condition for the purpose of public recreation, the court restrained the corporation from permitting a cattle fair to be held upon it (Att.-Gen. v. Southampton (Mayor of) (1859), 29 L. J. Ch. 282; 1 L. T. 155). A local authority were also restrained from letting a recreation ground to a football club, even for one day (Att.-Gen. v. Loughborough L. B., Times, May 31st, 1881). In another case, a municipal corporation purchased a piece of land under the corresponding provisions of the P. H. A., 1848, s. 74. In 1875 the corporation determined to appropriate about a quarter of an acre at one extremity of the land as a site for the erection of town buildings and a museum, public library, school of art, and conservatory. It was held by BACON, V.-C., that no portion of the land could be appropriated for any of these objects except the museum and conservatory. It was held, on appeal, that the erection of a free library was allowable, as being conducive to the better enjoyment of the public walks and grounds as such (Att.-Gen. v. Sunderland (Corporation of) (1876), 2 Ch. D. 634: 40 J. P. 564). See also Att.-Gen. v. Folkestone Corporation, in note to s. 15 of the Tramways Act, 1870, post, Vol. II.; Att.-Gen. v. Leeds Corporation (1880), 24 Sol. J. 509; Att.-Gen. v. Bradford Corporation (1911), 75 J. P. 553; 55 Sol. J. 715; Walker v. Murphy, [1915] 1 Ch. 71; 79 J. P. 137, and other cases collected in note (h) on p. 415, post, as to the permanent application of land to a purpose other than that for which it was acquired.

When it was proposed by a local authority to appropriate part of a public pleasure ground to some other purpose, the L. G. B. declined under ordinary circumstances to entertain the proposal on the ground that the public has acquired conflicting rights, which, according to Att.-Gen. v. Sunderland, supra, must be respected. It is understood, however, that the M. of H. have considerably modified the view taken by their predecessors in view of s. 95 of the P. H. A., 1907, post.

Where in force by adoption, the P. H. A., 1890, s. 44 (1), post, gives an authority limited powers to close a park or pleasure ground for short periods, and to give the use thereof to societies, etc.; ibid., s. 44 (2), deals with pleasure boats; and ibid., s. 45, enables an authority to contribute to the cost of pleasure grounds provided by individuals.

Where put in force by order of the L. G. B., the P. H. A., 1907, s. 76, post, makes further provision as to such matters as skating, games, music, chairs, pavilions and refreshment-rooms in parks and pleasure grounds. See also ibid., s. 77, as to enforcing byelaws and regulations.

Other statutory provisions as to parks, pleasure grounds, and open spaces, etc.

A gift, devise, or bequest for the providing of a public park, etc., is, subject as therein mentioned, exempted from the operation of the Mortmain and Charitable Uses Act, 1888, by s. 6 thereof, as extended by the Mortmain and Charitable Uses Act Amendment Act, 1892. Purchases of land for the purposes of this section are exempt by virtue of s. 7, ante, p. 39.

Other Acts relating to the providing of public parks and recreation grounds are 10 & 11 Vict. c. 34, s. 135; 22 Vict. c. 27; 23 & 24 Vict. c. 30. The 26 & 27 Vict. c. 13, provides for the protection of gardens and ornamental grounds, as to which see also 24 & 25 Vict. c. 96, s. 31.

26 Vict. c. 13, s. 1, provides that when in any city or borough any enclosed garden or ornamental ground has been set apart, otherwise than by the revocable permission of the owner thereof, in any public square, etc. for the use or enjoyment of the inhabitants thereof, and when the trustees or other body appointed for the care of the same have neglected to keep in proper order, or when such garden or ground has not been vested or placed in the management of trustees, etc. for the care of the same, and from want of such care or any other cause has been neglected, the corporate authorities shall take charge of the same, putting up a notice to that effect in such garden or ground. As to the meaning of the words "otherwise than by the revocable permission of the owner," see Tulk v. Metropolitan Board of Works (1867), L. R. 3 Q. B. 94, 682; 32 J. P. 548.

A faculty cannot be granted authorising a churchyard to be appropriated as a public garden. But it was held to be in the discretion of the Consistory Court to authorise by a faculty the construction of footpaths in it for the convenience of the parishioners, the removal of high walls which obstruct the free circulation of air, the planting of it with trees and flowers when it is closed for burials, and the erection of gates in order to give the parishioners access to it, and other minor alterations (R. v. Twiss (1869), L. And see also Re St. Anne, Limehouse (1915), 31 T. L. R. 539, where on an application by the rector and churchwardens and by the L. C. C. for a faculty authorising an agreement by which the Council was to acquire a strip of a disused burial ground for widening a road the Court declined to decide whether the Council has statutory authority to acquire the freehold of consecrated land and determined to deal with the case in its discretion under the usual procedure which is to grant a user of the land. C. 818; Edinburgh Parish Council v. Leith Magistrates, [1912] S. C. 812.

A local authority bought land under s. 164 for the purpose of a public pleasure ground. They were bound by covenants in their conveyance to keep this land open as a recreation and pleasure ground for the use of the public for ever, and they expended an annual sum of £400 in maintenance, at the same time receiving a much smaller sum from such sources as refreshment contractors. It was held that the land could not be regarded as extra commercium, and that the authority as owners of it must bear an apportioned share of the cost of making up the private street upon one side of which it abutted (Herne Bay U. D. C. v. Payne, [1907] 2 K. B. 130; 71 J. P. 282).

Byelaws as to pleasure grounds, etc.

(d) As to the making, confirming, and publishing of byelaws, see ss. 182—189, post, pp. 432 et seq.; and as to the enforcing them, see s. 251, post. The section in the text gives a power not previously enjoyed—namely, one for the removal of persons offending against the byelaws. Model byelaws have been issued under this section. (See Mackenzie and Handford's Model Byelaws, Vol. I., p. 38.) Under the Advertisements Regulation Act, 1907, s. 2, local authorities can make byelaws regulating the exhibition of advertisements which affect injuriously the amenities of public parks, pleasure promenades, and ancient monuments. See the Act in App. I., post, Vol. II.

In some cases a public pleasure ground vests in the council of a borough in their municipal capacity. Under such circumstances the M. of H. do not consider that it is competent to the council to exercise the power of making byelaws under s. 164, supra, in relation to such a pleasure ground. In a case of this kind the Central Department drew attention to the terms of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 109, as amended by the L. G. A., 1888, s. 72, and suggested as a means of enabling the council to make byelaws for the regulation of the ground under s. 164 that the council should determine to appropriate the ground for the purposes of the section with a view to the ground being dealt with by them as a sanitary authority. If the council decided to adopt this course they should, after compliance with the requirements of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 23, submit in a memorial under their corporate seal a proposal to appropriate the ground as a public walk or pleasure ground to be thereafter maintained and controlled by them in their capacity of sanitary authority. The letter added that if the council considered that the transfer should be made conditional upon payment by the sanitary authority to the municipal authority, such payment should, in the Board's opinion, be in the form of an annual rent; and that the amount of this proposed payment should be stated in order that the Board might embody this condition in their approval of the transaction.

The powers of a district council under s. 164, supra, and s. 44 of the P. H. A., 1890, as regards byelaws and otherwise in relation to recreation grounds and public walks, are made applicable to parish councils by the L. G. A., 1894, s. 8 (1) (d), for the purpose of enabling such councils to regulate recreation grounds, village greens, open spaces, or public walks which are for the time being under their control or to the expense of which they have contributed.

By a scheme made under the Metropolitan Commons Act, 1866, and confirmed by the Metropolitan Commons Supplemental Act, 1877, it was provided that a common should be dedicated to the use and recreation of the public as an open and unenclosed space for ever; and the Metropolitan Board of Works were empowered to frame byelaws and regulations for the prevention of nuisances and the preservation of order on the common. The Board made a byelaw prohibiting the delivery of any public speech, lecture, sermon, or address of any kind, except with the written permission of the Board first obtained, and upon such portions of the common, and at such times as might be directed by such permission and sanctioned by the Board:—Held, that such byelaw was valid. No right of the general public to hold meetings on a common is known to the law (De Morgan v. Metropolitan Board of Works (1880), 5 Q. B. D. 155; 44 J. P. 296). This decision was followed in Brighton Corporation v. Packham (1908), 72 J. P. 318; 24 T. L. R. 603, where the corporation, owners of the foreshore, obtained an injunction restraining members of a mission from preaching and holding meetings thereon.

A byelaw relating to a common provided that "no person shall shoot or chase game or other birds or animals on the common." The respondent carried a tame pigeon and a falcon, and when on the common let them both go, and ran after them for half a mile, watching the chase:—Held, that this was an offence within the meaning of the byelaw (Harper v. Mitchell (1879), 44 J. P. 378).

Under s. 164 (supra) a local board made byelaws for the regulation of a pleasure ground. One byelaw provided that no person should suffer any fowl belonging to him to enter or remain in the pleasure ground. The fine for offending was £5. B.'s six fowls strayed inside, there being no fence sufficient to prevent them:—Held, that the justices were right in refusing to convict, as the byelaw was repugnant to the law of England, and was not warranted by the section (Torquay L. B. v. Bridle (1882), 47 J. P. 183).

Byelaws as to foreshore.

An authority was empowered by a local Act to make byelaws and regulations with reference to the sea beach and foreshore in the district, which were vested in them for the purpose of public walks and pleasure grounds. After the passing of the local Act, a part of the foreshore was converted into an esplanade. The authority made a byelaw prohibiting the sale of any goods on any part of the sea beach, foreshore, or esplanade, except by the direction of the authority:—Held, that the byelaw was not unreasonable or ultra vires (Gray v. Sylvester) (1897), 61 J. P. 807; 46 W. R. 63). See also Llandudno U. D. C. v. Woods, [1899] 2 Ch. 705; 63 J. P. 775.

By a local Act a corporation was empowered to make byelaws for (inter alia) regulating the selling and hawking of any article . . . on the beach and foreshore, and No. 3 of such byelaws provided that "a person shall not on the said beach or foreshore sell or hawk, or offer, or expose for sale any article . . . except in pursuance of an agreement with the corporation . . ." It was held that the byelaw was unreasonable and bad on the ground that it gave the corporation power to make any agreement they chose without regard to the question of its reasonableness or unreasonableness, and that it reserved to them a right to refuse to give a licence to any particular person (Parker v. Bournemouth (Mayor, etc. of) (1902), 66 J. P. 440; 86 L. T. 449). See also Moorman v. Tordoff (1908), 72 J. P. 142; 98 L. T. 416.

The respondents' local Act empowered them to make byelaws for prohibiting or regulating the erection on the foreshore, sands or wastes, of any booth or other erection, which in their opinion might be a cause of danger, obstruction, nuisance, or annoyance, and generally for regulating the user of the foreshore, sands and wastes. They made a byelaw in 1888 forbidding the erection of any booth or other erection on the foreshore, sands or wastes, provided that the prohibition should not apply in any case where the respondents granted permission for the erection, and in 1900 they made an additional byelaw that no person should on any part of the foreshore sell or offer for sale any commodity except on such part of the foreshore as they should by notice appoint for the purpose. The appellant erected without permission a certain structure (a coffee van) which the justices found to be an erection within the byelaw of 1888, and they convicted the appellant. A Divisional Court held (distinguishing the Bournemouth Case, supra) that the byelaw was valid, as the local Act gave power to the respondents to say that any booth or erection was primâ facie a cause of danger, obstruction, nuisance or annoyance, and the byelaw was not rendered invalid by the fact that the respondents had reserved to themselves a power to grant permission in particular cases (Williams v. Weston-super-Mare U. D. C. (No. 1) (1907), 72 J. P. 54). The appellant then brought an action against the respondents in the Chancery Division, alleging a customary right exercised for sixty years to sell from a stall or otherwise on the foreshore, and claimed (a) a declaration that the said byelaws were ultra vires and void; (b) a declaration that his coffee van was not an "erection" within the meaning of the byelaw of 1889; and (c) an injunction to restrain the respondents from interfering with his selling from his coffee van on the foreshore. The court followed the decision of the Divisional Court on the points decided by them and also declined (following Grand Junction Waterworks Co. v. Hampton U. D. C., [1898] 2 Ch. 331; 62 J. P. 566) to make a declaratory order under Order XXV., r. 5, with regard to the byelaw of 1900 (Williams v. Weston-super-Mare U. D. C. (No. 2) (1910), 74 J. P. 370; 103 L. T. 9).

Under the Hastings Improvement Act, 1885, the corporation may make byelaws "for the preservation of order and good conduct among persons frequenting the parades, stade, foreshore, and sands," and they accordingly made a byelaw, which was approved by the L. G. B., that no person should deliver an address on any part of the parades, stade, foreshore, or sands, except on such portions thereof as the corporation might by notice appoint for the purpose. The corporation by notice from time to time appointed certain portions of the stade as places at which addresses might be delivered, but these notices were not submitted to the L. G. B. for approval. The appellant, a member of the Salvation Army, conducted a religious service and delivered an address on a portion of the stade which was not one of the places so appointed, and was convicted of contravening the byelaw. It was held, that as the power to fix the places at which addresses might be delivered was set out in the byelaw it was not necessary to submit the notices to the L. G. B. for approval, and that the byelaw was valid, and therefore the conviction must be affirmed (Slee v. Meadows (1911), 75 J. P. 246; 105 L. T. 127).

Under the Ramsgate Corporation Act, 1900, the corporation "may make and enforce byelaws for the prevention of danger obstruction nuisance or annoyance to persons using the seashore . . . for regulating the selling and hawking of any article commodity or thing on the seashore . . . ," and they made a byelaw that "where any part or parts of the seashore has, or have, by notices affixed in conspicuous positions on the seashore, been set apart by the corporation for the hawking of such articles commodities or things as may be specified in the notices, no person shall hawk any article, commodity or thing so specified on any other part of the seashore." Notices were put up setting apart a portion of the seashore for the hawking of certain articles and forbidding the hawking of them on any other portion. The corporation had let spaces for the erection of stalls on that portion of the seashore where hawking was prohibited. It was held that the byelaw was valid (Cassell v. Jones (1913), 77 J. P. 197; 108 L. T. 806).

As to byelaws regulating bathing from the foreshore, see McGregor v. Disselduff, p. 434, post.

An authority can now obtain powers to make byelaws as to the seashore and also as to promenades by getting the P. H. A., 1907, ss. 82, 83, post, applied to their district.

Urban authority may provide public clocks.

165. Any urban authority may from time to time provide such clocks as they consider necessary, and cause them to be fixed on or against any public building, or, with the consent of the owner or occupier, on or against any private building the situation of which may be convenient for that purpose, and may cause the dials thereof to be lighted at night, and may from time to time alter and remove any such clocks to such other like situation as they may consider expedient.

The provision in the text does not empower the urban authority to repair, etc. clocks not provided by themselves and not transferred to them, such as the clock of a parish church. Where, however, the P. H. A., 1890, s. 46, post, is in force by adoption, this section is extended so as to enable an urban authority to pay the reasonable cost of repairing, maintaining, winding up, and lighting any public clock within their district though not vested in them.

The provision in the Act of 1890, referred to above, enables an urban authority to incur expense in repairing, winding, etc. the clock in a church tower. If it is desired to place a new clock in a church tower, a necessary preliminary would seem to be the obtaining of a faculty from an ecclesiastical court.

The M. of H. are willing to sanction loans for the provision of public clocks by urban authorities, and to allow a term of ten years for repayment.

It will be observed that the section does not authorise the provision of a tower to contain a clock. In a case in which an urban council applied to the L. G. B. for sanction to a loan for the erection of a handsome tower with a clock at the summit, the Board considered that they were precluded from acceding to the application so far as the tower was concerned. It would seem, however, that the word "clock" must be regarded as including a case, and also some sort of support, and the Board has not raised any objection when the structure proposed was unpretentious and distinctly required for the purposes of the clock. The view of the M. of H. is probably similar. Apart from the powers of s. 165, supra, public clocks are sometimes provided under the Baths and Washhouses Acts, the Public Libraries Acts, the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, and other Acts as part of a building erected under such Acts.

Where the P. H. A., 1890, s. 42, post, is in force by adoption, the authority may authorise the erection of a clock tower in any street or public place, and may maintain the same, and may also maintain a tower already erected.

It is not clear that a parish council can legally incur expense in relation to a public clock even if it is transferred to them under the L. G. A., 1894, s. 8 (1) (h). The L. G. B. generally advised action by the rural district council under s. 165, supra, as extended by s. 46 of the Act of 1890, after obtaining from the Board an order conferring upon them the necessary urban powers. Such orders usually provide that the expenses shall be chargeable as special expenses to the parish concerned. The actual maintenance of the clock can be delegated to the parish council.

MARKETS AND SLAUGHTER-HOUSES.

Urban authority may provide markets.

166. Where an urban authority (a) are a local board or improvement commissioners they shall have power, with the consent of the owners and ratepayers of their district, expressed by resolution passed in manner provided by Schedule III. to this Act, and where the urban authority are a town council they shall have power, with the consent of two-thirds of their number, to do the following things, or any of them, within their district (b):

To provide (c) a market place, and construct a market house and other conveniences, for the purpose of holding markets:

To provide houses and places for weighing carts (d):

To make convenient approaches to such market:

To provide all such matters and things as may be necessary for the convenient use of such market:

To purchase or take on lease land, and public or private rights in markets and tolls for any of the foregoing purposes:

To take stallages rents and tolls (e) in respect of the use by any person of such market:

But no market shall be established in pursuance of this section so as to interfere with any rights powers or privileges (f) enjoyed within the district (g) by any person (h) without his consent.

Note to Section 166.

(a) It will be observed that the powers of this and the two following sections were conferred upon urban authorities only, and the L. G. B. always held that there were insuperable legal difficulties in the way of making the sections applicable to rural districts (by order under s. 276). This disability was removed by the P. H. A., 1908, post, which enabled rural councils, with the consent of the Board, now M. of H., to exercise with respect to the provision or regulation of markets any powers which an urban district council may exercise with the consent of owners and ratepayers under s. 166 of the Act of 1875. Thereupon ss. 167 and 168 also become applicable to a rural council.

Rural authorities.

Rural district councils who contemplate an application to the M. of H. for consent to exercise market powers should pass a resolution in the terms of s. 166 of the Act of 1875, and it is desirable (as in urban cases, see infra) that, whatever may be proposed at the moment, this resolution should be in wide terms so as to enable the council to do all the things mentioned in the section. A copy of this resolution should be sent to the Ministry, accompanied by full information as to the action which the council propose to take in the matter of markets, and by a statutory declaration by the clerk testifying that the establishment or re-establishment of a market will not affect any rights, powers, or privileges in respect of any market within seven miles of the lands or premises to be acquired or provided for any of the purposes of s. 166 of the Act of 1875, as applied by the Act of 1908, or where any market rights to be acquired in pursuance of the applied enactment are exercisable within defined metes or bounds, within seven miles of those metes or bounds. For the purpose of enabling the clerk to make such a declaration it is necessary for a district council to take all such steps as may be requisite to ascertain the facts as to the existence of such rights, etc. within the distance specified, and the information thus obtained should be embodied in the declaration. The Ministry will also require plans of any market scheme which has been prepared, information as to agreements for land purchase, financial particulars of the district, and proposals as to the incidence of the anticipated expenses.

Several rural district councils have obtained powers for the provision of markets or the acquisition of existing market rights—in some cases for particular parishes.

Parish councils have no powers in relation to markets, and there are no legal means by which they can obtain such powers.

(b) For the definition of "local board," see s. 4, ante, p. 4; of "improvement commissioners," s. 4, ante, p. 4; of "owners," s. 4, ante, p. 8.

Powers optional.

It will be seen that there is no compulsion upon a local authority to act, notwithstanding the resolution of their constituents; and that there must be in the case of a town council, the consent of two-thirds of all the members of the council, not of that of a meeting.

Fairs.

It must be noticed that there is only power to establish a market. No power is given to establish a fair, or to purchase fair rights, and the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847, is only incorporated by s. 167 so far as it relates to markets.

The L. G. B. stated that they had been advised by the law officers to the effect that a local authority cannot legally purchase or take on lease a right of holding or taking tolls for fairs either with a view to the exercise of the right themselves or to the re-sale or re-leasing of the right, and that any conveyance or lease which purports to convey or grant to an authority the right of holding fairs as well as markets is invalid, unless the two parts relating to fairs and to markets respectively are severable, or unless it is clear that no portion of the consideration, if entire, were given for that which it is beyond the power of the authority to purchase. The Board stated further, however, that although negotiations with the owners of the existing franchise could legally be carried on with a view to the purchase of fair rights by an urban council, the Board were not aware of any objection to negotiation for the purpose of obtaining any such consent as would justify subsequent procedure for the abolition of the fairs. See the Fairs Acts of 1871 and 1873. As to what is a fair, see Collins v. Cooper (1893), 57 J. P. 248; 9 T. L. R. 250.

Where the owner of a weekly market and of certain annual fairs leased the market to a council, but reserved the fairs, it was held that the council could hold the market on its proper days, though they happened also to be fair days (Newcastle (Duke of) v. Worksop U. D. C., [1902] 2 Ch. 145).

Note to Section 166.

A council's market rights restricted to their district.

It must be noticed that the market place is to be within the district. A town council who were about to provide a market place, and to construct a market house, for the purpose of holding markets within the borough, desired to extend their limits for market purposes beyond the borough in order to prevent any opposition market being established just outside the municipal boundary. The L. G. B. stated that they were not aware of any means by which, under the general law, the market rights of the council could be extended beyond the limits of the borough.

By the L. G. A., 1858, s. 50, local boards were given power to establish markets, and by s. 12, ante, p. 43, markets established under the Act of 1858 became vested in the urban sanitary authorities constituted under this Act.

The power of a local authority to act under s. 166, supra, is an inalienable power and a covenant not to act under it would be void (Spurling v. Bantoft, [1891] 2 Q. B. 384 ; 56 J. P. 135).

Combination of authorities.

The L. G. B. once informed a town council that it appeared to them that the legal difficulties in the way of joint action by the town council and a rural district council in the matter of a new market were likely to be formidable, if not prohibitive.

The resolution of ratepayers.

In cases of application by urban councils to the M. of H. for sanction to loans for market purposes, the Ministry require to be informed whether a resolution of owners and ratepayers has been passed as required by s. 166, and in this connection they require to be furnished with the following evidence in proof of the validity of the proceedings : (a) The requisition on which the meeting of owners and ratepayers was summoned ; (b) A copy of the notice of the meeting, a certificate of the posting of such notice on the church and chapel doors and a copy of the newspaper containing the advertisement of such notice ; and (c) A certificate of the posting of a copy of the resolution passed at the meeting and a copy of each of the newspapers in which the resolution was advertised for three successive weeks.

The Ministry consider that the resolution should follow as closely as possible the terms of s. 166, and should relate to all the matters mentioned in the section so that the council may not be under the necessity of taking fresh proceedings if further action is proposed under the section at any future time.

Shops connected with market.

The Ministry are apparently willing to regard shops as forming part of a market when there is to be an entrance from the market or its approaches.

Markets under the Diseases of Animals Act, 1894.

Local authorities within the meaning of the Diseases of Animals Act, 1894, (viz. : the town councils of boroughs of not less than 10,000 population in 1881, and elsewhere the county council) may provide markets under that Act. By s. 32 (1) " a local authority may provide, erect, and fit up wharves, stations, lairs, sheds, and other places for the landing, reception, keeping, sale, slaughter, or disposal of foreign or other animals, carcases, fodder, litter, dung, and other things." Sub-section (2) incorporates with the Act the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847, except ss. 6 to 9 and ss. 51 to 60 thereof ; and sub-s. (3) enacts that a wharf or other place provided by a local authority under the section shall be a market within the incorporated Act, that the Act of 1894 shall be the special Act, and that the prescribed limits shall be the limits of lands acquired or appropriated for purposes of the action. Sub-section (3) relates also to byelaws for the market ; sub-ss. (4), (5), and (7) relate to charges or tolls for the use of any wharf or other place provided under the section ; sub-s. (6) concerns accounts and returns ; and by sub-s. (8) the provisions of the section apply to a wharf or other place provided by a local authority under the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1869, or under the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Acts, 1878 to 1893. The provision of a market, however, under this Act is largely affected by the powers which the Ministry of Agriculture and Fisheries possess of making orders concerning animals and other things ; e.g., they can prescribe the ports at which alone foreign animals may be landed.

Purchase of land and market rights.

(c) Sections 175, 176, post, p. 412, enable the authority to acquire land for these places, houses, and approaches, compulsorily if necessary. The authority will be the judges of what lands are necessary for the works, and they will not be restricted by the words, "a market house," from constructing more than one if necessary (Richards v. Scarborough Public Market Co. (1853), 23 L. J. Ch. 110). Apparently the compulsory powers do not extend to the acquisition of market rights : see the concluding words of the section. Market rights may, however, be acquired by arrangement under this section and s. 168, post, p. 389.

Note to Section 166.

Franchise markets and tolls therein.

With reference to the provision as to the purchase of market rights it must be borne in mind that a franchise market is a species of property apart from a liberty of taking tolls, which latter is a separate franchise; any conveyance or lease should, therefore, extend as well to the franchise tolls as to the franchise market. Also, when a market is to be conveyed or leased, it must be remembered that the franchise and the market place are distinct properties (see per BRETT, M.R., in Att.-Gen. v. Horner (1884), 14 Q. B. D., at p. 254; 49 J. P. 326), and that a conveyance or lease of the one is insufficient to pass the other.

According to advice received from the law officers by the L. G. B. (First Report of Royal Commission on Market Rights and Tolls, 1888, Vol. II., p. 4; see also Final Report, 1890, p. 10), a council, after purchasing a franchise market with franchise tolls, may levy these tolls without first obtaining the M. of H.'s approval under s 167, post, p. 385, the reason apparently being that such tolls are levied by virtue of the franchise, and not by virtue of powers conferred by this Act. But, according to the same advice, the council cannot alter such tolls, or at any rate cannot alter them to an extent not justified by the franchise, unless the Ministry's approval of the tolls as altered has been first obtained. It seems to follow that where a franchise market with franchise tolls has been purchased, there are, as a rule, two courses open to the council: (1) They may exercise the franchise rights in strict accordance with the common law. (2) They may take the benefit of s. 167, and regulate the market with the tolls in accordance with that section and the sections of the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847, which it incorporates. But, if they adopt this second course, they cannot, it seems, continue to exercise the old franchise rights in a manner not consistent with those provisions (see per WOOD, V.-C., Ellis v. Mayor, etc. of Bridgnorth (1861), 2 John. & H. 67); and it is, perhaps, questionable whether the old rights remain or become merged in the statutory rights adopted under s. 167. See Mayor, etc. of New Windsor v. Taylor, [1899] A. C. 41; 63 J. P. 164; Mayor, etc. of Manchester v. Lyons (1882), 22 Ch. D. 287; Mayor, etc. of Birmingham v. Foster (1894), 70 L. T. 371; and Stevens v. Chown, [1901] 1 Ch. 894; 65 J. P. 470.

If, however, a local authority do not purchase, but take only a lease of rights in markets or tolls, it is submitted that recourse cannot be had to s. 167 so as to contravene the terms of the lease or injure the lessor's reversionary interest.

Loans for market purposes.

The sanction of the M. of H. is not required for the purchase of market rights under s. 166 or s. 168; but a council cannot borrow money for the purpose of making the purchase without the Board's sanction under s. 233, post, p. 521. The Ministry allow a maximum term of sixty years for the repayment of loans for the purchase of lands for market purposes, and for the acquisition of market rights, and thirty years in the case of loans for buildings. Paving works, pens, and fittings are allowed a shorter period.

Markets vested in borough council under Municipal Corporations Acts.

When a borough council apply to the Ministry for sanction to a loan for the improvement of a market, and it is found that the market is vested in the council in their capacity of municipal authority, the Department has frequently suggested that it would be preferable to bring the market under the provisions of the P. H. A., 1875, so that, after the procedure indicated in s. 166 of that Act, the application may be treated as one for sanction to a loan by the council in their capacity of urban sanitary authority. The reason is that it is held to be undesirable that matters for which express provision is made under other enactments should be dealt with under the less specific power contained in the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882. The Act of 1875 contains the only express enactment of the general law relating to the provision and regulation of markets by borough councils, and by its incorporation of the more material provisions of the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847, it enables borough councils, in the capacity of urban sanitary authority, inter alia, to levy tolls and to make byelaws for the regulation of the markets.

See also the article "Markets and Fairs" in Vol. IV. of the Encyclopædia of Local Government Law.

Distinction between franchise and P. H. A. markets.

Unless in any instance the contrary be stated, the statements contained in this portion of the note relate only to franchise markets; a local authority is in a different position, according as its rights are those of an owner of a franchise market, or the market has been set up on a site acquired under the provisions of the P. H. A., 1875.

Note to Section 166.

Market days.

In Att.-Gen. v. Horner, [1913] 2 Ch. 140; 77 J. P. 257, the defendant's charter mentioned only Thursdays and Saturdays as market days; he was in fact holding markets on every weekday, and for justification relied on the doctrine of a lost grant; it was held that the market was confined to the two days, there being no ground for presuming a lost grant. On other days it was illegal for him to demand tolls or other payments depending on his market franchise; but as owner of the market-place he could exercise the ordinary rights of an owner of property, so long as in so doing he did not contravene any obligation imposed on him by his franchise. And see Maskell v. Horner, [1915] 3 K. B. 106; 79 J. P. 406.

Market place: power to change.

An owner of a market may, so long as he is not tied down to a particular place by the charter creating the franchise, hold the market wherever he most conveniently can (Dixon v. Robinson (1686), 3 Mod. 107). It is his duty to find, within the district in which he is entitled to hold his market, land to which the public will have free access while it is being held (Att.-Gen. v. Horner (1885), 11 App. Cas., at p. 80; 50 J. P. 564). He is not, as a rule, bound to hold it upon his own land, but may hold it upon land belonging to other persons by their permission, though, unless he has the actual possession of the land, he cannot claim stallage. See Lockwood v. Wood (1841), 6 Q. B. 31, 47, where the dictum of LITTLEDALE, J., in R. v. Starkey (1837), 7 A. & E. 95, was not followed; Att.-Gen. v. Horner (1884), 14 Q. B. D. 245, 254, 260; 49 J. P. 326; (1885), 11 App. Cas. 66; 50 J. P. 564.

Where a franchise market is not confined by the charter to a spot defined by metes and bounds, but the charter allows it to be held generally within some district, "there is no doubt but that the grantee . . . may hold it anywhere within that district, or in more places than one, and may change the place in which it is held; and an obligation is cast upon him, by his acceptance of the grant, to provide convenient accommodation for all who are ready to buy and sell in the public market." See the opinion of the judges in The Islington Market Bill (1835), 3 Cl. & F. 518. The consequences of his not providing a sufficient market-place were stated to be these: (1) He cannot complain of sales outside the market by persons prevented from selling in the market by the want of convenient room (Prince v. Lewis (1826), 5 B. & C. 363; Mosley v. Walker (1827), 7 B. & C. 40). (2) His breach of public duty furnishes a ground for a scire facias to repeal the patent by which the market was granted. (3) His misconduct perhaps renders him liable to an indictment for a misdemeanor, and also to an action by any individual who sustains special injury. (4) But, so long as the grant remains unrepealed, his default in providing proper accommodation for the public does not entitle the Crown to grant a charter for a new market which will be injurious to his market. The judges also dealt thus with the position of the owner of a market which is limited by grant from the Crown to a fixed place defined by metes and bounds: If the place is insufficient for the needs of the buyers and sellers in the market, and the owner is prevented by the terms of his grant from enlarging it, the Crown may grant a new market, to be held in the neighbourhood, so that the further market accommodation which the public require may be provided, if that can be done without affecting the existing market rights injuriously. See also G. E. Rail. Co. v. Goldsmid (1884), 9 App. Cas. 927; 49 J. P. 260, and Magistrates of Edinburgh v. Blackie (1886), 11 App. Cas. 665, 679. As to enlarging a market under a local Act, see Att.-Gen. v. Cambridge (Mayor, etc. of) (1873), L. R. 6 H. L. 303; and generally as to enlarging a market place, see Att.-Gen. v. Horner, supra; Gingell, Son and Foskett, Ltd. v. Stepney Borough Council, post, p. 381.

B. being entitled to a market in the manor of K., which was held in the public street on B.'s soil, removed it to another site in K., which site he had demised, without demising the franchise, for a term of years. The court held that the removal was bad, unless the public had the same privilege in the new market as in the old; and, therefore, it appearing that, although no toll had ever been taken in the old market, the lease, after a covenant by the lessees to allow the soil to be used solely for the market, empowered them to impose rents for the liberty of selling in the market, the court held that the removal was bad, and that the site of the old market might be used on market days as it was before the removal (R. v. Starkey (1837), 6 L. J. K. B. 202; 7 A. & E. 95). See also the following cases as to removal of markets: Curwen v. Salkeld (1803), 3 East, 538; R. v. Cotterill (1817), 1 B. & A. 67; and Magistrates of Edinburgh v. Blackie, supra.

Note to Section 166.

Where the lord of a manor proved a market to have been immemorially holden in certain places within a manor, it was held not to be a necessary inference (no grant being produced) that the market was granted to be holden in those places only, and that the jury might presume from circumstances that the market was granted to be holden in any convenient place within the manor (De Rutzen v. Lloyd (1836), 5 L. J. K. B. 202; 5 A. & E. 456). And see Wortley v. Nottingham L. B. (1870), 33 J. P. 806; 21 L. T. 582, where it was held that a corporation might remove part of a market to any other convenient place within the limits specified in the original grant. A corporation, being lords of a market and owners of the soil, are entitled at common law to remove a market. And where the boundaries of an ancient borough were extended by statute, it was held that the ancient borough market might be removed to a place outside the old but within the new boundaries (Mayor, etc. of Dorchester v. Ensor (1869), L. R. 4 Ex. 335). But where acting as a local board they take steps under this Act to set up a market in a new place, they can only act under the powers and subject to the provisoes of the statute, and are not entitled to fall back on their common law right (per PAGE WOOD, V.-C., in Ellis v. Bridgnorth (Corporation of) (1861), 4 L. T. 112; 9 W. R. 331). In the same case, when tried at common law, it appeared that the corporation had removed the market from the place at which it had been immemorially held. It was held that the occupiers of houses adjoining the old market place might maintain an action for disturbance of those rights which they had hitherto enjoyed of erecting stalls opposite their houses on market days. It was held also that under the corresponding provisions of the L. G. A., 1858, s. 50, the removal of the market was not justifiable, inasmuch as the power to provide market places conferred by that section was expressly qualified by the proviso as to the rights of individuals (32 L. J. C. P. 273; 8 L. T. 668). But where a local Act imposed a penalty for exposing for sale meat, etc., in the streets of a town, so that such meat, etc., projected over any footway, etc., with an exception in favour of stalls in such parts of the streets as had been theretofore used for the purpose at the time of the usual market, and subsequently the local board made byelaws appointing certain places for markets for certain descriptions of goods on market days, it was held that the provisions of the local Act did not exempt from liability to penalties a person who violated the byelaws by exposing for sale meat, etc., at a place other than that appointed by the board, notwithstanding that the place had for many years been used for such sales by such persons and others (Savage v. Brook (1863), 33 L. J. M. C. 42; 9 L. T. 334).

See also as to the powers of the Ministry of Agriculture and Fisheries in connection with the removal of markets, post, p. 383.

Markets in streets.

Part of a public highway is frequently used as a market place, and it is not a misuse of the highway, if it can be shown by evidence, or be inferred from long usage, that the highway was dedicated subject to the right of holding the market there (Elwood v. Bullock (1844), 6 Q. B. 383; Att.-Gen. v. Horner (1885), 11 App. Cas. 66; Twigdon v. Shillock (1898), Times, January 28th). A new street can be dedicated as a highway subject to the exercise therein of market rights. From time immemorial the lord of the manor of Stepney had held a hay and straw market in High Street, Whitechapel. There was evidence that when it was crowded the market had overflowed into adjoining streets. After 1840 two narrow streets, not used for market purposes, were widened and made into new streets by the Commissioners of Woods and Forests, under the powers of the Metropolis Improvement (Additional Thoroughfares) Act, 1840. In 1870 an entirely new street was cut through private property by the Metropolitan Board of Works, under the powers of the Whitechapel and Holborn Improvement Act, 1865. These Acts did not refer to the market rights, but the market was in fact held in the new streets shortly after they were made, as well as in the High Street. Certain railway and tramway Acts contained provisions for the protection of the market in the several streets. It was admitted that the market was without metes and bounds, and that the area of the market franchise extended to the whole manor. It was held by VAUGHAN WILLIAMS and BUCKLEY, L.JJ. (FLETCHER MOULTON, L.J., dissenting), that the new streets must be presumed to have been dedicated to the public subject to the market franchise, and that, therefore, certain regulations made by the defendants, excluding carts and wagons from those streets and restricting the market to certain other streets, were invalid (Gingell, Son and Foskett, Ltd. v.

Stepney Borough Council, [1908] 1 K. B. 115; 71 J. P. 486; affirmed, [1909] A. C. 245; 73 J. P. 273).

The exercise of market rights over highways cannot be prevented by proceedings under statutes for the prevention of obstructions or other nuisances on highways (Att.-Gen. v. Horner, supra; G. E. Rail. Co. v. Goldsmid (1884), 25 Ch. D. 511; 9 App. Cas. 927; 49 J. P. 260; Ball v. Ward (1875), 33 L. T. 170). Nor can a byelaw which purports to interfere with such rights be justified under a power to make byelaws against nuisances on highways (Elwood v. Bullock, supra). The right must, however, be exercised in a proper manner. Thus, when the owner of a market took stallage for sheep pens placed on a highway, he was held responsible for the nuisance which arose from his neglect to remove the sheep dung (Draper v. Sperring (1861), 30 L. J. M. C. 225; 25 J. P. 566). So, too, in Att.-Gen. v. Horner, [1913] 2 Ch. 140; 77 J. P. 257, it was held that the defendant, the lessee of the land and buildings known as Spitalfields Market, and of the franchise for holding a market therein, being only entitled to hold the market on Thursdays and Saturdays, the days mentioned in his charter, had no right except on those days to use or authorise the user of the streets in or about the market place further than he was entitled to use them as one of the public or as a person having land adjoining a highway. The L. G. B. raised no difficulty in sanctioning the purchase by a council of existing rights pertaining to the holding of a market in a public street, when the market could be described as held in a fixed place or was to be acquired in connection with the establishment of a market place by themselves. In answer, however, to an inquiry as to whether a council could set apart part of the highway for stall-holders, etc., practically making it a market place, and charge the stall-holders a certain toll for their stands, the Board stated that it did not appear to them that the council had any power to obstruct the highway in the manner proposed, and that no action which they could take under s. 166 would have the effect of conferring such power. In another case in which a council proposed to take over the markets and fairs periodically held in their district, the Board pointed out that as no market in the streets was legally established by charter or otherwise to which the provisions of the Act of 1847 would be applicable, and it was not intended to provide a market, the Board were unable to indicate any procedure which would enable the council to control and regulate the sale of animals and goods in the streets of the town or to levy tolls.

The holding of a market on a highway involves the question of liability for the speedy removal of refuse and litter. An Order of the Board of Agriculture dated June 29th, 1910, under the Diseases of Animals Act, imposed certain duties in this matter on the occupier of cattle markets, or the local authority (not always the District Council: see note on p. 378, ante). Under s. 42 of the P. H. A., 1875, a district council may cleanse streets: see notes thereto, ante, p. 111.

Lease of market by council.

It is doubtful whether an urban council can dispose of a market by letting it under s. 177. In the case of such a proposal the L. G. B. said they were disposed to consider that the council by obtaining the powers authorised by s. 166 had become subject to certain obligations with regard to the continued provision of market facilities, and that it was open to question whether the mere disuse of their powers would so far extinguish their obligations as to bring the market place into the category of lands which they could conveniently spare. It is not known whether the question has arisen since the establishment of the Ministry of Health.

Grant of exclusive use of market.

The L. G. B. informed an urban district council that they were not aware of any authority under which the council could restrict to one or more persons the right of selling in the market. The Board referred to Mayor, etc. of Northampton v. Ward (1745), 2 Stra. 1238, and other decisions.

Liability of owners of market.

With regard to the liability of a corporation as owners of a market the following case may be referred to: The defendants were owners of a cattle market, and in the market place they had erected a statue with a railing round it as a fence. The plaintiffs attended the market with their cattle, and occupied a particular site for which they paid a toll. A cow belonging to them, in attempting to jump the railing, injured herself and died from the injuries. The jury found that the railing was dangerous:—Held, that the defendants having received tolls from the plaintiffs and invited them to come to the market with their cattle, a duty was imposed on them to keep the market in a safe condition, and that therefore an action would lic against them for the loss sustained by the plaintiffs (Lax v. Darlington (Mayor, etc. of) (1880), 5 Ex. D. 28 ; 44 J. P. 312).

Powers of control vested in the Ministry of Agriculture.

Under s. 22 (xix) of the Diseases of Animals Act, 1894, the Ministry of Agriculture and Fisheries have power to prohibit or regulate the holding of markets . . . and sales of animals, a power the exercise of which may result in the removal of a market or the closing of it altogether. The Ministry may also make orders for prescribing and regulating the cleansing and disinfection of places used for the holding of markets for the sale of cattle, sheep, goats, other ruminating animals, or swine (see above as to an Order of 1910) ; and for prescribing modes of cleansing and disinfection. See ss. 22 (xx), (xxii) and 59. Other powers of the Ministry, exercisable in relation to markets, will be found in ss. 9, 21 and 22 of the same Act.

Disturbance of market.

An owner of a franchise market is entitled at common law to the enjoyment of his privileges without disturbance by the wrongful acts of other persons. Room for a fuller discussion as to what amounts to a wrongful disturbance, and as to the remedies open upon such a disturbance, cannot be found within the limits of this note, but reference may be made to the article on markets and fairs in Vol. IV. of the Encyclopædia of Local Government Law. Some of the more important cases will, however, be referred to. As to a market established or regulated under the Public Health Act a special protection against certain sales outside the market is afforded by s. 13 of the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847 (see App. I., post, Vol .II. for this Act and the numerous cases decided thereunder).

An action for disturbance of a market created by virtue of a statute will lie as in the case of an ancient franchise market (Stevens v. Chown, [1901] 1 Ch. 894 ; 65 J. P. 470 ; Mayor, &c. of Birmingham v. Foster (1894), 70 L. T. 371 ; Hailsham Cattle Market Co. v. Tonman, [1915] 2 Ch. 1 ; 79 J. P. 420 (where the action failed because on the facts it was held that on a true construction of the market Act there had been no disturbance) ; Manchester (Mayor, etc. of) v. Lyons (1882), 22 Ch. D. 287). In the last-mentioned case the corporation brought an action to restrain the defendants from selling eggs and dried fish on market days in their shop. The shop was situate in a street which adjoined one side of one of the plaintiff's markets, and on the opposite side of the street from, but not opposite to, the entrance from that street into the market. The defendants only sold their goods in their shops in the ordinary course of business. It was held that this was no disturbance of the statutory right of market.

The plaintiffs were, down to 1855, seised in fee of an ancient market for the sale of cattle, known as Smithfield market, and were entitled to certain tolls in respect of cattle exposed for sale therein. In 1855 the Smithfield market was by statute removed to Islington ; but all privileges were expressly preserved to the plaintiffs, and it was enacted that no new market for the sale of cattle should be opened within a distance of seven miles from St. Paul's Cathedral. One of the defendants became, in 1854, lessee of certain premises about 600 yards from the Islington market and within seven miles from St. Paul's, and converted them into lairs and receptacles for cattle, containing accommodation for about 400 head. Some of the cattle were from time to time sold by the defendants upon the premises between the market days, which were held on Mondays and Thursdays. Beyond a uniform charge for lairage, there was nothing in the nature of a toll upon sales effected by other persons than the defendants ; but when the defendants themselves acted as salesmen they charged the same commission as if the cattle had been sold in the plaintiffs' market. The cattle thus sold in the interval between the two markets would, if there had been no opportunity for sale between the two markets, have found their way to, and have been sold in, the plaintiffs' market:—Held, that an action was maintainable against the defendants for a disturbance of the plaintiffs' market (London (Mayor, etc. of) v. Low (1880), 49 L. J. Q. B. 144 ; 44 J. P. 169).

In boroughs, the limits of which for the purposes of parliamentary representation have been fixed by 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 64, s. 35, Sched. O., and which are included in s. 1 of Sched. A. or of Sched. B. to 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 7, all places within the limits so fixed are, by s. 8 of the latter Act, parts of the borough for all purposes ; and an ancient borough market may be lawfully held within such limits, although outside the limits of the old municipal borough (Dorchester (Mayor, etc. of) v. Ensor (1869), L. R. 4 Ex. 335 ; 34 J. P. 167). A market held in the same town with an old market, if held upon the same day, is a disturbance by intendment of law ; but if it is held on a different day it is only evidence of disturbance for the jury (ibid.). To support an action for disturbance of a market, it is not necessary that the defendant should have actually sold; any active interference by him in the conduct of the new market, or participation in its profits or risk, is sufficient (ibid.). As to the granting of an interlocutory injunction in such a case, see Elwes v. Payne (1879), 12 Ch. D. 468.

A charter of Edw. 3 by the King and Parliament purported to give to the citizens of London and their successors exclusive right of market in a certain area. The charter was not included in the statute roll, but was in the charter roll. A charter of Car. 2 granted to G. and his heirs an exclusive right of market for fruit and vegetables within part of the above area, and this market has been enjoyed ever since. The G. E. Railway Company set up a rival fruit market within a quarter of a mile of the latter market, on the ground that G.'s market was overcrowded. It was held (1) that the charter of Edw. 3 had the force of a private Act, and amounted to a grant of market to the corporation; (2) that the corporation was entitled to waive any of its rights of market; (3) that G.'s market had by such implied waiver become a legal market; and (4) that G.'s market right had been disturbed by the company's market, and that overcrowding was no defence for the disturbance created by setting up a rival market (G. E. Rail. Co. v. Goldsmid (1884), 9 App. Cas. 927; 49 J. P. 260). Nor will the unlawful removal of a market or an unlawful change of days justify the wrongful erection of a rival market (Midleton v. Power (1886), 19 L. R. Ir. 1).

Weighing machines.

(d) Except in connection with a market or depôt a council have no power under this Act to provide a weighing machine or weigh-house, or to incur expense in connection therewith. This view was taken by the L. G. B. in a case which came before them. See, however, the Locomotives Act, 1898, s. 4.

(e) See note (c), supra, and the next section, note (d).

Saving for private rights, etc.

(f) The right referred to in the text means a right acquired adversely to the world and peculiar to the individual. The establishment of a business with the consent of a local board does not give a right, power or privilege within the meaning of this priviso, if the business consists of sales which are contrary to the incorporated s. 13 of the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act (App. I., post, Vol. II. as not being within the person's own shop within the meaning of that section (Fearon v. Mitchell (1872), L. R. 7 Q. B. 690; 36 J. P. 804). See also Woolwich Borough Council v. Gibson (1905), 69 J. P. 361; 92 L. T. 538, where the words "rights, powers and privileges" were again construed as not extending to a right which an individual enjoys only in common with the rest of the public.

The appellant, a cattle salesman, occupied premises which he used for the sale of cattle under leases containing covenants for quiet enjoyment, granted by the corporation of a borough. Afterwards the corporation as the urban authority established a cattle market in the borough and published a list of the tolls. The appellant was convicted of selling cattle for which no toll had been paid in his sale-yard within the borough but not within the limits of the market. It was held that the corporation had not derogated from their grant by establishing a market; that the appellant had not by virtue of the leases acquired any right to sell cattle within the meaning of the above section, which the urban authority could not interfere with by establishing a market (Spurling v. Bantoft, [1891] 2 Q. B. 384; 56 J. P. 135). See also Ellis v. Bridgnorth (Corporation of), ante, p. 381. Note to Section 166.

(g) It is conceived that there may be "rights enjoyed within the district" in respect of a market which is held at a spot outside the district, but near to it; for the district or some part of it may lie within the area over which the market owner has an exclusive privilege of setting up markets or a power of suppressing rival markets.

(h) See the definition of this word in s. 4, ante, p. 6, and see s. 168, post, p. 389.

167. For the purpose of enabling any urban authority to establish or to regulate markets, there shall be incorporated with this Act the provisions of the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847 (a), in so far as the same relate to markets, that is to say, Incorporation of provisions of 10 & 11 Vict. c. 14, as to markets.

With respect to the holding of the market or fair, and the protection thereof (b); and

With respect to the weighing goods and carts (c); and

With respect to the stallages, rents and tolls (d):

Provided that all tolls leviable by an urban authority in pursuance of this section (e) shall be approved by the Local Government Board (d).

An urban authority may with respect to any market belonging to them make byelaws (f) for any of the purposes mentioned in section forty-two of the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847, so far as those purposes relate to markets, and printed copies of any byelaws so made shall be conspicuously exhibited in the market (g).

See notes to previous section. This section will apply to a rural authority who provide or regulate a market under the P. H. A., 1908, post.

(a) That is, 10 & 11 Vict. c. 14. See App. I., post, Vol. II., for the sections and notes thereto. The references in this section are to the headings in that statute, and do not, as is explained on p. 377, ante, lead to any inference as to the power to hold a fair. Incorporated provisions.

(b) Sections 12—16. It may be here observed that 27 Hen. 6, c. 5, prohibited markets from being held on Sundays, Ascension Day, Corpus Christi Day, Assumption Day, All Saints' Day, and Good Friday, and this prohibition has not been removed. The days upon which a charter market may be lawfully held are generally fixed by the express terms of the grant, and if the days for holding the market are unlawfully changed, the Crown may proceed against the owner by scire facias to obtain a repeal of the charter, or may proceed by information in the nature of a quo warranto. See Att.-Gen. v. Horner (1884), 14 Q. B. D. 245; 49 J. P. 326. After long usage it may be inferred that a change or addition of days has been allowed by a later licence from the Crown, subsequently mislaid (Mayor, etc. of Penryn v. Best (1878), 3 Ex. D. 292; Midleton v. Power (1886), 19 L. R. Ir., at p. 12; Mayor, etc. of Manchester v. Lyons (1882), 22 Ch. D., at p. 300; but see Att.-Gen. v. Horner, on p. 380, ante). In the case of markets established under the Public Health Act, any or every week-day can, by means of a byelaw made in pursuance of the power conferred by s. 14 of the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847, be made a market day. Holding of market, etc.

(c) Sections 21—30. And as to weighing of cattle, see the Markets and Fairs (Weighing of Cattle) Acts, 1887 and 1891, in App. I., post, Vol. II. Weighing goods, cattle, etc.

(d) Nice questions have often arisen in connection with franchise markets as to the distinction between toll and stallage; but, broadly speaking, toll is a sum payable upon a sale in the market, while stallage is a sum payable in respect of the exclusive occupation of a portion of the soil (see Northampton (Mayor of) v. Ward (1745), 2 Stra. 1238, and Swindon Central Market Co., Ltd. v. Panting (1872), 27 L. T. 578). Rent for space in the market is only another name for stallage, though. Tolls; stallage; piccage, etc.

Note to Section 167.

perhaps, it is more usually applied when the accommodation is of a more fixed and substantial character than a movable stall, or when the hiring is for a more extended period, as for a week, month, or longer (Final Report on Market Rights and Tolls, 1890, p. 47). Stallage is, if the soil be broken, sometimes called piccage.

A right to toll is not incident to a market or fair, but is an independent right, which must be based upon a special grant or prescription or a statutory enactment (2 Inst. 220; Holloway v. Smith (1743), 2 Stra. 1171; Austin v. Whittred (1747), Willes, 623; Mayor, etc. of Stamford v. Pawlett (1830), 1 Cr. & J. 57; Earl of Egremont v. Saul (1836), 6 A. & E. 924; Newcastle (Duke of) v. Worksop U. D. C., [1902] 2 Ch. 145, 159).

If the grant does not specify the amount of the toll, it is construed as a grant of a reasonable toll (R. v. Mayor, etc. of Maidenhead (1620), Palmer, 76; Mayor, etc. of Stamford v. Pawlett (1830), 1 Cr. & J. 57, 400). Provided that he keeps within the limits of what is reasonable, the owner of the toll may from time to time vary the sum to be taken (Lawrence v. Hitch (1868), L. R. 3 Q. B. 521; Att.-Gen. v. Horner, [1913] 2 Ch. 140; 77 J. P. 257), and he is not bound to take the same toll from all persons alike (Newcastle (Duke of) v. Worksop U. D. C., supra, where the reasoning in Hungerford Market Co. v. City Steamboat Co. (1860), 30 L. J. Q. B. 25; 3 L. T. 732, was applied). If he changes the day for the market without licence he cannot recover tolls in respect of the changed day (Newcastle (Duke of) v. Worksop U. D. C., supra).

Apart from some prescriptive or customary variation of the rule, market tolls (not being in the nature of stallage or piccage) are payable by the buyer and not by the seller (Att.-Gen. v. Horner, supra); but any individual seller may agree with the owner of the market that his goods shall be sold toll free, and that in return he will pay a sum equivalent to the amount of tolls properly payable by the buyers (ibid.). In the same case it was held in the court of first instance that the defendant was not justified in taking tolls on goods sold by sample without the bulk of the goods being brought into the market, or on goods brought into the market for sale and not sold (though stallage might be charged for those exposed for sale), and that the sums charged upon sales by auction were not tolls at all, but payment for services rendered by the defendant in permitting and facilitating the auction.

For a successful attempt to recover tolls wrongfully demanded, but paid under protest, in past years, see Maskell v. Horner, [1915] 3 K. B. 106; 79 J. P. 406.

A claim to stallage does not need the support of a grant from the Crown or of a special contract with the stall-holder (Mayor, etc. of Northampton v. Ward, supra; Mayor, etc. of Newport v. Saunders (1832), 3 B. & Ad. 411). In order, however, to support the claim there must be some exclusive occupation of a portion of the soil. Therefore, where a person used a market with a chair and a "ped," that is, a wooden or wicker basket, four feet long, two and a-half feet wide, and two feet high, with a lid, which, being turned back and supported by pieces of wood not fixed in the soil, formed a table on which he exposed provisions for sale, it was held he was liable for stallage (Yarmouth (Mayor, etc. of) v. Groom (1862), 32 L. J. Ex. 74; 7 L. T. 161; see also R. v. Casswell (1872), L. R. 7 Q. B. 328; 36 J. P. 645). But stallage is not payable, at common law, by reason merely that goods are rested in baskets or sacks or other convenient modes upon the ground (Townsend v. Woodruff (1850), 5 Ex. 506), or that cattle stand or loiter about the market place (Swindon Central Market Co. v. Panting, supra). It is a question of fact whether there has been such an exclusive occupation of a part of the soil as will support a claim to stallage; and the true test is, has there been any occupation beyond what the general public has (R. v. Bedford (Duke of) (1881), 45 L. T. 616, per BOWEN, J.).

The amount payable as stallage may be fixed, or made uniform by custom or prescription (Bennington v. Taylor (1701), 2 Lutw. 1517; Free Fishers of Whitstable v. Gann (1863), 13 C. B. (N.S.), at p. 860); but in all cases the charge must be a reasonable one (Newcastle (Duke of) v. Worksop U. D. C., supra; R. v. Burdett (1697), 1 Ld. Raym. 149). The occupier of the stall, and not the salesman whom he employs, is the person liable to pay it (Att.-Gen. v. Tynemouth Corporation (1900), 17 T. L. R. 77).

Stallages may be charged at different rates for different places in the market (Bedford (Duke of) v. Emmett (1820), 3 B. & A. 366), and at different rates on different days of the year (Newcastle (Duke of) v. Worksop U. D. C., supra).

Note to Section 167.

Reference has already been made at p. 379, supra, to the power of a council, after purchasing a franchise market with franchise tolls, to levy these tolls without first obtaining the approval of the M. of H. and also to the position of a council when seeking to alter such tolls.

In the case of a market which has been established under the P. H. A., 1875, or the L. G. A., 1858, the position of a council with regard to stallages, rents, and tolls appears to be as follows: All tolls proposed to be levied must be submitted to the M. of H. for approval, and when the approval has been obtained, but not before, they may be levied. No approval is required for stallages and rents (cf. Att.-Gen. v. Tynemouth Corporation (1900), 17 T. L. R. 77). These are, in fact, matters for special bargains. No one need rent the stalls and places in the market; but all persons having goods for sale must frequent the market, and they as well as the buyers must be protected from unreasonable tolls. Tolls are levied on the sale of articles, and on the weighing and measuring of goods, and on the weighing of carts, and now also of cattle under the Acts referred to in note (c), supra. In view of the fact that the distinction between toll and stallage is not always clear, it is perhaps wise to submit for the approval of the M. of H. every charge which it is proposed to make in connection with a market established under the Act. In Att.-Gen. v. Tynemouth Corporation, supra, it was held that a charge imposed upon fish salesmen, for leave to sell in berths of which they had no exclusive occupation, was not stallage or rent, and could not be enforced as a toll without first obtaining the consent of the L. G. B.

The provisions of the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847, with respect to stallages, rents and tolls are contained in ss. 31—41 (see the Act in App. I., post, Vol. II.). It will be found that these sections make specific provisions as to some of the matters discussed supra in relation to franchise tolls and stallages, e.g., changes and recovery of stallages, rents and tolls.

As to markets provided under the Diseases of Animals Act, 1894, it is provided by s. 32 (4) of that Act that a local authority may charge such sums as may be imposed by their byelaws. Inter alia, ss. 31—41 of the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847, are incorporated with the Act of 1894 by s. 32 (3) thereof, and by s. 32 (4) the sums charged for the use of the wharf or other place, which is a market, are to be deemed to be "tolls authorised by the special Act." The byelaws imposing the tolls have by s. 32 (3) to be approved by the Board (now Ministry) of Agriculture and Fisheries. See also s. 32 (7) of the Act as to reduction of tolls.

(e) This should have been the "preceding" section (i.e., s. 166).

Market byelaws.

(f) Note that byelaws can only be made with regard to a market belonging to a local authority. As to the making, confirming, and publishing of byelaws, see ss. 182—185, post, p. 432. There is an addition in this section to the provisions as to publication. Section 251, post, provides for the enforcing of the byelaws. It will be observed that there is no reference here to fairs. A byelaw for the regulation of a market, setting apart different places for the carrying on of wholesale and retail trades, is not unreasonable as being in restraint of trade (Strike v. Collins (1886), 50 J. P. 196; 34 W. R. 459). A byelaw making a reasonable reservation of a part of the market-place for the sale of particular articles and prohibiting the sale of other articles in the part so reserved has been held valid (Savage v. Brook (1863), 33 L. J. M. C. 42; 9 L. T. 334). So, too, have the following byelaws: A byelaw providing that certain sale-rings in the market should be used only for public sales by auction on conditions of sale equally applicable to all bidders, and prohibiting their use for private sales, or for sales to any limited number of persons, or for sales in which any class of the public should be excluded from bidding (Scott v. Glasgow Corporation, [1899] A. C. 470; 64 J. P. 132); a byelaw prohibiting sales of cattle by auction in the market-place before a particular hour (Collins v. Corporation of Wells (1885), 1 T. L. R. 328). Where the effect of a byelaw was entirely to prohibit the introduction into the market-place, without the officials' leave, of a class of articles which came within the classes for which the market had been established, it was held that the byelaw was invalid as a general restraint of trade (Wortley v. Nottingham L. B. (1870), 21 L. T. 582: see also Gingell, Son and Foskett, Ltd. v. Stepney Borough Council, ante, p. 381).

Model byelaws were issued by the L. G. B. under this section. In a memorandum prefixed to the model the Board remark as follows: "Section 42 of the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847 (10 Vict. c. 14), is in the following terms:

Note to Section 167.

"'The undertakers [urban authority] may from time to time make such byelaws as they think fit for all or any of the following purposes; (that is to say),

"'(1) For regulating the use of the market place, . . . and the buildings, stalls, pens, and standings therein, and for preventing nuisances or obstructions therein, or in the immediate approaches thereto:

"'(2) For fixing the days and the hours during each day on which the market . . . shall be held:

"'(3) For inspection of the slaughter-houses, and for keeping the same in a cleanly and proper state, and for removing filth and refuse at least once in every twenty-four hours, and for requiring that they be provided with a sufficient supply of water, and preventing the exercise of cruelty therein:

"'(4) For regulating the carriers resorting to the market, . . . and fixing the rates for carrying articles carried therefrom within the limits of the special Act:

"'(5) For regulating the use of the weighing machines provided by the undertakers [urban authority], and for preventing the use of false or defective weights, scales or measures.

"'(6) For preventing the sale or exposure for sale of unwholesome provisions in the market, . . .'

"Of the above-mentioned purposes the Board think that to those enumerated in the first, second, and fourth paragraphs of section 42 of 10 Vict. c. 14, byelaws may be generally rendered applicable. They anticipate that some difficulty will be experienced in any attempt to make byelaws with regard to the purposes specified in the third, fifth, and sixth paragraphs. The slaughter-houses as to which byelaws are authorised by the third paragraph are apparently the slaughter-houses to which sections 17—20 of 10 Vict. c. 14 relate. Those sections, however, have not been incorporated with the Public Health Act, 1875, and where, under section 169 of that Act, the urban authority exercise their power of providing slaughter-houses, any byelaws which may be required should be made under the last-mentioned enactment.

"On reference to the clauses (21 to 30) of 10 Vict. c. 14, with respect to weighing goods and carts, it will be seen that the statute itself provides very fully for the regulation of the use of the weighing machines.

"The Board are disposed to think that the practical advantage which may be anticipated from the endeavour to supplement these provisions by byelaws under the fifth paragraph of section 42 will hardly compensate for the possible complications which may arise out of any conflict between the regulations prescribed by the byelaws and those imposed by the express terms of the statute.

"Again, for the prevention of the use of false or defective weights, scales, or measures, there appears to be ample provision both in 10 Vict. c. 14 and in other statutes. By section 21 of 10 Vict. c. 14, the urban authority are required to keep in the weighing houses or places proper weights, scales, and measures, according to the standard weights and measures for the time being, for weighing the commodities sold in the market place. The urban authority are also required by section 24 to keep machines and weights for the purpose of weighing carts in which goods are brought for sale. The use of all these machines, weights, scales, and measures, will be under the control of persons appointed by the urban authority. Buyers may insist upon articles offered for sale being weighed or measured by the weights and scales, or measures, of the urban authority, and generally it appears that 10 Vict. c. 14 provides adequate security against the fraudulent practices which byelaws under the fifth paragraph of section 42 might be intended to check.

"The sixth paragraph authorises byelaws for preventing the sale or exposure for sale of unwholesome provisions in the market. Having regard, however, to section 15 of 10 Vict. c. 14, incorporated with 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55, by section 167, and to the stringent provisions of sections 116—119 of the latter statute, the Board think that byelaws upon this subject will be unnecessary.

"It should be observed that section 167 of 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55, provides that all tolls leviable by an urban authority shall be approved by the Local Government Board. Their approval, however, is not required in the case of stallages and rents." The M. of H. must of course now be substituted throughout for the L. G. B.

Byelaws for a market provided under the Diseases of Animals Act, 1894, may be made by the local authority (as to which term see note on p. 378) providing it (Scott v. Glasgow Corporation, ante, p. 387). Section 32 (2) of the Act incorporates ss. 42—49 of the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847, which are the sections with respect to byelaws ; and s. 32 (3) provides that byelaws shall be approved by the Board (now Ministry) of Agriculture and Fisheries, " which approval shall be sufficient without any other approval or allowance, notice of application for approval being given, and proposed byelaws being published before application, as required by " the Clauses Act. Note to Section 167.

(g) See, in s. 306, post, the penalty for injuring or defacing the boards on which the byelaws are inscribed.

168. Any urban authority may purchase, and the directors of any market company, in pursuance, in the case of a company registered under the Companies Act, 1862 (a), of a special resolution of the members passed in manner provided by that Act, and in the case of any other company, of a resolution passed by a majority of three-fourths (b) in number and value of the members present, either personally or by proxy, at a meeting specially convened with notice of the business to be transacted, may sell (c) and transfer to any urban authority, on such terms as may be agreed on between the company and the urban authority, all the rights powers (d) and privileges and all or any of the markets premises and things which at the time of such purchase are the property of the company, but subject to all liabilities attached to the same at the time of such purchase. Power for sale of undertaking of market company to urban authority.

This section will apply to a rural authority providing a market under the P. H. A., 1908, post.

(b) In 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 53, it was three-fifths.

(c) The power of sale, as it seems, overrides any provisions which may be contained in any local Act applicable to the markets which provided for the sale of it. A similar provision is contained in s. 63, ante, p. 139, as to water, and in s. 162, ante, p. 367, as to gas, except that the sanction of the M. of H. is not required for the purchase of the market. But if a loan be required for effecting the purpose, as the Ministry must sanction the loan, their approbation of the purchase must be obtained. The Ministry will require to be furnished with evidence that a resolution to sell the undertaking has been duly passed in accordance with the requirements of the section by the members of the market company. In such a case s. 168 has not the effect of giving a district council a power which can be exercised independently of procedure under s. 166, and the department is not likely to entertain applications for sanction to loans to defray the cost of purchase until the requisite proceedings under the latter section have been taken. If the company's rights extend to fairs the transaction must be limited to the transfer of the market and market rights, and to the purchase of such things as are strictly connected with the purposes of s. 166. See notes to that section..

(d) Quære, will this word carry all special statutory powers which are independent of the property in the market ? The affirmative appears to be the better opinion.

169. Any urban authority (a) may, if they think fit, provide slaughter-houses (b), and they shall make byelaws (c) with respect to the management and charges for the use of any slaughter-houses so provided. Power to provide slaughter-houses.

For the purpose of enabling any urban authority to regulate slaughter-houses within their district the provisions of the Towns Improvement

Section 169. Clauses Act, 1847 (d), with respect to slaughter-houses shall be incorporated with this Act.

Nothing in this section shall prejudice or affect any rights powers or privileges of any persons incorporated by any local Act passed before the passing of the Public Health Act, 1848, for the purpose of making and maintaining slaughter-houses.

Rural districts.

(a) It will be observed that the provisions of ss. 169 and 170 with regard to slaughter-houses are applied by the Act to urban districts only, but if the circumstances of a rural district require that such powers should be put in force therein, it is competent to the rural district council to apply to the M. of H. for an order under s. 276 investing them with the powers. The Ministry are not often asked to declare the first paragraph of s. 169 to be operative in a rural district with the object of enabling a rural district council to provide public slaughter-houses, but there are numerous instances in which the remaining powers of the section, with the provisions of s. 170, and the supplemental powers of ss. 29—31 of the P. H. A., 1890, have been put in force either in whole rural districts or in specified rural parishes, in fact these powers are now readily granted. Any application for an order of this kind should be made by resolution of the council of which a copy should be forwarded to the Ministry by the clerk, with a short statement of the grounds upon which the application is made.

A question arises as to the interpretation to be placed upon the words "within three months after the passing of such Act" as used in s. 127 of the Act of 1847, in the case of an order of the M. of H. investing a rural district council with urban powers, and upon this depends the precise effect of the order upon slaughter-houses already existing. The words must be taken to refer to the date of the operation of the order. It will be observed that upon the operation of an urban powers order in a rural district, existing slaughter-houses have to be registered, but do not require to be licensed. Both classes may be regulated by byelaws. The Departmental Committee on Meat Inspection, in their report dated July 16th, 1921, stated as follows:—"We do not see any ground for continuing the present diversity of law affecting slaughter-houses and depending on whether the slaughter-house is in an urban or a rural district or on the date of its establishment."

Effect of establishment of public slaughter-house.

On the question whether, upon the establishment of a public slaughter-house by an urban council, that council could refuse to sanction plans for the erection of private slaughter-houses the L. G. B. expressed themselves as follows: "Under s. 126 of the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, no place can be used or occupied as a slaughter-house in the urban district which was not in such use or occupation at the constitution of the district and has so continued ever since, unless and until a licence for the erection thereof or for the use and occupation thereof as a slaughter-house has been obtained from the urban district council. A penalty is imposed by the section for disobedience to the provision therein contained, and the section applies whether the urban district council provide a public slaughter-house or not. It would seem, therefore, that the urban district council can deal with the matter without obtaining any further powers."

In another case the Board stated that it seemed to them that the urban council had no power to revoke a licence in force in regard to a slaughter-house or to compel all the butchers in the district to use any public slaughter-house which might be provided. A licence granted can only be revoked by the justices under the circumstances provided for in s. 129 of the Act of 1847. Where, however, a licence is required for a slaughter-house by a person to whom one has not already been given in respect thereof it is competent to the urban council to consider whether the circumstances justify them in withholding a licence from such person. If the slaughter-house was used as such when s. 126 of the Act referred to was put in force in the district, of course no licence is required. At the same time the Board drew attention to s. 29 of the P. H. A., 1890, which, when in force, enables urban councils to grant licences for a limited period, and to s. 31 of that Act as to the power of justices to revoke a licence.

Note to Section 169.

In settling the design of a public slaughter-house regard should be had to a Circular issued by the L. G. B. as to the Humane Slaughtering of Animals, and to the recommendations on the subject put forward by a committee appointed by the Admiralty in 1904. See also note (c), infra.

Design of slaughter-house.

As regards the question of the power of a district council to provide a slaughter-house outside their district, it should be borne in mind that even if a slaughter-house could be established outside the district of the council with the licence of the local authority of the adjoining district (assuming that that district was urban or subject to urban powers) there would be practical inconveniences and a conflict of jurisdiction. The L. G. B. once declined to sanction a loan for a scheme of this kind.

Public slaughter-house outside district.

Income tax on receipts.

Under a local Act the dues and rents charged in respect of public slaughter-houses were to be regulated triennially so as to make the concern self-supporting, but not profit-earning. It was held that the slaughter-houses should be assessed for income tax purposes under r. 1 (and not r. 3) of Sched. A. (Inland Revenue v. Edinburgh Magistrates, [1907] S. C. 1233).

Byelaws.

(c) See note (f) to s. 167, ante, p. 387. A revised series of model byelaws was issued in 1914 by the L. G. B. in relation to slaughter-houses provided by private persons, and the suggestions contained therein, and in the prefixed memorandum, will be of great assistance to local authorities. In the memorandum the Board (after setting out the text of the incorporated enactment) remark as follows:

"In connection with these provisions, and those relating to the licensing and registration of slaughter-houses, in sections 125—127, the attention of the urban authority should be directed to the judgment of the Court of Exchequer Chamber in the case of Anthony v. The Brecon Markets Company (1872), 26 L. T. 982.

"With reference to that judgment, a few observations may here be introduced in illustration of the nature and extent of the powers of the urban authority with regard to slaughter-houses.

"It will be seen that the provisions of the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, incorporated with the P. H. A., 1875, by section 169 of the latter Act, recognise two classes of slaughter-houses, viz., slaughter-houses in use and occupation at the time of the passing of the 'special Act,' and slaughter-houses not in use and occupation at that time. To the former class the requirements as to registration in section 127 are specially applicable. To the latter class the provisions as to licensing in sections 125 and 126 have direct reference.

"Both classes may apparently be regulated by byelaws under section 128.

"In framing a model series of byelaws under that enactment, the Board have considered that the statutory terms do not warrant the extension of the scope of the byelaws to regulations directly affecting the structure of the premises.

"But as regards premises for which under section 126 the licence of the urban authority will be required, the Board have been advised that, in the exercise of the discretionary power of licensing which has been conferred upon the urban authority, the following rules as to site and structure should influence their decision upon each application for a licence:

"1. The premises to be erected or to be used and occupied as a slaughter-house should not be within 100 feet of any dwelling-house; and the site should be such as to admit of free ventilation by direct communication with the external air on two sides at least of the slaughter-house.

"2. Lairs for cattle in connection with the slaughter-house should not be within 100 feet of a dwelling-house.

"3. The slaughter-house should not in any part be below the surface of the adjoining ground.

"4. The approach to the slaughter-house should not be on an incline of more than one in four, and should not be through any dwelling-house or shop.

"5. No room or loft should be constructed over the slaughter-house.

"6. The slaughter-house should be provided with an adequate tank or other proper receptacle for water, so placed that the bottom shall not be less than six feet above the level of the floor of the slaughter-house.

"7. The slaughter-house should be provided with means of thorough ventilation.

"8. The slaughter-house should be well paved with asphalte or concrete, and laid with proper slope and channel towards a gulley, which should be properly trapped and covered with a grating, the bars of which should be not more more than three-eighths of an inch apart.

"Provision for the effectual drainage of the slaughter-house should also be made.

"9. The surface of the walls in the interior of the slaughter-house should be covered with hard, smooth, impervious material, to a sufficient height.

"10. No water-closet, privy, or cesspool should be constructed within the slaughter-house.

"There should be no direct communication between the slaughter-house, and any stable, water-closet, privy, or cesspool.

"11. Every lair for cattle in connection with the slaughter-house should be properly paved, drained, and ventilated.

"No habitable room should be constructed over any lair.

"It remains to call attention to two provisions contained in the P. H. A., 1890, which apply in cases where Part III. of that Act has been adopted by an urban authority:

"(a) Under section 29 the urban authority may limit the duration of licences granted, after the adoption of Part III. for the use and occupation of places as slaughter-houses so that such licences 'shall be in force for such time or times only, not being less than twelve months, as the urban authority shall think fit to specify in such licences.' Certain forms which are prescribed by the model clauses will be found to give effect to this provision.

"(b) Where a licence for the use and occupation of a slaughter-house is granted, after the adoption of Part III., the provisions of section 30 of that Act are required by sub-section (3) of that section to be endorsed on the licence. This enactment prescribes that upon any change of occupation of any building within an urban district registered or licensed for use and used as a slaughter-house, the person thereupon becoming the occupier or joint occupier shall give notice in writing of the change of occupation to the inspector of nuisances. A person failing or neglecting to give the notice becomes liable to a penalty. (Section 30 (2).)"

Slaughter-houses provided under a local Act.

In a case in which slaughter-houses had been provided by an urban council under the powers of a local Act the L. G. B. held that byelaws for their regulation could not be made under s. 169 of the P. H. A., 1875. The Board suggested, however, whether as owners of the slaughter-houses the council might not, by directions to their servants and regulations governing admission to the buildings, exercise a very effectual control in their management.

The Slaughter-houses, etc. (Metropolis) Act, 1874 (repealed by the P. H. (London) A., 1891), contained in terms no prohibition as to the manner in which the slaughter of cattle was to be performed, but enacted by s. 4 that the local authority might make byelaws regulating the conduct of any business specified in the Act. Byelaws so made (kept in force by s. 142 (2) (b) of the Act of 1891) prohibited the occupier of a slaughter-house from slaughtering or permitting to be slaughtered any animal contrary to certain regulations laid down in them:—Held, that the byelaws were not repugnant to the common law, and that upon breach of them by a servant the occupier was liable, although the offence was committed without his knowledge and contrary to his express order (Collman v. Mills, [1897] 1 Q. B. 396; 61 J. P. 102).

(d) The incorporated provisions of the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847 (ss. 125—131), are printed in App. I., post, Vol. II., with notes. These provisions relate to the licensing and registration of slaughter-houses, the making of byelaws, etc. See also note (c) above.

Further powers are now obtainable in relation to the licensing of slaughter-houses under ss. 29—31 of the P. H. A., 1890. See that Act, post, and note (c) above.

See as to slaughter-houses in the metropolis, the P. H. (London) A., 1891, ss. 20, 141.

Slaughter-houses for horses and other cattle not intended for butchers' meat, are regulated by the Knackers Acts, 1786 and 1844, in App. I., post, Vol. II. (but the power to grant licences under those Acts is now transferred to district councils by the L. G. A., 1894, s. 27 (2), post), and the Protection of Animals Act, 1911, ss. 5, 6, Sched. I.

Note to Section 169.

The Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847, ss. 17—20, contains provisions relating to slaughter-houses, but these apply only by virtue of a special Act. They are incorporated as regards a local authority under the Diseases of Animals Act, 1894, by s. 32, thereof, which enables such authority to provide landing places, etc. for the sale, slaughter, or disposal of foreign animals.

Notice to be affixed on slaughter-houses

170. The owner or occupier of any slaughter-house licensed or registered (a) under this Act shall, within one month after the licensing or registration of the premises, affix, and shall keep undefaced and legible on some conspicuous place on the premises, a notice with the words "Licensed slaughter-house," or "Registered slaughter-house," as the case may be.

Any person who makes default in this respect, or who neglects or refuses to affix or renew such notice after requisition in writing from the urban authority, shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds for every such offence, and of ten shillings for every day during which such offence continues after conviction (b).

(a) The incorporated sections of the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, enable the urban authority to licence slaughter-houses newly established, and to register those which have been previously established. This section would appear to take effect as from 1875, but the same provision was contained in 37 & 38 Vict. c. 89, s. 49. It cannot, however, operate upon premises licensed or registered before this last Act. See note to preceding section as to the application of s. 170 to rural districts.

(b) As to the recovery of this penalty, see s. 251, post.

POLICE REGULATIONS.

Incorporation of certain provisions of 10 & 11 Vict. c. 89.

171. The provisions of the Town Police Clauses Act, 1847 (a), with respect to the following matters, (namely),

(1) With respect to obstructions and nuisances in the streets (b); and
(2) With respect to fires (c); and
(3) With respect to places of public resort (d); and
(4) With respect to hackney carriages (e); and
(5) With respect to public bathing (f);

shall, for the purpose of regulating such matters in urban districts (g), be incorporated with this Act.

The expression in the provisions so incorporated "the superintendent constable," and the expression "any constable or other officer appointed by virtue of this or the special Act," shall, for the purposes of this Act, respectively include any superintendent of police, and any constable or officer of police acting for or in the district of any urban authority (h); and the expression "within the prescribed distance" (i) shall for the purposes of this Act mean within any urban district.

Notwithstanding anything in the provisions so incorporated (k), a licence granted to the driver of any hackney carriage in pursuance thereof shall be in force for one year only from the date of the licence, or until the next general licensing meeting where a day for such meeting is appointed.

(a) That is, 10 & 11 Vict. c. 89. In order to understand the incorporated clauses attention should be paid to other clauses in the Act, and consequently such as Incorporated provisions.

Note to Section 171.

appear to be requisite are printed in App. I., post, Vol. II., in addition to the clauses actually incorporated. The sections dealing with the various matters specified in s. 171 are referred to in the following notes. The notes to the several sections in App. I., post, Vol. II., should also be referred to.

Obstructions, etc. in streets.

(b) See ss. 21—29 of the Act of 1847, in App. I., post, Vol. II. The provisions refer more to police control than to the actual powers of local authorities, and some of the offences mentioned therein are also dealt with in the Highway Act, 1835, s. 72. See also the provisions of ss. 3, 78—81 of the P. H. A., 1907, post.

Fires.

(c) See ss. 30—33 of the Act of 1847 in App. I., post, Vol. II. The urban authority derive from this paragraph their powers for the extinction of fires, the establishment of fire brigades, the erection of fire-engine stations, etc. Their duty in connection with the provision of an adequate water supply is laid down in s. 66, ante, p. 142. See also the Parish Fire Engines Act, 1898, post, and ss. 3 and 90 of the P. H. A., 1907, post.

Places of public resort.

(d) See ss. 34—36 of the Act of 1847, in App. I., post, Vol. II.

Hackney carriages.

(e) See ss. 37—68 of the Act of 1847, in App. I., post, Vol. II. These provisions have been extended and applied to omnibuses, stage coaches, etc., by 52 & 53 Vict. c. 14, which is also set out in App. I., post, Vol. II. By s. 2 of that Act, it is to be deemed to be incorporated with the P. H. A., 1875, by the provisions in the text.

It will be seen that the incorporated clauses enable byelaws to be made in respect of hackney carriages; and the M. of H. have model byelaws on this subject. For decisions upon such byelaws, see notes to s. 68 of the Act of 1847, post, Vol. II.

Public bathing.

(f) See s. 69 of the Act of 1847, in App. I., post, Vol. II. On this subject also model byelaws are issued by the M. of H. As the marginal note to s. 69 of the Act of 1847 summarises the provisions of the section as relating to bathing machines, such byelaws are restricted to the regulation of public bathing in connection with the use of bathing machines. See, however, s. 92 of the P. H. A., 1907, which, when declared to be in force in a district, enables the council to make byelaws in regard to public bathing, whether from bathing machines or not, and other matters.

As to the conditions under which bathing from the shore without the use of a machine may become an indictable offence, the Board refer in the same preface to R. v. Reed (1871), 12 Cox C. C. 1, and R. v. Crunden (1809), 2 Camp. 89. See also ss. 3 and 82 of the P. H. A., 1907.

Rural districts.

(g) It will be observed that this section applies to urban districts only. If, however, a rural council are of opinion that the provisions, or some of them, should be put in force in their district or certain parishes therein, they may apply to the M. of H. for an order for the purpose under s. 276, post; or, the application may be made by ratepayers whose united hereditaments represent at least one-tenth of the rateable value of the district or parish, by the county council or by a parish council. See the L. G. A., 1894, s. 25 (7), post. A copy of the resolution authorising the application should be forwarded by the clerk, together with a short statement of grounds.

If the application relates to "obstructions, etc., in streets" such as are dealt with in s. 28 of the Act of 1847, the precise paragraphs of that section which are required should be specified, and in this connection the council might ascertain whether the offences in question are not already dealt with by the Highway Act, 1835, s. 72, which is in force in rural as well as urban districts. See also note (b), above.

If the application relates to "fires," it should be stated whether fire engines are to be provided by the rural district council, and if so, what parishes the engine or engines will serve. It should be borne in mind that parish councils also have powers for the provision of fire extinguishing plant under the L. G. A., 1894, s. 6, and in some cases under the Lighting and Watching Act, 1833, s. 44. Moreover, under the Parish Fire Engines Act, 1898, such councils are empowered to agree with the councils of neighbouring urban districts for the use of fire engines in their parish.

It is frequently possible for a rural council to arrange with the council of some borough or other urban district for the use of their engines and the services of the urban fire brigade. Such an arrangement, if of a binding and permanent character, may be considered as the providing of a fire engine by the rural council within the meaning of s. 32 of the Act of 1847. It is well to settle the terms of an agreement before applying to the M. of H. for the necessary urban powers, and it may be observed here that an urban council cannot make an arrangement of this kind with a rural district council and retain their powers under s. 33 of the Act of 1847 of recovering expenses from owners outside their district. Note to Section 171.

See, however, the P. H. A., 1907, s. 90, as to agreements for use of fire engines, etc., in districts where that section is operative in pursuance of an Order of the Secretary of State. The official view seems to be that this section does not dispense with the necessity for urban powers in the case of a rural district council.

If the application relates to "hackney carriages," it should be stated whether it is desired to regulate omnibuses also (see note (e), ante, p. 394). So long as a rural district is not subject to an urban powers order hackney carriages are apparently not subject to any regulation. If the application relates to "public bathing," it it would be well to consider whether the powers of the Act of 1847 will be sufficient for the object in view. See note (f), ante, p. 394.

(h) By s. 28 of the Town Police Clauses Act, 1847, everyone who, to the annoyance and danger of the passengers, wantonly throws stones is liable to a penalty. By s. 171, supra, the provisions of the Town Police Clauses Act, 1847, with respect to the above, are incorporated "for the purpose of regulating such matters in urban districts." It is provided by s. 253, post, that "proceedings for the recovery of any penalty under this Act shall not, except as in this Act is expressly provided, be had or taken by any person other than a party aggrieved, or by the local authority of the district in which the offence is committed":—Held, that the district superintendent of police could lay an information under s. 28 of the Town Police Clauses Act, 1847, although not the party aggrieved nor authorised by the local authority (Jobson v. Henderson (1900), 64 J. P. 425; 82 L. T. 260). See also s. 253 and notes thereto, post. Who may prosecute.

(i) The last interpretation removed a difficulty which was often felt in respect of "the prescribed distance," and prevents the inconvenience resulting from the contiguity of local districts. "Prescribed distance."

(k) This enactment removed an impression which prevailed generally, though whether correctly or not may be doubted, that though the owner of a carriage was to be licensed for a year only, a driver when once licensed retained his licence during the rest of his life. Drivers' licences.

172. Any urban authority (a) may licence the proprietors drivers and conductors of horses ponies mules or asses standing for hire within the district in like manner and with the like incidents and consequences as in the case of proprietors and drivers of hackney carriages (b), and may make byelaws (c) for regulating stands and fixing rates of hire, and as to the qualification of such drivers and conductors, and for securing their good and orderly conduct while in charge. Urban authority may make byelaws for licensing horses, boats, etc. for hire.

Any urban authority (a) may also licence the proprietors of pleasure boats and vessels (d), and the boatmen or other persons in charge thereof, and may make byelaws (d) for regulating the numbering and naming of such boats and vessels, and the number of persons to be carried therein, and the mooring places for the same, and for fixing rates of hire, and the qualification of such boatmen or other persons in charge, and for securing their good and orderly conduct while in charge.

(a) If a rural council consider it desirable to possess the powers of this section, they should apply to the M. of H. for an Order under s. 276, post. A copy of their resolution should be forwarded by the clerk, with a statement of the grounds for the application and of the names of the contributory places concerned. Such powers will presumably only be required for populous places, or places to which numbers of visitors resort. Rural districts.

(b) See previous section and note (c) thereto. Having regard to ss. 39 and 46 of the Town Police Clauses Act, 1847, which is applied to these licences by the provision in the text it is suggested that for such licences fees may be charged not exceeding the fees authorised by those sections. Licences.

Note to Section 172.

(c) As to the making, confirming, and publishing of byelaws, see ss. 182—186, post, pp. 432—445, and as to the enforcing of them, see s. 251, post.

Byelaws.

Model byelaws under this section were issued by the L. G. B. From the memorandum prefixed to these, the following practical remarks are taken: "It should be noticed that the effect of sections 46 and 47 of the 10 & 11 Vict. c. 89, as applied to the case of a driver or conductor of a horse, pony, mule, or ass standing for hire, is to require every such driver or conductor to obtain a licence from the urban authority, and to render liable to a penalty any person who acts as a driver or conductor without having obtained such licence, or during the time that his licence is suspended, or who lends or parts with his licence except to the proprietor of the horse, pony, mule, or ass. The proprietor will also be liable to a penalty if he employ any person as a driver or conductor who has not obtained a licence, or during the time that his licence is suspended. The 10 & 11 Vict. c. 89, s. 50, empowers the urban authority, upon a conviction for the second time for any such offence as is therein mentioned, to suspend or revoke the licence; and, in accordance with the provision in the last paragraph of s. 171 of the 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55, the licence granted to a driver or conductor will be in force for one year only from the date of the licence, or until the next general licensing meeting, where a day for such meeting is appointed. Although the 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55, s. 172, specifies the qualification of drivers and conductors as one of the subjects which may be regulated by byelaws, the Board have deemed it unnecessary to include in the model series any clause with respect to this matter. It will be within the discretion of the urban authority to grant or refuse a licence; and before deciding upon any application they will doubtless satisfy themselves as to the qualification of the applicant for employment as a driver or conductor. A licence from the urban authority is a qualification which the statutory provisions above noticed recognise as indispensable in the case of every person who acts as a driver or conductor." It would not apparently be feasible to provide in the byelaws under this section for such matters as the wearing of badges by drivers, the limitation of the number of licences, or the accompanying of juvenile riders.

(d) Model byelaws have also been issued with reference to pleasure boats and vessels. The memorandum attached to this series is deserving of careful perusal, but it is too long for insertion here. It is there pointed out that there is not in the text any express provision as to the conditions under which a licence may be granted or refused or as to its duration or revocation. These are said to be matters as to which the urban authority may adopt such rules as they may deem most expedient. Certain requirements are indicated which ought to be regarded as indispensable, such as the soundness and stability of the boat or vessel, etc., and the power to revoke the licence on notice. A licence may be so framed as to specify the maximum number of persons to be carried in each boat.

The powers of local authorities for the licensing of pleasure boats have been largely extended by the P. H. A., 1907, s. 94, but that section must first be put in force in the particular district by Order of the M. of H. See notes thereto, post.

The vessels referred to in the text appear to be vessels used for pleasure, e.g., yachts, and are not such as are used for passenger traffic, which are to be dealt with under the Merchant Shipping Acts, where the Board of Trade provides for the qualification of the officers. Thus, a ferry would not ordinarily come under the section. There seems, however, to be no authoritative decision as to the meaning of the expression "pleasure boats and vessels" as used in this Act.

This section does not authorise the making of a byelaw that proprietors of boats (not themselves acting as boatmen) must take out a licence, nor can the council of a borough make such a byelaw under the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 23; such a byelaw, therefore, is ultra vires and bad, and an information purporting to be laid under such a byelaw was held to have been rightly dismissed (Byrne v. Brown (1893), 57 J. P. 741 n). A similar decision was arrived at under the words of a local Act in Londonderry Harbour Commissioners v. Londonderry Bridge Commissioners, [1894] 2 I. R. 384.

As to boats on lakes or waters in any park or pleasure ground provided by the local authority, see the P. H. A., 1890, s. 44 (2), post.

PART V.

GENERAL PROVISIONS.

CONTRACTS.

173. Any local authority may enter into any contracts necessary for carrying this Act into execution.

Power of local authorities to contract.

This section does not legally preclude the authority from themselves carrying out works. The question of the expediency of so doing is one for their decision.

Contracts generally.

Contracts must be entered into by the authorities themselves: the power cannot be delegated to a committee; see s. 200 and note (a) to next section.

The M. of H. hold that a contract for the execution of works to be paid for by instalments spread over a term of years is a proceeding which is not recognised by the Act, and that the proper course is to borrow the money with the Ministry's sanction under ss. 233 and 234. See also s. 210.

As to a contract for the insurance of the property of a local authority, see Municipal Mutual Insurance, Ltd. v. Pontefract Corporation (1917), 116 L. T. 671; 15 L. G. R. 299.

As to contracts for the supply of goods, see Percival v. London C. C Asylums Committee, post, p. 411.

In making contracts an authority should bear in mind the provisions of the Trade Boards Act, 1909, as to minimum rates of wages in certain trades. See a circular of the L. G. B. dated July 29th, 1910. The Board also urged that in all contracts for work or materials, local authorities would adopt the standard Government "fair wages" clause. See their circular dated September 2nd, 1911.

174. With respect to contracts made by an urban (a) authority under this Act (aa), the following regulations shall be observed; (namely,)

Provisions as to contracts by urban authority.

(1) Every contract made by an urban authority whereof the value or amount exceeds fifty pounds shall be in writing and sealed with the common seal of such authority (b):

(2) Every such contract shall specify the work, materials, matters, or things to be furnished, had, or done, the price to be paid, and the time or times within which the contract is to be performed, and shall specify some pecuniary penalty to be paid in case the terms of the contract are not duly performed (d):

(3) Before contracting for the execution of any works under the provisions of this Act, an urban authority shall obtain from their surveyor an estimate in writing, as well of the probable expense of executing the work in a substantial manner as of the annual expense of repairing the same; also a report as to the most advantageous mode of contracting, that is to say, whether by contracting only for the execution of the work, or for executing and also maintaining the same in repair during a term of years or otherwise (e):

(4) Before any contract of the value or amount of one hundred pounds or upwards is entered into by an urban authority ten days public notice at the least shall be given, expressing the nature and purpose thereof and inviting tenders for the execution of the same; and such authority shall require and take sufficient security for the due performance of the same (f):

(5) Every contract entered into by an urban authority in conformity with the provisions of this section, and duly executed by the other parties thereto, shall be binding on the authority by whom the same is executed and their successors and on all other parties thereto and their executors administrators successors or assigns to all intents and purposes: Provided that an urban authority may compound with any contractor or other person in respect of any penalty incurred by reason of the non-performance of any contract entered into as aforesaid, whether such penalty is mentioned in any such contract, or in any bond or otherwise, for such sums of money or other recompense as to such authority may seem proper.

(a) This section applies only to contracts made by urban authorities, and only to contracts made by them when acting under this Act (see next note). Contracts with rural district councils, and with urban councils when not acting under this Act, are regulated by the ordinary law relating to corporate bodies, which was thus stated by Lord COLERIDGE, C.J., in Austin v. Bethnal Green (Guardians of) (1874), L. R. 9 C. P. 91; 38 J. P. 248: "The rule of law is clear, that primâ facie and for general purposes a corporation can only contract under seal, for the proper legal mode of authenticating the act of a corporation is by means of its seal. On this rule, however, certain exceptions have been grafted. The principle that governs these exceptions is conveniently stated in the case of Church v. Imperial Gas Light Co. (1838), 6 A. & E. 846, at p. 861, by the Court of Queen's Bench, which statement is adopted by the Court of Exchequer in the case of Ludlow (Mayor of) v. Charlton (1840), 6 M. & W. 815, at p. 822. It is there stated that wherever to hold the rule applicable, would occasion very great inconvenience or tend to defeat the very object for which the corporation was created, the exception has prevailed; hence the retainer by parol of an inferior servant, the doing of acts very frequently recurring, or too insignificant to be worth the trouble of affixing the common seal, are established exceptions." These two exceptions to the general rule (i.e., trivial matters and matters of frequent occurrence) have ever since been recognised; and after a conflict of authority extending over many years, a third exception has now been established as follows: Where (1) the purposes for which a corporation is created render it necessary that work should be done or goods supplied to carry those purposes into effect, and (2) orders are given by the corporation for work or goods to carry into effect such purposes, and (3) the work or goods are accepted by the corporation, and the whole consideration for payment is executed, then the absence of a contract under seal is no answer to an action brought in respect of the work done or goods supplied (Lawford v. Billericay R. D. C., [1903] 1 K. B. 772; 67 J. P. 245). In Hodge v. Matlock Bath U. D. C. (1911), 75 J. P. 65; 27 T. L. R. 129, an urban council, who were building a kursaal under a private Act, by resolution employed the plaintiff as architect. There was no contract under seal. After he had done some of the work, he was dismissed. In an action for damages for breach of contract, and, alternatively, on a quantum meruit, it was held, following Lawford v. Billericay R. D. C., supra, that the council having received the benefit of the work, were liable to the plaintiff on a quantum meruit. Incidentally it was held that the jury could not, on the claim for a quantum meruit, award a sum exceeding that claimed by the plaintiff's particulars in the absence of evidence by him that the amount so claimed was inadequate. The principle of Lawford v. Billericay, supra, was also applied in a case where there was an agreement under seal which was, however, rescinded upon the ground that it was entered into by the plaintiff under a mistake innocently induced by the defendants by correspondence prior to the making of the agreement and the plaintiffs' remuneration was thereupon assessed on the footing of a quantum meruit. See Faraday v. Tamworth Union (1917), 81 J. P. 81; 15 L. G. R. 258. See also Bourne and Hollingsworth v. Marylebone Borough Council, [1908] W. N. 52; 72 J. P. 129; reversed, [1909] W. N. 14; 72 J. P. 306.

Contracts of corporate bodies apart from statutory provisions: when sealing required.

Austin v. Bethnal Green (Guardians of) and Ludlow v. Charlton, supra, illustrate the first two exceptions to the general rule as to contracts of corporations; but the actual decisions in those cases, so far as they conflict with the third exception established in Lawford v. Billericay R. D. C., supra, must now be disregarded; so too, to the same extent, must the decisions in the following cases: Paine v. Strand Union (Guardians of), infra; Lamprell v. Billericay Union, infra; Smart v. West

Note to Section 174.

Ham Guardians, infra ; Phelps v. Upton Snodsbury Highway Board, infra ; and Stevens v. Hounslow Burial Board, infra. It was held that guardians could not bind themselves by an order, not under seal, for making a survey and map of the rateable property in a parish, such order not being a contract necessarily incident to the purposes for which they were incorporated (Paine v. Strand Union (Guardians of) (1846), 8 Q. B. 326). Where guardians gave a verbal order for iron gates for the workhouse, and the gates were supplied, it was held that there was a contract incident to the purposes for which they were incorporated (Saunders v. St. Neots Union (Guardians of) (1846), 8 Q. B. 810). In Lamprell v. Billericay Union (1849), 3 Ex. 283, it was held that a builder who had erected works, in addition to those specified in a sealed contract, was not entitled to recover on a quantum meruit, as the defendants were incapable of making a new parol contract of that description. When at a meeting of guardians a contract not under seal was entered into for the erecting of water-closets in the workhouse, and the closets were put up, it was held that the guardians were liable (Clarke v. Cuckfield Union (Guardians of) (1852), 21 L. J. Q. B. 349 ; 16 J. P. 257). Guardians suspecting fraud by their clerk in the union accounts employed the plaintiff to investigate them, and during the investigation, and after the appointment of a new clerk, also employed him to make up the accounts for the last half-year, which involved a fresh investigation by him of the old accounts. The plaintiff was employed under three several resolutions of the board entered in their minute book, but no contract was made under the seal of the board. It was held that as the work was incidental and necessary to the purposes for which the board was created, he was entitled to recover (Haigh v. North Bierley Union (Guardians of) (1858), 28 L. J. Q. B. 62 ; 23 J. P. 195). So a plaintiff was held entitled to recover the price of coals supplied to a workhouse under a parol contract (Nicholson v. Bradfield Union (Guardians of) (1866), L. R. 1 Q. B. 620 ; 30 J. P. 549). The appointment of a medical officer was held not to come within the exceptions to the general principle that a seal is necessary (Dyte v. St. Pancras (Guardians of) (1872), 36 J. P. 375 ; 27 L. T. 342). A plaintiff at the request of the defendants prepared plans for an enlargement of their school, and did other work in connection therewith. There was no express contract to pay for such services, the only real contract between the parties being expressed in a resolution by the defendants to pay the plaintiff a percentage on the cost of the buildings to be erected. The defendants having refused to carry out the work on the plaintiff's plans, the plaintiff sued them for breach of contract :—Held, that the contract not being under seal, he could not recover (Start v. West Mersea School Board (1899), 63 J. P. 440 ; 15 T. L. R. 442). The two last decisions turned upon the ground that the contracts sued upon were executory only. See also Godfrey, Ltd. v. Alton R. D. C. (1915), 79 J. P. N. 280. In Austin v. Bethnal Green (Guardians of), ante, p. 398, it was held that a contract for the engagement of a clerk to a workhouse master must, in order to bind the guardians, be under seal. See also Smart v. West Ham Union (Guardians of) (1855), 10 Ex. 867.

In Phelps v. Upton Snodsbury Highway Board (1885), 49 J. P. 408, a highway board by a resolution directed their clerk to take the necessary steps to oppose a Bill which contained provisions contrary to the Railways Clauses Acts, and would prejudicially affect certain highways within their district. In pursuance of such resolution, the clerk instructed the plaintiffs, a firm of solicitors. In an action by them to recover from the board their costs of the opposition, it was held that the purpose for which they had been retained was not incidental to the purposes for which the board was incorporated, and that, as they had not been retained under seal, they had no right of action. See also Baker v. Holme Cultram U. D. C., post, p. 403.

By the Burial Act, 1852, s. 24, a burial board appointed under that Act is incorporated and has a common seal ; and by s. 31 may enter into contracts with any person for building chapels and other premises, and doing any other works, which contracts must specify the work to be done, the prices to be paid, the time within which the work is to be done, and the penalty the contractor is to pay for non-performance ; the contracts are also to be entered in a book to be kept by the board for that purpose. The plaintiff contracted to do certain repairs to the chapels and premises of the defendants for £38 ; and the seal of the board was affixed to the contract. During the work their surveyor verbally ordered the plaintiff to do small repairs not included in the contract. The plaintiff sought to recover £13, the cost of these extras, and the defendants denied liability on the ground that they had not been contracted for under seal. It was held,—by FRY, L.J., that the board were not liable, as they were bound to contract for such work as the plaintiff had executed strictly in accordance with the terms of s. 31; but by MATHEW, J., that they were liable, as each extra was of trivial importance and the board could not be expected to affix their seal to every order for small matters as they were required (Stevens v. Hounslow Burial Board (1889), 54 J. P. 309; 61 L. T. 839).

There is a fourth exception to the general rule that a corporation must contract under seal, viz.: the equitable doctrine of part performance operates in the case of a corporation in the same manner as in the case of an individual (Crook v. Seaford Corporation (1871), L. R. 6 Ch. 551; Wilson v. West Hartlepool Rail. Co. (1865), 2 De G. J. & S. 475; Oxford (Mayor, etc. of) v. Crow, infra; Hoare v. Kingsbury U. D. C., p. 403, post).

Any variation of a contract under seal must itself be under seal (Kellett v. Stockport Corporation (1906), 70 J. P. 154).

Mutuality.

The duly sealed contracts of corporations are in like position as those of private persons. Where a contract with their common seal affixed is sent by a corporation to the other party to the agreement to be signed and is so signed, or having been first signed by the other party, is sealed by the corporation, such contract is good: so too, if alterations made by the corporation after the other party has signed are assented to by him before the sealing. The plaintiff board advertised for 300 to 400 tons of granite spalls for workhouse purposes to be delivered by a particular day. The defendants sent in a tender, which was accepted, and the plaintiffs' usual form of contract was sent to the defendants. Two days later the defendants sent back the contract signed by them agreeing to deliver by the day fixed, but adding the words "weather and other circumstances permitting." Four days later the plaintiffs wrote acknowledging receipt of the signed contract, but pointing out that they (the plaintiffs) had erased the words "other circumstances." On the same day the defendants wrote that they had put the order in hand. Four days later the plaintiffs affixed their common seal to the contract. The defendants did not execute any part of their contract by the day specified, alleging that want of ships and stress of weather had prevented them. After a month's delay the plaintiffs bought in the market at prices above the contract rate and sued for damages for breach of the agreement:—Held, that as the defendants had assented to the alteration in the contract made by the plaintiffs, there was mutuality between the parties at the time the seal was affixed, and that consequently the plaintiffs were entitled to succeed (Dartford Union (Guardians of) v. Trickett & Sons (1888), 53 J. P. 277; 59 L. T. 754; affirmed (1889), 5 T. L. R. 619). For an instance where a person was held not to be bound owing to want of mutuality, see Kidderminster v. Hardwick, post, p. 401.

Contracts by committees.

The statutory provisions as to contracts made by the ordinary committees of the councils of urban districts (other than boroughs) and of rural districts are contained in the L. G. A., 1894, s. 56 (1), post. Sub-section (4) of the same section provides, however, that the section shall not apply to the council of a borough. Therefore, where the urban sanitary authority is the council of a borough, s. 200, post, p. 465, applies. By the L. G. A., 1894, s. 56 (1): "A . . . district council may appoint committees, consisting either wholly or partly of members of the council, for the exercise of any powers which, in the opinion of the council, can be properly exercised by committees, but a committee shall not hold office beyond the next annual meeting of the council, and the acts of every such committee shall be submitted to the council for their approval. Provided that where a committee is appointed by any district council for any of the purposes of the Public Health Acts or Highway Acts, the council may authorise the committee to institute any proceeding or do any act which the council might have instituted or done for that purpose other than the raising of any loan or the making of any rate or contract." The council of a borough may by s. 200, post, p. 465, from time to time appoint out of their own number so many persons as they may think fit, for any purposes of this Act which in the opinion of such authority would be better regulated and managed by means of a committee: Provided that a committee so appointed shall in no case be authorised to borrow any money, to make any rate, or to enter into any contract, and shall be subject to any regulations and restrictions which may be imposed by the authority that formed it.

Note to Section 174.

The position of a council in respect of a contract which a committee has purported to make appears to be the same whether the council is a rural or an urban one, viz.: that any contract which a committee may purport to make must be approved by the council appointing them, the effect of such approval being that the contract then becomes the contract of the council: see Lawford v. Billericay R. D. C., [1903] 1 K. B., at p. 780. The approval or ratification of an agreement must be under seal where the agreement if originally made by the council would require to be sealed. A municipal corporation, on July 18th, caused certain tolls to be put up for letting by auction, one condition being that the purchaser should forthwith pay a month's rent in advance, and produce two sureties, who should sign the conditions and a draft lease. The defendant was the highest bidder; and he paid a month's rent in advance, and signed an agreement to become lessee indorsed on the conditions. According to some reports, the contract was also signed by the town clerk, who, however, was not authorised under seal to do so. The contract was not sealed by the corporation; but on August 7th, by a resolution under seal, they adopted the report of a committee, who reported that the tolls had been sold, and that the defendant had bought them for £350 and had paid a deposit of £29 3*s.* 4*d.* Three days previously, however, the defendant had written that he could not carry out his contract, and asking for a return of the deposit. On the corporation suing for breach of agreement, it was held that the contract was one which ought to have been under their seal; and that, as it was not sealed, or signed by any person authorised under seal to do so, and as the ratification (if any) on August 7th was too late, and as the payment of the deposit was not such a part performance as would have bound the corporation in equity specifically to perform their agreement, there was no mutuality, and the action was not sustainable (Kidderminster (Mayor, etc. of) v. Hardwick (1873), L. R. 9 Ex. 13). In so far as this case decided that a ratification must be under seal, it was followed in a case where a lessee of buildings belonging to a municipal corporation wrote letters to the mayor and chairman of the public improvements committee of the corporation (which had not been appointed under seal), offering to surrender his lease, pull down the buildings and erect new ones, provided the corporation would grant him a new lease on specified terms. These proposals, subject to agreed modifications, were accepted by the committee and approved by the council, but not under seal; and this approval was communicated to the lessee by letter from the town clerk. Afterwards the lessee withdrew his offer. It was held, that the contract not being under the seal of the corporation, nor signed on their behalf by any person authorised under seal to do so, nor ratified under seal, nor part performed nor acted on, could not be enforced by the corporation (Oxford (Mayor, etc. of) v. Crow, [1893] 3 Ch. 535). It will be observed that in the Kidderminster Case, supra, it was held that after a withdrawal by the other party, a ratification under seal was too late. A more recent decision, however, makes it doubtful whether, when a bargain has been made by a person with a committee, that person may in all cases, prior to ratification of the bargain by the council under seal, withdraw from his bargain. In Bolton Partners v. Lambert (1889), 41 Ch. D. 295, an offer of purchase was made by the defendant to one S., who was the agent of the plaintiffs, but not authorised to make any contract for sale. S. accepted it on behalf of the plaintiffs, but the defendant subsequently withdrew his offer. After the withdrawal, the plaintiffs ratified the acceptance of the offer by S. In an action for specific performance it was held that the ratification related back to the "acceptance" by S., and that therefore the withdrawal was inoperative. The Kidderminster Case was not cited in Bolton Partners v. Lambert, supra, and the decision in the last-mentioned case has been adversely criticised: see Fry on Specific Performance, 4th ed., in note at p. 677. In Athy Guardians v. Murphy, [1896] 1 I. R. 65, at a meeting of a dispensary committee, an agreement for the purchase by them as agents for the guardians from the defendant of a plot of land for a doctor's residence and dispensary, was signed by the defendant and by the chairman on behalf of the committee. The committee had no authority from the guardians to contract for the purchase of land; and the defendant subsequently withdrew his offer, and refused to carry out the agreement. After such withdrawal the agreement was approved by the guardians, but neither the agreement nor the approval was under seal. It was held (following the Kidderminster and the Oxford Cases, supra, and distinguishing Bolton Partners v. Lambert, supra) that the guardians were not entitled to specific performance. A contract must be ratified within a reasonable time after acceptance by an unauthorised person, and such reasonable time cannot extend beyond the time at which the contract is to commence (Metropolitan Asylums Board v. Kingham & Sons (1890), 6 T. L. R. 217. See also In re Portuguese Consolidated Copper Mines, Ltd. (1890), 45 Ch. D. 16; Dibbins v Dibbins, [1896] 2 Ch. 348. But see Tottenham U. D. C. v. Hillier (1920), 42 M. C. C. 221). Nor will ratification prevail so as to make unlawful an act which at the time of its performance was lawful (see Bolton Partners v. Lambert, supra, at 41 Ch. D., p. 307); or where the interests of strangers to the contract would be affected (Ford v. Newth, [1901] 1 Q. B. 683).

For a decision as to the validity of a contract made by the electric lighting committee of a metropolitan borough council, see Bourne and Hollingsworth v. Marylebone Borough Council (1908), 72 J. P. 129; reversed, [1909] W. N. 14; 72 J. P. 306.

Pleading absence of seal.

If a corporate body wish to rely on the defence that the contract sued upon is not under their common seal, such defence should be specifically pleaded (Order XIX., rr. 15, 20). Where contractors, subject to an arbitration clause, took out a summons for the appointment of an arbitrator, and the corporation appeared thereon and contested only the suitability of the persons proposed, the V.-C. of the Palatine Court thought that they could not at any later stage raise the defence of no seal (Macdonald and Deakin v. Bacup Corporation (1911), 130 L. T. Jo. 344).

Contracts "under this Act."

(aa) See Hodge v. Matlock Bath U. D. C., ante, p. 398, for a case where an urban council were not acting "under this Act." In Macdonald and Deakin v. Bacup Corporation, supra, the V.-C. held that the corporation in reconstructing some streets were acting under the Tramways Act, 1870, and not "under this Act." For other cases raising the same point, see Hoare v. Kingsbury U. D. C., Douglass v. Rhyl U. D. C., post, p. 403, and Att.-Gen. v. Gaskill, p. 405, post. In determining what contracts may be said to be "under this Act" some assistance may be afforded by the cases collected in the notes to the P. A. Protection Act, 1893.

In writing and under seal.

(b) The provisions of this paragraph are imperative and not directory only. A local board engaged a builder to do certain works to a sewer, but there was no contract under seal; it was held, under the P. H. A., 1848, that though the works were executed no action could be maintained on the contract. The court proceeded upon the ground that the board must charge the rates with the cost of the contract, and that they could not do so unless they fulfilled the exigencies of the statute by entering into the contract in strict conformity with its requisitions (Frend v. Dennett (1858), 4 C. B. (N.S.) 576; 23 J. P. 56); and the Court of Chancery afterwards decided that relief in equity could not be given to the contractor (5 L. T. 73). See, however, Bournemouth Commissioners v. Watts, p. 405, post, as to the power of a local authority to act under an insufficient contract. In a case under the present statute, the defendants, an urban authority, verbally directed their surveyor to employ the plaintiff to prepare plans for offices. The plans being prepared, the defendants advertised for tenders for building in accordance therewith; but it was found that the plans were upon too extensive a scale, and the intended offices were not erected. There was no ratification under seal of the order given by the surveyor. A jury found that the offices were necessary for the purposes of the defendants, and that the plaintiff's plans were necessary for the erection of the buildings for which they were designed. It was held by the C. A. that, even assuming the contract to be founded on an executed consideration, the plaintiff could not recover, for the section was imperative (Hunt v. Wimbledon L. B. (1878), 4 C. P. D. 48; 43 J. P. 284). The House of Lords has since approved this decision, and has held that the provisions of this paragraph are obligatory and not merely directory, and apply to an executed contract of which the urban authority have had the full benefit, and which has been effected by their agent duly appointed under their common seal (Young v. Leamington (Mayor, etc. of) (1883), 8 App. Cas. 517; 47 J. P. 660); and see also Mackay & Co. v. Toronto Corporation (1919), 36 T. L. R. 6.

The owner of land abutting on a narrow public road, purposing to build houses fronting the road, at the suggestion of the urban authority altered his plans and agreed to remove his boundary fence and to throw a strip of land into the road. In consideration of his doing so, the authority agreed, at their expense, to make up and adopt the strip as a public road with a footpath adjoining his land as the building of the houses proceeded. This arrangement was embodied in a written document signed by the plaintiff, but the seal of the authority was not affixed. The landowner erected his houses, removed his fence, and gave possession of the strip to the authority, who, however, did not make it up as a public road, nor construct the footpath. In an action by the landowner to compel the authority to specifically perform their part of the agreement, they pleaded that it was not binding on them, and relied on s. 174 and the Statute of Frauds. It was held that the agreement was entered into by the defendants, not as a highway authority, but as an urban authority under the powers of the P. H. A., 1875. That, as there had been part performance, the Statute of Frauds was no defence to the action. But that, as the agreement was a contract for over £50 in value, s. 174 afforded them a good defence (Hoare v. Kingsbury U. D. C., [1912] 2 Ch. 452; 76 J. P. 401). But in Douglass v. Rhyl U. D. C., [1913] 2 Ch. 407; 77 J. P. 373, it was held that an authority was acting in regard to a proposed pier extension under local Acts and not under this Act, and that a plea of want of seal was no defence to an action by an engineer who had been employed to prepare a report and estimates; and in Baker v. Holme Cultram U. D. C. (1916), 80 J. P. 241; 14 L. G. R. 209, the plaintiff was held entitled to recover although there was no contract under seal because in a private Act, passed after work was done in connection with obtaining the Act it was directed that the costs, etc. of obtaining the Act should be paid by the defendants.

It is sufficient, however, if the contract is ratified under seal (Brooks, Jenkins & Co. v. Torquay Corporation, [1902] 1 K. B. 601; 66 J. P. 293). In that case the T. corporation petitioned for the extension of the borough by the inclusion within it of the whole or part of the urban district of C., whose council retained the plaintiffs to act as solicitors and parliamentary agents in opposition. The extension Bill received the Royal assent on July 30th, 1900, and any liability of C. to the plaintiffs was, on the dissolution of the C. council, transferred to the corporation. The plaintiffs' bill was delivered to C. on November 8th, 1900, and a copy was sent to the corporation on November 26th, 1900. Resolutions—not sealed—of the C. council were passed from time to time from May 18th, 1900, and communicated to plaintiffs. On September 6th, 1900, the C. council resolved that their seal should be, and it was, affixed to such resolutions. The plaintiffs' claim included items for work done and disbursements made after the sealed retainers were received by them. It was held that the confirmation under seal of the original retainers created an obligation binding upon the council without any new consideration: that it was not ultra vires for them to bind themselves to pay by an instrument under seal; and that the confirmation under seal on September 6th, 1900, of the earlier unsealed retainers was sufficient to satisfy the requirements of s. 174. It was in the same case held that it is not necessary that the other contracting party should seal the contract.

A petition was presented by the plaintiffs and the defendants to the L. G. B., stating an agreement whereby the plaintiffs were to transfer to the defendants certain land forming part of the plaintiffs' district, on condition that the defendants should adopt a certain road and dedicate it as a public highway. The agreement referred to was not under seal, but the petition bore the seals of the plaintiffs and the defendants. The cost of completing the road was estimated at over £50. In an action for specific performace of the agreement it was held that under this section the agreement must be under seal; that the petition though under seal was not a deed and, therefore, was not a contract under seal within the section. It was held further, that, apart from this defect, the defendants had no power to enter into an agreement for the dedication of a road or a street as a highway (Tunbridge Wells Improvement Commissioners v. Southborough L. B. (1888), 60 L. T. 172; 5 T. L. R. 107).

Where an urban authority are also a municipal corporation, they are but one corporate body (Andrews v. Ryde (Mayor, etc. of) (1874), L. R. 9 Ex. 302); but when acting as an urban sanitary authority their contracts are governed by this section and not by the general law as to the contracts of corporate bodies (Young v. Leamington (Mayor, etc. of), p. 402, ante).

Under the London Government Act, 1899, s. 8 (3), a liability exceeding £50 may not be incurred by a metropolitan borough council except on a resolution of the council passed on an estimate submitted by the finance committee. See Gray v. Hackney Borough Council (1904), 2 L. G. R. 429, for a decision that this section barred a "transferred" officer's claim for £112 on a quantum meruit in respect of extra work done at the request of the finance committee, the council having refused to adopt a recommendation by the committee that he be paid £50.

The limit of value fixed at £10 by the P. H. A., 1848, was raised to £50 by 37 & 38 Vict. c. 89, s. 30.

Limit of value.

The provisions of this paragraph do not apply to a contract under £50. Such a contract may be made by parol (per BRAMWELL, L.J., in Hunt v. Wimbledon L. B., supra, and per LINDLEY, L.J., in Young v. Leamington, supra, at 8 Q. B. D., p. 585). The paragraph applies only to a contract which the parties, at the time of entering into it, contemplate will exceed that sum. Therefore, when scarlet fever had broken out, and an urban authority appointed a committee under s. 200, and a medical man agreed verbally with the committee on behalf of the authority to attend patients at the rate of 5*s.* 3*d.* per tent per day, and attended until the amount due was nearly £100, it was held that although more than £50 became due it was not a contract "whereof the value or amount exceeds £50" within the meaning of the section, because at the time of entering into it the parties had not ascertained that it would exceed £50, and that the authority were liable to the medical man (Eaton v. Basker (1881), 7 Q. B. D. 529; 45 J. P. 616). See also Wood v. East Ham U. D. C. (1907), 5 L. G. R. 403; 71 J. P. 129, where COLLINS, M.R., appeared to incline to the view that the engagement of an officer under s. 189 at a salary of over £50 was not necessarily within the paragraph, and a county court case, Mansbridge v. Barnet U. D. C., cited on p. 452, post.

Under the similar Irish provision it has been held that the "value or amount" of a contract is the amount which in the light of the facts within the contemplation of the parties and in reference to which the contract is made would be recoverable by the contractor on completion (Munro v. Mallow U. D. C., [1911] 2 I. R. 130). In this case a contractor agreed with the council under four separate contracts, not formally reduced into writing, to sink four artesian wells on the terms that he should go on boring until he met with unforeseen difficulties or obtained a good supply of water, or until a reasonable time had elapsed, or until the council told him to stop. It was contemplated that it would cost more than £50 to bore each well; and the court held that although the council might have stopped the work at any moment the absence of seal prevented the contractor from recovering.

It would appear that under certain circumstances the paragraph may not apply even when the parties contemplate the making of a contract the value whereof may exceed £50. Coal merchants tendered for the supply to an urban council of coals which it was thought would exceed in value £100. The tender contained stipulations that, if it was accepted, a formal contract and a bond with two sureties should be executed. The tender was accepted, subject to the formal contract and bond being duly executed. The contract and bond were forwarded to the coal merchants, but were never executed. The coal merchants afterwards, from time to time, supplied quantities of coal which were accepted, the value of the coal supplied not amounting, in any one instance, to £50, but amounting in the aggregate to over £50. It was held that the council were bound to pay, under an implied contract, for each lot of coal so supplied and accepted (Spencer & Co. v. Southall-Norwood U. D. C. (1905), 3 L. G. R. 641; 69 J. P. 308). The decision went on the ground that there was no acceptance of the tender pending the execution of a formal contract, and therefore nothing constituting a contract to which the provisions of the statute could apply; consequently there was only a contract on the occasion of each order and delivery.

Subsequent sealing.

The defendants, an urban authority, by contract not under seal, employed the plaintiffs as engineers to do certain work. The plaintiffs performed part of the work, exceeding in value £50, and then required the defendants to affix their seal to the contract. This the defendants did, believing that it was for the benefit of the ratepayers that the contract should be completed. CAVE, J., held that, as part of the work was unperformed when the seal was affixed, and there was consideration for affixing it in the plaintiffs' promise to complete the work, it was competent for the defendants to constitute the contract a good contract under seal within s. 174 in respect of the work already done; and, therefore, that the plaintiffs were entitled to maintain their action for the value of that work (Melliss v. Shirley L. B. (1885), 14 Q. B. D. 911). (The decision in this case was reversed upon another point: (1885), 16 Q. B. D. 446; 50 J. P. 214.) See also Brooks, Jenkins & Co. v. Torquay Corporation, ante, p. 403, where it was held that, even without a new consideration, there may be a binding confirmation under seal. Note to Section 174.

Where an urban authority enters into a sealed contract with a contractor for the construction by him of works, and the contract contains the usual power for the engineer, who has the control and supervision of the works, to vary, alter, enlarge, or diminish any of them, all variations and alterations coming within the terms of the power conferred on the engineer can be validly made without being under the common seal of the authority (Williams v. Barmouth U. D. C. (1897), 77 L. T. 383). Effect of variations from contract.

An urban council issued under their seal conditions in accordance with which architects were to tender designs for the erection of municipal buildings. An assessor was to select the architect whose plans he considered best, but the council were not expressly bound to appoint the assessor's choice. The plaintiff was in fact selected by the assessor, and appointed by the council. He prepared plans, but the L. G. B. refused leave to borrow for the amount of the scheme. Accordingly the plaintiff prepared fresh plans at less cost under instructions from the council. This scheme was never carried out, and the plaintiff sued for his fees under the original agreement. The defendants objected that there was no contract under seal. It was held (applying the Barmouth Case, supra), that these fees had been earned under a modification of the original scheme and not under a new scheme; that s. 174 was satisfied by the original conditions of tender; and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover (Hunt v. Acton U. D. C. (1908), 72 J. P. 345). See, further, as to variations from an original contract and extras, Bell v. Bridlington Corporation, and other cases on pp. 409 et seq., post.

An agreement between an urban authority and a contractor employed to construct works for them, as a compromise and in full settlement of all claims by him against the urban authority is not a contract within s. 173 of the P. H. A., 1875, necessary for carrying that Act into execution, so as to require to be sealed with the common seal of the urban authority under s. 174; and therefore such agreement, though not under seal, is capable of being enforced against the urban authority (Williams v. Barmouth U. D. C., supra; see also Leicester Guardians v. Trollope (1911), 75 J. P. 197). Compromise of action or claim.

An agreement by a local board compromising an action is not within this section, and is not void by reason of its not being under seal (Att.-Gen. v. Gaskill (1882), 22 Ch. D. 537).

1 Vict. c. 78, s. 44 (see now the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 141), after reciting that it was expedient to give all persons interested in the borough fund of every borough a more direct and easy remedy for any misapplication of such fund, provided that any order of the council of any borough for the payment of money out of the borough fund might be removed into the court by certiorari. A resolution was passed by a corporation ordering payment of certain sums, each exceeding £50, to contractors for costs incurred in paving a street, no contract having been entered into under the seal of the corporation. On an application for a certiorari to bring up and quash such resolution on the ground that it was a misapplication of the borough funds under the Act above cited, it was held that as the work was useful and done at a reasonable cost, and there was no suggestion of corruption or partiality there had been no misapplication, and the court in its discretion refused to grant the certiorari (R. v. Norwich (Mayor of) (1882), 30 W. R. 752; 46 J. P. 308 n). From this case and R. v. Prest (1851), 16 Q. B. 32, it is to be inferred that a contract for over £50, though it may not be enforceable by reason of not being under seal, is nevertheless not absolutely void. This view of these decisions was adopted by the court in Bournemouth Commissioners v. Watts (1884), 14 Q. B. D. 87; 49 J. P. 102. There in an action by a local authority to recover paving expenses under s. 150, it appeared that part of the work to an amount exceeding £50, had been done by contractors who had no contract under seal, it was held that this afforded no defence to the frontagers. It is difficult to reconcile this decision with the judgments in Frend v. Dennett, ante, p. 402; but see Brooks, Jenkins & Co. v. Torquay Corporation, ante, p. 403, where the principle of the Bournemouth case was applied. Unsealed contract not void.

In Hunt v. Wimbledon L. B., p. 402, ante, BRAMWELL, L.J., said: "The enactment relates to a contract which is the act of both parties, and is applicable not to Whether contractor's seal also necessary.

one of them alone, but to both of them. I do not mean to say that the section makes anything particularly necessary upon the part of the contractor, but it requires that the evidence of the obligation of the two parties must be in writing and sealed with their seals." This opinion, however, was not required for the decision of the case, and in Brooks, Jenkins & Co. v. Torquay Corporation, ante, p. 403, it was held that an authority may be liable under a contract which they have sealed, even though it is not signed by the other party.

Sealed acceptance of a tender.

A valid contract may under certain circumstances be made by sealing an acceptance of a tender, i.e., where nothing else remains to be done; but in many instances, the sealing of such an acceptance will be inoperative. In March, 1901, a council advertised for tenders for the execution of certain works. One condition was that the person tendering should undertake to execute a contract and a bond with two responsible sureties for the satisfactory completion of the works. The plaintiff tendered, and on May 10th, 1901, the council resolved that his tender should be accepted, and they instructed their clerk to write to him to that effect, and to affix the council's seal to the letter. Such letter was duly sent. It was held that the acceptance of the tender did not conclude a contract between the parties, for a formal contract was expressly provided for, and some important details were left unsettled (Bozson v. Altrincham U. D. C. (1903), 1 L. G. R. 639; 67 J. P. 397).

Stamp duty on contracts.

11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 151, exempted the contracts of local authorities from stamp duty; but the exemption was taken away by 35 & 36 Vict. c. 79, s. 42, and has not been restored. As to the effect of a local Act incorporating the first-mentioned Act, and thereby extending the exemption to deeds executed under the local Act, see Bath (Mayor, etc. of) v. Commissioners of Inland Revenue (1871), 40 L. J. Ex. 181; 20 W. R. 80.

Penalty clause; not obligatory.

(d) It was formerly considered that the provision in s. 174 (2), that every contract made by an urban authority whereof the value or amount exceeds £50, "shall specify some pecuniary penalty to be fixed in case the terms of the contract are not duly performed" was obligatory, and not merely directory; and that if such penalty was not specified, an action on the contract against the authority could not be maintained (British Insulated Wire Co. v. Prescot U. D. C., [1895] 2 Q. B. 463; 59 J. P. 552). An appeal by the plaintiffs in this case was dismissed on agreed terms without any judgments being delivered (see [1895] 2 Q. B. 538). And see Murray v. Uxbridge U. D. C. (1896), Times, March 21st. The Court of Appeal have, however, now decided (by a majority) that the provision is only directory (Soothill Upper U. D. C. v. Wakefield R. D. C., [1905] 2 Ch. 518; 69 J. P. 447). In the court below, SWINFEN EADY, J., held that the whole of sub-s. (2) applies only to cases where work, materials, matters or things are to be furnished, had or done to or for an urban authority for a price in money to be paid by such authority ([1905] 1 Ch. 53; 69 J. P. 19).

Surveyor's estimate and report.

(e) This sub-section is only directory, because it is something for the authority alone to do, and the obtaining of the estimate and report from the surveyor is not a condition precedent to the power to contract. Therefore an urban council will be liable for the breach of a contract entered into for the performance of works, though no estimate and report are obtained (Nowell v. Mayor, etc. of Worcester (1854), 9 Ex. 457; 18 J. P. 88; and see Young v. Leamington (Mayor, etc. of), ante, p. 402). With regard to this sub-section the Court of Queen's Bench said that as between the local board and their constituents, "If the work may be both executed and repaired under the provisions of the Act, there must be an estimate and report on the execution and the repair; but if the work may be only executed, or only repaired according to the provisions of the Act, the estimate and report need not extend to a work not within the provisions of the Act, and not necessary for carrying it into execution. In the case of a contract for repairing an existing road, an estimate and report relating to executing the work of making that road originally would be absurd, and equally so would the estimate and report on repair where none can be done" (Cunningham v. Wolverhampton L. B. (1857), 7 El. & Bl. 114; 21 J. P. 262).

Notice and tenders and security.

(f) This sub-section is directory only. It and the preceding sub-section relate to "things to be done before contracts are entered into, and done by the urban authority, the contractor having nothing to do with the matters mentioned": per Lord BRAMWELL, in Young v. Leamington (Mayor, etc. of), ante, p. 402

Note to Section 174.

The required security is usually taken in the form of a guarantee by sureties; and care must be taken that the sureties are fully informed of the nature of the undertaking and of all the circumstances connected with it. Where a local board represented that works would be executed under the supervision of their surveyor, and did not disclose that they had engaged another surveyor to join in the supervision, it was held that the contractor's surety was discharged from liability by reason of this concealment (Stiff v. Eastbourne L. B. (1868, 1869), 19 L. T. 408; 20 L. T. 339).

A surety for a contractor is not discharged from liability although his position has been altered by the conduct of the employer, where that conduct has been caused by a fraudulent act or omission of the contractor against which the surety has, by the terms of his contract of suretyship, guaranteed the employer. The defendants, as sureties, contracted with the plaintiff authority that contractors would well and truly execute a contract for the construction of sewers. The contract gave to the plaintiffs the right of superintending the works through their engineer; and also provided for the retention of a certain percentage of the contract price until a final certificate should be given by such engineer, six months after his certificate of the completion of the works. The contractors did portions of the work in a defective manner, and fraudulently concealed it so as to prevent discovery; and the engineer ultimately gave his final certificate, upon which the retention money was paid to the contractors. In an action by the plaintiffs against the defendants as sureties, upon findings by a jury that the certificate had been obtained by fraud, but that there was an omission of proper superintendence of the work on the part of the plaintiffs, which led to the scamping of the work, it was held that the mere non-exercise by the plaintiffs of their right of superintendence did not discharge the defendants from their liability, and that they were not discharged by the fact that the certificate had been given or by the fact that the retention money had been paid thereon, inasmuch as the mere giving of the certificate was not proved to have altered the position of the defendants for the worse, and both that and the payment of the retention money were procured by a dishonest execution of the work against which the defendants had by their contract guaranteed the plaintiffs (Kingston-upon-Hull (Mayor, etc. of) v. Harding, [1892] 2 Q. B. 494; 57 J. P. 85).

See as to the position of a surety for a contractor in respect of costs ordered to be paid by the contractor in litigation between him and a local authority (Hoole U. D. C. v. Fidelity, etc. Co., [1916] 1 K. B. 25); affirmed on appeal on the ground that the local authority had departed from the provisions of their contract with the contractor: see [1916] 2 K. B. 568; 80 J. P. 353.

Where on a contractor's failure another firm was called in to complete the works, and the time fixed in the original contract was exceeded, it was held in an action against the original contractor's sureties that the clauses in his contract as to liquidated damages in case of delayed completion did not apply where the control of the contract had passed out of his hands (British Glanzstoff Manufacturing Co., Ltd. v. General Accident, etc. Insurance Corporation, Ltd., [1913] A. C. 143). On a contractor's failure his sureties employed the plaintiff to carry out the contract, but allowed the building owners to supervise the work and make all arrangements: it was held that the sureties were liable to the plaintiff in respect of an unjustifiable seizure of the works by the owners on the ground of alleged delay (Lodder v. Slowey, [1904] A. C. 442).

Decisions upon contracts for execution of works.

A contract between a local board and the plaintiffs for levelling, paving, etc. certain streets, provided that the plaintiffs should be paid when the money was collected from the different owners. It turned out that the money could not be obtained from these owners as the notices given to them by the board were bad:— Held, that whether the collection of the money was a condition precedent to the right to sue for the price of the work or not, there was an implied contract on the part of the board to take all necessary steps for collecting the money, and that they were, therefore, liable to the plaintiffs (Worthington v. Sudlow (1862), 2 B. & S. 508; 31 L. J. Q. B. 131).

Where an authority submit plans and estimates to contractors, they do not by implication guarantee that the work can be successfully executed according to such plans and estimates (Thorn v. London (Mayor, etc. of) (1876), 1 App. Cas. 120;

40 J. P. 468; cf. Boyd and Forrest v. Glasgow and S. W. Rail. Co., [1915] S. C. (H. L.) 20.

In a contract to execute certain sewage works the plaintiffs covenanted to do the works described in the drawings and specifications according to the drawings, specifications, etc., and the defendants covenanted to pay for the works on receipt of the written certificate of their engineer as provided by the conditions. The specification provided (inter alia) that the plaintiffs must verify all representations, and not rely upon their accuracy. On completion the plaintiffs claimed £36,574 from the defendants on the grounds—first, that the plans showed a certain existing wall extending nine feet below the Ordnance datum line which could be utilised for the purposes of the works; that this wall did not exist, and that consequently the plans for the works had been altered, and the plaintiffs, at the direction of the engineer, had completed the works at this extra cost. Secondly, that the defendants had fraudulently misrepresented the structure and existence of this wall, and had thereby induced the plaintiffs to enter into the contract to their detriment. The defendants relied on the absence of a certificate and on the conditions of the specification, and they denied the making of any representation and any fraud. It was held that the specification only protected the defendants in respect of honest mistakes by themselves or their agents (Pearson v. Dublin Corporation, [1907] A. C. 357).

A contractor has no claim against his employer in respect of loss occasioned to him by a stranger wrongfully obstructing his access to the site of the work (Porter v. Tottenham U. D. C., [1914] 1 K. B. 663; affirmed, [1915] 1 K. B. 776; 79 J. P. 167).

The defendant corporation advertised for tenders for the construction of certain reservoirs, and the plaintiffs sent in a tender which was accepted. Upon their attending to examine the drawings, specifications and general conditions, the assistant engineer of the defendants, in answer to a question, said that the conditions were the ordinary conditions. The defendants, upon subsequently reading the conditions, found that they were unusual, refused to go on with the contract, and sought to recover their deposit. It was held that they were entitled to recover (Moss & Co., Ltd. v. Swansea Corporation (1910), 74 J. P. 351).

Arbitration clauses and certificates.

An agreement between a local board and a contractor contained a clause that any dispute between them should be referred to the decision of the clerk to the board. The contractor having brought an action in respect of the agreement, the board applied to a judge at chambers to stay the action, in order to enforce the submission to arbitration. The judge declined to stay proceedings on the ground that the fact of the reference being to the clerk of one of the parties was a sufficient cause for refusing within the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, s. 11. It was held on appeal that a reference ought to take place, though not to the clerk, and that the case must stand over till the parties could agree as to a referee, or again apply to the court (Pickthall v. Merthyr Tydvil L. B. (1886), 2 T. L. R. 805). For another case in which the court refused to refer a dispute to the surveyor of the local authority, see Nuttall v. Manchester (Mayor, etc. of) (1892), 8 T. L. R. 513. This case was commented on in Eckersley v. Mersey Docks and Harbour Board, [1894] 2 Q. B. 667, and the rule deducible from the cases appears to be that when parties designate as arbitrator the engineer or any other officer of the council, the court will not interfere unless they see some probability that he will be biassed, or unless he had put himself into such a position (e.g., that of a material witness) that it is not becoming for him to act as arbitrator. See Belcher v. Roedean School Site and Buildings, Ltd. (1901), 85 L. T. 468; In re Baring and Doulton (1892), 61 L. J. Q. B. 704; Jackson v. Barry Rail. Co., [1893] 1 Ch. 238; Ives and Another v. Willans, [1894] 2 Ch. 478; Foster and Dicksee v. Mayor, etc. of Hastings (1903), 87 L. T. 736; Blackwell & Co., Ltd. v. Derby Corporation (1911), 75 J. P. 129; Freeman & Sons v. Chester R. D. C., [1911] 1 K. B. 783; 75 J. P. 132; Bristol Corporation v. J. Aird & Co., [1913] A. C. 241; 77 J. P. 209. See as to a condition in an agreement making arbitration and award a condition precedent to liability, even on an issue of fraud, Gaw v. British Law Fire Insurance Co., [1908] 1 I. R. 245.

Contractors sued a council for sums alleged to be due under the contract and for damages for wrongfully terminating it. The contract contained a wide arbitration clause, but the defendants did not apply for a stay of the action. Subsequently, however, their engineer without notice to the parties made an award purporting to decide the disputes covered by the action. It was held that such award was no bar to the plaintiffs' claim (Doleman & Sons v. Ossett Corporation, [1912] 3 K. B. 257).

A contract for the construction of sewerage works contained a reference of all matters in dispute to the engineer. After certain work had been done the contractor refused to complete, and alleged that he had been induced to enter into the contract by fraudulent misrepresentation as to the nature of the subsoil. On an action by the contractor to recover damages and to have the contract declared void, the defendants applied for a stay of the proceedings. It was held that the dispute was not a dispute "upon or in relation to or in connection with the contract" within the meaning of the reference, and that the defendants were not entitled to have the proceedings stayed (Monro v. Bognor U. D. C., [1915] 3 K. B. 167; 79 J. P. 286).

An award of an arbitrator may take the place of an order in writing for extras where the order has been wrongfully refused and the arbitration clause is wide enough to embrace a dispute as to whether the work done was an extra (Brodie v. Cardiff Corporation, [1919] A. C. 337; 83 J. P. 77).

Contractors agreed to do all work necessary to sink a well and erect a pump until a copious supply of water was obtained, the works to be completed to the satisfaction of the council's engineer. Having been told to bore no deeper, they put in a pump and sued for their money, but failed for want of the engineer's certificate. They then offered to do everything necessary to complete the contract, and obtain a certificate. The council, however, refused on the ground that the contract was at an end. It was held that the first action did not terminate the contract; and that, as the council had now repudiated it wrongfully, the contractors could sue for the value of their work (Athlone R. D. C. v. Campbell (1913), 47 Ir. L. T. 142).

It was held in Roberts v. Bury Improvement Commissioners (1870), L. R. 5 C. P. 310; 34 J. P. 821, that a clause empowering the employers' architect to decide if the contractor had failed to exercise due diligence, did not empower him to decide as to a cross-allegation that any delay was due to the default of the employers and their architect in not supplying plans and setting out the site.

A building contract provided that the decision of the owners' architect on all matters in relation to the work should be final, and that payments should be made on his certificate. The architect, under a misapprehension of his position, allowed his judgment to be influenced by the owners and improperly delayed issuing his certificates in accordance with their instructions. After the expiration of the period of maintenance the contractor sued the owners for the final balance alleged to be due, but no final certificate was issued until after the writ. It was held that the owners were precluded from setting up as a defence either that the issue of the certificate was a condition precedent, or that the certificate was conclusive as to the amount of the claim (Hickman & Co. v. Roberts, [1913] A. C. 229).

Variations and extras, etc.

By a contract under seal a contractor undertook to execute sewerage works for a corporation at a fixed price. He alleged that the work had been so essentially varied under the orders of the corporation's engineer that he was entitled to disregard the fixed price, and claim payment on the basis of the cost of the work, either under an implied new contract, or on the ground that the whole work was "extra work" executed in accordance with the provisions of the contract. It was held by an official referee (1) that on the evidence there had been no essential variation justifying such a contention; (2) that even if there had been such a variation he was not entitled to claim quantum meruit upon the basis of an implied new contract, because there was no contract under seal as required by s. 174, and, further, because the engineer had no authority to order such a variation from the contract; and (3) that so far as variations and extra work had been properly ordered by the engineer, the proper basis of payment was the contract sum, plus any difference in cost due to such variations or extras to be ascertained as provided for by the contract, and the contractor could not reject the contract sum and claim to be paid on the basis of cost and expenses (Bell v. Bridlington Corporation (1908), 72 J. P. 453). Again, in Jackson v. Romford R. D. C. (1909), 73 J. P. 248, the plaintiff had contracted to carry out sewerage works. In consequence of orders the work was varied and rendered much more expensive, and he claimed to be entitled to payment on a quantum meruit based on the cost and value of the work. The official referee held that he was only entitled to be paid on the basis of the contract price plus extras. See also as to a claim based on a quantum meruit, Hodge v. Matlock Bath U. D. C., p. 398, ante.

Where a contractor undertook to do work for a lump sum and substantially though not completely executed the work he was held entitled to recover the lump sum subject to a deduction to cover the cost of completion provided the work done was of the kind contracted for and of value to the employer and had not been abandoned unfinished by the contractor (Dakin v. Lee (1915), 84 L. J. K. B. 2031; 59 Sol. J. 650).

A building contract required a written order in the case of all extras. During the work the employer insisted on the execution of certain works which he asserted, and the contractor denied, to be included in the contract. He gave no order in writing therefor; but it was held that the facts justified the arbitrator in inferring an implied promise to pay for such works if held to be extras (Molloy v. Liebe (1910), 102 L. T. 616). In Jackson v. Romford R. D. C., ante, p. 409, the engineer had given no final certificate, and many of the extras were not ordered in writing; but the defendants had withdrawn their plea of no certificate and the plaintiff had withdrawn a charge of misconduct. The referee held, that upon this state of the pleadings, he could deal with the extras on their merits.

A sewerage contract provided that no claim for extras should be allowed unless submitted to the engineers within a given time; that the engineers should be sole judges as to the method of carrying out the works and the materials to be used in the construction thereof; and that in case of any dispute arising at any time, whether during the progress of the works or after completion, as to certain specified matters not including extras, and as to all other matters therein left to the decision of the engineers, their decision should be final and binding on all parties to the contract. It was held that a claim for extras was not within the scope of the arbitration clause, and consequently that an action by the contractor for the amount of the claim ought to be allowed to proceed (Taylor v. Western Valleys Sewerage Board (1911), 75 J. P. 409).

In Brodie v. Cardiff Corporation, [1919] A. C. 337; 83 J. P. 77, a contractor agreed to construct a reservoir for a fixed price, but additions, alterations, and variations thereto might be made as directed by the corporation or their engineer, but such were not to be paid for unless instructions were given therefor in writing by the engineer. Disputes, including those as to any certificate, finding, decision, requisition, or opinion of the engineer were to be referred to an arbitrator. During the progress of the work disputes did arise as to certain requirements of the engineer, which the contractor contended were extras but as to which the engineer refused to give written orders. Nevertheless the contractor carried out the work under protest and the matter was referred to arbitration. The arbitrator found that the requirements in question were not in accordance with the contract, and that the written orders had been wrongfully (though not dishonestly) withheld, and awarded certain sums to be paid in respect of these items. It was held that the arbitrator had power to award that the items should be paid for as extras, notwithstanding the absence of any order of the engineer.

A council's engineer ordered extra works which were executed, and ultimately gave a final certificate, in which he awarded a sum for extra work, but did not refer to or make any deduction in respect of penalties for non-completion by the date fixed. The council, in defence to an action, pleaded that such penalties had been incurred and should be deducted: the contractor replied that the delay was caused by the ordering of extras, and further that the certificate estopped the council in respect of any penalties. It was held by an Irish court that the contract gave the engineer no jurisdiction to decide whether the ordering of extras excluded the penalty clause; but (by a majority) that such ordering had in fact prevented due completion, and no claim for penalties could be justified (Gallivan v. Killarney U. D. C., [1912] 2 I. R. 356).

In the course of carrying out a contract, a contractor was ordered by the architect to underpin adjoining property, such underpinning being urgently necessary. The consent of the adjoining owner was not obtained and he recovered damages against the contractor for trespass. It was held that the contractor was entitled to indemnity from the building owners (Kirby v. Chessum (1915), 79 J. P. 81; 12 L. G. R. 1136).

the meaning of "retention money," see West Yorkshire Bank v. Isherwood Bros. (1912), 28 T. L. R. 593; 76 J. P. 456, and as to the right to retention money when work is taken out of a contractor's hands and a new contract entered into with sureties to complete, see Jas. McMahon, Ltd. v. O'Neill (1915), 2 Ir. R. 384. As to the duties of a "clerk of the works," see Leicester Guardians v. Trollope (1911), 75 J. P. 197.

In contracts of supply of goods or materials where the quantities specified are merely stated as "estimated as the probable requirements," this does not constitute a firm contract to take the whole of the goods stated, and the authority is not liable to the contractor if less than the stated quantities are required, but the contractor is bound to supply the quantities stated as and when required (Percival, Ltd. v. L. C. C. (Asylums Committee) (1918), 82 J. P. 157; 16 L. G. R. 367.

"Engineer."

A contract to do work for a local authority stipulated that payment for work done should only be made on the production of a certificate from the engineer appointed under the contract, who was to fix the price of all extra work done under the contract but not included in the specification. The engineer under the contract was "J. M. of the firm of J. M. & Sons, or other the engineer of the corporation." While extra work was being done, but before a price had been agreed upon, J. M. died, and a member of his firm was appointed to carry out his duties under the contract. The contractor contended that the engineer so appointed had no jurisdiction to fix the price of the extra work. It was held that the duly appointed successor to the engineer named in the contract had jurisdiction to determine the price to be paid for work which was begun before his appointment (Kellett v. Stockport Corporation (1906), 70 J. P. 154).

"Specialists."

As to the liability of a local authority to a contractor in respect of defaults of sub-contractors appointed by the authority, but paid by the contractor out of the contract price, reference may be made to Mitchell v. Guildford Union (1903), 1 L. G. R. 857; 68 J. P. 84, and Leslie v. Metropolitan Asylums Board (1896), 68 J. P. 86 n. And as to the legal position generally where there are sub-contractors, or "specialists," see Bower v. Chapel-en-le-Frith R. D. C. (1911), 9 L. G. R. 339; 75 J. P. 122, 321; Crittall Manufacturing Co., Ltd. v. London C. C. (1911), 75 J. P. 203; Young & Co. Ltd. v. White (1912), 28 T. L. R. 87; 76 J. P. 14; Ramsden and Carr v. Chessum & Sons (1914), 110 L. T. 274; 78 J. P. 49; Hampton v. Glamorgan C. C., [1917] A. C. 13; 80 J. P. 41, and Elliott v. C. P. Roberts & Co., [1916] 2 K. B. 518; 81 J. P. 20.

Liquidated damages and penalties.

The plaintiff undertook to execute certain drainage works for the defendants. It was provided by the contract, among other things, that "the works shall be completed in all respects and cleared of all implements, tackle, impediments, and rubbish," before a fixed date, and in case of default the plaintiff agreed to pay certain sums to the defendants as liquidated damages. The works were not completed within the fixed period. It was held that inasmuch as the clearing away of the rubbish was included in the completion of the works, there was only one event, viz., the non-completion of the works by the fixed date, upon the happening of which those sums were to become payable, and that the plaintiff was, therefore, liable in respect of such sums as liquidated damages and not as penalties (Law v. Redditch L. B., [1892] 1 Q. B. 127; 56 J. P. 292). See also as to the distinction between liquidated damages and penalty, Strickland v. Williams, [1899] 1 Q. B. 382; Re White and Arthur (1901), 84 L. Interruptions in performance of contracts.

During the recent war many contracts were either interrupted in or rendered impossible of performance by causes arising out of the war and quite beyond the control of the parties, e.g., orders issued under the Defence of the Realm Acts and the operation of the Courts (Emergency Powers) Act, 1917. See Leiston Gas Co. v. Leiston-cum-Sizewell U. D. C., [1916] 2 K. B. 428; 80 J. P. 385; Wycombe Borough Electric Light and Power Co. v. Chipping Wycombe Corporation, [1917] 15 L. G. PURCHASE OF LANDS.

Power to purchase lands.

175. Any local authority (a) may for the purposes and subject to the provisions of this Act (b) purchase or take on lease (c) sell (d) or exchange (e) any lands (f), whether situated within or without their district; they may also buy up any water-mill dam or weir which interferes with the proper drainage of or the supply of water to their district (g).

Any lands acquired by a local authority in pursuance of any powers in this Act contained and not required for the purpose for which they were acquired shall (h) (unless the Local Government Board otherwise direct) (i) be sold at the best price that can be gotten for the same (k), and the proceeds of such sale shall be applied towards discharge, by means of a sinking fund or otherwise (l), of any principal moneys which have been borrowed by such authority on the security of the fund or rate applicable by them for the general purposes of this Act, or if no such principal moneys are outstanding shall be carried to the account of such fund or rate (m).

See also s. 95 of the P. H. A. Amendment Act, 1907, post.

(a) Whether rural or urban.

(b) The reference appears to be to the provisions of the next section as to compulsory purchase of land, and to the provisions as to the acquisition of waterworks, gasworks, and markets in the previous sections applicable thereto.

Section 7, ante, p. 39, empowers urban district councils to hold lands for the purposes of this Act in their corporate name without licence in mortmain. This power was extended by the Mortmain and Charitable Uses Act Amendment Act, 1892, s. 1, to "any purpose or purposes for which such authority is empowered by any Act of Parliament to acquire land." The L. G. A., 1894, s. 24 (7), enables rural district councils to hold land for the purposes of their powers and duties without licence in mortmain.

Appropriation of land.

(c) As to the appropriation for some purpose of land already belonging to a council, see note (h), infra.

Gifts of land.

The word "purchase" must be taken to include gift. An urban council do not therefore require to be invested with the powers of a parish council under the L. G. A., 1894, s. 8 (1) (h), in order to accept a gift of land for purposes of this Act. The M. of H. hold that a formal conveyance of land is always desirable, even when land is given.

Immature schemes.

It sometimes happens that a council find it desirable to acquire lands (e.g., when property is suddenly placed upon the market), although they are not prepared with any precise scheme of utilisation. In such a case, if a loan is required, the M. of H. usually allow only a short term for repayment; but, if during this period the council resolve upon some scheme for using the land, the Ministry are willing to entertain an application for sanction to a reborrowing for an extended period.

Purchase to avoid claims for compensation.

If the acquisition of lands becomes desirable, not because such lands are actually required for purposes of the Act, but because of probable claims for compensation (e.g., when a private residence adjoins a refuse tip or sewage farm), the M. of H. are apparently disposed to consider that the purchase can legally be made, and to entertain an application for sanction to a loan if necessary.

Land required for purposes of local Acts.

When lands are required for purposes of undertakings established and regulated under local Acts, the powers of the Public Health Act are sometimes available to supplement those of the local Acts. See note (b) to s. 176.

Note to Section 175.

A purchase of lands in order to protect from pollution the gathering ground of waterworks has also been held to be "for the purposes of this Act."

Urban district councils who are municipal corporations also possess powers to purchase or otherwise acquire hereditaments for public purposes under the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 107.

Land for protection of water supply.

An authority purchasing by agreement land for a public park may lawfully covenant to keep it as an open space for the enjoyment of the public, "subject to no buildings or erections of any kind being put thereupon except such structures as summer-houses, a bandstand, or shelter not exceeding twelve feet in height, for the accommodation and convenience of the public." And such a covenant will prevent their erecting lavatories (Stourcliffe Estates Co., Ltd. v. Bournemouth Corporation, [1910] 2 Ch. 12; 74 J. P. 289).

Powers of municipal corporations.

Restrictive covenants.

In Westhoughton U. D. C. v. Wigan Coal and Iron Co., [1919] 1 Ch. 159; 88 L. J. Ch. 60, the plaintiffs were lessees of the surface of part of settled estates under a lease from the tenant for life. The defendants were lessees of the mines beneath the surface under a prior mining lease from the trustees of the settled estates which empowered them to cause damage to the surface, but to make compensation to the trustees "their heirs and assigns." The defendants damaged the surface in the working of the mines.

Benefit of covenants in mining leases.

It was held that the plaintiffs, although not "assigns" of the trustees, were entitled to sue for injury to their common law right of support.

The owner of land leased it to an authority for thirty years for use solely as a public park; and the lease contained a covenant in the form of a declaration that if the authority should be desirous at any time during the term of purchasing the fee simple they could do so upon giving six months' notice and paying a certain sum. About one year before the lease expired they gave notice to purchase the fee. The lessor's representatives refused to convey, on the ground that the covenant purported to create an interest in land which was void for remoteness. The authority sued for specific performance or damages for breach of covenant. It was held that, though the purpose for which the land was to be assigned was charitable, yet, as the interest of the charity did not become effective until the happening of a future event which might happen at a time more distant than a life or lives in being and twenty-one years afterwards, the limitation was void for remoteness, and specific performance would not be granted; but that the contract to convey the land was not void either at common law or in equity, and that, therefore, the authority were entitled to damages for breach of it (Worthing Corporation v. Heather, [1906] 2 Ch. 532).

Lease with option to purchase.

A local authority proposing to lay out their funds in an unauthorised purchase may be restrained from so doing in proceedings instituted by the Attorney-General upon the relation of a ratepayer. See Att.-Gen. v. Cardiff Corporation, [1894] 2 Ch. 337; Att.-Gen. v. Merthyr Tydfil Union, [1900] 1 Ch. 516; 64 J. P. 276.

Unauthorised purchases.

Although, however, a proposed purchase may be restrained as being ultra vires, yet, if a conveyance be duly executed, it would seem that the transfer, as a matter of title and ownership, is complete, and that the property is effectually vested in the authority (Ayers v. South Australian Banking Co. (1871), L. R. 3 P. C. 548). Consequently, in the case of leaseholds, they become liable for the breach of any convenant in the lease assigned to them (Batson v. London School Board (1903), 20 T. L. R. 22; 67 J. P. 457); but this fact will not justify an authority in expending the rates upon the upkeep of property acquired by them without authority.

As to the obligation to redeem tithes on land taken for public purposes, see the Tithe Act, 1878, s. 1.

Redemption of tithes.

Whether land is purchased by agreement or compulsorily it would appear that the vendor is entitled to insist on the council taking a duly executed conveyance (Great Hospital Trustees v. Norwich Corporation, Local Government Chronicle, 1885, p. 860; In re Cary-Elwes' Contract, [1906] 2 Ch. 143; 70 J. P. 345). And, although a purchasing council are entitled generally to say by what description land purchased shall be vested in them, the vendor may require the description to be such as to give effect to the true contract (Monighetti v. Wandsworth Borough Council (1909), 73 J. P. 91).

Conveyance.

As to the obligation to produce to the Commissioners of Inland Revenue, after completion of a purchase, the deed of conveyance, duly stamped, see the Finance to be produced.

A council resolved to purchase certain lands, partly for allotments and partly for a recreation ground. According to them, the defendant, who had formerly been their clerk, suggested that a private person could purchase on better terms, and thereupon it was arranged that he should attend the sale and bid up to £800. He purchased the land for £400 and it was conveyed to him, but he refused to convey it to the council, who now claimed a declaration that he held the land as trustee for them. It was held that they were entitled to the declaration asked for, but must undertake with all convenient speed to get the necessary consent to pay him the purchase price and expenses (Longfield Parish Council v. Robson (1913), 29 T. L. R. 357).

Sale of land.

(d) It is not clear how an authority can have occasion to sell land for the purposes of the Act, unless for the purpose of acquiring other more convenient land. 35 & 36 Vict. c. 79, s. 41, enabled sanitary authorities in certain cases to mortgage their property, and this power is contained in s. 235, post, p. 532.

As to the sale of land by urban authorities as municipal corporations, see the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, ss. 108, 109. Under these sections a corporation may sell in consideration of a perpetual rent-charge issuing out of the land sold (Scarborough Corporation v. Cooper, [1910] 1 Ch. 68: 74 J. P. 44); but, semble, per JOYCE, J., there is no such power under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 175. Cf. In re Mayor, etc. of Plymouth & Walter, [1918] 2 Ch. 354; 82 J. P. 273, in which the decision turned upon the construction of a local Act. As to sales by a corporation subject to restrictive covenants intended to bind purchasers inter se, see Davis v. Leicester Corporation, [1894] 2 Ch. 208; and as to the requisite approval of the L. G. B. in the case of sales or leases, see ibid. and Canterbury Corporation v. Cooper (1909), 100 L. T. 597; 73 J. P. 225.

As to the power of a statutory corporation to alienate land and in particular to dedicate it as a highway, see Taff Vale Rail Co. v. Pontypridd U. D. C., and cases cited therewith, on p. 272, ante.

An authority offering under this section surplus lands for sale by auction in lots, subject to special conditions (subsequently incorporated into the conveyance of the lots sold) restricting the right of each purchaser as to building on his lot, is, like a private vendor, under an obligation to the purchaser of any lot to observe the restrictive conditions, as to the lots remaining unsold in its hands, to the same extent as purchasers of the lots, if sold, would be (Holford v. Acton U. D. C., [1898] 2 Ch. 240). A corporation, having acquired land to widen a street, sold the surplus by auction, under conditions requiring purchasers to observe the building byelaws; but they reserved the right to waive or alter any stipulations as to any land not sold at the sale, or, with the consent of the purchaser, as to any land so sold. They consented to alter the plans of a purchaser so that the air space required by the byelaws was provided out of a square, and not out of land sold. It was held that there was, under the circumstances, no building scheme which the corporation was not at liberty to alter (Att.-Gen. v. Richmond Corporation (1903), 89 L. T. 700; 68 J. P. 73).

The M. of H. hold that a local authority have no power to carry out works merely for the purpose of enhancing the value of surplus land.

Purchase of extra land in order to resell.

As to the power of local authorities to purchase land beyond their strict necessities with a view to reimbursement by resale of the surplus, see Galloway v. London (Mayor, etc. of) (1866), L. R. 1 H. L. 34; Quinton v. Bristol (Mayor of) (1874), L. R. 17 Eq. 524; 38 J. P. 516; Gard v. London Commissioners of Sewers (1885), 28 Ch. D. 486; Aldis v. London (Corporation of), [1899] 2 Ch. 169; 63 J. P. 376; Fernley v. Limehouse District Board (1900), 82 L. T. 524; 64 J. P. 328.

By a private Act a corporation were authorised (inter alia) to make certain "street works" within the limits of lateral deviation shown on their deposited plans; and to take "for the purpose of the street works, the lands shown on the deposited plans in connection therewith, and which they may require for the purposes thereof respectively":—Held, on the construction of the entire Act, that it did not authorise them to take lands shown on the plans, but not actually required for street works, for the purpose of reselling the same at a profit (Donaldson v. South Shields Corporation (1899), 68 L. J. Ch. 162; 79 L. T. 685).

Note to Section 175.

(e) The answer to the question whether an authority can purchase land for the express purpose of exchanging it for other land which they require for some purposes of the Act, would seem to be in the affirmative, and it is believed that in some instances the L. G. B. sanctioned loans under these circumstances. Cf. Rolls v. London School Board, post, p. 421. Purchase in order to exchange.

(f) See the definition in s. 4, ante, p. 7.

(h) This word is peremptory; nevertheless, some discretion must be left to the authority as to their action, and as to when they will sell. It must be noticed that the Lands Clauses Consolidation Acts, referred to in the next section, provide for the sale of superfluous lands, but it would appear that the section in the text supersedes that provision, interposing the control of the L. G. B. (now M. of H.). The former expressed the view that the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, s. 128 (see App. I., post, Vol. II.), which gives a vendor a right of pre-emption over land sold to a local authority, was not superseded by the present section, and was not restricted to cases of compulsory purchase. Disposal of surplus land. Right of pre-emption.

In the case of lands purchased by means of borrowed money, the M. of H. practically bring pressure to bear upon an authority to dispose speedily of so much as is not required for the actual improvement, by requiring the estimated cost to be divided, and assigning a short term (usually five years) for the repayment of that part of the loan which represents the estimated value of the surplus property.

In consequence of the wording of the section it would seem to be legally impracticable for a district council to borrow money for the net cost of an improvement, i.e., for the estimated difference between the cost of land purchase and the amount to be immediately realised by resales. The council should borrow for the whole cost on terms which will admit of sale proceeds being applied at short notice towards repayment.

But for the provisions of the section an authority could not, as it seems, have sold any of the lands which they had acquired; see Tepper v. Nicols (1864), 18 C. B. (N.S.) 121.

Land acquired by an authority under this Act for a definite purpose may, in the interval before it is required for such purpose, be used in any lawful manner which does not substantially interfere with its immediate use, when so needed, for the purpose for which it was acquired; it is not necessary that during such interval the land should be kept in the same state in which it was when acquired (Att.-Gen. v. Teddington U. D. C., [1898] 1 Ch. 66; 61 J. P. 825). Interim user of land.

But an authority must be careful not to permanently apply the land so purchased to any other purpose than that for which it was acquired, except with due licence properly obtained. Where a corporation under a local Act obtained a piece of land for the purpose of public recreation, they were restrained by injunction from holding a fair and exhibition of cattle upon it (Att.-Gen. v. Southampton (Mayor, etc. of) (1859), 29 L. J. Ch. 282; 1 L. T. 155). See also Att.-Gen. v. Sunderland (Mayor, etc. of), ante, p. 371, where a corporation were allowed to build a museum and library on a part of a public park, but were restrained from building a council chamber and offices thereon; Williamson v. Sunderland (Mayor, etc. of) (1892), 9 T. L. R. 143, and Stourcliffe Estate Co., Ltd. v. Bournemouth Corporation, on p. 370, ante. Permanent user for other purposes.

A local authority had purchased compulsorily under this Act and a Provisional Order certain land for the purposes of sewage disposal, some additional land adjoining being also purchased shortly afterwards. A part of the area thus acquired was eventually found to be unsuitable for sewage disposal, and the council, instead of selling it, proposed to erect on it a small-pox hospital. The L. G. B., purporting to act under s. 175, gave a direction that the land should be retained by the council as a site for a small-pox hospital. The Court of Appeal decided that the language of s. 175 was not wide enough to empower the Board, in directing that the land should not be sold, to authorise its permanent appropriation to a purpose wholly inconsistent with that for which it was acquired (Att.-Gen. v. Hanwell U. D. C., [1900] 2 Ch. 377). As to how far an authority are bound by the plans deposited in order to obtain a Provisional Order, see Bradshaw v. Bray U. D. C., and cases cited therewith, post, p. 421. The land in the Hanwell Case, supra, was purchased compulsorily, but the following case shows that the principle applies equally to land purchased by agreement.

An authority, under a Provisional Order which incorporated the Electric Lighting Acts, purchased land by agreement for the purpose of erecting thereon works for generating electricity. At the time of the purchase they had decided to utilise part of the land as a site for a refuse destructor, the intention being that the surplus heat produced by the consumption of refuse should be used in aid of the generating machinery. There is power under this Act to acquire land for the erection of a refuse destructor, but the court held that the land was not in fact acquired in exercise of the powers of the Act; that the erection and use of the destructor was not ancillary to the supply of electricity; and that, therefore, what the authority proposed to do was ultra vires (Att.-Gen. v. Pontypridd U. D. C., [1906] 2 Ch. 257; 70 J. P. 394). The question whether an authority, having powers to acquire land under two different statutes for two different purposes, can, by an exercise of their combined powers, acquire land as a whole, partly for the one purpose and partly for the other, without distinguishing the parts acquired for each, was left open; see per ROMER, L.J.

In view of the decisions referred to above, it would seem that even where a conveyance is in general terms, those terms cannot widen the range of purposes for which land was acquired so as to cover objects not within the contemplation of the council.

In 1870 a corporation accepted an offer to sell them at an undervalue a piece of land containing fifty-three acres on condition that they should appropriate forty acres for a public park and recreation grounds, and the land was conveyed, the Treasury sanctioning a mortgage for the purchase-money. In 1910 the parks committee approved a scheme of the streets committee for relieving the congestion of a busy road, bounding one side of the park, by throwing 5,180 square yards of the park into the road. The scheme involved the felling of 133 trees in the park. In an action by a ratepayer for an injunction, it was held that the real transaction in 1870 embodied an intention of appropriating forty acres for park purposes and keeping the remainder free from trees, and free to be used for any other purpose. The whole fifty-three acres were not subject to a statutory trust. The corporation had not by permitting the public enjoyment of the whole of the land abandoned by dedication their right to dispose of part of it for other purposes. The work proposed was calculated to increase the pleasurable use of the park, and with regard to the cutting of trees it was a matter for the corporation to decide. Accordingly an injunction was refused (Att.-Gen. v. Bradford Corporation (1911), 55 Sol. J. 715; 75 J. P. 553).

Reference, however, must now be made to s. 95 of the P. H. A., 1907, post, under which the M. of H. have power to sanction the use (subject to conditions) of land for purposes other than those for which it was acquired. And for statutes authorising the appropriation for a particular purpose or for general purposes of land already belonging to an authority, see the Education (Administrative Provisions) Acts, 1907, s. 1, and 1909, s. 5; the Baths and Washhouses Act, 1846, s. 24; the Recreation Grounds Act, 1859; the Open Spaces Act, 1887, s. 7; the Burial Act, 1854, s. 11; the Housing of the Working Classes Act, 1890, s. 57 (3).

(i) It is difficult to define the precise powers vested in the Board (now M. of H.) by these words, having regard to the Hanwell Case (see note (h) above). In an ordinary case where a council propose to dispose of surplus lands, the M. of H. state that they do not propose to give any directions which will preclude the council from selling the lands in accordance with the requirements of the section.

(k) These words do not necessarily imply that the sale must be by public auction. A sale by private treaty after advertisement would seem to satisfy the section. The section, according to JOYCE, J., in Scarborough Corporation v Cooper, p. 414, ante, contemplates "a sale for a sum of money in cash."

Application of proceeds of sales.

(l) The official view is that if principal moneys cannot be at once repaid, the sale proceeds should be invested as a sinking fund in securities prescribed by s. 234 as amended by the Trustee Acts, and applied periodically in discharge of sums due to the lenders. There is apparently no infringement of the Act if the amount is absorbed by one such payment, with the result that the ratepayers for the current year obtain the full benefit of the sale.

Note to Section 175.

A mortgage was created on the district fund of a borough, under an Act not expressly incorporating this section :—Held, that the section could not apply unless there were surplus lands, and that, as it was not shown that there were any, the mortgage must be treated as pure personalty. Whether if there had been surplus lands, the mortgage must not still have been treated as pure personalty, on the ground that, as the lands were directed by statute to be sold, the doctrine of election was excluded, so that the mortgagee had no interest in anything but money, quære. Whether a charge which gives the holder no right against anything except money which has gone as money into a particular fund can ever be treated as giving an interest in real estate because the money has come from real estate, quære (In re Thompson ; Bedford v. Teal (1890), 45 Ch. D. 161).

(m) In Jersey (Earl of) v. Uxbridge R. S. A., [1891] 3 Ch., at p. 194, STIRLING, J., said : "The words 'general purposes' were referred to as showing that the proceeds of sale might be carried to the credit of the fund out of which general expenses are payable, but it seems to me that the language does not necessarily lead to this conclusion. The rate levied for special expenses is applicable for the general purposes of the Act so far as regards the contributory place in which it is levied. It could hardly be disputed that in the present case the proceeds of sale might be applied in paying off the mortgage of the 10th of February, 1888, which is charged on the rates of the parish of Norwood, and, if this be so, then under s. 175, in the absence of any charge, the proceeds would have to be carried to the credit of the same rate."

It will be observed that if there is any existing debt under the Act the sale proceeds must be applied towards its discharge. This provision must sometimes work inequitably, e.g., when the land has been purchased out of revenue.

Regulations as to purchase of land.

176. With respect to the purchase (a) of lands (b) by a local authority for the purposes of this Act, the following regulations shall be observed ; (that is to say,)

(1) The Lands Clauses Consolidation Acts, 1845, 1860, and 1869 (c), shall be incorporated with this Act, except the provisions relating to access to the special Act, and except section one hundred and twenty-seven of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (d) :

(2) The local authority, before putting in force any of the powers of the said Lands Clauses Consolidation Acts with respect to the purchase and taking of lands otherwise than by agreement, shall—

Publish once at the least in each of three consecutive weeks (e) in the month of November, in some local newspaper circulated in their district (f), an advertisement describing shortly the nature of the undertaking in respect of which the lands are proposed to be taken, naming a place where a plan (g) of the proposed undertaking may be seen at all reasonable hours, and stating the quantity of lands (h) that they require ; and shall further

Serve a notice (i) in the month of December on every owner or reputed owner (j), lessee or reputed lessee, and occupier of such lands, defining in each case the particular lands intended to be taken, and requiring an answer stating whether the person so served assents dissents or is neuter in respect of taking such lands :

(3) On compliance with the provisions of this section with respect to advertisements and notices, the local authority may, if they think fit, present a petition (k) under their seal to the Local Government Board. The petition shall state the lands intended to be taken, and the purposes for which they are required, and the names of the owners lessees and occupiers of lands who have assented dissented or are neuter in respect of the taking such lands, or who have returned no answer to the notice; it shall pray that the local authority may, with reference to such lands, be allowed to put in force the powers of the said Lands Clauses Consolidation Acts with respect to the purchase and taking of lands otherwise than by agreement, and such prayer shall be supported by such evidence as the Local Government Board requires (l):

(4) On the receipt of such petition and on due proof of the proper advertisements having been published and notices served the Local Government Board shall take such petition into consideration, and may either dismiss the same (m), or direct a local inquiry as to the propriety of assenting to the prayer of such petition; but until such inquiry has been made no Provisional Order shall be made affecting any lands without the consent of the owners, lessees and occupiers thereof (n):

(5) After the completion of such inquiry the Local Government Board may, by Provisional Order (o), empower the local authority to put in force, with reference to the lands referred to in such order (p), the powers of the said Lands Clauses Consolidation Acts with respect to the purchase and taking of lands otherwise than by agreement, or any of them, and either absolutely or with such conditions and modifications as the Board may think fit; and it shall be the duty of the local authority to serve a copy of any order so made in the manner and on the person in which and on whom notices in respect of such lands are required to be served (q):

Provided that the notices by this section required to be given in the months of November and December may be given in the months of September and October or of October and November (r), but in either of such last-mentioned cases an inquiry preliminary to the Provisional Order to which such notices refer shall not be held before the expiration of one month from the last day of the second of the two months in which the notices are given; and any notices or orders by this section required to be served on a number of persons having any right in over or on lands in common may be served on any three or more such persons on behalf of all such persons (s).

Leasing not included.

(a) This section only applies to purchases. As to the power of an authority to take lands on lease, see the preceding section.

(b) See the definition in s. 4, ante, p. 7.

Protected lands and rights.

By ss. 327, 332, nothing in this Act is to be construed as authorising a council to interfere with the works and property of certain authorities and companies, or to injuriously affect water rights without in every case obtaining the requisite consents. This restriction has the effect of considerably curtailing the powers which are apparently given by s. 176 to facilitate the execution of improvement schemes. There are also lands of other kinds which cannot be taken, even if a

Note to Section 176.

Provisional Order is obtained, without a certain procedure, and it will, therefore, be convenient to mention the practice of the M. of H. when lands of various descriptions are scheduled by local authorities for compulsory purchase.

Crown lands.

Crown lands cannot be taken compulsorily. At the same time the M. of H. are apparently willing to insert such lands in a Provisional Order if the council obtain the assent of the Government department concerned to the proposed scheme. A special protective clause is, however, usually inserted in the Order.

Canal and railway property.

The property of canal companies is specially protected from interference by s. 327, but if the consent required by that section is obtained, the Ministry will probably insert the required lands in their Order.

Railway lands are not the subject of special provision in the Act (except in such matters as are referred to in s. 157), but the Ministry usually require the assent of the company.

Churches, chapels, and burial grounds.

The Ministry decline to issue a Provisional Order purporting to give compulsory powers in respect of consecrated lands. Possibly a council may be able to effect their purpose by procuring a faculty. In St. Anne, Limehouse (1915), 31 T. L. R. 539, a faculty was authorised to acquire a strip of a disused burial ground for widening a road. The court adopted the usual procedure and granted a user of the land but declined to decide whether the local authority had statutory authority to acquire the freehold. Roman Catholic chapels and other places of worship not of the Established Church, and unconsecrated burial grounds, may, however, be scheduled.

If an improvement involves the disturbance of human remains a licence from the Secretary of State is required, and a provision will probably be inserted in the Order requiring this step to be taken before the lands are disturbed.

Water rights.

If water does not flow in a defined channel, and no rights other than those of the owner of the land upon which a spring is situated are involved, such land may be compulsorily acquired and with it the right to use the water arising therefrom. Where, however, water flows in a defined channel the issue of a Provisional Order and the putting in operation of the powers thereby conferred will not relieve the council from the obligation to obtain the written consents of any owners whose rights will be injuriously affected by the works. Such rights cannot be acquired compulsorily by Provisional Order. See s. 14 of the Housing, Town Planning, etc. Act, 1919, post, Vol. II., as to the acquisition of water rights in connection with housing schemes, and see also notes to ss. 327, 332, post.

Highways.

If lands required for purposes of an improvement under the Act form part of a highway, an order of justices under ss. 84 et seq. of the Highway Act, 1835, is required, and the issue of a Provisional Order will not relieve the council from the necessity for taking this procedure.

Parts of houses, etc.

It frequently happens that a council in connection with a scheme of improvement desire to obtain compulsory powers over part only of a property, and with this object desire a provision to be inserted in the Order depriving an owner of his power to require them to purchase the whole: see the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, s. 92. It appears to be the practice, however, of the Ministry to refuse applications of this character.

Time limit for exercise of powers.

The L. G. B. generally declined to insert in Provisional Orders, or in Bills for the confirmation of such Orders, any provision extending the time during which the powers might be exercised: see the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, s. 123, and note thereto. In cases where powers given over the same lands by previous Orders had been allowed to lapse, the time given was sometimes restricted to one year or two years.

Amount of land scheduled.

The Ministry are apparently willing, in cases of schemes for street improvement and construction of new streets, to include in their Order sufficient land to enable the council to obtain a good saleable frontage.

Where owners willing to sell at arbitration price.

If the owners and lessees of lands are willing to sell at a price to be fixed by arbitration, and will enter into an agreement for that purpose, a Provisional Order is not necessary.

Owners with defective title.

A Provisional Order is not necessary for the sole reason that owners cannot produce a satisfactory title. The Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, s. 75, enables a council in such circumstances to execute a valid conveyance to themselves.

Land for sewers and water mains.

It is unnecessary to obtain compulsory powers under s. 176 in connection with the laying of sewers and water mains through lands in view of the powers of a council under ss. 16 and 54. See those sections and the notes thereto.

Note to Section 176.

If lands are required as a site for a reservoir which is to hold more than 100,000 gallons of water, s. 53, ante, p. 127, should be complied with.

Site for reservoir. Destruction of easements.

Where houses or lands are taken under compulsory powers, easements over them enjoyed by the owners of adjoining properties not purchased may, if they interfere with the proposed use of the houses or lands taken, be obstructed, the owners being entitled to compensation. The readiest illustration is that of the right to lights, as to which see Clark v. London (School Board of) (1874), L. R. 9 Ch. 120; 38 J. P. 101; Bedford (Duke of) v. Dawson (1875), L. R. 20 Eq. 353; 39 J. P. 804; Baker v. St. Marylebone (Vestry of) (1876), 35 L. T. 129; 24 W. R. 848. A local education authority taking land by agreement for the purposes of the Elementary Education Act, 1870, are not liable to an action for breach of a restrictive covenant, by which the land was bound in the hands of their vendor, the only remedy of the covenantee being compensation under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, s. 68 (Kirby v. Harrogate School Board, [1896] 1 Ch. 437; 60 J. P. 182). See also Long Eaton Recreation Grounds Co. v. Midland Rail. Co., [1902] 2 K. B. 574; 67 J. P. 1. This subject is too wide to be treated in the present Work. The various sections of the Lands Clauses Acts in App. I., post, Vol. II., and the notes thereon, may be consulted; but reference must be made to special treatises on these Acts, such as Browne and Allan on the Law of Compensation and similar works.

Trespass on land not acquired.

A corporation who had acquired land compulsorily for waterworks purposes, in course of constructing a reservoir therein at a depth of 123 feet below the surface, inadvertently carried a heading 18 feet by 6 feet for a distance of 42 feet beyond their boundary into the plaintiff's land. The excavation was made for the purpose of stopping a fissure in the soil, which might have caused a leak in the reservoir, and it was filled up with concrete and brickwork, the surface of the plaintiff's land being in no way interfered with. The plaintiff claimed a mandatory order against the defendants to restore the land to its former condition. The cost of doing this would have amounted to £1,000. Before action the defendants offered to pay £100 by way of damages, and before delivery of the defence paid £10 into court. JOYCE, J., held that, having regard to Shelfer v. City of London Electric Lighting Co., [1895] 1 Ch. 287, the court had a discretion to give damages in lieu of an injunction; that it was a case for damages, and that the proper amount was £100. Mayfair Property Co. v. Johnston, [1894] 1 Ch. 508, does not, he said, lay down a rule that the measure of damages in such a case is the amount which it would cost to restore the land to its former condition (Riley v. Halifax Corporation (1907), 71 J. P. 428; 97 L. T. 278).

Lands outside district.

If the local authority intend to apply for a Provisional Order to enable them to purchase compulsorily lands outside their district for sewage disposal purposes, waterworks, or a cemetery, they will probably find it convenient to satisfy the requirements of section 32 or section 54 of the Public Health Act, 1875, when they are taking the necessary proceedings for the Provisional Order. Delay at a subsequent stage of the proceedings will be saved in this way.

Incorporated enactments.

(c) 8 & 9 Vict. c. 18; 23 & 24 Vict. c. 106; 32 & 33 Vict. c. 18. The first-mentioned has been amended by 46 & 47 Vict. c. 15. All these Acts are printed in App. I., post, Vol. II.

(d) 8 & 9 Vict. c. 18, contains two sets of sections: one applicable to agreements which enable persons under disability to sell and convey; the other to cases where no agreement can be arrived at. An authority may act under the former set by the operation of this section, but they cannot avail themselves of the latter without observing the formalities prescribed by the latter part of this section.

Superfluous land.

8 & 9 Vict. c. 18, s. 127, requires the sale, within a certain time, of superfluous land, i.e., land not required for the purposes of the undertaking, a definition whereof is given by Lord CAIRNS in G. W. Rail. Co. v. May (1874), L. R. 7 H. L. 283, at p. 292; 39 J. P. 54. If no sale is effected within the prescribed time, the land vests in the owner of the adjoining land. The section was not incorporated with the P. H. A., 1848, s. 84, and some doubt existed as to whether it applied to land acquired under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, and subsequent Acts; but this doubt is now removed. As to the provisions of this Act for the sale of land which is not required for the purposes for which it has been acquired, see the last section.

Compulsory purchase: for

In a case which arose under the corresponding sections of the Education Act, 1870, a school board served on R. a notice to treat, all the previous preliminaries having been complied with. Prior, however, to the service of the notice to treat and to the passing of the Confirmation Act, the board had entertained and adopted, subject to the sanction of the Education Department, a proposal from one B., a neighbouring landowner, for exchanging a portion of the land to be acquired by the board from R. for a piece of B.'s land, he undertaking to form the land so to be conveyed to him by the board into a public road. There was evidence to show that such road, when made, would be advantageous to the school intended to be erected. It was held, on motion by R. for an injunction to restrain the board from putting in force their statutory powers with respect to so much of the land comprised in the notice to treat as they proposed to convey to B., that the board were justified in the course they had taken, and could, if they obtained the sanction of the Education Department, carry out the proposal (Rolls v. London School Board (1884), 27 Ch. D. 639). In Batson v. London School Board (1903), 67 J. P. 457; 20 T. L. R. 22, CHANNELL, J., held that if the purpose for which land is proposed to be taken is ultra vires a local authority may be restrained from taking the land, notwithstanding a Provisional Order has been obtained.

Note to Section 176.

In a recent case under Michael Angelo Taylor's Act the bona fides of a local authority and their motive for exercising their compulsory powers were called in question. The London County Council obtained power to construct a tramway along a certain street. The proposal had been opposed by the H. Borough Council on the ground that the street was too narrow for the purpose; but, after negotiations, this opposition was withdrawn, and an agreement was entered into between the councils by which the street was to be widened, and the borough council agreed to assist the county council in obtaining consents to the widening. The county council could not come to terms with certain owners, and, having no compulsory powers of purchase, they requested the borough council, in pursuance of their agreement, to put into force their compulsory powers under Michael Angelo Taylor's Act. The borough council accordingly passed a resolution that these powers should be exercised, and formally adjudged that the land in question "projects into, obstructs or prevents the council from . . . altering, widening, or extending the said street." Notice to treat was formally served; and an action was brought by the owners to restrain the council from exercising their powers on the ground that this was not a bonâ fide adjudication by the council, and that the proposed improvement was not within the meaning of the Act. It was held, upon the facts, that there was an honest and bonâ fide determination on the part of the council that it was expedient to widen the street, and none the less so because it was occasioned by the introduction of the tramway by the county council (Parry v. Hammersmith Borough Council (1904), 69 J. P. 35; 92 L. T. 161). The good faith of local authorities was also unsuccessfully challenged in other recent cases, viz., in Pescod v. Westminster Corporation, [1905] 2 Ch. 475; 69 J. P. 387; Westminster Corporation v. L. & N. W. Rail. Co. [1905], A. C. 426; 69 J. P. 425. See Rebbeck v. Bournemouth Corporation (1902), Times, March 17th, where a question as to the bona fides of a notice to treat was raised; and see also Marquess of Clanricarde v. Congested Districts Board for Ireland (1915), 79 J. P. 481; 49 Ir. L. T. 42.

(e) The advertisement must appear in three consecutive weeks, but it is not necessary that a week should elapse between two insertions (Aberdeen (City of) v. Watt (1901), 3 F. 787). Thus, if the advertisement appear on a Saturday it can appear again on the following Monday. The point is sometimes of importance when a month ends in the middle of a week.

The advertisements.

(f) It must appear three times in one and the same newspaper.

(g) The undertaking in respect of which the lands are required must be shown on the plan, and the annual "Instructions" of the Ministry of Health as to preparation of the plan should be closely followed.

The deposited plan.

As to the delineation of lands upon deposited plans, see Dowling v. Pontypool, etc. Rail. Co. (1874), L. R. 18 Eq. 714. If the Act confirming a Provisional Order gives power to take more lands than those mentioned in the notices, it appears that such additional lands may be taken (In re Huddersfield Corporation and Jacomb (1874), L. R. 10 Ch. 92).

of the Working Classes Act, 1890, and for widening streets, duly deposited plans, one of them being a ground-plan of forty-five cottages proposed to be built, showing also a proposed playground and a proposed approach fifty feet wide. The plans were referred to in the Act for the purpose of description, but the Act contained no provision requiring the works to be carried out according to the plans. It was held that the plans were only incorporated in the Act for the purpose of identifying the land to be acquired; that the defendants were, therefore, not bound to adhere to the representation of intention shown on the plan as to the proposed number of cottages, and the playground and approach; and that they could not be enjoined while they kept within the purposes mentioned in the Act (Bradshaw v. Bray U. D. C., [1907] 1 I. R. 152). And see also N. B. Rail. Co. v. Tod (1846), 12 Cl. & F. 722; Att.-Gen. v. G. E. Rail. Co. (1873), L. R. 6 H. L. 367.

(h) It is advisable to state the quantity of land in acres or square yards with the words "or thereabouts," in addition to giving a description of the lands.

Notices and their effect.

(i) See s. 267, post, as to how such notices are to be served in general, and the proviso to this section as to the service on commoners. It has been held that the giving of this notice does not bind the authority to proceed, and that their omission to take the lands specified in the notice gives no right of action to the owner, even after confirmation of the Provisional Order (Burges v. Bristol Sanitary Authority (1886), 50 J. P. 455; and see Burr v. Wimbledon L. B., W. N. (1887) 155). See also note (g), supra.

Persons to be served.

(j) For one meaning of the word owner, see s. 4, ante, p. 8, though that is not the only meaning to be adopted in construing this section. In 8 & 9 Vict. c. 18, s. 3, the word owner is "understood to mean any person or corporation who under that or the special Act would be enabled to sell or convey land for the purposes of the undertaking." And under this section it was held that notice ought to be given to persons known to be mortgagees of the property to be taken (Martin v. L. C. & D. Rail. Co. (1866), L. R. 1 Ch. 501). But, quære, who is meant by a reputed owner or reputed lessee? And will a notice upon such reputed owner or lessee be available where there is a real owner or real lessee who is not served? It seems that the notice must be served upon the owner, lessee, and occupier. But if the local board can select any person as the reputed owner or reputed lessee there may often be a failure of due notice to the proper parties. 8 & 9 Vict. c. 18 does not refer to reputed owners. However, the poor rate of every parish contains a column for the owner of the property assessed, and the overseers fill in the column with a name which often represents the reputed owner—that is, the name of a person who is believed by them to be the owner.

Attention should be paid to the ownership of highways and streets, for there is no power to take streets without notice such as is given by the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, s. 16, as to which see Souch v. East London Rail. Co. (1873), L. R. 16 Eq. 108; 37 J. P. 644. Apart from statutory provisions as to "vesting" the presumption is that the soil belongs to the owners of adjoining lands. And even where the actual street is vested in an urban council or county council, semble, the owner of the subsoil should receive notice: cf. Mayor, etc. of Tunbridge Wells v. Baird, on p. 104, ante.

A notice served upon one of several joint owners who acts for the rest appears to be sufficient.

As to the right of a local authority to a way of necessity to lands compulsorily acquired by them for the purposes of a sewage farm, see Serff v. Acton L. B. (1886), 31 Ch. D. 679.

The petition.

(k) As the petition must mention the purport of the answers received from the owners, etc. it should not be presented until a reasonable time has elapsed since the notices were served. The petition should contain a schedule giving the lands proposed to be taken in a form corresponding with the book of reference. See M. of H. "Instructions."

Combination of authorities.

Two or more local authorities cannot jointly petition for a Provisional Order to enable them to put in force the compulsory powers of the Lands Clauses Acts. Either each authority must present a separate petition in respect of the particular lands which they require, or the several local authorities must combine under s. 285, post, for the purpose of carrying the proposed scheme into execution, and a petition must be presented by one of them with regard to all the land required. If the latter course is taken, an agreement under the section should be entered into before application is made for the Provisional Order, and a copy of the agreement should accompany the application. Note to Section 176.

(l) Circular letters and instructions are annually issued to local authorities by the Ministry of Health relative to applications for Provisional Orders under this and other Acts. Those applicable to orders under s. 176 explain in detail the provisions of the statute and the requirements of the Ministry, and should be carefully studied by the officers of a council intending to apply for such an order. For the latest circular and instructions, see App. II., post, Vol. II. Proofs required.

It is also necessary to comply with the Standing Orders of Parliament applicable to such Provisional Orders, set out in the "Instructions," and to furnish the Ministry with proof of the fact.

See s. 297, post, and the notes thereto, as to petitions against the making of a Provisional Order and the procedure generally.

(m) This dismissal may take place without local inquiry, as the Ministry may consider that upon the petition, and the opposition to it, no order should be issued.

(n) These words were incorporated from 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 75, but their meaning is not quite obvious. It would appear that when there is consent, no Provisional Order is necessary. But it is believed that cases occur where parties will not consent to a sale, but will not oppose a Provisional Order, and consequently may waive an inquiry. There are also cases of disability to sell.

(o) As to this, see s. 297, post.

(q) When only a few copies are required, the Ministry will probably supply them, but when a considerable number are required, an arrangement can be made with the Government printer for the supply of the copies at a reasonable rate. The statute does not render this service a preliminary to the introduction of the confirming Bill. Probably, however, the Bill might be stayed by Parliament if it were shown that no copy of the order had been served in time to allow a petition to be presented against it within the appointed time, as s. 297 (7), post, only makes the order primâ facie evidence that all proceedings previous to the making of the order have been duly taken. Copies of order.

(r) The advantage of taking early proceedings is that if a mistake occurs, there is time to take fresh proceedings without the loss of a year.

(s) See the provisions of 8 & 9 Vict. c. 18, ss. 102—107, as to compensation for common lands. Common lands.

177. Any local authority may, with the consent of the Local Government Board, let (a) for any term any lands (b) which they may possess, as and when they can conveniently spare the same (c). Power to let lands.

See s. 95 of the P. H. A. Amendment Act, 1907, post.

See s. 29 as to the letting of sewage lands. No consent is required under that section.

The present section is not restricted in its application to lands acquired or vesting in the authority under this Act. In view, however, of such decisions as those of Att.-Gen. v. Teddington and Att.-Gen. v. Hanwell (see notes to s. 175), there are fewer instances than formerly in which this section is found to be of any service to local authorities.

(a) See also s. 175 and note (h) thereto as to the powers of a district council for dealing with land pending its use for the purpose for which it was acquired. In a case (since the Teddington decision referred to in that note) in which a rural council proposed to let certain land to a parish council for allotments until it was required for the treatment of sewage, the L. G. B. expressed the opinion that such a temporary use of the land was not such a demise as is contemplated by s. 177. It seemed to the Board to be competent to the district council in their capacity of owners of the land, apart from any express statutory authority to exercise such powers of a landowner as would suffice to licence the use of the land for allotments under conditions acceptable Temporary lettings.

Note to Section 177.

to the parish council. Such a licence would not require sanction on the part of the Board. In another case in which an urban council proposed to let a piece of land acquired for pleasure ground purposes for use as an addition to the gardens of some private houses, the Board stated that they gathered that it was not intended that any buildings or other structures, which would interfere with the ultimate use of the land for recreation ground purposes, should be erected upon the land, and that they assumed that the terms of the letting would be such as to permit of the use of the land for the purpose for which it was acquired at such notice as the council would readily be able to give. Under such circumstances it appeared to the Board that (under the Teddington decision) the proposal could be carried into effect by the council without any sanction or consent on the part of the Board.

Sporting rights.

A local authority succeeded in obtaining consent to the letting of sporting rights over the whole of the lands acquired for a sewage farm, in addition to the letting of parts of the land.

Long leases.

The M. of H. require strong grounds to be shown when it is proposed to grant a long lease of lands. If lands can be conveniently spared for an indefinite period they must frequently be in the nature of surplus lands which under s. 175 it is the duty of the council to sell.

Non-exclusive and occasional lettings.

Consent is not required when there is no exclusive occupation, as, for instance, when a district council let a room in their office for one day a week.

Failure to obtain necessary consent.

In Canterbury Corporation v. Cooper (1909), 73 J. P. 225; 100 L. T. 597, it was discussed, but not decided, whether a lease granted under the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, ss. 108, 109, without the necessary consent of the L. G. B., was void or voidable.

(b) See the definition in s. 4, ante, p. 7.

Failure of purpose for which land acquired.

(c) The authority must remember that they cannot change the purpose for which they have acquired the lands. It will not, therefore, be "a convenient sparing" of the lands within the meaning of the section, if they simply abandon the purpose for which the lands were required. The Act does not provide for the failure of the purpose.

Reference should be made to the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 143, which enables surplus rents in a borough to be applied towards the costs of the improvement of the borough under the Public Health Acts. See upon this, Att.-Gen. v. Birmingham (Corporation of) (1866), L. R. 3 Eq. 552.

Provision for lands belonging to the Duchy of Lancaster.

178. The Chancellor and Council of the Duchy of Lancaster for the time being may, if they think fit, (but subject and without prejudice to the rights of any lessee tenant or occupier,) from time to time contract with any local authority for the sale of, and may (subject as aforesaid) absolutely sell and dispose of, for such sum as to the said Chancellor and Council may appear sufficient consideration, the whole or any part of any lands belonging to Her Majesty her heirs or successors in right of the said duchy, or any right interest or easement in through over or on any such lands which for the purposes of this Act such local authority from time to time deem it expedient to purchase; and on payment of the purchase money, as provided by the Duchy of Lancaster Lands Act, 1855 (a), the said Chancellor and Council may grant and assure to the said authority, under the seal of the said duchy, in the name of Her Majesty her heirs or successors the subject of such contract or sale, and such money shall be dealt with as if such subject had been sold under the authority of the Duchy of Lancaster Lands Act, 1855 (a).

(a) The statute referred to is 18 & 19 Vict. c. 58.

179. In case of dispute as to the amount of any compensation (b) to be made under the provisions of this Act (except where the mode of determining the same is specially provided for (c)), and in case of any matter which by this Act is authorised or directed to be settled by arbitration (d), then, unless both parties concur in the appointment of a single arbitrator (e), each party shall appoint an arbitrator to whom the matter shall be referred (f). Mode of reference to arbitration.

(a) The Arbitration Act, 1889, s. 24, provides that that Act—for which see App. I., post, Vol. II.—shall apply to every arbitration under any Act passed before or after its commencement as if the arbitration were pursuant to a submission, except in so far as it is inconsistent with the Act regulating the arbitration or with any rules or procedure authorised or recognised thereby. While, therefore, the Arbitration Act, 1889, will not repeal any of the provisions of this or the following sections, it will apply, in so far as it is not inconsistent, to arbitrations under this Act. Application of Arbitration Act, 1889.

When a dispute as to compensation arises out of the compulsory acquisition of land, i.e. land or water, or any interest in land or water, or any easement or right in, to, or over land or water, the provisions of the Acquisition of Land (Assessment of Compensation) Act, 1919, post, Vol. II., must now be consulted. Application of Acquisition of Land (Assessment of Compensation) Act, 1919.

(b) It was formerly held that there must be a dispute only as to the amount of compensation and not as to the liability to pay it, and that a mere denial of liability by the authority was enough to suspend the right to proceed by way of arbitration (R. v. Burslem L. B. (1859), 28 L. J. Q. B. 345; Bradby v. Southampton L. B. (1855), 4 El. & Bl. 1014; 19 J. P. 644. And see R. v. Metropolitan Commissioners of Sewers (1853), 1 El. & Bl. 694). These cases, however, were reconsidered in Brierley Hill L. B. v. Pearsall (1884), 9 App. Cas. 595; 49 J. P. 84, where it was decided that a person who claims compensation for damage sustained by reason of the exercise of powers given by the Act, is entitled under s. 308 to have the amount of compensation determined by arbitration in manner provided by the Act, even though a dispute exists as to the liability of those from whom he seeks to recover compensation; and that the prior determination of that question of liability is not a condition precedent to the claimant's right to go to arbitration in order to obtain an award as to the fact of damage and the amount of compensation. This decision renders it unnecessary to do more than mention Burgess v. Northwich L. B. (1880), 45 J. P. 256; 37 L. T 355 (reported on another point, in 6 Q. B. D. 264), and Uttley v. Todmorden L. B. (1874), 44 L. J. C. P. 19; 39 J. P. 56). In the former a motion for a rule nisi to set aside an award on the ground that there was a dispute as to liability was dismissed, and in the latter an action was brought on an award when the liability was disputed. Subject of dispute.

(c) See, for example, s. 308, post, when the dispute may be referred to a court of summary jurisdiction. Special provisions.

(e) The Arbitration Act, 1889, s. 5, enables the court to appoint an arbitrator where a submission provides for reference to a single arbitrator "and all parties do not after differences have arisen concur in the appointment of an arbitrator." A contract between an authority and a contractor provided for the reference of differences to a single arbitrator. A difference having arisen, the contractor made proposals to the authority for the selection of an arbitrator, but they would not proceed with such selection. Thereupon the contractor served the authority with written notice "to concur in the appointment of a sole arbitrator in the matter." It was held that the notice given was a sufficient notice within s. 5 (In re Eyre and Leicester (Corporation of), [1892] 1 Q. B. 136; 56 J. P. 228). It may be stated as a general rule that, where the conditions exist under which the section is applicable, the court or judge has no discretion to refuse to appoint an arbitrator (ibid.). Appointment of arbitrator by court.

(f) See, however, s. 181, p. 432, post, as to referring small claims to a court of summary jurisdiction.

Section 180.

Regulations as to arbitration.

180. With respect to arbitrations under this Act (a), the following regulations shall be observed; (that is to say,)

(1) Every appointment of an arbitrator under this Act when made on behalf of the local authority shall be under their common seal, and on behalf of any other party under his hand, or if such party be a corporation aggregate under their common seal (b):

(2) Every such appointment shall be delivered to the arbitrators, and shall be deemed a submission to arbitration by the parties making the same (c):

(3) After the making of any such appointment the same shall not be revoked without the consent of both parties, nor shall the death of either party operate as a revocation (d):

(4) If for the space of fourteen days after any matter by this Act authorised or directed to be settled by arbitration has arisen, and notice in writing (e) by one party who has duly appointed an arbitrator has been given to the other party, stating the matter to be referred, and accompanied by a copy of such appointment, the party to whom notice is given fails to appoint an arbitrator, the arbitrator appointed by the party giving the notice shall be deemed to be appointed by and shall act on behalf of both parties:

(5) If before the determination of any matter so referred any arbitrator dies or refuses or becomes incapable to act, the party by whom such arbitrator was appointed may appoint in writing another person in his stead; and if such party fails so to do for the space of seven days after notice in writing (e) from the other party in that behalf, the remaining arbitrator may proceed ex parte; and every arbitrator so appointed shall have the same powers and authorities as were vested in the arbitrator in whose stead the appointment is made:

(6) If a single arbitrator dies or becomes incapable to act before the making of his award, or fails to make his award within twenty-one days after his appointment, or within such extended time, if any, as may have been duly appointed by him for that purpose (f), the matters referred to him shall be again referred to arbitration under the provisions of this Act, as if no former reference had been made:

(7) Where there is more than one arbitrator, the arbitrators shall, before they enter on the reference, appoint (g) by writing under their hands an umpire, and if the person appointed to be umpire dies or becomes incapable to act, the arbitrators shall forthwith appoint another person in his stead; and if the arbitrators neglect or refuse to appoint an umpire for seven days after being requested so to do by any party to the arbitration, the Local Government Board shall, on the application of any such party, appoint an umpire (h):

(8) If the arbitrators fail to make their award within twenty-one days after the day on which the last of them was appointed, or within such extended time (if any) as may have been duly appointed by them for that purpose, the matters referred shall be determined by the umpire (i) :

(9) The time for making an award by arbitrators under this Act shall not in any case be extended beyond the period of two months from the date of the submission, and the time for making an award by an umpire under this Act shall not in any case be extended beyond the period of two months from the date of the reference of the matters to him (k) :

(10) Before any arbitrator or umpire enters on a reference under this Act he shall make and subscribe the following declaration before a justice of the peace ; (that is to say,)

" I A. B. do solemnly and sincerely declare that I will faithfully and honestly, and to the best of my skill and ability, hear and determine the matters referred to me under the Public Health Act, 1875.

A. B." (l).

(11) Such declaration shall be annexed to the award when made ; and any arbitrator or umpire who wilfully acts contrary to such declaration shall be guilty of a misdemeanor (l) :

(12) Any arbitrator arbitrators or umpire appointed by virtue of this Act may require the production of such documents in the possession or power of either party as they or he may think necessary for determining the matters referred (m), and may examine the parties or their witnesses on oath :

(13) The costs of and consequent upon the reference shall be in the discretion of the arbitrator or arbitrators, or (in case the matters referred are determined by an umpire) of the umpire (n) :

(14) Any submission to arbitration under the provisions of this Act may be made a rule of any of the superior courts, on the application of any party thereto (o) :

(15) The award (p) of arbitrators or of an umpire under this Act shall be final and binding on all parties to the reference (q).

" Under this Act."

(a) When land was taken compulsorily by a council under the powers of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Acts, incorporated by s. 176, ante, p. 417, and an arbitration took place to determine the amount of compensation to be paid to its owner, the procedure with regard to such arbitration and the right to costs were formerly wholly governed by the provisions of those Acts, and not by this section (Ex parte Rayner (1878), 3 Q. B. D. 446 ; 42 J. P. 807), but see now the Acquisition of Land (Assessment of Compensation) Act, 1919, post, Vol. II. Moreover, some arbitrations which were formerly " under this Act," i.e. the P. H. Act, 1875, will now be governed by the above mentioned Act of 1919, e.g., an arbitration to assess the compensation for the laying of a sewer would appear to be now governed by the last mentioned Act.

Appointment of arbitrator.

(b) Where a claimant agreed with a waterworks company that a person nominated by two others should be appointed arbitrator, and such person being so appointed awarded to the claimant a sum exceeding £50, the Court of Exchequer held that the latter was entitled to the costs of the arbitration, although the statutory preliminaries to a reference under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Acts had not in all respects been complied with (Martin v. Leicester Waterworks Co. (1858), 27 L. J. Ex. 432 ; see also Collins v. South Staffordshire Rail. Co. (1852), 7 Ex. 5). But where, in an arbitration under this Act, one arbitrator was appointed by the local authority under their seal and another by the claimant, but not in writing under his hand, and the arbitrators appointed an umpire, who made an award in favour of the claimant, it was held that, the provisions of the statute not having been complied with, the appointment of the arbitrators, and consequently their appointment of the umpire and his award were invalid, and that neither the original submission, nor the appointment of the umpire, nor the award could be made an order of court (Gifford v. Bury (Town Council of) (1888), 20 Q. B. D. 368 ; 52 J. P. 119).

For a form of appointment of an arbitrator by the trustees and tenant for life of settled estates to assess the compensation to be paid by an authority for making a sewer, see Key and Elphinstone, 6th ed., 1899, Vol. I., p. 168.

(c) The appointment if under seal must be stamped with a deed stamp (impressed) of ten shillings (Stamp Act, 1891, ss. 1, 2 ; Sched. I., "Deed"). It should recite the matter in dispute, otherwise the arbitrator can only learn it from the oral discussion.

Under the corresponding provisions of the Irish Act, it has been held by the Irish Court of Appeal that if the assent of an arbitrator be obtained prior to the execution of the document by which he is appointed, such assent is sufficient to make the appointment valid as from the date when the document is executed ; and, provided the appointment is made within the period prescribed by sub-s. (4), it is immaterial whether the document is delivered to the arbitrator before or after that period has elapsed. Semble, it must be delivered to him before he acts (Douglas v. Belfast Corporation, infra).

The submission is a reference by consent within the meaning of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, which is now superseded, as far as regards arbitrations, by the Arbitration Act, 1889. See Warburton v. Haslingden L. B., post, p. 429, approved in Knowles & Son, Ltd. v. Bolton Corporation, post, p. 429.

It would appear from Brierley Hill L. B. v. Pearsall, ante, p. 425, that the appointment of an arbitrator does not preclude the party appointing him from afterwards contesting his liability. See also Douglas v. Belfast Corporation, [1909] 2 I. R. 30, as to an appointment made "under protest."

A submission is to be deemed to include the provisions contained in the First Schedule to the Arbitration Act, 1889 (s. 2) : but only in so far as they are not inconsistent with the text (s. 24). See the Act in App. I., post, Vol. II.

Revocation by death.

(d) As one of the parties is a corporate body, the phraseology is not quite happy. Under the P. H. A., 1848, s. 123, the appointment in the case of a local board was signed by five members of the board, and as one of them might die, the legislature provided thus against the presumed consequence of his death. No such contingency can now arise with reference to the local authority.

(e) See note (c), supra, as to when an appointment is deemed to be made ; and see ss. 266, 267, post, as to the authentication and service of notices.

A frontager disputed an apportionment under s. 150, ante, whereupon the local authority appointed an arbitrator and gave notice of such appointment to the frontager. The frontager, without appointing an arbitrator, withdrew his notice disputing the apportionment within fourteen days, and the authority's arbitrator continued the reference, acting as sole arbitrator. It was held that the award was a nullity, as the arbitrator had no power to act as sole arbitrator. The frontager being entitled to withdraw his notice disputing the apportionment within the fourteen days, and having done so, there was no submission to arbitration (Re Stoker and Morpeth Corporation, [1915] 2 K. B. 511 ; 79 J. P. 201).

(f) As to extending the time, see sub-s. (8), and note (i), thereto.

Appointment of umpire.

(g) In Holdsworth v. Barsham (1862), 2 B. & S. 480 ; 31 L. J. Q. B. 145, the arbitrators appointed an umpire before entering on the reference, but after the twenty-one days within which they ought by the P. H. A., 1848, s. 126, to have made their award, and it was held that such appointment was not too late. In the same case in the Exchequer Chamber (sub nom. Holdsworth v. Wilson (1862), 4 B. & S. 1 ; 32 L. J. Q. B. 289), it was held that the power to appoint an umpire continued until the expiration of the time within which they might have made their award (in this Act two months : see sub-s. (9)).

If the arbitrators cannot agree upon an umpire, there is no objection to their selecting by lot one of two persons, each of whom they both admit to be a fit person (Re Hopper (1867), L. R. 2 Q. B. 367). They must not, however, toss up to decide which of them shall nominate an umpire, nor must they select by lot one of two persons, each of whom is known only to one of them (Pescod v. Pescod (1888), 58 L. T. 76). The arbitrators ought to meet for the selection of an umpire; but having selected one, they need not sign his appointment in the presence of each other (Re Hopper, supra). His appointment need not be stamped unless it be by deed (Routledge v. Thornton (1812), 4 Taunt. 704). Note to Section 180.

(h) The Ministry of Health must make the appointment; and, though no time is specified, they must do so within a reasonable time. The application must be made by one of the parties, and should be accompanied by copies of the appointments of the arbitrators, and of the request to them to appoint an umpire. Some evidence may also be required by the Ministry of the failure of the arbitrators to comply with the request. The Ministry refuse to act upon an application from the arbitrators or one of them.

The arbitrators cannot appoint an umpire after the expiration of the seven days mentioned in the sub-section.

It is advisable that the request to them to appoint should be in writing.

Where no request to the arbitrators to appoint an umpire was made within the period (two months from date of submission) during which they could make an award, the L. G. B. held that the arbitrators were not at the time of the request legally in a position to make an appointment, and that no such neglect or refusal to appoint was then possible on their part as would enable the Board to appoint. Under such circumstances proceedings should be begun de novo.

(i) The authority of the umpire commences at the end of the twenty-one days, or of the extended time, in the case of a failure to make the award. This is important, for it has been a common practice for umpires to calculate the time from the date of their receiving notice of the fact that the arbitrators have failed to award: see Skerratt v. North Staff. Rail. Co. (1848), 17 L. J. Ch. 161. As to the right of a party to be heard by the umpire, see Re Maunder (1883), 49 L. T. 535. It is usual to arrange for the umpire to sit with arbitrators to avoid the cost of a rehearing if they fail to agree. Time for umpire's award.

Although no original limit of time is specially mentioned in the text within which an umpire must make his award, yet by analogy to the original limit fixed in the case of arbitrators, an original limit of twenty-one days from the date of the reference to him must be inferred to have been fixed in the case of an umpire, which under sub-s. (9) may not be extended beyond two months. Two arbitrators, appointed under the Act, met on January 3rd and extended the time for making their award till February 20th. On January 10th they appointed an umpire. On February 1st the arbitrators and umpire met and were attended by the parties, but one of the arbitrators retired and refused to proceed any further, and the meeting was adjourned sine die. On April 19th the umpire made his award. It was held that the award was made too late and must be set aside. It was also held that the date from which the twenty-one days must be reckoned was February 1st, when the arbitrators finally disagreed, and not February 20th, when their powers expired (Yeadon L. B. v. Yeadon Waterworks Co. (In re) (1889), 41 Ch. D. 52).

(k) A reference to arbitration under the Lands Clauses Acts was held to be subject to the provisions of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, with respect to referring back an award to the arbitrator, and to enlarging the time by the court notwithstanding the expiration of the time within which the award should have been made (In re Dare Valley Rail. Co. (1869), L. R. 4 Ch. 554; Rhodes v. Airedale Drainage Commissioners (1876), 1 C. P. D. 402). These cases were followed with reference to an arbitration under this section in Warburton v. Haslingden L. B. (1879), 48 L. J. Q. B. 451, a previous decision in Kellett v. Tranmere L. B. (1864), 34 L. J. Q. B. 87; 28 J. P. 742, being dissented from. It would appear, therefore, that, notwithstanding the provisions in the text, the time for making the award may be extended beyond the period of two months, as in Ward v. Secretary of State for War (1862), 32 L. J. Q. B. 53; even when the award has been made after the two months has elapsed, as in Lord v. Lee (1868), L. R. 3 Q. B. 404; Re Warner and Powell (1866), L. R. 3 Eq. 261; May v. Harcourt (1884), 13 Q. B. D. 688. In Re Mackenzie and the Ascot Gas Co. (1886), 17 Q. B. D. 114, it was held that the court could not enlarge the time for making an award under the above section beyond the period of two months; but this case, in which Warburton v. Haslingden L. B. was not cited, has since been overruled in Knowles v. Bolton Corporation, [1900] 2 Q. B. 253, where it was decided by Extension of time for award.

Note to Section 180.

the Court of Appeal that the court has power under the Arbitration Act, 1889, s. 9, to enlarge the time for making an award beyond two months from the date of the submission notwithstanding s. 180 (9). So too, under the similar provisions of the Irish Public Health Act it has been held that the court can remit an award to the umpire for his reconsideration, although the two months have expired (In re Hurley and Queenstown U. D. C. (1913), 47 Ir. L. T. 117).

(l) Compare 8 & 9 Vict. c. 18, s. 33, and see the notes thereto, in App. I., post, Vol. II. An umpire, appointed under this Act, failed to make the declaration and annex it to his award. One of the parties, on becoming aware of the omission, at once took steps and succeeded in setting aside the award (Ludlow (Mayor, etc. of) v. Prosser (1906), 70 J. P. 400).

Arbitrator's powers.

(m) According to Caledonian Rail. Co. v. Lockhart (1860), 3 L. T. 65; 8 W. R. 373, the arbitrator may employ an expert, and may, if he deem it necessary, consult men of science. He cannot, however, delegate his authority. See Eastern Counties Rail. Co. v. Eastern Union Rail. Co. (1863), 3 De G. J. & S. 610.

As to the damages which may be awarded, see s. 308, post.

The numerous decisions as to the scope of an arbitrator's jurisdiction where meat has been condemned and ordered to be destroyed by a magistrate as unfit for the food of man, and the owner of the meat claims compensation under s. 308, post, will be found collected in the notes to s. 117, p. 221, ante.

An authority under s. 16, ante, p. 55, served on the owner of land a notice of its intention to carry a sewer through such land. Subsequently the owner gave notice claiming compensation for the damage to be sustained by her by the construction of the works, and requiring arbitration. Both parties appointed arbitrators, but after they had met the authority withdrew its notice—the works not having been commenced—and offered to pay the owner's taxed costs up to the time of such withdrawal. The owner refused this offer and went on with the arbitration. The arbitrators awarded her £10 as compensation for the damage she had sustained, and also costs:—Held, that they had no jurisdiction to award either damages or costs in such circumstances (Davis v. Witney U. D. C. (1899), 63 J. P. 279). Semble, however, that compensation might have been allowed for damage between the date of the notice and the abandonment if this question had been submitted (ibid.). And see also Re Stoker and Morpeth Corporation, cited ante, p. 428.

In that case it was held that there was a further ground for setting aside the award in that the arbitrator had determined by his award that the place was a "street" within the meaning of s. 150, ante.

The arbitrator may be called as a witness in any proceedings to enforce his award and can be required to state what passed before him, and what was submitted for his consideration, but he cannot be asked what passed in his own mind when he formed his decision (Buccleuch (Duke of) v. Metropolitan Board of Works (1872), L. R. 5 H. L. 418; 36 J. P. 724).

Costs.

(n) An arbitrator or umpire acting under this section must in his award deal with the costs of and consequent upon the reference which the text places in his discretion; if he fails to do so, the court will remit the award to him for the purpose of determining the question of costs (Peake v. Finchley L. B. (1887), 57 L. T. 882).

The court has no power to compel an arbitrator to submit his costs—i.e., the fees payable to him—to arbitration. The proper remedy for extortionate charges by an arbitrator is (1) to apply to have his award set aside; or (2) to bring an action for the recovery of a portion of the charge; or (3) to call upon the court to compel him to make his award (Withington v. Wrexham Waterworks Co. (1884), 32 W. R. 1000). In making his award an umpire ought to specify separately the sum which he himself charges for his services, the sums similarly charged by the arbitrators, and the costs of the actual award (In re Gilbert and Wright (1904), 68 J. P. 143; 20 T. L. R. 164). Upon taxation of the costs of an arbitration as between the parties to the reference, the taxing master disallowed £119 of the sum paid to the arbitrators and umpire for their fees on the taking up of the award. In an action brought to recover from the arbitrators and umpire the amount so disallowed, it was held that in order to succeed the plaintiffs must show that the fees charged were unreasonable and extortionate; and, further, that the certificate of the taxing master was not evidence that the amounts disallowed by him were unreasonably charged

Note to Section 180.

(Llandrindod Wells Water Co. v. Hawksley and Others (1904), 68 J. P. 242; 20 T. L. R. 241).

A decision of the Queen's Bench that an action could not be brought for the amount of costs awarded by the arbitrator until they had been taxed, was reversed by the Exchequer Chamber (Holdsworth v. Barsham, ante, p. 428; approved in Met. Rail. Co. v. Sharpe (1880), 5 App. Cas. 425; 44 J. P. 716).

The costs of an arbitration under this Act are not within the third-party clauses of the Solicitors Act, 1843, s. 38, which applies only to the taxation of costs as between solicitor and client, and not to party and party costs. The party liable cannot elect to pay such costs as between solicitor and client, inasmuch as the results of that mode of taxation may be adverse to the solicitor whose bill is taxed (In re Cowdell (1883), 52 L. J. Ch. 246; 31 W. R. 335).

When an award under this Act has been made a rule of court in the Chancery Division, a special order to tax the costs is not necessary (Re Clark and the Bath Corporation (1884), W. N. 127).

Two authorities for adjacent districts agreed to carry out a joint sewerage scheme by an agreement, which stipulated that all disputes should be settled by arbitration in the manner provided by this and the preceding section. An award, given in an arbitration arising out of the agreement, awarded that one of the parties should pay to the other the costs of the reference and award, without stating the amount of such costs. Upon motion for an order directing the taxation of the costs, it was held that as the submission to arbitration had been made a rule of court, the taxing master was bound to tax the costs upon the application of the successful parties, and that it was not obligatory on them to bring an action upon the award in order to do so (Chesterfield (Corporation of) v. Brampton L. B. (1886), 50 J. P. 824).

A district council acquired land under their compulsory powers. The award as to compensation to be paid was set aside at the instance of the landowner. Upon a second award the amount of compensation was increased by fifty per cent. The arbitrator directed that the parties should pay their own costs:—Held, that the costs of the previous application to the court by the landowner ought clearly to be paid by the council. An order was made accordingly (In re Surbiton U. D. C. and Upjohn, Times, January 19th, 1899).

Under the corresponding Irish section an umpire awarded to a claimant £150 and costs. The court, on setting aside the award so far as regarded two items amounting to £137, remitted the award to the umpire for his reconsideration on the question of costs (In re Hurley and Queenstown U. D. C., p. 430, ante).

In Debenham v. King's College, Cambridge (1884), 1 C. & E. 438, WILLS, J., held that no custom exists entitling surveyors in compulsory purchase cases to remuneration on a percentage of the sum awarded according to "Ryde's scale." See also Faraday v. Tamworth Union (1917), 81 J. P. 81, where the court refused to adopt the scale as a basis for assessing the remuneration due to a surveyor.

(o) That is, of either division of the High Court. The court has the same jurisdiction with respect to such a rule as in ordinary cases (In re Harper and G. E. Rail. Co. (1875), L. R. 20 Eq. 39). The application to make the submission a rule of court should be made ex parte (Wood v. Birch, W. N. (1889), p. 126; Re Davey and the Railway Passenger's Assurance Co. (1880), 49 L. J. Ch. 568; 43 L. T. 234). Making submission a rule of court.

When an award of compensation is made under this section, it cannot, though duly made a rule of court, be enforced by motion in the manner in which awards are usually enforced, for such an award determines amount only, and not liability; and the local authority have, therefore, the right to compel the claimant to bring an action on his award to determine the question of liability (Re Walker and the Beckenham L. B. (1884), 48 J. P. 264; 50 L. T. 207; Helmore v. East Ham L. B., Times, December 13th, 1893, February 8th, 1894; and In re Willesden L. B. and Wright, [1896] 2 Q. B. 412; 60 J. P. 708, where it was held that this sub-section does not give power to enforce an award under s. 150, ante, p. 286, by means of an application under the Arbitration Act, 1889, s. 12). Action upon award.

(p) A uniform duty of ten shillings is imposed by the Revenue Act, 1906, s. 9. Stamp on award.

(q) These words are somewhat more emphatic than those used in the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, ss. 25, 27, 37, but the effect appears to be the same. It was held that an award under that Act might be set aside on motion Finality of award.

Note to Section 180.

made within the time limited by the statute 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 15, for setting aside an award under that Act (In re Harper and G. E. Rail. Co., supra). In the same case it was held, that though in form the umpire had no power to order payment of the amount awarded, it did not vitiate the award. As to the time within which a motion to set aside an award must now be made, see R. S. C., Order LXIV., r. 14, which provides that the application may be made within six weeks after the award has been made and published to the parties. Under the same rule the court or a judge may extend the time either before or after the same has elapsed. Cf. Re Oliver and Scott's Arbitration (1889), 43 Ch. D. 310. Formerly, the application might be made at any time before the last day of the sittings next after the award had been published and it was under this rule held that notice of motion given before the last day of the sittings was a sufficient commencement of an application within the rule (Re Gallop and Central Queensland Meat Export Co. (1890), 25 Q. B. D. 230).

A question as to the power to set aside an award under this Act was raised but not decided in Burgess v. Northwich L. B., ante, p. 264.

The award is only binding on the parties to the reference. See Tunbridge L. B. v. Akroyd, ante, p. 313.

Claims under twenty pounds may be referred to court of summary jurisdiction.

181. All questions referable to arbitration under this Act may, when the amount in dispute is less than twenty pounds, be determined at the option of either party (a) before a court of summary jurisdiction (b), but the court may, if it thinks fit, require that any work in respect of which the claim of the local authority is made and the particulars of the claim be reported on to them by any competent surveyor, not being the surveyor of the local authority; and the court may determine the amount of costs incurred in that behalf, and by whom such costs or any part of them shall be paid (c).

(a) See, however, s. 22, ante, p. 81, where the local authority are not allowed to exercise such an option, the power being confined to the other party when the dispute is as to the use of a sewer by an owner or occupier without the district.

(b) See the definition, ante, p. 36.

(c) Under the Huddersfield Improvement Act, which incorporated the Lands Clauses Act, power was given to the corporation to lay sewers in lands, making full compensation for any damage; and, where the method of recovering compensation was not provided, two justices might hear and determine the same. It was held that, though nothing was said about costs, full compensation naturally included the costs of applying to the justices (Huddersfield (Mayor of) v. Shaw (1890), 54 J. P. 724).

BYELAWS.

Authentication and alteration of byelaws.

182. All byelaws (a) made by a local authority under and for the purposes of this Act (b) shall be under their common seal (c); and any such byelaw may be altered or repealed by a subsequent byelaw made pursuant to the provisions of this Act (d): Provided that no byelaw made under this Act by a local authority shall be of any effect if repugnant to the laws of England or to the provisions of this Act (e).

This and the four following sections apply to all urban councils, and also to rural councils to the extent to which they are given powers by the Act for the making of byelaws, or have been invested with such powers by order of the L. G. B., or M. of H. under s. 276. The provisions have also been applied to the purposes of later Acts (see note (b), post, p. 439) under which district councils may make byelaws.

Nature of a byelaw.

(a) A byelaw was defined by Lord RUSSELL, C.J., in Kruse v. Johnson, [1898] 2 Q. B. 91; 62 J. P. 469, to be "an ordinance affecting the public, or some portion of the public, imposed by some authority clothed with statutory powers ordering something to be done or not to be done and accompanied by some sanction or penalty for its non-observance. . . . Further, it involves this consequence—that, if validly made, it has the force of law within the sphere of its legitimate operation."

Note to Section 182.

Requirements in a valid bye-law—

A byelaw to be valid must be (1) intra vires the authority who makes it; (2) certain in its terms and positive; (3) not repugnant to the general law; (4) reasonable.

(1) Must be intra vires.

Byelaws are ultra vires if they impose restrictions or duties not authorised by the statute under which they purport to be made; in every case a byelaw must be so framed that its provisions come within the scope of the particular section under which it is made. In Brown v. Holyhead L. B. (1862), 32 L. J. Ex. 25; 27 J. P. 184, POLLOCK, C.B., said: "Persons empowered to make byelaws have no right to invest themselves with powers which the law will not sanction." In R. v. Wood (1855), 5 El. & Bl. 49, it was held that a byelaw directing all occupiers to remove all snow from the footpath opposite their respective premises was ultra vires of the P. H. A., 1848, s. 55 (in pursuance of which it purported to be made), which provided that the local board might make byelaws with respect to the removal by the occupier of dust, ashes, rubbish, filth, manure, dung and soil, on the ground that the byelaw applied to pure snow which was not included in the provisions of the section. See now, however, s. 44, ante, p. 113. See also Waite v. Garston Board of Health, p. 347, ante; Wood v. Venton (1890), 54 J. P. 662 (byelaw prohibiting all nets even though not injurious to fish); Thames Conservators v. Kent, [1918] 2 K. B. 272; 83 J. P. 85 (byelaws as to towing path).

In Byrne v. Brown (1893), 57 J. P. 741 n, decided under s. 172, ante, p. 395, it was held that the power given by the section to licence the proprietors of pleasure boats and vessels, and the boatmen or other persons in charge thereof, and to make byelaws for regulating the numbering and naming of such boats and vessels, and the number of persons to be carried therein, and the qualification of such boatmen or other persons in charge, did not empower an authority to make a byelaw that proprietors of boats (not themselves acting as boatmen) must take out a licence. In Rossi v. Edinburgh Corporation, [1905] A. C. 21, conditions attached to an ice-cream vendor's licence, virtually equivalent to byelaws, were held to be ultra vires and an unjustifiable interference with the liberty of traders. A general power given to a canal company to make byelaws for the good government of the company, and for the good and orderly use of the navigation, was held not to authorise the making of a byelaw prohibiting Sunday navigation (Calder and Hebble Navigation Co. v. Pilling (1845), 14 M. & W. 76; 14 L. J. Ex. 223). The powers of a public body as to "good rule and government byelaws" would doubtless be construed more liberally. See Thomas v. Sutters, [1900] 1 Ch. 10; 63 J. P. 724. A power to make byelaws as to the distances at which one tramcar may follow another does not justify a byelaw that the directions of the police on duty are to be observed on the point (R. v. Manchester Corporation, [1911] 1 K. B. 560; 75 J. P. 73). Where, in pursuance of the Tramways Act, 1870, s. 46, which enables the promoters of any tramway to make byelaws for the prevention of nuisances in any carriage belonging to them, the promoters made a byelaw providing that "no person shall swear or use offensive or obscene language whilst in or upon any carriage," it was held that the byelaw was not ultra vires merely because it omitted such words as "to the annoyance of passengers" (Gentel v. Rapps, [1902] 1 K. B. 160; 66 J. P. 117). In Rudland v. Mayor of Sunderland, p. 336, ante, a byelaw made under s. 157, ante, p. 327, required that no person should begin to build in a new street unless and until the kerb of each footpath therein should be put in. The byelaw was held to be unreasonable, and HAWKINS, J., expressed the opinion that it was beyond the powers conferred on the local board because the Act did not specify that the building or other work should be done in any given time, whereas the byelaw required the kerb to be done before beginning to build. In Leyton U. D. C. v. Chew, [1907] 2 K. B. 283; 71 J. P. 355, a byelaw made under s. 157, ante, p. 327, required that there should be constructed in certain new streets a proper channel of a given size "either of granite cubes laid on a bed of concrete at least six inches in thickness or otherwise in a suitable manner and with suitable materials." It was contended that the byelaw was bad as being inconsistent with s. 150, ante, p. 286, and ss. 6 and 7 of the Private Street Works Act, 1892, also on the ground that it was uncertain. It was held that it was not invalid on either ground. See also Wandsworth Borough Council v. Baines, [1906] 1 K. B. 470; 70 J. P. 124 (byelaw as to removal of house refuse); Batchelor v. Sturley (1905), 69 J. P. 398; 93 L. T. 539 (litter in streets); and Heiton v. M'Sweeny, [1905] 2 I. R. 47, where it was held that a byelaw imposing on the master the duty of having a lighted lamp attached to a vehicle was not ultra vires, on the ground that it rendered the master criminally responsible for the acts of his servant. The Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892, provided that refreshment and provision shops must not be opened between midnight and 5 a.m., and the Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1903, provided that town councils might make byelaws as to the hours of opening and closing ice-cream shops, but must allow them to be opened at least fifteen hours daily; it was held that a byelaw closing ice-cream shops between 10 p.m. and 7 a.m. was neither ultra vires nor unreasonable (Da Prato v. Partick (Provost of), [1907] A. C. 153). The Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892, s. 300, provided that "when bathing machines are not used, the magistrates shall have power to regulate the places and hours for both sexes bathing"; it was held that a byelaw that "no person shall bathe on or from any part of the seashore within the borough except at such places as may from time to time be appointed by the magistrates," was ultra vires as the statute conferred no power to prohibit bathing (M'Gregor v. Dissellduff (1906), 44 Sc. L. R. 77). See also Moorman v. Tordoff, and other cases as to foreshore byelaws, on pp. 374—375, ante; Friend v. Brehout (1915), 79 J. P. 25; 111 L. T. 832; Onions v. Clarke (1917), 81 J. P. 77; 116 L. T. 335 (byelaws as to fisheries); and Smith v. Great Yarmouth Port Commissioners (1919), 83 J. P. 193 (byelaws as to using fire-arm on bank of river).

In response to a request for their opinion as to whether a district council could make a byelaw for the prevention of spitting in public streets and places, the L. G. B. stated that they were unaware of any provision under which such a council are empowered to deal with the matter. The Board pointed out, however, that byelaws for good rule and government might be made by the council of a borough under the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 23, and that county councils have the same powers under the L. G. A., 1888, s. 16, and suggested that the district council should communicate with the county council as to whether the subject was one which might be dealt with under the powers referred to. See also note to s. 187, p. 445, post.

(2) Must be certain in its terms.

A byelaw must be certain in its terms, so as to make it clear to all whom it concerns what it requires to be done or not to be done by them. In Kruse v. Johnson, [1898] 2 Q. B., at p. 108; 62 J. P. 469, MATHEW, J., said: "From many decisions on the subject it would seem clear that a byelaw to be valid must, among other conditions, have two properties—it must be certain; that is, it must contain adequate information as to the duties of those who are to obey; and it must be reasonable." This proposition was approved by Lord ALVERSTONE, C.J., in Nash v. Finlay (1902), 66 J. P. 183; 85 L. T. 682. In that case a byelaw that "no person shall wilfully annoy passengers in the streets" was held void for uncertainty on the ground that there were other byelaws dealing with specific nuisances, and this particular byelaw did not give adequate information of what it intended to prohibit. See also Russon v. Dutton (1911), 75 J. P. 209; 104 L. T. 599. In Scott v. Pilliner, [1904] 2 K. B. 855; 68 J. P. 518, where a county council made a byelaw that "No person shall frequent and use any street or other public place, either on behalf of himself or of any other person, for the purpose of selling or distributing any paper or written or printed matter devoted wholly or mainly to giving information as to the probable result of races, steeplechases, or other competitions," Lord ALVERSTONE, C.J., said: "It seems to me that the main objection to this byelaw is that it is too wide, and that it would include cases where the sale of the paper was not in aid of street betting or of any betting at all. . . . Therefore, both on the ground of uncertainty, and mainly on the ground that it may strike at perfectly innocent sales of papers, I think that this byelaw is bad and cannot be supported." See also Foster v. Moore (1880), 4 L. R. Ir. 670; Treasure v. Bermondsey Borough Council (1904), 68 J. P. 206; 2 L. G. R. 488. In Blackpool L. B. v. Bennett (1859), 28 L. J. M. C. 203; 7 W. R. 382, a byelaw that "the several places in the district where painted boards shall from time to time be placed . . . shall be the stand for such number of carriages, etc., as shall be mentioned on such boards; and no driver . . . shall ply for hire . . . except on one of such stands," was held to be of sufficient certainty. See also Slee v. Meadows (1911), 75 J. P. 246; 105 L. T. 127; Leyton U. D. C. v. Chew, ante, p. 433. The penalty attached to the breach of a byelaw must also be certain, though the fixing of a maximum penalty with a power of mitigation will not make it bad for uncertainty (Piper v. Chappell (1845), 14 M. & W. 624; 9 Jur. 601). By s. 183, post, p. 440, "byelaws imposing any penalty shall be so framed as to allow of the recovery of any sum less than the full amount of the penalty."

Note to Section 182.

(3) Must not be repugnant to the general law.

Byelaws in general may not be repugnant to the laws of the land (5 Co. Rep. 63 a), and in the text it is expressly declared that "no byelaw made under this Act by a local authority shall be of any effect if repugnant to the laws of England or to the provisions of this Act." In Gentel v. Rapps, [1902] 1 K. B. 160, at p. 166; 66 J. P. 117, CHANNELL, J., said: "A byelaw is not repugnant to the general law, merely because it creates a new offence, and says that something shall be unlawful which the law does not say is unlawful. It is repugnant if it makes unlawful that which the general law says is lawful. It is repugnant if it expressly or by necessary implication proposes to alter the general law of the land . . . Again, a byelaw is repugnant if it adds something inconsistent with the provisions of a statute creating the same offence; but if it adds something not inconsistent, that is not sufficient to make the byelaw bad as repugnant." See also hereon L. & B. Rail. Co. v. Watson (1878), 3 C. P. D. 429. In their Circular Letter of July, 1877, the L. G. B. remark that "it must always be remembered that byelaws are designed to supplement, and not to vary or supersede the express provisions of the statute law. In the Public Health Act, 1875, and in the incorporated clauses, the subjects of byelaws may sometimes appear identical with those of specific enactments. But, in all such cases, a closer examination will show that the subjects are not really identical. And, however difficult it may be to detect the points of difference in a few exceptional instances, a safe rule may be deduced from the obvious considerations that a byelaw which merely repeats a statutory enactment is, to that extent, surplusage; and that a byelaw which aims at altering or amending such an enactment is rendered invalid by the proviso in s. 182." "A byelaw must necessarily add something to the common law, otherwise it would be idle" (R. v. Sadlers' Co. (1855), 3 El. & El. 42; 2 L. T. 503: per MARTIN, J.; and see further on this subject, Edmonds v. Watermen's Co. (1855), 24 L. J. M. C. 124; 1 Jur. 727; Dearden v. Townsend (1865), L. R. 1 Q. B. 10; Bentham v. Hoyle (1870), 3 Q. B. D. 289; Purvis v. Wimbledon Common Conservators (1890), 62 L. T. 529; Onions v. Clarke (1917), 81 J. P. 77; 116 L. T. 335).

Where a statute imposes a penalty for a certain offence, that penalty cannot be increased by a byelaw (Calder and Hebble Navigation Co. v. Pilling (1845), 14 M. & W. 76; 14 L. J. Ex. 223). But a byelaw may be more stringent than the statute and yet not repugnant: see Thomas v. Sutters, [1900] 1 Ch. 10; 63 J. P. 724; Batchelor v. Sturley (1905), 69 J. P. 398; 93 L. T. 539; Leyton U. D. C. v. Chew, p. 433, ante. In Strickland v. Hayes, [1896] 1 Q. B. 290; 60 J. P. 164, it was held that a byelaw was invalid which provided that "no person shall in any street or public place, or on land adjacent thereto, sing or recite any profane or obscene song or ballad or use any profane or obscene language." The ground of the decision seems to have been that the Town Police Clauses Act, 1847, creates a similar offence, but provides that there must be annoyance to residents or passengers. The byelaw did not require that the offence should be committed so as to cause annoyance to other people, and LINDLEY, L.J., said: "I doubt whether it is competent for the county council to make a byelaw in such wide terms." In Thomas v. Sutters, supra, this decision was explained by LINDLEY, L.J., [1900] 1 Ch., at p. 14. In this case a byelaw made by the London County Council dealing with betting in streets, went further than the Metropolitan Streets Act, 1867, s. 23, which dealt with the same matter, but was held to be valid on the ground that the Metropolitan Streets Act only dealt with the matter with a view to prevent obstruction, whereas the byelaw was made by the county council under their powers to make byelaws for the good rule and government of the county. And see Hickey v. Hay (1900), 65 J. P. 232. Some doubt was thrown on the correctness of the decision in Strickland v. Hayes, in the later case of Gentel v. Rapps, supra. See also White v. Morley, [1899] 2 Q. B. 34; 63 J. P. 550; Burnett v. Berry (No. 1), [1896] 1 Q. B.

Note to Section 182.

641 ; 60 J. P. 375 ; Kruse v. Johnson, [1898] 2 Q. B. 91 ; 62 J. P. 469. In Collman v. Mills, [1897] 1 Q. B. 396 ; 61 J. P. 102, it was held that a byelaw making it an offence for the licensed occupier of a slaughter-house to slaughter sheep in the pound of the slaughter-house, or in view of other sheep, was valid, and that under it the occupier would be guilty if an offence was committed by his servant within the general scope of his employment, although contrary to the orders of his master. See also Heiton v. M'Sweeny, p. 434, ante.

(4) Must be reasonable.

A byelaw must be reasonable. Prior to the year 1898 it was almost impossible to deduce from the decisions of the courts a principle or definite standard by which the reasonableness or unreasonableness of byelaws might be tested. In that year, however, the matter came up for consideration in Kruse v. Johnson, ante, p. 432, and the law was placed on a more satisfactory footing. The case was argued before a specially constituted court of seven judges, six of whom concurred in upholding the byelaw then in question, which prohibited any person from playing music or singing within fifty yards of any dwelling-house after being requested by a constable or inmate to desist. It was objected that the byelaw was unreasonable, because it was not confined to acts causing an annoyance or nuisance ; and the court considered de novo the whole question of reasonableness or unreasonableness, and the test to be applied. In the first place a distinction was drawn between byelaws made by bodies of a public representative character and those made by railway or dock companies, and other corporations of a similar character carrying on business for their own profit, though incidentally for the public benefit. "In this class of case it is right that the courts should jealously watch the exercise of these powers, and guard against their unnecessary or unreasonable exercise to the public disadvantage. But when the court is called upon to consider the byelaws of public representative bodies, clothed with the ample authority which I have described, and exercising that authority accompanied by the checks and safeguards which have been mentioned, I think the consideration of such byelaws ought to be approached from a different standpoint. They ought to be supported if possible. They ought to be, as has been said, 'benevolently' interpreted, and credit ought to be given to those who have to administer them, that they will be reasonably administered. . . . I do not mean to say that there may not be cases in which it would be the duty of the court to condemn byelaws, made under such authority as these were made, as invalid because unreasonable. But unreasonable in what sense ? If, for instance, they were found to be partial and unequal in their operation as between different classes (as to this, see pp. 437, 438, post) ; if they were manifestly unjust ; if they disclosed bad faith ; if they involved such oppressive or gratuitous interference with the rights of those subject to them as could find no justification in the minds of reasonable men, the court might well say 'Parliament never intended to give authority to make such rules ; they are unreasonable and ultra vires.' But it is in this sense, and in this sense only, as I conceive, that the question of unreasonableness can properly be regarded ; a byelaw is not unreasonable merely because particular judges may think that it goes further than is prudent or necessary or convenient, or because it is not accompanied by a qualification or an exception which some judges may think ought to be there. Surely it is not too much to say that in matters which directly and mainly concern the people of the county, who have the right to choose those whom they think best fitted to represent them in their local government bodies, such representatives may be trusted to understand their own requirements better than judges" (per Lord RUSSELL, C.J., [1898] 2 Q. B. 99, 100. See also Walker v. Stretton (1896), 60 J. P. 313 ; 44 W. R. 425 ; Clayton v. Peirse, [1904] 1 K. B. 424 ; 68 J. P. 233 ; Slattery v. Naylor (1888), 13 App. Cas. 446 ; Tuffley v. Tate (1907), 71 J. P. 21 ; 96 L. T. 24 ; Onions v. Clarke (1917), 81 J. P. 77 ; 116 L. T. 335 ; and the various cases cited in Kruse v. Johnson, supra). In White v. Morley, [1899] 2 Q. B. 34 ; 63 J. P. 550, the principle laid down in Kruse v. Johnson, supra, was explained as being that "where a thing is of such a character as that it can be a nuisance, it is to rest with the local authority to say whether it shall be considered to be a nuisance in the particular locality for which they have power to make byelaws. The court can say whether it is reasonably possible for the prohibited act or thing to be a nuisance, but they cannot say it should or should not be forbidden in the particular locality." Byelaws have been held to be unreasonable in the following cases. In Parker v. Bournemouth

Note to Section 182.

Corporation (1902), 66 J. P. 440; 86 L. T. 449, the corporation had made a byelaw prohibiting any person from selling or hawking articles on the foreshore "except in pursuance of an agreement with the corporation"; the byelaw was considered unreasonable, because under it the corporation could make any agreement they chose without question, and could arbitrarily refuse a licence to any particular individual. Pelham v. Littlehampton U. D. C. (1899), 63 J. P. 88, was a somewhat analogous case, though not, strictly speaking, one of an unreasonable byelaw: the council had made byelaws as to the licensing and regulation of bathing machines, and they attached a condition to the licences granted to the proprietors of such machines providing for their revocation "at any time": the byelaws did not authorise the imposition of such a condition, and GRANTHAM, J., held that it was unreasonable that a man's licence should be liable to such arbitrary revocation, and he restrained the council from revoking the licence of a person who had exhibited advertisements on his machine contrary to a regulation made after the grant of his licence. Cf. with these cases, Williams v. Weston-super-Mare U. D. C. (No. 1) (1907), 72 J. P. 54; 98 L. T. 537; (No. 2) (1910), 74 J. P. 370; 103 L. T. 9; Moorman v. Tordoff (1908), 72 J. P. 142; 98 L. T. 416, and other cases on p. 374, ante. See also Cook v. Hainsworth, [1896] 2 Q. B. 85, as to the unreasonableness of a power to reject plans arbitrarily, unless a right of appeal be given, and see Repton School Governors v. Repton R. D. C., [1918] 2 K. B. 133; 82 J. P. 257, where a byelaw requiring an open space at the rear of a new building was held to be unreasonable where such new building consisted of an addition to an existing building. In Scott v. Pilliner, [1904] 2 K. B. 855; 68 J. P. 518, a byelaw that "no person shall frequent and use any street or public place, either on behalf of himself or of any other person, for the purpose of selling or distributing any paper or written or printed matter devoted wholly or mainly to giving information as to the probable result of races, steeplechases, or other competitions" was held unreasonable as being wide enough to cover the sale of papers in general giving information which it was perfectly legal to give (cf. Enniscorthy U. D. C. v. Field, [1904] 2 I. R. 518). A byelaw imposing a penalty if a cart was so loaded that manure fell from it was held reasonable in Ronaldson v. Williamson, [1911] S. C. (J.) 102.

In Nokes and Nokes v. Islington Borough Council (No. 1), [1904] 1 K. B. 610; 68 J. P. 95; Stiles v. Galinski; Nokes and Nokes v. Islington Borough Council (No. 2), [1904] 1 K. B. 615; 68 J. P. 183, it was held that byelaws dealing with the sanitation and cleansing of common lodging houses were invalid on the ground that they imposed liability on landlords who might have no knowledge of any infringement, yet contained no provision for giving previous notice to them that the resident tenants or "keepers" had failed to comply with the byelaws.

In Elwood v. Bullock (1844), 6 Q. B. 383; Shaw v. Pope (1831), 2 B. & Ad. 465, it was held that byelaws in restraint of trade were unreasonable. So in Toronto Corporation v. Virgo, [1896] A. C. 88, it was held that a statutory power conferred upon a municipal council to make byelaws for regulating and governing a trade does not, in the absence of an express power of prohibition, authorise the making it unlawful to carry on a lawful trade in a lawful manner: see also Lloyd v. Ross, [1913] 2 K. B. 332; 77 J. P. 341, and Sutton Harbour Improvement Co. v. Foster (1920), 84 J. P. 57; 18 L. G. R. 232. In Rossi v. Edinburgh Corporation, [1905] A. C. 21, conditions attached to an ice-cream vendor's licence were held to be ultra vires and an unjustifiable interference with the liberty of traders. See also Wortley v. Nottingham L. B. (1870), 21 L. T. 582. But byelaws in partial restraint of trade may be reasonable, and were so held in Gray v. Sylvester (1897), 61 J. P. 807; 46 W. R. 63, where hawking was prohibited except by direction of the council, or on such part of the foreshore as might be appointed; in Strike v. Collins (1886), 50 J. P. 741; 55 L. T. 182, where separate places were set aside for wholesale and retail trading; and in Scott v. Glasgow Corporation, [1899] A. C. 470, where a byelaw provided that sale rings at a public market should not be used for private sales, or sales to any limited number of persons, or for sales in which any class of the public are excluded from bidding or buying. See also Savage v. Brook (1863), 15 C. B. (N.S.) 264; 33 L. J. M. C. 42; Collins v. Wells Corporation (1885), 1 T. L. R. 328; Bodwic v. Fennell (1742), 1 Wils. 233; Hesketh v. Braddock (1776), 3 Burr. 1847; Clark v. Le Cren (1829), 9 B. & C. 52; Shaw v. Poynter (1834), 2 A. & E. 312; Att.-Gen. for Ontario v. Att.-Gen. for Canada, [1896] A. C. 348; Da Prato and Others

v. Provost, etc. of Partick, ante, p. 434; Williams v. Weston-super-Mare, and other cases on pp. 374, 375, ante.

In Arlidge v. Islington Borough Council, [1909] 2 K. B. 127; 73 J. P. 301, a byelaw was held to be unreasonable which required a landlord to do something on premises which he might not be able to enter without committing a trespass or breach of contract. Cf. also Scarborough Corporation v. Scarborough R. S. A. (1876), 1 Ex. D. 344, and London C. C. v. Brass (1902), 17 T. L. R. 504. In South-end Corporation v. Davis (1900), 16 T. L. R. 167, a byelaw provided that "no organ or other musical instrument worked by steam or other mechanical means, nor any steam whistle or steam horn, shall be used within the borough, provided always that this byelaw shall not apply to any locomotive or steam engine in use on any railway . . . nor to any steam whistle or steam trumpet within the meaning of the Factories (Steam Whistles) Act, 1872." CHANNELL, J., expressed the opinion that "it was unfortunate that the proviso in favour of whistles on locomotives had not been extended to small mechanical instruments in private houses. But the omission to make such a proviso did not render the byelaw unreasonable." In Salt v. Scott-Hall, [1903] 2 K. B. 245; 67 J. P. 306, a stringent building byelaw made by a rural authority was held not to be unreasonable because it reserved no discretion to the authority in exceptional cases, on the ground that upon a summons for a breach of the byelaws the justices had a discretion under the S. J. A., 1879, s. 16, to dismiss a summons in an exceptional case.

See Mitcham Common Conservators v. Cox, [1911] 2 K. B. 854; 75 J. P. 471; for a case where regulations as to golf on a common, though made under approved byelaws, were held to be invalid as giving a preference to members of a particular club or residents in a particular parish, and Harris v. Harrison (1914), 78 J. P. 398; 30 T. L. R. 532, a later case as to the same common.

A byelaw may be divisible.

A byelaw, though unreasonable in one part, may be upheld as to the rest, if it can be divided into separate and distinct parts (Strickland v. Hayes, [1896] 1 Q. B. 290; 60 J. P. 164; and see R. v. Faversham Fishermen's Co. (1799), 8 T. R. 352; R. v. Lundie (1862), 31 L. J. M. C. 157; 5 L. T. 830; Reay v. Gateshead Corporation (1886), 50 J. P. 821; 55 L. T. 92, per HAWKINS, J.).

Waiver and relaxation of byelaws.

Byelaws cannot be waived by the local authority unless the byelaws themselves give the authority a dispensing power or discretion. See Baxter v. Bedford (1885), 1 T. L. R. 424; R. v. Newcastle-upon-Tyne (Mayor of) (1889), 53 J. P. 788; 60 L. T. 963; In re McIntosh and Pontypridd Improvement Commissioners (1892), 61 L. J. Q. B. 164; affirmed (1892), 8 T. L. R. 203. A local authority empowered to make byelaws has no power to sanction a contravention of byelaws properly so made; and therefore the approval by an authority of building plans which contravene the byelaws made by that authority is illegal and inoperative (Yabbicom v. King, [1899] 1 Q. B. 444; 63 J. P. 149). See also p. 329, ante. The presence of a discretionary clause does not render valid a byelaw which is for some reason invalid (Waite v. Garston Board of Health (1867), L. R. 3 Q. B. 5; 32 J. P. 228).

In Salt v. Scott-Hall, supra, CHANNELL, J., expressed the opinion that all byelaws as to buildings ought to have in them something giving someone power to say that their hard and fast rules should not apply to particular cases. It was, however, contrary to the practice of the L. G. B. to confirm byelaws reserving to a district council or their officers any discretionary power to modify the requirements of the byelaws to suit particular circumstances. The Board stated that, in their opinion, byelaws which are enforceable by penalties should be framed in such a way as to prescribe definite requirements as far as practicable for every particular state of circumstances to which the byelaws are intended to apply. See also the Board's Circular of July 25th, 1877, quoted on p. 439, post. The Board also stated that they were aware of the observations of the court in the case of Salt v. Scott-Hall, but although there might be individual cases in which a dispensing power might occasionally be considered useful, they felt that the reservation to local authorities of a general power of relaxing the provisions of their byelaws at will, would inevitably lead to difficulties more serious than those which the absence of such power produced. See also p. 329, ante.

A council are not compelled, the Board stated, to take proceedings in a case which they have reason to think comes within the Probation of Offenders Act, 1907,

s. 1, and is likely on that account to be dismissed by the justices. See also note (e) below. Note to Section 182.

See now ss. 24, 25 of the Housing, etc. Act, 1919, and the Regulations made thereunder dated Nov. 12th, 1920, authorising the temporary relaxation of building byelaws and byelaws relating to the laying out and construction of new streets.

Byelaws of a local authority are to be construed "benevolently" (Kruse v. Johnson, ante, p. 432); and where a byelaw is capable of two constructions, one of which will make it valid, and the other invalid, it ought to receive that interpretation which will support it (R. v. Saddlers' Co. (1863), 32 L. J. Q. B. 337, per Lord WENSLEYDALE; Dearden v. Townsend (1865), L. R. 1 Q. B. 10; Leyton U. D. C. v. Chew, p. 433, ante; and see Vintners' Co. v. Passey (1757), 1 Burr. 235; Edmonds v. Watermen's Co. (1865), 24 L. J. M. C. 124; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 727). Where a byelaw, and the Act under which it is made, are inconsistent, the former must give way; but, if possible, the byelaw must be so interpreted as to reconcile it with the terms of the Act (Ex parte Davis (1872), L. R. 7 Ch. 526; Irving v. Askew (1870), L. R. 5 Q. B. 208). Expressions used in byelaws have the same meaning as in the Act under which they are made (Interpretation Act, 1889, s. 31; and see Blashill v. Chambers (1884), 14 Q. B. D. 479; 49 J. P. 388). Construction of byelaws.

(b) Byelaws are made under ss. 44, 80, 90, 113, 141, 157, 164, 167, 169, 171, 172, 314 of this Act, and also under many other Acts. The following are the principal public general statutes under which byelaws are required to be confirmed or allowed by the M. of H.: The Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847, s. 42; the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, s. 128; the Town Police Clauses Acts, 1847, ss. 68, 69, and 1889, ss. 2, 6; the Baths and Washhouses Acts, 1846, s. 34, and 1878, s. 6; the L. G. A., 1861, s. 21; re-enacted in Sched. V., post; the Public Health (Interments) Act, 1879, s. 2; the Public Health (Fruit Pickers) Act, 1882, s. 2; the Housing of the Working Classes Act, 1885, s. 9 (2), and 1890, s. 62; the P. H. A., 1890, ss. 20, 23, 26, 38, 40, 44, etc.; the Commons Act, 1899, s. 1; the Factory and Workshop Act, 1901, s. 15; the Open Spaces Act, 1906, s. 15; and the P. H. A., 1907, ss. 24, 51 and 92. And see the Contagious Diseases (Animals) Act, 1886, s. 9, post. Byelaws may also be made under other Acts, but such byelaws are not governed by the above section, see e.g., the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, s. 214, and the Advertisements Regulation Act, 1907, s. 2. The M. of H. are not the confirming authority as to byelaws made under the P. H. A., 1890, s. 13, or under the P. H. A., 1907, Part VII. Powers of making byelaws.

(c) It will be remembered that all local authorities are now incorporated, and consequently have a common seal. No signature of the members is required, but the affixing of the common seal should be attested by the clerk or a member, and should be done in pursuance of a resolution entered on the minutes. Sealing.

(d) Where byelaws repealing previous byelaws contained a proviso that such repeal should not affect anything duly done or suffered under the repealed byelaws, it was held that buildings might be erected in accordance with plans approved under the old byelaws although not conforming to the requirements of the new byelaws (Withington U. D. C. v. Moore (1896), 60 J. P. 408). See however, hereon, White v. Sunderland (Mayor, etc. of); Harrogate Corporation v. Dickinson, cited at p. 351, ante. Effect of repealing byelaws.

Where byelaws have been made in pursuance of powers conferred by statute, and the statute is afterwards repealed, the byelaws thereupon cease to have any validity unless they are dealt with by a saving clause (Watson v. Winch (1916), 80 J. P. 149; 14 L. G. R. 486).

See s. 315, post, which repeals previous inconsistent byelaws, and s. 326, post, which continues all byelaws previously duly made under any of the Sanitary Acts.

(e) As to "repugnancy," see note (a) on p. 435, ante. Repugnancy.

In regard to this proviso the L. G. B., in their Circular Letter of July 25th, 1877, already referred to, made the following observations:

"From this enactment several important rules may be deduced. A byelaw to be in harmony with the laws of England must be certain and determinate, and likewise reasonable, and hence arises the necessity for the use of certain and definite language in prescribing rules which are destined to have, locally, the binding effect of a statute.

Note to Section 182.

"The Board have, from time to time, had occasion to point out to sanitary authorities that the assumption in their byelaws of the power of suspending the operation of particular provisions in individual cases is open to much objection. Frequently the conditions under which this power may be exercised have been left undetermined in the byelaws; and the result is to impart a general uncertainty to provisions of which the precise scope should be clearly defined. Again, the Board have been called upon to criticise byelaws which, while purporting to lay down rules enforceable by penalties, ignore the necessary details and substitute vague conditions which render compliance with the byelaws dependent upon the approval, by the sanitary authority or their officers, of the mode of proceeding in each case. Such byelaws also are open to objection on the ground of uncertainty, and they do not fulfil the purpose for which the power of making byelaws was conferred upon sanitary authorities. The Board think that every person who, by neglect of the rules which a byelaw is intended to prescribe, may be rendered liable to a penalty is entitled to demand from those who impose such rules a clear statement of the course of action which must be followed or avoided.

"Further, a byelaw must be reasonable. The exercise of the power which the legislature has confided to sanitary authorities must frequently bring them into contact with important interests. Within certain limits, they may regulate the conduct of persons employed in certain specified callings. They may impose restrictions upon the enjoyment of individual rights and privileges. Trade and property may, under certain conditions, be affected by their action. These considerations point to the necessity for prudence and deliberation in the choice of byelaws, so that the duties and restraints which they create may not interfere oppressively with individual freedom of action.

"A byelaw under the Public Health Act, 1875, will also be invalid if it be repugnant to the provisions of that Act. Parliament has specified a variety of purposes for which byelaws may be made. For those purposes alone are byelaws authorised; and, as the Court of Queen's Bench decided in the case of R. v. Wood (1855), 5 El. & Bl. 49; S. C. nom. R. v. Rose, 24 L. J. M. C. 130; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 802 (the case of Byrne v. Brown (1893), 57 J. P. 741, may also be referred to), sanitary authorities cannot legally assume the power of making byelaws for carrying out the general objects of the Act. It follows, therefore, that every byelaw must be strictly limited with reference to the terms of the specific enactment from which its force is derived. Any attempt, by the strained construction of any such enactment, to extend the range of a byelaw should especially be avoided. But, while it is of primary importance in framing a byelaw to consider closely the language of the statutory provision which declares its purpose, the exact meaning of that language can never be safely determined without careful comparison of other enactments relating to the same or to kindred topics."

Similar provisoes are contained in the Companies Clauses Act, 1845, s. 125; the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847, s. 42; the Commissioners Clauses Act, 1847, s. 96; the Piers and Harbours Clauses Act, 1847, s. 83; the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, s. 200; and the Tramways Act, 1870, s. 46.

Power to impose penalties on breach of byelaws.

183. Any local authority may, by any byelaws made by them under this Act, impose on offenders against the same such reasonable penalties as they think fit, not exceeding the sum of five pounds for each offence, and in the case of a continuing offence (a) a further penalty not exceeding forty shillings for each day after written notice of the offence from the local authority; but all such byelaws imposing any penalty shall be so framed as to allow of the recovery of any sum less than the full amount of the penalty (b).

Nothing in the provisions of any Act incorporated herewith shall authorise the imposition or recovery under any byelaw made in pursuance of such provisions of any greater penalty than the penalties in this section specified.

Note to Section 183.

See first note to s. 182 as to the application of these provisions to rural district councils.

This and the three following sections have been applied to byelaws made by a parish council under s. 8 (1) (d) of the L. G. A., 1894.

Continuing offences.

(a) For examples of continuing offences in the case of buildings, see the notes to s. 158, ante, p. 357. It does not appear when notice of the offence can be given, but probably it can be given without waiting for a conviction for the original offence: see London C. C. v. Worley, ante, p. 360. A conviction for the original offence is apparently not a sine quâ non to a conviction for the continuing offence (ibid.).

Recovery of penalties.

(b) "Without any express power, a penalty may by the common law be attached to a byelaw which there is power to make" (5 Co. Rep. 63 a; 2 Kyd on Corporations: per LUSH, J., in Hall v. Nixon (1875), L. R. 10 Q. B. 152; 39 J. P. 341). The authority should fix the precise penalty for the breach of the byelaw, limited by the amount in the text, providing, however, that the same may be reduced by the justices or court in which it is sued for. To some extent the necessity for such a provision no longer exists: see S. J. A., 1879, s. 4.

As a general rule any person may lay an information and prosecute in respect of breaches of byelaws made in the public interest (see note to s. 253, post, p. 560). Section 253, post, p. 559, however, restricts the right to take proceedings for the recovery of any penalty "under this Act"; and apart from recent legislation to be noticed presently, it is submitted that these words are wide enough to include penalties for the breach of any byelaw made under the Act (or under any later Act directed to be read with it; see Canada Southern Rail. Co. v. International Bridge Co. (1883), 8 App. Cas., at p. 727; Charing Cross, etc. Electricity Supply Co. v. London Hydraulic Co. (1914), 3 K. B. 772; 78 J. P. 305, for it has been held that an order made under a power given in a statute, is the same thing as if the statute enacted what the order directs or forbids (R. v. Walker (1875), L. R. 10 Q. B. 355); that a company incorporated under a charter authorised by an Act must be regarded as being incorporated under the Act itself (Elve v. Boyton, [1891] 1 Ch. 501); and that a light railway constructed under an order made under an Act must be regarded as having been constructed under the powers of an Act (Wakefield and District Light Rail. Co. v. Wakefield Corporation, [1907] 2 K. B. 256; 71 J. P. 254; affirmed, [1908] A. C. 293; 72 J. P. 315: see also Willingale v. Norris, [1908] 1 K. B. 57; 72 J. P. 495). It is now, however, expressly provided by the P. H. A., 1907, s. 6, that any "offences under this Act or under any byelaw made under the powers of this Act or under the powers of the Public Health Act, 1875, or any enactment amending or extending that Act, may be prosecuted, and penalties, forfeitures, costs, and expenses recovered, in like manner and subject to the same provisions as offences which may be prosecuted, and penalties, forfeitures, costs, and expenses which may be recovered, in a summary manner under the Public Health Acts."

Where a liability not existing at common law is created by a statute which at the same time gives a special and particular remedy for enforcing it, the remedy provided by the statute must generally speaking be followed to the exclusion of any other. Where, however, a breach of a byelaw constitutes an interference with the rights of the public, an injunction may be granted to protect those rights, notwithstanding the existence of the summary remedy; but the Attorney-General is a necessary party to such an action. See Devonport Corporation v. Tozer, [1903] 1 Ch. 759; 67 J. P. 269; Att.-Gen. v. Ashbourne Recreation Ground Co., [1903] 1 Ch. 101; 67 J. P. 73; Att.-Gen. v. Wimbledon House Estate Co., Limited, [1904] 2 Ch. 34; 68 J. P. 341; Att.-Gen. v. Dorin, [1912] 1 Ch. 369; 76 J. P. 181.

Confirmation of byelaws.

184. Byelaws made by a local authority under this Act shall not take effect unless and until they have been submitted to and confirmed by the Local Government Board, which Board is hereby empowered to allow or disallow the same as it may think proper (a); nor shall any such byelaws be confirmed—

Unless notice of intention to apply for confirmation of the same has been given in one or more of the local newspapers circulated within the district to which such byelaws relate, one month at least before the making of such application (b) ; and

Unless for one month at least before any such application a copy of the proposed byelaws has been kept at the office of the local authority, and has been open during office hours thereat to the inspection of the ratepayers of the district to which such byelaws relate, without fee or reward (c).

The clerk of the local authority shall, on the application of any such ratepayer (d), furnish him with a copy of such proposed byelaws or any part thereof, on payment of sixpence for every hundred words contained in such copy (e).

A byelaw required to be confirmed by the Local Government Board shall not require confirmation allowance or approval by any other authority (f).

See first notes to ss. 182 and 183 as to the application of these provisions to rural district councils and parish councils.

(a) See circular letter of the L. G. B. in note (e) to s. 182. The Ministry of Health give full consideration to the legality as well as the policy of the byelaws, so as to satisfy themselves on both points ; but, of course, they cannot guarantee the former.

Notices and rules issued under duly confirmed byelaws, e.g., fixing cabstands, allocating sites for preaching, etc., need not necessarily be approved by the M. of H. (Blackpool L. B. v. Bennett, ante, p. 434 ; Slee v. Meadows, p. 375, ante ; Mitcham Common Conservators v. Cox, [1911] 2 K. B. 854 ; 75 J. P. 471).

Preparation of byelaws.

For the guidance of local authorities who propose to make byelaws or regulations under the Act (i.e., such regulations as are in the nature of byelaws and require approval, see e.g., s. 125), the M. of H. issue Memoranda which should be obtained and carefully studied.

The L. G. B. issued a memorandum as follows :—

"1. Byelaws or regulations proposed to be made by a local authority should, for facilitating their consideration, be submitted to the Local Government Board in draft in the first instance. It is desirable that the formal adoption of the byelaws or regulations, or the giving of any public notice required by statute, should be deferred until the draft has been provisionally approved. Prints in draft form on paper of foolscap size with margin for notes can be obtained from the Board in the case of all the model series, and it is requested that these may be used in submitting the draft. Where there is no model series, the draft of any proposed byelaws should have a half-margin for notes.

"2. Minor alterations of the model clauses may conveniently be shown in the margin of the model forms, but any clauses proposed in addition to or in substitution for those of any model series should be inserted in the draft on separate sheets of paper with half-margin.

"3. Drafts of byelaws or regulations made under local Act provisions should be accompanied by a copy of the local Act, and a reference should be given to the provisions of it which bear upon the subject of the proposed byelaws or regulations.

"4. It will be convenient and will expedite examination and consideration if the drafts are submitted in duplicate.

"5. Copies in octavo of model byelaws (with certain exceptions) are on sale and can be obtained from Messrs. Wyman & Sons, Fetter Lane, London, E.C., either directly or through any bookseller. Draft forms can only be obtained from the Board.

"6. Where a model for byelaws and regulations authorised by the Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1890, has not been issued, some of the local government publishers have published series of model clauses (both in 8vo. and draft form) for the purposes of that Act, and these might be of assistance to the council in framing byelaws or regulations thereunder. The publishers' prints in draft form should be used in accordance with the instructions in paragraphs 1 and 2 above, where any byelaws based on the publishers' models are proposed to be adopted."

Note to Section 184.

The Board also issued the following further Memorandum as to the steps requisite to obtain confirmation of byelaws or regulations when a draft has been finally approved:

"1. Any byelaws or regulations forwarded to the Local Government Board for confirmation should be in print. Care should be taken that the print agrees with the draft approved by the Board, before being formally adopted by the council, as it is desirable that no written alterations should appear in the print. If any written corrections in the print are unavoidable they should be initialled by the person or persons who attest the sealing of the byelaws or regulations.

"2. The byelaws or regulations should be under the common seal of the corporation or council as the case may be. The sealing should be properly attested, and the actual date of the sealing should be inserted in the attestation.

"3. Ample space should be left at the end of the byelaws or regulations for the Board's seal and certificate of confirmation. Two or more series of byelaws or regulations relating to different matters should be separately adopted and sealed.

"4. Before application for confirmation is made, not less than one calendar month's notice of the intention to apply must be given in at least one local newspaper circulating in the borough or district. In this notice the subject of the byelaws may be described in general terms, e.g., "with respect to nuisances" or "with respect to new streets and buildings" or "with respect to new buildings and certain matters in connection with buildings," care being taken that the description covers the whole of the byelaws. If the subjects of the several byelaws or regulations are described in detail, or if reference is made to the Act or Acts under which the byelaws or regulations are made, such description or reference should be complete and accurate. It is desirable that the notice of intention to apply for confirmation should be extended so as to give notice of the deposit referred to in paragraph 5 of this Memorandum, and that the place and commencement of the month of deposit should be clearly indicated.

"5. For a full calendar month after the date of the publication of the newspaper containing the notice, a copy of the byelaws or regulations must be deposited at the office of the council, for the inspection of the ratepayers.

"6. It is essential that the copy of the byelaws or regulations so deposited should be correct, as the correction of any errors or omissions of a material character may render necessary a fresh compliance with the preliminary requirements of section 184 of the Public Health Act, 1875, before confirmation can be given. If it is thought desirable, the draft approved by the Board may also be deposited.

"7. Having regard to the terms of section 184 of the Public Health Act, 1875, the application for confirmation should be in specific terms, and the Board should be definitely informed that a copy of the byelaws or regulations as submitted for confirmation has been deposited for inspection for a full calendar month subsequent to the date of publication of the newspaper, or subsequent to the first day of the deposit where a particular day is notified for the commencement of the deposit. When the approved draft has also been deposited this should be stated.

"8. The application for confirmation, which should not be made until the month of deposit has expired, should be accompanied by—

"(a) The draft revised by the Board:

"(b) The sealed byelaws or regulations: and

"(c) A copy of the newspaper containing the notice of intention to apply for confirmation, with the advertisement clearly marked therein. If the notice was published more than once, the newspaper in which it first appeared should be sent."

Model byelaws.

Model Byelaws are issued by the Ministry of Health dealing with a great variety of matters, and as regards subjects upon which no model has been prepared the officers of the Department are always willing to assist by furnishing a specimen series and criticizing a draft.

(b) This refers to the formal application for confirmation.

(c) These provisions will enable any person to apply to the Ministry with the view of preventing the confirmation of any byelaw.

(d) It is presumed that any person who is actually rated to the current rate would be a ratepayer within the meaning of this section, and that the definition in

Note to Section 184.

Sched. II., r. 11, post, is not applicable. But whether persons occupying rateable property who are not actually rated would be within the section is doubtful.

(e) The neglect of this regulation would not, it seems, invalidate the byelaws.

Effect of confirmation.

(f) Confirmation by the M. of H. gives no validity to a byelaw not warranted by the provisions of the Act (R. v. Wood, ante, p. 440; Elwood v. Bullock (1844), 6 Q. B. 383; Kruse v. Johnson, ante, p. 432). Many byelaws confirmed under the previous Acts have been held by the courts to be invalid. The cases in which byelaws have been held invalid will be found under the several sections by virtue of which byelaws have been made. In so far as it was necessary to refer to them as establishing general principles they will also be found in the note under s. 182, ante, p. 432, dealing with the characteristics of a valid byelaw. See also the cases collected in the same note as to byelaws in restraint of trade on p. 437, ante.

As to the confirmation of byelaws made under Acts incorporated with this Act (10 & 11 Vict. c. 34, s. 128; 10 & 11 Vict. c. 89, ss. 68, 69; 10 & 11 Vict. c. 14, s. 42) see the Public Health (Confirmation of Byelaws) Act, 1884, post.

Byelaws to be printed, etc.

185. All byelaws made by a local authority under this Act, or for purposes the same as or similar to those of this Act under any local Act, shall be printed and hung up in the office of such authority (a); and a copy thereof shall be delivered to any ratepayer (b) of the district to which such byelaws relate, on his application for the same; a copy of any byelaws made by a rural authority shall also be transmitted to the overseers of every parish to which such byelaws relate, to be deposited with the public documents of the parish, and to be open to the inspection of any ratepayer (b) of the parish at all reasonable hours.

See first notes to ss. 182 and 183 as to the application of these provisions to rural district councils and parish councils.

(a) See in s. 306, post, p. 640, the penalty upon any person who destroys or defaces any board on which a byelaw is affixed.

Byelaws made under s. 167, ante, p. 385, must also be published as that section directs.

By a local Act of 1847 commissioners were empowered to make byelaws which were to be published by being printed and a copy delivered to every person applying for the same, and by painting or placing on boards to be hung up on the front of the office of the commissioners, and also on some conspicuous part of the works or locality to which the same related. Under the P. H. A., 1848, ss. 115, 116, the prescribed mode of publication was the same as that in the text. It was held that a publication in the manner prescribed by the last-mentioned Act was sufficient (Fielding v. Rhyl Improvement Commissioners (1878), 3 C. P. D. 272; 42 J. P. 311). Whether the omission to publish a byelaw in accordance with s. 185 would invalidate the byelaw is doubtful. Cf. the last mentioned case and Duncan v. Knill (1907), 71 J. P. 287; 96 L. T. 911, and see a leading article in 69 J. P. N. 481. Questions having arisen as to the power of a council under the present section to advertise and issue notices respecting new byelaws with the view of giving publicity to them, the L. G. B. stated that they were not aware of any necessity to advertise the byelaws in a newspaper in extenso, but that they saw no objection to the insertion of notices in a newspaper calling attention generally to the provisions of the byelaws, and to the fact that copies might be obtained, and they also thought that copies might, in the case of a rural district, be sent to each parish council as well as to the overseers.

(b) See note (d) to the last section. It will be observed that payment is to be made for copies of proposed byelaws, but not for copies of byelaws when made.

Evidence of byelaws.

186. A copy of any byelaws made under this Act by a local authority (not being the council of a borough) (a), signed and certified by the clerk of such authority (b) to be a true copy and to have been duly confirmed, shall be evidence until the contrary is proved in all legal proceedings of the due making confirmation and existence of such byelaws without further or other proof. Section 186.

See first notes to ss. 182, 183 as to the application of these provisions to rural district councils and parish councils.

(a) This exception was made because the Municipal Corporations Evidence Act, 1873, s. 2, provided for the primâ facie proof of byelaws made by a town council. That Act is repealed, but its provisions as to evidence of byelaws are re-enacted by the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 24, which provides that the production of a written copy of a byelaw made under that Act, or any former, or present, or future, general or local Act, if authenticated by the corporate seal, shall, until the contrary is proved, be sufficient evidence of the due making and existence of the byelaw, and, if it is so stated in the copy of the byelaw, of having been approved or confirmed by the authority whose confirmation or approval is required to the making or before the enforcing of the byelaw. This section was considered in Robinson v. Gregory, [1905] 1 K. B. 534; 69 J. P. 161, where it was held that the production of a copy of the byelaws authenticated by the corporate seal was primâ facie evidence of the operative existence of the byelaw, and that the conditions of the statute as to making and publication had been duly complied with. A copy bearing merely a printed facsimile of the borough seal is not sufficient (Timothy v. Fenn (1910), 74 J. P. 123; 102 L. T. 283); still less is one bearing only the borough arms with a certificate as to approval and confirmation (Drew v. Harlow (1875), 39 J. P. 420). Any person familiar with the seal of a corporation can prove it, though he did not see it affixed (Moises v. Thornton (1799), 8 T. R. 307; and see next note). Borough byelaws.

(b) By the Evidence Act, 1845, s. 1, "Whenever by any Act now in force or hereafter to be in force any certificate, official or public document, or document or proceeding of any corporation . . . or any certified copy of any . . . byelaw . . . shall be receivable in evidence in any court of justice . . . the same shall respectively be admitted in evidence, . . . provided they respectively purport to be sealed . . . or sealed and signed, or signed alone as required . . . by the respective Acts, . . . without any proof of the seal . . . or of the signature or of the official character of the person appearing to have signed the same . . ." Presumption as to genuineness of seal or signature.

Whether the decision in Robinson v. Gregory, supra, is sufficient to establish that in the case of a byelaw made by a local authority (not being a borough council) under the Public Health Act, the certified copy is primâ facie evidence not only of the existence of the byelaw, but also of the publication required by s. 185, ante, p. 444, is not quite clear. There is a distinction between the two cases; in the case of a byelaw made by a municipal corporation, publication is a condition precedent to the byelaw coming into operation at all; whereas in the case of a byelaw made under this Act, continued publication is required by s. 185.

If s. 185 is to be read as requiring the original of the byelaws to be kept affixed in the office, semble any copy proved to be correct by one who has compared it with the original would be admissible in evidence. Cf. Owner v. Bee Hive Spinning Co., Ltd., [1914] 1 K. B. 105; 78 J. P. 15.

In a prosecution under the Bread Order, 1917, the prosecution omitted to prove the Order before the close of their case, and on this ground the justices dismissed the informations. It was held that the justices ought to have allowed the Order to be proved, or to have adjourned the case for that purpose. Duffin v. Markham (1918), 82 J. P. 281; 16 L. G. R. 807.

187. Byelaws made by the council of any borough under the provisions of section ninety of the Act of the sixth year of King William the Fourth, chapter seventy-six, for the prevention and suppression of certain nuisances, shall not be required to be sent to a Secretary of State, nor shall they be subject to the disallowance in that section Byelaws made under s. 90 of 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, to be submitted to Local Section 187. mentioned; but all the provisions of this Act relating to byelaws shall apply to the byelaws so made as if they were made under this Act.

Government Board.

For "Local Government Board" (in the margin), now read "Ministry of Health."

The Municipal Corporations Act, 1835, is repealed by the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 23 of which provides as follows: "The council may, from time to time, make such byelaws as to them seem meet for the good rule and government of the borough, and for prevention and suppression of nuisances not already punishable in a summary manner by virtue of any Act in force throughout the borough, and may thereby appoint such fines, not exceeding in any case five pounds, as they deem necessary for the prevention and suppression of offences against the same . . . Nothing in this section shall interfere with the operation of section 187 of the Public Health Act, 1875; and that section shall have effect as if this section were therein referred to instead of section 90 of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1835; but nothing in the Public Health Act, 1875, shall be construed as having restricted the meaning or scope of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1835, or as restricting the meaning or scope of this section, with respect to prevention or suppression of nuisances." By s. 260 of the same Act, byelaws in force on December 31st, 1881, continue in force notwithstanding the passing of the Act.

"Good rule and government" byelaws.

The effect of this section (s. 187) is that borough byelaws for the prevention and suppression of nuisances must be submitted to the M. of H. for confirmation. Byelaws for the good rule and government of the borough do not require confirmation by the Ministry. See Strickland v. Hayes (1896), as reported in 65 L. J. M. C. 55; 60 J. P. 164; Mantle v. Jordan, [1897] 1 Q. B. 248; 61 J. P. 119.

Many decisions have been given with reference to byelaws made under the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 23 (or the L. G. A., 1888, s. 16). As to the regulation or prohibition of music in the streets, see R. v. Gay and Powell (1884), 48 J. P. 740; 51 L. T. 92; Beaty v. Glenister (1884), 51 L. See Williams v. Weston-super-Mare U. D. C., ante, p. 375, and cases cited therewith, for byelaws made under a local Act as to erection of booths on the foreshore, and see Stairmand v. Clark (1911), 33 M. C. C. 37, for a conviction under a byelaw prohibiting any one but the town crier from using a noisy instrument for calling persons together.

As to regulations of local authority.

188. The provisions of this Act relating to byelaws shall not apply to any regulations which a local authority is by this Act authorised to make; nevertheless, any local authority may cause any regulations made by them under this Act to be published in such manner as they see fit. Section 188.

Regulations are made under ss. 21, 125, 143, 189, 200; also under some of the amending Acts, e.g., the P. H. A., 1890, ss. 20, 40, etc. Some regulations, however, e.g., under s. 125, ante, p. 232, require the approval of the M. of H.

OFFICERS AND CONDUCT OF BUSINESS OF LOCAL AUTHORITIES.

Officers of Local Authorities.

189. Every urban authority shall (a) from time to time appoint fit and proper persons to be medical officer of health, surveyor, inspector of nuisances, clerk, and treasurer (b): Provided that if any such authority is empowered by any other Act in force within their district to appoint any such officer, this enactment shall be deemed to be satisfied by the employment under this Act of the officer so appointed, with such additional remuneration as they think fit, and no second appointment shall be made under this Act. Every urban authority shall also appoint or employ such assistants collectors and other officers and servants as may be necessary and proper for the efficient execution of this Act, and may make regulations (c) with respect to the duties and conduct of the officers and servants so appointed or employed. Appointment of officers of urban authority.

Subject, in the case of officers any portion of whose salary is paid out of moneys voted by Parliament, to the powers of the Local Government Board under this Act (d), the urban authority may pay to the officers and servants so appointed or employed such reasonable salaries wages or allowances (e) as the urban authority may think proper; and, subject as aforesaid, every such officer and servant appointed under this Act shall be removable by the urban authority at their pleasure (f).

For the special provisions as to officers of Local Authorities in Naval or Military Service during the recent war see Part I. of the Local Government (Emergency Provisions) Act, 1916, post, Vol. II.

(a) The urban authority must make these appointments. There is some ambiguity in the section: it appears to recognise that the urban authority has some special existence as such, distinct from its normal character and capacity as the council of a borough, etc. But s. 6 (ante, p. 37) only superadds certain functions under this Act to those which the body already possessed: see note on s. 198, post, p. 464. It appears, therefore, that the officers of such body should discharge the requisite services rendered necessary by this Act, though by reason of the additional duties they may be entitled to additional remuneration. Separate appointments are prohibited, and it seems irrational that one person should hold two offices under the same body to do what are the same or analogous duties. Obligation to appoint.

(b) If the language of this section is compared with that of the next, it would seem that one person only can be appointed to each office. The Interpretation Act, 1889, s. 1, provides that words in the singular shall include the plural, but makes an exception of cases in which "the contrary intention appears." An urban council inquired of the L. G. B. whether they would be entitled to claim from the county council repayment of a moiety of the salary of a second inspector of nuisances for their district if such an appointment were made. The Board drew attention to s. 189, under which (they said) an urban council are empowered to appoint one inspector of nuisances only for their district, although they may appoint such assistants as may be necessary and proper for the efficient execution of the Act, and pointed out that they are empowered to sanction the appointment of an inspector of nuisances with a view to the repayment of a moiety of the salary by the county council in those Joint appointments.

Note to Section 189.

cases only in which the officer acts as a principal and not as an assistant. The Board added that their sanction is not necessary to the appointment of an assistant inspector of nuisances, and there is no repayment from the county fund in respect of the salary of such an officer.

See now, however, the provisions of the P. H. (Officers) Act, 1921, post.

This Act, however, provides only for medical officers of health and inspectors of nuisances (henceforth to be designated "sanitary inspectors"). As regards these officers, if their appointment be for whole time service the Act grants a certain security of tenure in that they cannot be removed from office by the local authority except with the consent of the Minister of Health, who may also himself dispense with their services. The Act authorises the appointment of two or more inspectors, but the provision as to security of tenure applies only to the chief or senior inspector. The Act also contains provisions for temporary appointments.

There would seem to be no clear authority for the appointment of more than one person as clerk; but there are several instances in which an urban district council have found the appointment of a firm of solicitors as joint clerks to be convenient, and no legal difficulty has been reported.

Appointment of councillor or ex-councillor to paid office.

The M. of H. deprecate the appointment to paid offices of persons who are or have recently been members of the appointing body. Unless very special grounds are shown, their sanction (if required) will not be given where the person appointed is or has within twelve months been a member of the council (see Circular of May 5th, 1911).

Method of appointment.

Section 191, post, p. 454, makes provision as to the mode of appointment of the medical officer. In general the appointment of an officer appears to be complete by election, and no document in writing is required, but there should be a minute. See Smart v. West Ham Union (Guardians of) (1855), 10 Ex. 867; 20 J. P. 596; R. v. Greene (1852), 17 Q. B. 793; 16 J. P. 183; Roberts v. Drewitt (1864), 18 C. B. (N.S.) 48; R. v. Powell, [1899] 1 Q. B. 396; 63 J. P. 84). The P. H. A., 1848, s. 149, required all consents, sanctions, approvals, or authorities of a local board to be in writing, and under their seal and the hands of five or more of them. It was held that this did not mean that every act of the board must be under their hands and seals, and that the appointments of clerk and surveyor to the board need not be so (Smith v. Hirst (1871), 35 J. P. 247; 23 L. T. 665). But if the officer seek to raise any question as to breach of the engagement in any civil court, the proceeding will fail if there be no contract under seal, if the appointment is worth £50 (Dyte v. St. Pancras (Guardians of), ante, p. 399; Austin v. Bethnal Green (Guardians of), ante, p. 398; Wood v. East Ham U. D. C. (1907), 71 J. P. 129; 5 L. G. R. 403). Reference may be made to a case decided under the Elementary Education Act, 1870 (Scott v. Clifton School Board (1884), 14 Q. B. D. 500; 52 L. T. 105); under that Act the appointment of an officer may be made by a signed minute, and such appointment is to be as valid as if made under seal; it was held that an architect appointed by minute only could recover for his services, though he had no appointment under seal.

In R. v. Tralee U. D. C., [1913] 2 I. R. 59 (see also R. v. Boris (1911), 45 Ir. L. T. 267), it was held that a resolution that salaried officers should be selected by means of a qualifying and competitive examination was not ultra vires, and that an officer elected without examination, whilst such resolution was unrescinded, was not validly elected. In R. v. Newry U. D. C. (1909), 43 Ir. L. T. 172, the court refused to order a new election, being satisfied that although the election had been irregularly conducted and declared, there was undoubtedly a solid majority at the meeting in favour of the person declared elected. It was apparently admitted that, if a new election had been ordered, such person's supporters would by reason of changes in the council no longer have been able to carry his election (cf. also cases in note (f) as to quo warranto).

Under the P. H. A., 1848, an appointment was exempt from stamp duty by reason of s. 151. On the repeal of that Act the stamp exemption ceased to exist; but by 38 & 39 Vict. c. 23, s. 14 (repealed by the S. L. R. A., 1883), the stamp duties charged under the Stamp Act, 1870, in respect of appointment to an office or employment ceased to be payable, and they were not reimposed by the Stamp Act, 1891.

Proof of the appointment of an officer may be supplied by the production of the minutes of the authority containing an entry of the appointment: see Sched. I., Part 1, r. 10, post.

Note to Section 189.

In Smith v. Hirst, ante, p. 448, it was held that the title of persons acting as such officers cannot be questioned by third persons.

Qualifications and duties, etc.

The statute does not require any particular qualification for any of the officers, except the medical officer, as to whom see s. 191, post, p. 454; it is, however, generally found convenient to select a solicitor as clerk, and an engineer or professional surveyor as surveyor.

The regulations governing the appointment, tenure of office, salary and duties of medical officers of health and inspectors of nuisances, are contained in the General Order of the L. G. B., dated December 13th, 1910, a copy of which, together with the Board's Circular Letter and a Memorandum, will be found in App. II., post, Vol. II.

Medical officer.

When an appointment is made and part of the salary is paid by the county council under the L. G. A., 1888, s. 24, the M. of H. prescribe the duties to be discharged by the officer. They may also prescribe the duties of a medical officer of health in all cases. See s. 191, post, p. 454.

Under the L. G. A., 1888, s. 17 (2), (3), the duty of appointing a medical officer of health might be satisfied by an arrangement with the county council for rendering available the services of the county medical officer; but this provision was repealed (without prejudice to any existing arrangement) by the Housing, Town Planning, etc. Act, 1909, ss. 68 (3), 75, Sched. VI., post, Vol. II.

Surveyor.

Upon the question of the appointment of a consulting surveyor the L. G. B. once expressed themselves as follows: Provided that the appointment is made in terms which leave no doubt as to the particular officer who will in all cases discharge the duties attaching by statute to the office of surveyor, the Board are not aware of any objection to such an appointment on legal grounds, but on administrative grounds the proposal is one which they would not have thought to be generally in the interests of the district.

The M. of H. object to the employment of the surveyor as clerk of works on sewerage or other works to be carried out by the council. They hold that it is impossible for one man to act efficiently in both capacities, for if his duties are to be satisfactorily performed, it is imperative that a clerk of the works should always be on the spot so long as any men are at work. His principal duty is to prevent bad workmanship and the use of inferior materials.

As to the duties of a surveyor in proceedings for the diversion or stopping up of a highway under the Highway Act, 1835, ss. 84, 85, see United Land Co. v. Tottenham L. B., ante, p. 265.

Ex-service men as sanitary inspectors.

By circular, dated April 23rd, 1920 (see "Local Government, 1920," p. 397), the M. of H. drew the attention of local authorities to the claims of ex-service men who were being trained as sanitary inspectors under a scheme of the Ministry of Labour.

Inspector of nuisances.

Where an inspector of nuisances is employed by his council to act as surveyor or engineer for a sewerage scheme, his salary cannot be increased on this account, as such work forms no part of his duties as inspector of nuisances; but it is open to the council to give him separate remuneration for acting in such capacity.

Treasurer.

It has been held that a borough treasurer acting also as treasurer to the council as the urban authority is under the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, and under this Act a statutory officer with statutory duties, and not merely a servant of the council, but the custodian of the borough funds which are a trust fund, and that it is his duty not to part with them except on proper authority, i.e., a lawful order of the council (Att.-Gen. v. De Winton, [1906] 2 Ch. 106; 70 J. P. 368). In this case, which was an action against the treasurer by the Attorney-General, suing on the relation of a burgess, impeaching his accounts in respect of charges for interest on an unauthorised overdraft, and claiming an injunction to restrain him from making any further payments for such interest out of the borough funds, it was held that the corporation were not necessary parties to the action, as no relief was asked for against them.

Clerk.

The attention of the L. G. B. being drawn to the fact that the offices of clerk and collector to an urban council were held by the same person, they intimated that, in their opinion, an arrangement under which an officer such as a collector, whose regular employment is to receive money on behalf of the council, is likewise employed upon, or allowed to have access to, their accounts, is not one which can be recognised as desirable.

Note to Section 189.

With reference to the duties of the clerk, several cases may be mentioned. The P. H. A., 1848, s. 138, provided that certain local boards might be sued in the name of the clerk. 29 & 30 Vict. c. 90, s. 46, however, incorporated such boards. Hence, when a suit in equity was brought against the clerk in his official capacity, a demurrer was allowed on the ground of want of equity, but leave to amend was granted, the clerk's name being retained, as he was required to answer in his official capacity (Deeks v. Bailey (1869), 21 L. T. 581). It was at this date necessary to make some officer a party for the purpose of interrogating him, but Order XXVI. r. 5 has done away with the necessity for such practice (Wilson v. Church (1878), 9 Ch. D. 552).

A clerk to a local board, who was also collector of rates, engaged the plaintiffs, a firm of law stationers, to assist him in copying the valuation list in the rate book, and also in copying the rate accounts. He absconded, and the plaintiffs sued the local board for the amount due for such copying It was held that the plaintiffs were rightly non-suited, on the ground that there was no evidence that the clerk had authority to incur the debt for them (Meredith v. Radcliffe L. B. (1879), 43 J. P. 819).

Where a solicitor had been appointed clerk to a local board with a salary, for conducting the legal as well as the ordinary business of the board, it was held by BACON, V.-C., upon an interlocutory motion, in an action for mandamus to compel production of papers, that whatever claim the clerk might have against the board for payment of costs in respect of professional services, he had no right, being in the relation of a servant, to refuse production of the legal papers or other documents claimed by the board as belonging to them. It was held, however, by the Court of Appeal, that as such an order would prejudice the clerk's lien, it could not be made before the trial of the action without payment into court of a sum sufficient to meet the amount claimed by the clerk, upon which he was to have the same lien as upon the papers; and the court ordered that upon that being done the clerk should deliver up to the plaintiffs all books and papers claimed in the action (Newington L. B. v. Eldridge (1879), 12 Ch. D. 349).

It would appear that if in the course of legal proceedings a local authority are ordered to answer interrogatories "by their clerk or other their proper officer," and the authority elect to answer through the clerk, he cannot claim any privilege on the ground that he is acting as solicitor of the board (Swansea (Mayor of) v. Quirk (1879), 5 C. P. D. 106; 44 J. P. 378). But where an order was made for the examination of "X., town clerk to the plaintiffs," and X. objected, claiming privilege for the plaintiffs as their solicitor, it was held that the objection was good (Corporation of Salford v. Lever (1890), 24 Q. B. D. 695; 54 J. P. 519).

Where a surveyor is ordinarily employed it is not part of the ordinary duties of the clerk to pay the wages of the men employed by the council on works being carried out for them (Wembley U. D. C. v. Poor Law, etc. Officers' Mutual Guarantee Association (1901), 65 J. P. 330).

(c) The P. H. A., 1848, s. 37, provided that a local board might make byelaws in this respect (Ex parte Richards, post, p. 453), which byelaws required confirmation and other formalities. Now the authority only make regulations, which (s. 188) do not require confirmation.

(d) See s. 191 and notes thereto, post, p. 454.

Salaries, etc.

(e) See also as to salaries, etc., note (b), supra. The salaries of officers are apportionable under the Apportionment Act, 1870, ss. 2, 5.

At an early date difficulty was sometimes experienced in the selection of the appropriate form of action by which to recover the salary of an officer. Thus, where commissioners under a local Act had power to appoint officers at a salary to be paid out of the rates raised, it was held that an appointment did not create a contract on the part of the commissioners to pay the salary, and that, therefore, an indebitatus action would not lie for salary, a mandamus or an action on the case being the proper remedy (Bogg v. Pearce (1851), 10 C. B. 534; 20 L. J. C. P. 99). In this case the commissioners were not a body corporate, and the action was brought against the successors of those commissioners who made the appointment; all the judges held that merely by reason of the appointment by their predecessors no contract could be proved against the successors. In other words it was held that the appointment did not create a "debt," but only a duty to pay the salary out of the rates. In another case it was held that an officer appointed by a town council under the Municipal Corporations Act, 1835, could not maintain an action of "debt" against the corporation for arrears of salary (Addison v. Mayor, etc. of Preston (1852), 12 C. B. 108; 21 L. J. C. P. 146). The reason for this decision was that there was no legal liability on the part of the corporation as corporators, to pay out of all their corporate property, but that the liability was only to pay out of a specific fund, viz., the borough fund. See also Smart v. West Ham Union (Guardians of) (1855), 10 Ex. 867, and Cane v. Chapman (1836), 5 A. & E. 647, which illustrate the same difficulties, and cf. with the last-mentioned case Edwards v. Lowndes (1852), 22 L. J. Q. B. 104; 1 El. & Bl. 81. In a later case, however, it was held that an action was maintainable by an architect against the committee of visitors for the time being of a lunatic asylum in the name of their clerk, upon a contract entered into by a former committee within the scope of their authority (Kendall v. King (1856), 25 L. J. C. P. 132). The court regarded the committee as a body in the nature of a corporation, and held that as regards a contract made by them intra vires, procedure for a breach thereof was the same as in all actions of contract, with all ordinary incidents except that execution on a judgment was modified. This case was followed in Hall v. Taylor (1858), 27 L. J. Q. B. 311; 23 J. P. 20, where it was held that a clerk appointed by commissioners under a local Act, who were empowered to pay a salary out of the rates leviable by them, could maintain an action of contract against the commissioners for the time being, in the name of their clerk for services rendered to former commissioners. It is conceived that the principle of these two last-mentioned decisions is applicable at the present date to the liability of a district council towards an officer duly appointed, and that, therefore, an action would lie for salary. Seeing that a local authority is now a corporate body, it must now, of course, be sued in its corporate name and not in the name of its clerk. But in any case in which judgment is obtained against the authority, it can seldom be enforced otherwise than by mandamus.

It is to be observed that a claim for a writ of mandamus cannot be sustained if there is any other effectual remedy. In an action by executors against the clerk of commissioners under a local Act, in which the plaintiffs claimed a writ of mandamus under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, s. 68, the declaration stated that the commissioners were indebted to the testator for the agreed salary payable by them to him for services rendered by him as clerk to the commissioners, and also for other work by him as the attorney of, and otherwise for, the commissioners in and about their business. The declaration then alleged that the said debts became and were a charge on any moneys which might be in the hands of the commissioners, and which should have been collected by them under and by virtue of the said Act; and if the commissioners should not have in their hands any moneys sufficient to pay the said debts, then such debts became a charge and were chargeable on a rate leviable and to be levied under the Act. The defendants pleaded, to so much of the debt as became due on simple contract, the Statute of Limitations, and to the debts except as to the agreed salary, that no signed bill had been delivered, and also that the commissioners had no funds whereout they could pay the said debts:—Held, first, that the declaration was bad, inasmuch as, assuming that the services in respect of which the agreed salary was claimed were payable out of the rates, the others might be services for which the commissioners were personally liable, and, consequently, the remedy was by action and not by a claim for mandamus; secondly, that on the same principle, the two first pleas were good; and, semble, that the last plea was also good (Bush v. Beavan (1862), 32 L. J. Ex. 54; 1 H. & C. 500). It was subsequently held that it was not necessary for the clerk to deliver a signed bill, and that a report of a committee in which the debt due to the clerk was scheduled as a liability did not take the case out of the Statutes of Limitations (Bush v. Martin (1863), 27 J. P. 825; 2 H. & C. 311).

Where an authority employ a solicitor to do conveyancing work for them, there is no reason why they may not assent to his election to charge according to the old system as altered by Sched. 2, instead of by scale, in accordance with Rule 6 of the General Order under the Solicitors Remuneration Act, 1881 (Re Evans, [1905] 1 Ch. 290; 69 J. P. 104).

A council appointed as their clerk a solicitor, who by the terms of his appointment was to act as their solicitor, and do other work, in consideration of an inclusive salary of £400 a year, and his out-of-pocket expenses. In an action against the council, in which the clerk acted as their solicitor, the plaintiff was ordered to pay their costs. Their bill of costs amounted to £17 18*s.* 1*d.*, of which part was claimed in respect of out-of-pocket expenses, and part in respect of the clerk's services as solicitor in the action. It was held that the council were not prevented by the Solicitors Act, 1870, s. 5, or otherwise, from recovering the costs claimed in respect of such services (Henderson v. Merthyr Tydfil U. D. C., [1900] 1 Q. B. 434).

For a case as to the liability of a local authority to pay wages or salary in lieu of holiday, see Hurt v. Sheffield Corporation (1916), 14 L. G. R. 614; 32 T. L. R. 393.

Payments of loan moneys.

In sanctioning loans for the execution of works by a district council the M. of H. always stipulate that no portion of the moneys raised under the sanction shall be applied in remuneration of officers of the council or in payment of the wages of workmen in the permanent employment of the council. They allow as an exception, however, a payment to a clerk who is a solicitor for legal work in connection with the object of the loan, and not within his duties as defined by the terms of his appointment. In such a case a bill when taxed may be discharged out of loan moneys, but charges within the scale prescribed in Part I. of Sched. I. to the General Order under the Solicitors Remuneration Act, 1881, need not be submitted for taxation. See also note (b) to s. 233, post, p. 526.

Payment for extra work.

It seems clear that when an officer performs, at the request of the council, services of a kind different from those which he is bound to fulfil as such officer, there is no objection to his being remunerated for so doing. See R. v. Gloucester (Mayor of) and other cases, cited in the notes to s. 193, post, p. 457.

A payment to a medical officer of health or inspector of nuisances in consideration of extra services rendered may apparently be made with the sanction of the M. of H. under their General Orders of December 13th, 1910.

In the case of a surveyor there is no provision authorising the making of an extraordinary payment, i.e., one in addition to salary. The M. of H. have suggested in some cases whether the object might not be attained by an increase of the salary of the officer for a specified period, the period and amount of the increase being so calculated as to make the actual benefit equal to that which would accrue if the proposed payment were made in a lump sum. At the same time, the Ministry pointed out that if a council adopted this course the period for which the increase of salary was awarded must be prospective, i.e., must commence not sooner than the date of the resolution of the council awarding such increase. Gratuities, in the strict sense of the term, cannot legally be paid to officers. See note (b) to s. 193, post, p. 457.

As to what is meant by "allowances," see the notes to s. 193, post, p. 456.

A Scotch borough surveyor sued for payment for work done, as he alleged, outside the scope of his ordinary duties. On his death his executors continued the action. No express contract to give him extra remuneration was proved, and he was never instructed to do any work except in his official capacity. On three occasions in thirty-eight years he had received honoraria for special services, but with these exceptions he did all work remitted to him without extra remuneration:—Held, that his delay in putting forward his claim threw on him the onus of proving that the work was not done quâ borough surveyor, and that the proof failed (Mackison v. Dundee Magistrates, [1910] A. C. 285).

In Mansbridge v. Barnet U. D. C. (1909), 73 J. P. 255, a county court judge held that a long-continued practice under which a part-time officer of a council has been paid extra remuneration for extra work done by him may give rise to an obligation upon the council to pay for further extra work done, although nothing has been previously said as to extra remuneration being paid therefor and although no resolution to pay for the extra services has been passed.

As to the power of an authority to give extra remuneration to an officer attending on their behalf as a witness before a parliamentary committee, reference may be made to R. v. Newell, [1911] 2 I. R. 535.

Superannuation.

There is no provision here for superannuation, but some local Acts make provision in this behalf. See as to such a scheme, Phillips v. London School Board, [1898] 2 Q. B. 447; and as to the right to deduct amounts paid to superannuation funds from the amount of salary for the purpose of assessment to income tax under Sched. E., see Hudson v. Gribble, [1903] 1 K. B. 517; 67 J. P. 85; and as to the liability to pay to a superannuation fund in respect of special duty grants, see R. v. Lyon, Ex parte Harrison, [1921] 1 K. B. 203 ; 85 J. P. 78. Note to Section 189.

A scheme of superannuation for local government officers was recommended by a departmental committee in a report dated July 30th, 1919. See "Local Government, 1919," p. 485.

As to the unemployment insurance of officers, see 10 & 11 Geo. 5, c. 30, Sched. I., Part II. (a), and Ex parte Berks County Council, Ex parte Ffooks (1922), 38 T. L. R. 255.

(f) In consequence of this provision the court refused to grant a rule for a quo warranto information, applied for by the former holder of the office of clerk to a local authority, on the ground that the dismissal from office had been illegal, for if he had been reinstated, he might legally be dismissed immediately. Semble, that a resolution of an authority dismissing an officer is not a resolution rescinding the resolution by which he was appointed within the meaning of a byelaw with respect to the rescission of resolutions (Ex parte Richards (or R. v. Jones) (1878), 3 Q. B. D. 368 ; 42 J. P. 614 (dissenting from R. v. Wrexham Turnpike Roads (Trustees of) (1836), 5 A. & E. 581)). See, to the same effect, Ex parte Parry (1887), 3 T. L. R. 649 ; R. v. Carroll (1888), 22 L. R. Ir. 400 ; R. v. Whelan (1887), 20 L. R. Ir. 461 ; R. v. Blaney, [1901] 2 I. R. 93 ; and cf. R. v. Hunton (1911), 75 J. P. 335 ; 9 L. G. R. 751 ; Longfield Parish Council v. Wright, [1918] 16 L. G. R. 865 ; and Tottenham U. D. C. v. Hillier, [1920] 42 M. C. C. 220. As to questioning an invalid election by mandamus, see R. v. Schull JJ., [1910] 2 I. R. 601. Tenure of office.

It seems doubtful whether the power to dismiss at pleasure could be provided against by express contract. As to the power of an authority to dismiss without notice and without assigning reasons when there is no express contract, see R. v. Darlington School Governors (1844), 6 Q. B. 682 ; In re Teather (1850), 19 L. J. M. C. 70 ; Haynan v. Rugby School Governors (1874), 43 L. J. Ch. 834 ; Ex parte Richards, supra ; Wood v. East Ham U. D. C. (1907), 71 J. As to a servant of the Crown, see Hales v. R. (1918), 34 T. L. R. 589.

See also the provisions of the P. H. (Officers) Act, 1921, post.

190. Every rural authority shall from time to time appoint fit and proper persons to be medical officer or officers of health, and inspector or inspectors of nuisances ; they shall also appoint such assistants and other officers and servants as may be necessary and proper for the efficient execution of this Act (a). Appointment of officers of rural authority.

There may be awarded to the clerk and treasurer of the guardians of any union, in respect of the additional duties of such officers under this Act, such remuneration as the rural authority may, with the approval of the Local Government Board, determine. If the clerk of the union is unable or unwilling to undertake such additional duties, the assistant clerk of the union shall be appointed to discharge the same, with such remuneration as aforesaid (b).

See the notes to the previous section, and particularly the reference therein to the P. H. (Officers) Act, 1921, post, which applies equally to rural as to urban authorities.

(a) The section places a rural district council under no obligation to appoint a surveyor. Such an officer is, however, sometimes required, as for example, when the council are proceeding under urban powers (see s. 276) for the making up of private streets under s. 150. In such a case the council, if they have no permanent surveyor, may appoint a person to fill that office for the purposes of the work in hand. Of course, now that rural district councils are the highway authority of their districts (see the L. G. A., 1894, ss. 25, 81), they have a surveyor or surveyors for the purpose of the Highway Acts. Obligation to appoint.

For a now repealed provision under which a district council could arrange for the county medical officer to act as their district medical officer, see the L. G. A., 1888, s. 17, post.

Note to Section 190.

Poor law officers.

(b) Although the guardians and the rural district council are no longer the same body, this clause remains unrepealed; but where the treasurer of a rural council, who became such by reason of his being treasurer to the guardians of the union and rural sanitary authority prior to the operation of the L. G. A., 1894, dies, or otherwise ceases to hold office, the L. G. B. said they considered that the rural district council, being an entirely separate body from the guardians of the poor law union in which the rural district is situated, should proceed to make a formal appointment of a treasurer. And without any such vacation of office a rural council may apparently appoint another person to perform duties which otherwise would devolve upon these officers, so long at least as their status and remuneration are not affected (Genn v. East Kerrier R. D. C. (1898), 62 J. P. 215).

It sometimes happens that in consequence of the operation of the L. G. A., 1894, a rural district council has two clerks—one the clerk to the late sanitary authority and the other the clerk to the late highway board. The L. G. B. did not hold the view that in the case of the death or resignation of the clerk for highway matters the remaining clerk becomes entitled to discharge the whole of the duties appertaining to the office of clerk to the rural district council. They pointed out that it rested with the district council to decide whether they would appoint him as their clerk for all purposes or appoint a second clerk to the council as a successor to the late clerk for highway matters. The Board, however, added that the latter arrangement did not seem to them to be a desirable one, and that the appointment of a clerk and an assistant clerk would be preferable to that of two clerks to the council, assuming that more than one clerk is needed.

Under Art. 3 of the General Consolidated Order (Amendment) Order of February 26th, 1866, it is the duty of the clerk to the guardians, if he be an attorney or solicitor, to perform and execute, without charge for anything beyond disbursements, all legal business connected with the union, or in which the guardians shall be engaged, subject to certain exceptions specified in the Article. The L. G. B. pointed out that if any such clerk appointed at a date subsequent to the issue of the Order became ex officio clerk to the late rural sanitary authority, and by the L. G. A., 1894, s. 81 (4), clerk to the rural district council upon the same terms and conditions as he held office at the passing of that Act, he holds the office of clerk to the rural district council subject to the provisions of the Order. Consequently, he is not entitled to be paid any remuneration beyond his salary for legal business not within the exceptions provided for by Art. 3, and the salary should therefore be fixed at such an amount as would remunerate him for all the duties attaching to his office. The Board, however, recognised that there were cases in which extraordinary services may be rendered by the clerk, for which extra remuneration may equitably be allowed, and, in the absence of any legal provisions for otherwise dealing with the matter, it was the Board's practice where a rural council wished to grant such remuneration, to advise the council to pass a resolution increasing the clerk's salary for the next quarter by the amount of the proposed extra remuneration.

As to medical officer of health, etc.

191. A person shall not be appointed medical officer of health under this Act unless he is a legally qualified practitioner (a); and the Local Government Board shall have the same powers as it has in the case of a district medical officer of a union with regard to the qualification appointment duties salary and tenure of office of a medical officer of health or other officer of a local authority any portion of whose salary is paid out of moneys voted by Parliament (b), and may by order prescribe the qualification and duties of other medical officers of health appointed under this Act (c).

The same person may, with the sanction of the Local Government Board, be appointed medical officer of health or inspector of nuisances for two or more districts, by the local authorities (d) of such districts; and the Local Government Board shall by order (e) prescribe the mode of such appointment, and the proportions in which the expenses of such appointment, and the salary and charges of such officer shall be borne by such authorities. Section 191.

Any district medical officer of a union may, with the sanction of the Local Government Board and subject to such conditions as the said Board may prescribe, be appointed a medical officer of health (f); and a medical officer of health may exercise any of the powers with which an inspector of nuisances is invested by this Act (g).

In case of illness or incapacity (h) of the medical officer of health a local authority may appoint and pay a deputy medical officer, subject to the approval of the Local Government Board.

See also P. H. (Officers) Act, 1921, post.

(a) That is, a person duly registered under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 90; 49 & 50 Vict. c. 48.

(b) The L. G. A., 1888, s. 24, provides for payment by county councils in substitution for annual local grants theretofore made out of the Exchequer in aid of local rates. It enacts that in substitution for local grants, the council of each county shall from time to time pay out of the county fund and charge to the Exchequer Contribution Account certain sums, including, among others, half the cost of each local authority of the salary of the medical officer of health and inspector of nuisances where the qualification, etc. of such officer is in accordance with the regulations made by the M. of H. under the above section. The same section provides that a reference in s. 189 (ante, p. 447), and in the above section, to officers any portion of whose salary is paid out of moneys provided by Parliament, shall be construed to refer to those officers in respect of whose salaries payment is made by a county council. See the section in extenso, post. The regulations made by the L. G. B. as to the qualification, etc. of officers, part of whose salary was paid by Government and is now paid by the county council, will be found in an Order dated December 13th, 1910, in App. II., post, Vol. II. See also an accompanying circular and memorandum. The corresponding Order as to Port Sanitary Districts is dated December 21st, 1910: see Vol. II., post. Contribution towards salary by county council.

(c) The L. G. A., 1888, s. 18, post, now prescribes the qualification of a medical officer of health.

(d) These words include each class of authorities, urban and rural. See also s. 286, post, p. 621, as to union of districts for the appointment of a joint medical officer.

(f) It must be carefully noticed that this appointment cannot be made absolutely. The M. of H. must give their sanction. They will require to be satisfied not only as to the capacity of the individual to execute the duties, but that he can do so without detriment to the discharge of his other official duties. A minute of the L. G. B. with reference to these joint appointments was issued.

(g) Note that the medical officer of health has no definite powers. The Orders of the L. G. B. referred to above prescribe the duties of a medical officer of health, and some powers are incidentally given to him in this Act, but this paragraph confers upon him the powers of a sanitary inspector.

(h) Perhaps this word will cover the necessary or unavoidable absence of the officer. See also the Housing of the Working Classes Act, 1890, s. 26, post, Vol. II.

192. The same person may be both surveyor and inspector of nuisances (a); but neither the person holding the office of treasurer, nor his partner, nor any person in the service or employ of them or either of them, shall be eligible to hold or shall in any manner assist or officiate in the office of clerk (b); and neither the person holding the office of clerk, nor his partner, nor any person in the service or employ of them or either of them, shall be eligible to hold or shall in any manner assist or officiate in the office of treasurer. Offices tenable by same persons.

Section 192.

Any person offending against this enactment shall forfeit and pay the sum of one hundred pounds, which may be recovered by any person, with full costs of suit, by action of debt (c).

(a) See Memorandum of the L. G. B., dated December, 1910, in App. II., post, Vol. II. The M. of H. recently refused to sanction with a view to repayment the appointment of a borough surveyor as inspector of nuisances on the ground that the borough demanded the services of an officer who could give his whole time to the duties of inspector of nuisances and those of designated officer under the Housing (Inspection of District) Regulations, 1910.

(b) The object of this prohibition, which is common in local Acts, appears to be to prevent the clerk, who represents the council, from holding their money, and thus to create a check upon the two officers. The clerk cannot deal with the money, because he does not hold it, and the treasurer must hold it, until the clerk, under the direction of the council, gives him authority to pay it away.

Where a local Act provided that a corporation should not appoint as treasurer the person who was appointed clerk, and a penalty was imposed on any person, being the clerk or his partner or clerk, who should in any manner officiate for the treasurer, it was held that the corporation were prohibited from appointing the clerk to such office as assistant treasurer; but where the corporation had so appointed the clerk, and he had discharged some of the duties of the treasurer, it was held that it was a question for the jury whether he did so bonâ fide and in the belief that he was legally appointed as an independent officer, or colourably and in evasion of the Act; and that, in the former case, he would not be liable to the penalty, but in the latter he would (Hawkings v. Newman (1839), 8 L. J. Ex. 82; 4 M. & W. 613). The words of the section render a similar evasion of this Act impracticable.

(c) The consent of the Attorney-General under s. 253 is not necessary in order to maintain such an action (Fletcher v. Hudson (1880), 5 Ex. D. 287; 45 J. P. 5: per BRAMWELL, L.J.).

Officers not to contract with local authority.

193. Officers or servants appointed or employed under this Act by the local authority shall not in anywise be concerned or interested in any bargain or contract (a) made with such authority for any of the purposes of this Act.

If any such officer or servant is so concerned or interested, or, under colour of his office or employment, exacts or accepts any fee or reward whatsoever other than his proper salary wages and allowances (b), he shall be incapable of afterwards holding or continuing in any office or employment under this Act, and shall forfeit and pay the sum of fifty pounds, which may be recovered by any person (c), with full costs of suit, by action of debt.

See as to money, gift or other consideration corruptly received by an officer of a local authority from a person holding or seeking to obtain a contract from a local authority the Prevention of Corruption Act, 1916, post, Vol. II.

Later modifications.

(a) This provision has been modified by the Public Health (Members and Officers) Act, 1885, s. 2, which provides that it shall not be unlawful for any officer or servant appointed under this Act or a local Act to be concerned or interested in any contract with the authority, made with such consent or approval as is therein mentioned, for the sale, purchase, leasing or hiring of any lands, rooms, or offices, or to be concerned or interested in any contract with the authority as a shareholder in any joint stock company. See, for its full terms, the section in extenso, post, and the notes thereto.

A contract made contrary to the provisions of this section is void, and cannot be enforced (Melliss v. Shirley L. B. (1885), 16 Q. B. D. 446; 50 J. P. 214); and any payments made under such a contract would be illegal (Barton v. Piggott (1874)

Note to Section 193.

L. R. 10 Q. B. 86). But semble that if after the making of a contract with a local authority, an officer of the authority became interested in it, this section would not avoid the contract. In a case decided under the City of London Sewers Act, 1848, s. 42, it was held that the interest of a member of the corporation in a company which took an assignment (not amounting to a novation) of a contract good in its inception did not render the contract null and void (City of London Electric Lighting Co. v. London Corporation, [1903] A. C. 434; 67 J. P. 437).

See further, as to the interest in a contract which may disqualify councillors, the cases cited in the notes to s. 46 of the L. G. A., 1894, post.

Effect of section.

(b) This provision is intended to apply to fees from other persons than the authority, and is levelled at the practice of demanding fees from persons seeking aid from the council, or exposed to proceedings by them. The language is sufficiently general to prevent the officer receiving gratuities (in the strict sense of the word) from the authority in respect of services covered by his salary. As regards remuneration due to an officer, in addition to his fixed salary, for extra services rendered, and the mode in which it can be paid, see note (e) to s. 189, p. 450, ante.

It is to be observed that the statute applies to demands made under colour of the office, and therefore not to claims when the officer acts and makes a demand for services which he renders independently of his office. Thus the clerk may charge professionally for contracts prepared for contractors, if they think proper to employ him, and if he can do so without injury to the council. Perhaps, also, the surveyor may not be prevented from acting professionally for persons within the district, but the question turns largely on the terms of his appointment, and such conduct may lead to a mischievous result.

A clerk to the trustees of a parish was appointed under a local Act by the vestry at "such reasonable salary as the vestry shall appoint to be paid to" him. The clerk having in a certain year had much extra work in connection with litigation, the trustees (apparently without consulting the vestry) resolved that he should be paid a gratuity out of the funds under their management. The parish treasurer refused to sign the necessary cheque, and the court refused to grant a mandamus to him, saying that there was no power to grant gratuities out of rates (Ex parte Mellish (1863), 8 L. T. 47).

A municipal corporation engaged at a salary a surveyor for purposes connected with their existing and projected waterworks. It was expressly provided that he was not to be paid extra for extra work, and was to be a "full time" officer. Subsequently, finding him to be qualified as an engineer, they dismissed the engineer who was superintending the construction of their new waterworks, and employed the surveyor to superintend the work. The court were apparently satisfied that there was no objection to the corporation voting him a sum of money for his work in that capacity, which was outside the scope of his original employment (R. v. Gloucester Corporation (1859), 23 J. P. 709).

By the terms of contracts entered into with a municipal corporation for the purposes of the Act, the surveyor to the corporation was to receive from the contractors, in respect of bills of quantities to be prepared by him, percentages on such amounts as he should certify to be due to such contractors from the corporation. It was held that in respect of each contract the surveyor was liable to a penalty as having been "concerned or interested" therein within the meaning of the section. The corporation also employed their surveyor, apart from his ordinary duties, to superintend the construction of certain drainage works as their engineer, and agreed to remunerate him by a percentage on the outlay. It was held that he was liable to the penalty imposed by this section (Whiteley v. Barley (1888), 21 Q. B. D. 154; 52 J. P. 595). Whilst the action (Whiteley v. Barley) was pending, the corporation resolved to contribute £300 towards the legal expenses of their surveyor (the defendant), and after the decision of the action the plaintiff therein (a ratepayer) obtained a rule for a writ of certiorari to bring up and quash the order of the corporation settling the remuneration of the surveyor, and the order for the payment of the sum of £300 on the ground that they were illegal and ultra vires, and that the corporation had no power to make them. This rule was made absolute, and the court ordered "the mayor, aldermen, and burgesses" to pay the costs of and occasioned by the application (R. v. Ramsgate (Mayor, etc. of) (1889), 23 Q. B. D. 66; 53 J. P. 740). A further application was then made for an order that certain members of the corporation should personally pay such costs:—Held, that the members of the corporation who voted in favour of the resolution for making the illegal payments and for resisting the proceedings for quashing them were personally liable for the costs incurred (R. v. Vaile (or Whiteley) (1889), 23 Q. B. D. 483; 54 J. P. 134).

Upon the application for the certiorari in the above mentioned case (at 23 Q. B. D. 483) it was admitted that the payment to the surveyor of a commission on the contract price of the works was invalid, but it was contended that a fixed sum equal to the amount of the commission might have been lawfully paid to him as an "allowance" under s. 189, and that the invalidity of the payment being in form rather than in substance, the court in the exercise of their discretion ought to refuse to quash the order for payment:—Held, that the payment being illegal, the application must be granted.

A borough council appointed the defendant (a solicitor and the town clerk) to be clerk to the sanitary authority; and by a resolution his salary was fixed at a certain sum, "to include all legal charges, except for contentious business matters, travelling expenses, and payments out of pocket." Subsequently the council promoted a sewage scheme, which had not been contemplated when the defendant's salary was fixed, and in connection with this scheme he did work, partly in respect of contentious and partly in respect of non-contentious matters. On the completion of the sewage works the council passed a resolution that he be paid a sum of money for his services in connection with the scheme, and the money was duly paid to him:—Held, that the facts did not show an acceptance by the defendant under colour of his office or employment of a fee or reward other than his proper salary, wages, and allowances, within the meaning of s. 193, and that he was not liable to the penalty imposed by this section (Edwards v. Salmon (1889), 23 Q. B. D. 531; 54 J. P. 180). In this case, Lord HALSBURY, L.C., and, apparently, LINDLEY, L.J., also, approved, and Lord ESHER, M.R., reaffirmed the opinion expressed by the latter in Burgess v. Clark (1884), 14 Q. B. D. 735, that the word "allowances" in s. 193 includes extra payment for extra work, and is not limited to such matters as free use of a house or room or coals or gas. COTTON, L.J., in Burgess v. Clark, and FIELD, J., in the Ramsgate Case, supra, had considered that it was so restricted.

See, further, as to remunerating officers for extra work, note (e) to s. 189, p. 450, ante.

Recovery of penalty.

(c) These proceedings cannot now be taken without the consent in writing of the Attorney-General (The Public Health (Officers) Act, 1884, post). It would appear that the action must be brought within one year (31 Eliz. c. 5, s. 5; Dyer v. Best (1866), L. R. 1 Ex. 152; 30 J. P. 151). In Todd v. Robinson (1885), 14 Q. B. D. 739; 49 J. P. 278, it was held that the period of limitation did not run from the time when the contract was made, the defendant having remained an officer of the board, and having been interested in the contract down to the commencement of the action. In an action for penalties under this section the plaintiff is not entitled to administer interrogatories or to obtain discovery of documents. See Whiteley v. Barley (1887), 56 L. J. Q. B. 312; Hunnings v. Williamson (No. 1) (1883), 10 Q. B. D. 459; 47 J. P. 390; Martin v. Treacher (1886), 16 Q. B. D. 507; 50 J. P. 356; Jones v. Jones (1889), 22 Q. B. D. 425; Hobbs v. Hudson (1890), 25 Q. B. D. 232; 54 J. P. 520; Salford (Corporation of) v. Lever (1890), 24 Q. B. D. 695; 54 J. P. 519; Saunders v. Wiel, [1892] 2 Q. B. 321. Cf. Derby (Mayor, etc. of) v. Derbyshire C. C., [1897] A. C. 550; 62 J. P. 4.

Officers entrusted with money to give security.

194. Before any officer or servant of a local authority enters on any office or employment under this Act by reason whereof he will or may be intrusted with the custody or control of money, the local authority by whom he is appointed shall take from him sufficient security for the faithful execution of such office or employment, and for duly accounting for all moneys which may be intrusted to him by reason thereof.

If the services of an officer be rendered gratuitously and loss arises from the failure of a bank with which, by the direction of the authority, he lodges money belonging to them, the officer will not be responsible (Colchester Union (Guardians of) v. Moy (1893), 57 J. P. 265).

As to the position of an authority's treasurer when its clerk commits frauds upon it, see Halifax Union v. Wheelwright (1875), L. R. 10 Ex. 183; 39 J. P. 823.

The authority must determine for themselves what security they will deem sufficient. Generally that given by collectors is a bond with two sureties. There are several guarantee societies who will guarantee the fidelity of officers; but their policies usually contain many conditions, the neglect of which invalidates the security, and an omission is seldom discovered until an attempt is made to enforce the security. Moreover, they are generally determinable upon notice by the company, so that the security may fail at the time when the necessity for it becomes most urgent. The Government Officers (Security) Act, 1875, does not apply to these officers.

The P. H. A., 1848, s. 151, exempted the bond or security given on behalf of the officer from stamp duty; but that section was repealed by 35 & 36 Vict. c. 79, except as regards documents already executed.

Decisions as to guarantees.

With regard to the terms of the security, it should be made to be operative notwithstanding any change of tenure of the office, alteration of the salary in amount or mode of payment, change of district, or imposition of new duties upon the officer by subsequent legislation, for such contingencies, if not provided against, may destroy the liability of the sureties. See Bamford v. Iles (1849), 3 Ex. 380; 13 J. P. 652; Holland v. Lea (1854), 9 Ex. 430; 18 J. P. 201; Frank v. Edwards (1852), 8 Ex. 214; 22 L. J. See the facts of these cases (except the two last mentioned), and other cases referred to below, summarised in articles at 78 J. P. N. 122 et seq.

A bond for due discharge of a man's duties as assistant overseer does not cover his defalcations as clerk to the parish council (Cosford Union v. Poor Law, etc. Officers' Mutual Guarantee Association (1911), 75 J. P. 30; 103 L. T. 463).

A guarantee given for a clerk appointed to carry out the ordinary duties of the clerk to a district council does not cover payment of wages to men employed under the supervision of the surveyor to the council (Wembley U. D. C. v. Poor Law, etc. Officers' Mutual Guarantee Association (1901), 65 J. P. 330).

In Bramley Union v. The Guarantee Society (1900), 64 J. P. 308, a board of guardians resolved to increase their clerk's salary from £255 to £410, to include remuneration for election work. As directed, he forwarded the resolution to the L. G. B. for their approval, but suppressed the concluding words. The Board approved the truncated resolution submitted to them, and for some years the clerk drew both the larger salary and fees for elections. It was held that he had committed a breach of duty, that there was no resolution of the guardians approved by the L. G. B., and that therefore the guardians had been induced to pay the larger salary without any authority for so doing, and were entitled to recover from the clerk's sureties the excess received by him above what he could have claimed at his old rate of remuneration.

It is beyond the scope of the present work to enter into a detailed examination of the law relating to the discharge of sureties; a few of the cases may, however, be referred to. As to the effect of failure to give notice of an officer's former delinquencies, see Lawder v. Simpson (1873), 21 W. R. 439; Smith v. Bank of Scotland (1813), 1 Dow, 272; London General Omnibus Co. v. Holloway, [1912] 2 K. B. 72.

Note to Section 194.

It is a general principle that on a continuing guarantee for the honesty of a servant if the master discovers that the servant has been guilty of dishonesty in the service, and instead of dismissing the servant chooses to continue him in his employment without the knowledge and consent of the surety, express or implied, he cannot afterwards have recourse to the surety to make good any loss which may arise from the dishonesty of the servant during the subsequent service (Phillips v. Foxall (1872), L. R. 7 Q. B. 666; 37 J. P. 37; Saunderson v. Aston (1873), L. R. 8 Ex. 73). As to the application of this principle to local authorities, see Lawder v. Lawder (1873), I. R. 7 C. L. 57; Byrne v. Muzio (1881), 8 L. R. Ir. 396; Caxton v. Dew (1899), 68 L. J. Q. B. 380; 80 L. T. 325; Durham Corporation v. Fowler, infra.

It would appear that the omission of a local authority to carry out the regulations prescribed by the following sections will not release the sureties; nor a statement of them which does not amount to a warranty (Benham v. United, etc. Assurance Co. (1852), 7 Ex. 744). As to the effect of an inaccurate representation of the sums to be collected, see Towle v. National Guardian Assurance Co. (1861), 3 Gif. 42: 30 L. J. Ch. 900, where it was held that a statement of the manner in which the accounts of the collector were to be checked, etc., did not amount to a warranty, and did not release the sureties in the event of its not being carried out. Mere laches of the obligee or a mere passive acquiescence by him in acts which are contrary to the conditions of a bond, is not sufficient of itself to relieve the sureties (Mansfield Union v. Wright (1882), 9 Q. B. D. 683; Kingston-on-Hull Corporation v. Harding, [1892] 2 Q. B. 494). The plaintiffs sued the defendants as sureties on two bonds the first given to the plaintiffs as urban sanitary authority to secure the due performance of the duties of a collector of general district rates, and the second given to them as a municipal corporation to secure the performance by the same person of his duties as collector and receiver of borough rates. The evidence showed that the plaintiffs had acquiesced in an irregular mode of accounting on the part of the collector, but that the collector was never suspected of dishonesty until a year after the date of the second bond, when defalcations were discovered, and he was dismissed. The jury found,—first, that the plaintiffs had permitted their collector to retain moneys in his hands for a longer period than a week (which was contrary to s. 195, post, p. 461, to a condition of the bonds, and to a resolution passed by the plaintiffs before the bonds were given); and, secondly, that they had permitted him to mix the proceeds of the different rates. It was held that the plaintiffs' acquiescence in the collector's irregular mode of accounting was not such connivance as to discharge the sureties; that upon the evidence there were no other questions which the judge could have been properly required to leave to the jury; and that on the facts proved and on the findings there was no defence to the action. It was held also that on the construction of the second bond the sureties were liable for the collector's failure to pay over moneys received by him independently of any question as to the validity of the rate (Durham (Mayor, etc. of) v. Fowler (1889), 22 Q. B. D. 394; 53 J. P. 374; and see Donegal C. C. v. Life and Health Assurance Co., [1909] 2 I. R. 700, 712). In Tullamore U. D. C. v. Robins (1914), Ir. L. T. 180, a clerk had failed to account and there were defalcations in the accounts.

It was held that the failure to account constituted a breach of the conditions in the bond and the sureties were held to be liable even though the defalcations occurred prior to the date of the bond but subsequent to the appointment of the clerk.

As to the power of the sureties to put an end to their suretyship, see Burgess v. Eve (1872), L. R. 13 Eq. 450; Lloyds v. Harper (1880), 16 Ch. D. 290; Beckett v. Addyman (1882), 9 Q. B. D. 783; Re Crace, Balfour v. Crace, [1902] 1 Ch. 733.

As to the admissibility in evidence of the collector's books in an action against his sureties, see Abbeyleix Guardians v. Sutcliffe (1890), 26 L. R. Ir. 332.

As to the effect of a stipulation in a bond by which the creditor undertook to prosecute the defaulting debtor, see London Guarantee Co. v. Fearnley (1880), 5 App. Cas. 911; 45 J. P. 4.

As to the effect of the lunacy of a collector, see Grove v. Johnson (1889), 24 L. R. Ir. 352.

Section 195.

Officers to account.

195. Every officer and servant appointed or employed under this Act by a local authority (a) shall, when and in such manner as may be required by such authority, make out and deliver to them a true and perfect account in writing of all moneys received by him for the purposes of this Act, stating how, and to whom, and for what purpose such moneys have been disposed of, and shall, together with such account, deliver the vouchers or receipts for all payments made by him, and pay over to the treasurer all moneys owing by him on the balance of accounts (b).

And every such officer or servant, employed in the collection of any rate made under this Act shall, within seven days (c) after he has received any moneys on account of any such rate, pay over the same to the treasurer, and shall, as and when the local authority may direct (d), deliver a list signed by him and containing the names of all persons who have neglected or refused to pay any such rate, and the sums respectively due from them.

(a) Note the generality of these terms. See Att.-Gen. v. De Winton, cited in the notes to s. 189, as to the status of a borough treasurer.

(b) The requisition of course applies when the term of office has expired; but the authority will probably make some additional regulations for payments at other times. See the analogous provisions in the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 21.

Falsification of accounts.

Falsification of accounts by a clerk, officer, or servant is punishable under 38 & 39 Vict. c. 24, s. 1. As to what amounts to a false entry, see R. v. Williams (1899), 63 J. P. 103; 79 L. T. 739. A person may be found guilty although he does not make the false entry with his own hand (R. v. Butt (1884), 15, Cox C. C. 564). An indictment under this Act alleged in each count that the defendant did make and concur in making a false entry in a certain account, but there was no allegation that that account belonged to or was in the possession of the employer, or that it had been received by the defendant for or on behalf of his employer. It was held that the indictment was bad on that account (R. v. Palin, [1906] 1 K. B. 7; 69 J. P. 423). See also R. v. Drewitt (1904), 69 J. P. 37; 21 T. L. R. 164; R. v. Oliphant, [1905] 2 K. B 67; 69 J P. 230.

In G. W. Rail. Co. v. London and County Bank, [1901] A. C. 414, it was decided that a bank who cashed a crossed cheque obtained by a collector from a ratepayer by false pretences were liable to the ratepayer for the amount of the cheque. This case and previous cases, and also a later case (Capital and Counties Bank, Ltd. v. Gordon, [1903] A. C. 240) decided that a bank was not protected by the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, s. 82, unless (1) it acted in good faith and without negligence; (2) it received payment for a customer; and (3) the bank only received such payment. In the Great Western Case, supra, it was found that the bank acted in good faith and without negligence; but it was held that the collector who had no account or pass-book with them was not a "customer." In the Capital and Counties Bank Case, supra, it was held that the bank did not receive payment of a crossed cheque for a customer if it credited its customer's account with the amount of the cheque before receiving payment thereof. The effect of the latter decision has now, however, been removed by the Bills of Exchange (Crossed Cheques) Act, 1906, and see also Morison v. London, County and Westminster Bank, [1914] 3 K. B. 356; 111 L. T. 114.

(c) This is a very precise direction, but one not easy to carry out universally. The authority should, however, pay great attention to it. More confidence can be felt as to the due collection from a strict observance of the provision than from any guarantee. See Durham (Mayor, etc. of) v. Fowler, p. 460, ante.

(d) The authority should require an account of the collection and deposit of the rates to be laid before them at short intervals. See s. 250, post, p. 550, as to the accounting of these officers to the auditor.

Section 196.

Summary proceedings against defaulting officers.

196. If any officer or servant appointed or employed under this Act by a local authority (a)—

Fails to render accounts, or to produce and deliver up vouchers and receipts, or to pay over any moneys as and when required by this Act, or

Fails within five days after written notice (b) in that behalf from the local authority to deliver up to the local authority all books papers writings property and things in his possession or power, relating to the execution of this Act, or belonging to such authority, the local authority may complain to any justice, and such justice shall thereupon summon the party charged to appear before the court of summary jurisdiction (c).

On the appearance of the party charged, or on proof that the summons was personally served on him, or left at his last known place of abode or business (d), if it appears to the court that he has failed to render any such accounts, or to pay over such moneys, or to produce and deliver up any such vouchers or receipts books papers writings property or things as aforesaid in accordance with the provisions of this Act, and that he still fails or refuses so to do, the court may commit the offender to gaol, there to remain without bail until he has rendered such accounts, paid over such moneys, and produced and delivered up all such vouchers receipts books papers writings property and things in respect of which the charge was made: Provided that a person shall not be imprisoned under this section for a period exceeding six months (e).

No proceeding under this section shall be construed to relieve or discharge any surety of the offender from any liability whatever (f).

(a) These words apply to every local authority, whether urban or rural.

(b) See ss. 266 and 267, post, p. 593, as to the authentication and service of this notice, which should be signed by the clerk.

(c) See the definition, ante, p. 36.

Service at place of abode.

(d) As defaulting officers frequently abscond, this mode of service is very usual. By the last place of abode is meant the then present place of abode if the defaulter has any; the last which he had if he has ceased to have any (per COLERIDGE, J., in R. v. Evans (1850), 19 L. J. M. C. 151). The words of the text, however, are the last known place of abode. As to these words, see R. v. Higham (1857), 7 El. & Bl. 557; 26 L. J. M. C. 116; and see also R. v. Brown (1859), 21 J. P. 5; 1 L. T. 29; R. v. Smith (1875), L. R. 10 Q. B. 604; 39 J. P. 613; R. v. Cambridgeshire JJ. (1880), 44 J. P. 168; R. v. Lee (1888), 52 J. P. 344; 58 L. T. 384; R. v. Farmer (or Salford JJ.), [1892] 1 Q. B. 637; 56 J. P. 341.

Imprisonment.

(e) Under the P. H. A., 1848, s. 39, there was no limitation of time for the imprisonment; so that the prisoner, if obdurate, might have had to remain in prison for life; but, if he rendered an account and could not pay the balance, he could have been committed to prison for three months only. This distinction does not now remain. Whether the provision be imperative upon the justices may be questioned. Upon a similar provision in 17 Geo. 2, c. 38, s. 2, the court held that it was in their discretion whether they would commit to goal an overseer who neglected to account (R. v. Norfolk JJ. (1832), 4 B. & Ad. 238). See s. 3 of the Criminal Justice Administration Act, 1914, as to reduction of term of imprisonment on part payment.

The failure to render an account or give up books is a continuing offence, and, therefore, the limitation contained in the S. J. A., 1848, s. 11, will not apply. Indeed, the order of justices under this section, so far as it applies to the delivery of books, is not penal, but only in the nature of a distress; see Mayer v. Harding (1867), 32 J. P. 421 ; 17 L. T. 140. The neglect to pay over the moneys is a substantive offence, and to this the S. J. A., 1848, s. 11, may apply. Note to Section 196.

The Debtors Act, 1869, does not operate to prevent the imprisonment of the defaulter. See R. v. Pratt (or Ex parte Cole) (1870), L. R. 5 Q. B. 176 ; 34 J. P. 150. It has been decided that a discharge in bankruptcy operates to prevent an auditor from enforcing his certificate of a sum due from an overseer, the sum being a debt and provable in the bankruptcy, although there were special means provided for enforcing payment, viz., by distress and imprisonment (R. v. Martin (or Master) (1869), L. R. 4. Q. B. 285).

It may be a serious question whether this section is affected by the S. J. A., 1879. Section 6 of that Act provides that where by any Act, whether past or future, a sum of money claimed to be due is recoverable on complaint to a court of summary jurisdiction, and not on information, such sum shall be deemed to be a civil debt, and recoverable accordingly. Section 35 provides that a person shall not be imprisoned in respect of a civil debt except after proof of means on judgment summons. The proceedings to recover money under this section in the text seem to fulfil all the requirements of s. 6 of the Act of 1879, and if so, that section would seem to supersede the procedure prescribed in this text.

A warrant of distress might be issued : see s. 25 of the Criminal Justice Administration Act, 1914.

(f) It is a question not yet settled by authority whether a committal to prison will operate as a release of the defaulter's own liability. See the Debtors Act, 1869, s. 5, which is incorporated by the S. J. A., 1879, s. 35, and Evans v. Wills (1876), 1 C. P. D. 229 ; 40 J. P. 552, decided with reference to that section. Release of offender's liability.

Mode of conducting Business.

197. Every urban authority (a) shall from time to time provide (b) and maintain such offices (c) as may be necessary for transacting their business, and that of their officers and servants (d) under this Act. Urban authority to provide offices.

(a) It will be observed that the words are imperative, and that the section applies to urban authorities only. A rural sanitary authority, being formerly the same body as the board of guardians (see s. 9), were enabled to use the board room and offices of the union. Offices of rural district council.

The present rural district councils are distinct from boards of guardians, but (singularly) they possess no express statutory power for the provision of a separate meeting place and offices. Under the L. G. A., 1894, s. 59 (3), however, they are entitled to use at reasonable hours for the purposes of their meetings and proceedings the board room and offices of any board of guardians for the union comprising their district. The question led to friction in some cases, whether under this provision the officers of a rural district council had any right to use the guardians' offices.

The L. G. B. expressed the opinion, however, that the power of a rural district council to provide themselves with separate offices must be presumed. In a few cases, to make the legal position perfectly clear, the L. G. B. complied with applications by rural district councils (under s. 276, post), for the powers of s. 197.

An urban authority who are also a municipal corporation under the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, are empowered to employ the somewhat wider powers of that Act for the provision of offices, town halls, and other municipal buildings. Such buildings usually include accommodation for the purpose of discharging the duties of the corporation as an authority under the Public Health Acts, and the circumstances may be such that the estimated cost of erection should be divided so that part may fall upon the general district rate. If, however, the whole cost is treated in the first instance as one incurred under the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, a payment in the nature of a rent may be made from the general district rate to the borough fund. Powers under Municipal Corporations Act, 1882.

(b) Offices may be erected or existing buildings may be purchased or rented. Section 175, ante, p. 412, enables the urban authority to procure a site for new buildings. If the estimated cost of a scheme is heavy a loan should be obtained, Procedure for erection of offices.

Note to Section 197.

as to which see. ss. 233, 234, post, pp. 521, 527. Any agreement for the acquisition of a site, in such a case, should be provisional only, seeing that the sanction of the M. of H. is necessary. Any application should be made by the clerk to the council, and should be accompanied by a copy of the resolution directing it, plans and elevations of the proposed buildings, an explanation of the suggested allocation of the rooms in the building to their several purposes, an estimate in detail, and particulars (in forms supplied) of the debt and assessable value of the district. It will be necessary to strictly comply with any building byelaws in force in the district. The terms usually allowed for the repayment of loans of this character are sixty years for land, thirty for buildings, and fifteen for furniture and fittings.

Purchase of existing buildings.

In the case of an urban district council proposing to acquire existing buildings and adapt them for public offices, the council should (in case a loan is required) furnish a valuation of the buildings, and a report by an expert upon their condition, also with particulars of their age, the structural works required to be carried out, and the precise scheme of utilisation decided upon. See also next note.

Town hall.

(c) The section does not enable an urban district council to provide a town hall properly so called. If they are the council of a borough they have the powers of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, in this behalf. See note (a) above. In other cases if it is desired to provide a town hall or offices including accommodation for public meetings, it is competent to the council to apply to the M. of H. under the L. G. A., 1894, s. 33, for the wider powers conferred upon a parish council by s. 8 (1) (a), (b) of that Act.

What offices can be provided.

The offices to be provided under the section must be for purposes of the urban council and their officers only. They have therefore no authority to provide accommodation for such persons or bodies as magistrates, assistant overseers, relieving officers, registrars of births and deaths, inspectors of weights and measures, or collectors of poor rates. The same limitation would not, however, apply in the case of the purchase of an existing building which afforded the office accommodation required by the council in addition to other accommodation. The M. of H. do not refuse to sanction loans for the acquisition of such buildings, and under s. 177 portions not required may be let.

As to the use of a local authority's buildings and offices by trade unions and other bodies, see a L. G. B. Circular of March 23rd, 1908; as to their use by insurance committees see the National Insurance Act, 1911, s. 59 (4), and as to their use by approved societies, see ibid., s. 27 (2), and a L. G. B. Circular of December 5th, 1912.

Residences for employees.

(d) An urban district council have no power to provide residences for their officers and servants, but in a case in which the accommodation proposed to be provided for the surveyor of a council in connection with the provision of public offices communicated with the other part of the building, and the surveyor was to act as caretaker, no objection was raised by the L. G. B. Also in some cases loans have been sanctioned to rural councils for the provision of houses for road men.

Proceedings, etc. of urban authority being the council of a borough.

198. Where an urban authority are the council of a borough, they shall, subject to the provisions of this Act (a), exercise and execute their powers authorities and duties under this Act according to the laws for the time being in force with respect to municipal corporations in England (b).

(a) Such as, e.g., the appointment of committees for the purposes of the Act, see s. 200.

(b) An opinion formerly prevailed that where corporate boroughs adopted the previous Acts relating to public health and local government, and so became local boards of health, a new body was created, so that the corporation fulfilled two separate and distinct functions. This opinion was to some extent supported by R. v. Gloucester, ante, p. 457, and Anthony v. Brecon Markets Co. (1872), L. R. 7 Ex. 399; 31 J. P. 200. But in Andrews v. Ryde (Mayor, etc. of) (1874), L. R. 9 Ex. 302, it was decided that they were not two distinct bodies, and that the corporate body was the local board, or, in other words, that the local board had no existence, so that every contract, whether with the corporation acting as a local board, or with the corporation alone, was essentially made with the corporation. Hence no separate seals were required, nor separate liability incurred. See also Pedder v. Preston (Mayor, etc. of) (1862), 12 C. B. (N.S.) 535; 31 L. J. C. P. 291, which was in conformity with that decision.

The proceedings at the meetings of the council of a borough are regulated by the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 22, and Sched. 2.

Meetings, etc. of urban authority not being the council of a borough.

199. Every urban (y) authority (not being the council of a borough) (z) shall hold an annual meeting (a), and other meetings for the transaction of business under this Act once at least in each month, and at such other times as may be necessary for properly executing their powers and duties under this Act.

Meetings of local boards shall be held and the proceedings thereat shall be conducted in accordance with the rules as to meetings and proceedings contained in Schedule I. to this Act; and any improvement commissioners (b) may, if they think fit, adopt all or any of such rules.

(y) This section is now applied to rural as well as urban district councils (other than borough councils) by the L. G. A., 1894, s. 59, post.

(z) As to borough councils, see the preceding section.

(a) See Sched, I., r. 11, post, and the notes to that Schedule. This meeting is required to be held as soon as convenient after April 15th in each year, but the L. G. B. expressed the view that, subject to any regulation which an urban district council may have made under the Schedule, the annual meeting may be held on the day of the usual monthly meeting next after April 15th.

(b) See the definition in s. 4, ante, p. 4; but in so far as the powers of improvement commissioners as sanitary authorities are concerned, the commissioners have now become urban district councils.

Power of urban authority to appoint committees. [Repealed except as to boroughs by 56 & 57 Vict. c. 73, s. 89.]

200. Every urban authority may from time to time appoint out of their own number so many persons as they may think fit, for any purposes of this Act which in the opinion of such authority would be better regulated and managed by means of a committee (a): Provided that a committee so appointed shall in no case be authorised to borrow any money, to make any rate, or to enter into any contract (b), and shall be subject to any regulations and restrictions which may be imposed by the authority that formed it.

This section, except so far as it applies to boroughs, has been repealed by s. 89 and Sched. II. of the L. G. A., 1894, and the appointment of committees of district councils other than the councils of boroughs is now regulated by ss. 56 and 57 of that Act, post.

Committees of borough councils;

(a) The P. H. A., 1848, s. 36, required a local board to approve the acts of a committee, but there was a doubt as to the effect of this approval. See Firth v. Staines, [1897] 2 Q. B. 70; 61 J. P. 452, and R. v. Chapman, [1918] 2 K. B. 298; 82 J. P. 229. See, however, Bowyer v Mather, [1919] 1 K. B. 419; 83 J. P. 50, where these cases were distinguished. There is no such requirement in the text; but the urban authority may restrain the committee from acting wholly or partially without their sanction, and the proviso contains a statutory restraint upon the committee as to sundry matters of importance.

As to a council withdrawing powers delegated to a committee, see Huth v. Clarke (1890), 25 Q. B. D. 391; 55 J. P. 86.

As to the competence of a committee to determine the engagement of an employee when the powers of the council have been delegated to such committee, see Tottenham U. D. C. v. Hillier (1920), 42 M. C. C. 221.

Note to Section 200.

Powers, etc. of.

Under the previous Acts a local board appointed a committee, and afterwards passed a resolution approving the minutes of the committee resolving that certain streets should be paved; notices were then given, and, on default of the owners, the board passed a resolution approving a resolution of the committee that the work should be done by the surveyor. It was held that none of these acts of the Board were of such a nature as to require approval in the statutory manner, i.e., under seal and the hands of five members (Barnsley L. B. v Sedgwick (1867), L. R. 2 Q. B. 185; 31 J. P. 165).

Where a board constituted by an Act of Parliament is authorised by it to delegate any of its powers to a committee, the powers so conferred on the committee must be exercised by them acting in concert; and it is not competent to the committee to apportion among its members the duties delegated to it; one of them acting alone pursuant to such apportionment, cannot justify his acts under the Act of Parliament (Cook v. Ward (1877), 2 C. P. D. 255; 41 J. P. 439). This decision was distinguished where the resolution of a sub-committee had been confirmed by a sanitary committee whose resolution was subsequently confirmed by the town council: see Agnew v. Manchester Corporation (1902), 67 J. P. 174; 1 L. G. R. 9, and other cases cited on p. 98, ante; and see Hussey v. Exeter Corporation (1918), 82 J. P. 67; 87 L. J. Ch. 443.

The Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 22, enables a borough council to appoint out of their own body committees "for any purposes which, in the opinion of the council, would be better regulated and managed by means of such committees; but the acts of every such committee shall be submitted to the council for their approval." It appears to be doubtful whether such approval is necessary in the case of a committee appointed for the purposes of this Act; but probably it is not necessary: cf. Eaton v. Basker, infra.

A borough councillor appointed a member of a committee under s. 22 of the Act of 1882, can resign such membership (R. v. Sunderland Corporation, [1911] 2 K. B. 458; 75 J. P. 365).

An Irish county council purported to elect a County Pensions Committee under the Old Age Pensions Act, 1908, s. 8 (1), without having served notice on the members of the council as required by a certain Irish Act. M. was then elected chairman of the Pensions Committee. On an application for a writ of quo warranto, it was held that the committee being improperly elected, there was no office to which M. had been elected, and, therefore, quo warranto could not issue (R. v. M'Donald, [1913] 2 I. R. 55).

(b) In Eaton v. Basker (1881), 7 Q. B. D. 529; 45 J. P. 191, 616, a contract was entered into by a joint committee representing the council of a borough and the authorities of two other districts (which before action became merged in the borough whose council took over their liabilities). It was held that the council were bound by the contract as having been made by their agents, but that as it was made with the committee as such and not with the members of it individually, the latter were not personally liable upon it. But see generally as to the position of a council in respect of a contract purported to be made by a committee the cases collected in note (a) under s. 174 at p. 400, ante.

Power of rural authority to delegate their powers and duties to a committee. [Repealed by 56 & 57 Vict. c. 73, s. 89.]

201. A rural authority may, at any meeting specially convened for the purpose, delegate for the current year of their office all their powers to a committee consisting wholly of their own members; provided that one-third at least of such committee shall consist of ex officio guardians, but in case an adequate number of such ex officio guardians does not exist, then the number deficient shall be made up of elected guardians; and any such committee shall have the powers by this Act vested in the rural authority by which it was formed, and shall be deemed to be during such year of office as aforesaid the rural authority of the district.

This section was repealed by the L. G. A., 1894, s. 89, and Sched. II. See now ibid., ss. 56 and 57, post.

202. A rural authority (including any committee so formed as aforesaid) (a) may, at any meeting specially convened for the purpose, form for any contributory place (b) within their district a parochial committee consisting wholly of members of such authority or committee, or partly of such members and partly of such other persons liable to contribute to the rate levied for the relief of the poor in such contributory place (c), and qualified in such other manner (if any) as the authority forming such parochial committee may determine. Section 202. Power of rural authority to form parochial committees.

A rural authority (including any committee so formed as aforesaid) (a) may from time to time add to or diminish the number of the members, or otherwise alter the constitution of any parochial committee formed by it, or dissolve any parochial committee.

A parochial committee shall be subject to any regulations and restrictions which may be imposed by the authority which formed it: Provided that no jurisdiction shall be given to a parochial committee beyond the limits of the contributory place for which it is formed, and that no powers shall be delegated to a parochial committee, except powers which the rural authority could exercise within such contributory place (d).

A parochial committee shall be deemed to be the agents of the authority (e) which formed it, and the appointment of such committee shall not relieve that authority from any obligation imposed on it by Act of Parliament or otherwise.

A parochial committee may be empowered by the authority which formed it to incur expenses to an amount not exceeding such amount as may be prescribed by such authority; it shall report its expenditure to such authority as and when directed by such authority, and the amount so reported, if legally incurred, shall be discharged by such authority.

See also the L. G. A., 1894, s. 15, post, under which a rural district council may delegate to a parish council any power which may be delegated to a parochial committee. Where a parish council act as a parochial committee by delegation from the district council, they are to have the services of the clerk to the district council, unless that council otherwise direct: see the L. G. A., 1894, s. 17 (5). See also the Commons Act, 1899, s. 4, post, Vol. II., under which a rural district council may delegate to a parish council any powers of management conferred by Part I. thereof.

(a) These words must be regarded as repealed owing to the repeal of s. 201.

(b) See s 229, post, p. 510, as to what is "a contributory place." There is no authority for the appointment of a joint parochial committee, i.e., a committee for more than one contributory place. See, however, s. 57 of the L. G. A., 1894, in connection with s. 15 thereof.

(c) No amount of rate is required. The authority may prescribe some other qualification. Residence in the place or within a prescribed distance might be one qualification. Where there is a parish council, and the committee is formed in part of members of the district council, the other members must be, or be selected from, the members of the parish council (The L. G. A., 1894, s. 15, post).

(d) Hence the committee can make no appointment of officers. But see, supra, as to making use of the clerk to the district council. The authority can only appoint officers for the whole of their district, though probably they can assign to them duties to be performed only in the district of the parochial committee. It will be seen hereafter (see s. 229) that the salaries of all officers are chargeable as general expenses, though the M. of H. possess power under the P. H. A., 1890, s. 49 (as Powers of such committees.

Note to Section 202.

regards rural districts in which the section is in force) to make any expenses "special." See note under s. 229, post, p. 512.

(e) These words raise some difficulty. If the strict rule of agency be followed, the committee cannot act except according to the powers delegated to them by the authority; and, if they exceed them, must obtain a ratification of their act. But probably a greater latitude of action is intended to be exercised by them.

The L. G. B. expressed the opinion that a parochial committee, without any delegated powers of a rural authority, and with functions restricted to the making of recommendations, is not such a committee as the section contemplates.

As to the powers which may properly be delegated to such a committee, the Board mentioned the following, and the Ministry of Health probably hold the same views.

1. To inspect the parish from time to time with a view to ascertaining whether any works of construction are required or any nuisance exists which should be abated.

2. To superintend the execution and maintenance of any works which may be required or have been provided for the special use of the parish, and to give directions for any repairs or other matters requiring immediate attention in relation to such works which fall within the reasonable scope of the authority which they possess as agents of the sanitary authority.

3. To consider complaints of any nuisances and the action of the medical officer of health or inspector of nuisances thereon, and to inform those officers of any nuisances requiring their attention, and to give such directions for the abatement of the same in cases of urgency as the circumstances may seem to require.

4. To examine and certify all accounts relating to expenditure chargeable as special expenses to the parish.

5. To report to the sanitary authority from time to time the several matters requiring their attention and the manner in which their officers and servants have discharged their duties.

It will be observed that though the committee may incur expenses, they may only do so when expressly authorised, and then only within the prescribed limit; moreover, they must report such expenses to the rural authority—they cannot issue a precept for them.

Casual vacancies in committees may be filled.

203. Any casual vacancy occurring by death, resignation, disqualification, or otherwise in any committee may be filled up within six weeks, by the authority which formed such committee, out of qualified persons.

It is presumed that the limitation of time contained in this section is directory only. See R. v. Sparrow (1740), 2 Stra. 1123; R. v. Norwich (Mayor of) (1830), 1 B. & Ad. 310; 8 L. J. K. B. 359; R. v. Denbighshire (1803), 4 East, 142; Caldow v. Pixell (1877), 2 C. P. D. 562. From these and similar cases a general rule may be deduced that when the time prescribed for the performance of an act is not essential to its validity, and there is no provision for non-compliance, the limitation of time is merely directory.

Meetings and proceedings of committees. [Repealed by 56 & 57 Vict. c. 73, s. 89.]

204. Meetings of any committee appointed under this Act shall be held, and the proceedings thereat shall be conducted (so far as such meetings and proceedings are not regulated by the authority appointing the committee), in accordance with the rules as to meetings and proceedings contained in Schedule I. to this Act.

This section was repealed by the L. G. A., 1894, s. 89, and Sched. II.

Inspectors may attend meetings of certain authorities.

205. Inspectors of the Local Government Board (a) may attend any meetings of a rural authority or of an urban authority (being a local board) when and as directed by the Local Government Board (b).

The local authority of the district of Oxford (c) shall not, for the purposes of this section, be deemed to be a local board. Section 205.

(a) See s. 296, post, p. 629, and the Local Government Board Act, 1871, s. 3, in App. I., post, Vol. II.

(b) They have no power to take part in the proceedings so as to vote on any matter. They can hear what passes, and can advise when consulted. They can also convey any message from the Ministry.

As to the definition of local board, see s. 4, ante, p. 4.

(c) The Oxford local board was abolished by the City of Oxford Order, 1889, their powers being transferred to the corporation.

206. Every local authority shall make an annual report, in such form and at such time as the Local Government Board may from time to time direct, of all works executed, and of all sums received and disbursements made by them under and for the purpose of this Act during the preceding year, and shall send a copy to the Local Government Board: An urban authority shall also publish a copy in some local newspaper circulating in their district. Local authority to report.

In view of the financial statements required from urban and rural district councils under other provisions, no separate statement under this section has hitherto been required by the Ministry of Health or their predecessors the L. G. B.; and, even in the case of borough councils whose accounts are not subject to audit by a district auditor, the department consider the information contained in the returns under the Local Taxation Returns Acts, 1860 and 1877, and the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, and the publication of accounts required by the latter Act and s. 246, post, p. 540, to be quite sufficient for practical purposes.

PART VI.

RATING AND BORROWING POWERS, ETC.

EXPENSES OF URBAN AUTHORITY AND URBAN RATES.

207. All expenses incurred or payable by an urban authority in the execution of this Act, and not otherwise provided for (a), shall be charged on and defrayed out of the district fund and general district rate leviable by them under this Act (b), subject to the following exceptions; (namely,) Mode of defraying expenses of urban authority.

That if in any district the expenses incurred by an urban authority (being the council of a borough) in the execution of the Sanitary Acts (c) were at the time of the passing of this Act payable out of the borough fund or borough rate (d), then the expenses incurred by that authority in the execution of this Act shall be charged on and defrayed out of the borough fund or borough rate; and

That if in any district the expenses incurred by an urban authority (being improvement commissioners) (e) in the execution of the Sanitary Acts were at the time of the passing of this Act payable out of any rate in the nature of a general district rate (f) leviable by them as such commissioners throughout the whole of their district (g), then the expenses incurred by that authority in the execution of this Act shall be charged on and defrayed out of such rate; and for the purposes of this section the council of the borough of Folkestone shall be deemed to be improvement commissioners; and

That where at the time of the passing of this Act the expenses incurred by an urban authority in the execution of certain purposes of the Sanitary Acts were payable out of the borough fund and borough rate, and the expenses incurred by such authority in the execution of the other purposes of the said Acts were payable out of a rate or rates leviable by that authority throughout the whole of their district for paving sewering or other sanitary purposes, then the expenses incurred by that authority in the execution of the same or similar purposes respectively under this Act shall respectively be charged on and defrayed out of the borough fund and borough rate, and out of the rate or rates leviable as aforesaid (h).

Expenses otherwise provided for.

(a) See the saving in s. 319, post, p. 654, as to special district rates heretofore made and the charges thereon.

By a local Act (58 Geo. 3, c. lxxxi), certain persons therein mentioned were appointed commissioners for the purpose of paving the footways, and cleansing, lighting, and watching the streets in the town of M. By s. 59 "the said commissioners shall and are hereby authorised and required once in every year to rate and assess any sum not exceeding one shilling in the pound, upon or in respect of all houses, etc., being within the limits of the said town." By s. 57, "all and every person or persons paying the rates and assessments hereby authorised to be levied within the said town, shall be, and they and every of them is and are hereby exempted and discharged from all charges and expenses of paving, lighting, watching, cleansing, or fencing off any part or parts of the footways and crosspaths of the said town and borough." By the P. H. A., 1872, the borough of M. (within which was the town of M.) became an urban sanitary district, and the corporation the urban sanitary authority. By s. 16, all expenses incurred or payable by an urban sanitary authority under the Sanitary Acts, were to be defrayed in the case of the council of a borough out of the borough fund or borough rate. By the amending Act of 1874, all the powers and duties of the commissioners under the local Act, were transferred to the council. After the passing of the present Act, the council, as the urban sanitary authority for the borough, made a general borough rate to meet expenditure which included the paving, lighting, and cleansing of the town. A ratepayer who occupied a house within the borough, but outside the town, of M., appealed on the ground that the rate was made in part for raising money towards defraying the expenses of carrying the local Act into execution. It was held that the rate was invalid (Monmouth (Mayor, etc. of) v. Monmouth (Overseers of) (1878), 38 L. T. 612).

As to the misapplication of funds and illegal charges, see the note to s. 218, post, p. 499.

(b) See s. 210, post, p. 473.

(c) See the definition in s. 4, ante, p. 35.

Expenses payable out of borough rate.

(d) "Payable" means "legally payable." In some boroughs, owing to the difficulty in the interpretation of the P. H. A., 1872, the expenses had not been charged in point of fact to the borough fund or rate; in some other cases they had been wrongfully charged in the manner provided by this section. These different erroneous charges were rendered valid by s. 338, post, p. 665, but that section was repealed by the S. L. R. A., 1883. It is, therefore, necessary in some cases to determine whether before the Act the expenses in question were or were not legally payable out of the borough fund or rate. For an instance in which they were held not to be so payable, see Walsall (Overseers of) v. L. & N. W. Rail. Co. (1879), 4 App. Cas. 467; 43 J. P. 748; see notes to s. 211, post, p. 478.

As to the borough fund and rate, and the charges which may legally be paid out of them, see the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, ss. 139—149, and Sched. V.

(e) See the definition in s. 4, ante, p. 4.

Note to Section 207.

(f) See s. 210, post, p. 473, as to what is a general district rate. The Crediton Improvement Act, 1836, extended to the town of C., in which a part of the parish of C. was embraced. The commissioners were authorised to levy an annual rate on the occupiers of dwelling-houses within the town not exceeding 2*s.* 1*d.* in the pound, and all persons assessed under the Act were released from liability for the repairs of highways outside the town. The town became an urban district under the P. H. A., 1872, and the expenses incurred by the commissioners as the urban authority in the execution of the Sanitary Acts were, at the time of the passing of this Act, payable out of rates in the nature of general district rates leviable by them throughout the whole of their district. By an order of the county council (confirmed by the L. G. B.) the urban district was extended so as to include the part of the parish of C. which was outside the district at the time of the passing of the L. G. A., 1894, and it was provided that the district should be deemed to have been extended before the time of the passing of the Act of 1894. The district council thereafter made a rate for the whole district headed the "C. Improvement Rate for the year," etc., and among the persons assessed was the appellant who occupied a house in the old area. The rate exceeded the amount in the pound limited by the Improvement Act, and was made to defray expenses to be incurred under the Public Health Act, including the purposes for which rates were leviable under the Improvement Act; and was for the repair of highways in the old area, and in the added area. It was held that the rate was a good one, and was rightly headed (Hill v. Crediton U. D. C. (1899), 80 L. T. 861; and see Manly v. Young, [1895] 2 I. R. 676).

Expenses payable out of improvement rate.

By s. 181 of the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, the owners of property not exceeding £10 in annual value are to be rated, instead of the occupiers, to the rate directed by the special Act to be made, and there is no provision for reduction. By s. 65 of the R. Improvement Act, 1865, which incorporates the above provision, the commissioners were empowered to rate the occupiers of all hereditaments in the town at not more than 2*s.* 6*d.* in the pound, provided that a house not within 100 yards of a lamp should be rated at one-fourth. In 1912 the R. council, as successors to the commissioners, levied a rate exceeding 2*s.* 6*d.* in the pound, and headed "R. Improvement Act, 1865, and Public Health Act, 1875, sections 207 and 227; Local Improvement Rate in the nature of a General District Rate," on the owners of properties not exceeding £10 in value, without allowing them any reduction. It was held that the rate was one "directed to be made by the special Act," and was in the nature of a general district rate, and was properly levied on the owners (Ross U. D. C. v. Daniels (1913), 77 J. P. 456).

(g) These words remove an ambiguity which arose upon the P. H. A., 1872, s. 16, in the proviso: it must be observed also that the reference is as to what is legally payable, and not as to what had been so charged in fact.

"Leviable throughout whole district."

Section 211, post, p. 478, provides that general district rates shall be made and levied on the occupiers of all kinds of property for the time being by law assessable to any rate for the relief of the poor; and further, that the occupier of any land used as a railway constructed under the powers of an Act of Parliament for public conveyance shall be assessed in respect of the same in the proportion of one-fourth part only of such net annual value thereof. By 28 Geo. 3, c. 64, and 34 Geo. 3, c. 104, commissioners appointed under those Acts, called improvement commissioners, were empowered to levy a rate not exceeding 1*s.* in the pound on the annual value of all houses, buildings, and hereditaments within the town of Cambridge, for the purpose of carrying into execution certain specified improvements mentioned in those Acts. At the time of the passing of those Acts, and until 1856, the colleges and halls of the University, and also the corporation, were extra-parochial and not assessable to the above-mentioned rate. The respondents, acting as improvement commissioners and as the urban sanitary authority, assessed the appellants, who were owners of land and property used as a railway, at the full net annual value of such land and property, for the purpose of carrying into execution the provisions of the Cambridge Improvement Acts and of the P. H. A., 1875. It was held that the rate leviable by virtue of the Cambridge Improvement Acts was not "a rate in the nature of a general district rate leviable throughout the whole of the district" within the meaning of s. 207, and that as regards so much of the rate levied on the appellants as was necessarily applicable to the purposes of the Public Health Act, the appellants were liable to be assessed in the proportion of one-fourth only of the net annual value of their land and property used as a railway within the district of the respondents (G. E. Rail. Co. v. Cambridge Improvement Commissioners (1889), 61 L. T. 243).

Note to Section 207.

Expenses payable out of several rates.

(h) This paragraph applies to cases where there was a local Act in force in the district, or where the borough had adopted some of the provisions of 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, or 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98. The charges for the future are to continue to be charged in like manner as they were legally charged before the passing of the Act.

Power in certain cases by Provisional Order to alter mode.

208. Where at the time of the passing of this Act the expenses incurred by an urban authority for sanitary purposes are payable otherwise than in the manner provided by the Local Government Acts (a), the Local Government Board may, on the application of such authority (b), or of any ten persons rated to the relief of the poor within the district, declare by Provisional Order (c) that the expenses of such authority incurred in the execution of this Act shall be defrayed out of a district fund and general district rate to be levied by them under this Act, subject to the provisions of this Act with respect to the mode of defraying in certain cases the expenses of the repair of highways (d).

(a) See the definition in Sched. V., Part I., post. These payments were generally charged under a local Act.

(b) If the application is made by the urban authority a copy of their resolution should be forwarded by the clerk with a short statement of grounds; and if by ratepayers, a petition should be prepared adhering closely to the words of the section and setting out their case in favour of the proposed change. It will be observed that no specific amount of rating is prescribed for such petitioners.

In connection with such an application the Instructions as to Provisional Orders annually issued by the Ministry (see App. II., post, Vol. II.) should be studied if difficulty and delay are to be avoided.

Instances of such Provisional Orders are those relating to Penryn (1907), and Barnstaple (1896).

General District Rate.

District fund account.

209. In the district of every urban authority whose expenses under this Act are directed to be defrayed out of the district fund and general district rate there shall be continued or established a fund called the district fund: a separate account called "the district fund account" of all moneys carried under this Act to the account of that fund shall be kept by the treasurer of the urban authority (a); and such moneys shall be applied by the urban authority in defraying such of the expenses chargeable thereon under this Act as they may think proper (b).

(a) Though the treasurer is to keep the account of the fund, the authority should also keep a proper notice of it in their ledger.

(b) Note that in this matter the authority appears to have an absolute discretion, though the next section only enables a district rate to be made when the district fund is insufficient to meet the expenses. As to liability to pay income tax on any balance to the credit of the fund, see Matthews v. Cork C. C., [1910] 2 I. R. 544; Glamorgan Quarter Sessions v. Wilson, [1910] 1 K. B. 725; 74 J. P. 299.

210. For the purpose of defraying any expenses chargeable on the district fund which that fund is insufficient to meet, the urban authority (a) shall from time to time, as the occasion may require (aa), make by writing under their common seal (b), and levy in addition to any other rate leviable by them under this Act, a rate or rates to be called "general district rates." Section 210. —— Making general district rate.

Any such rate may be made and levied either prospectively in order to raise money for the payment of future charges and expenses, or retrospectively in order to raise money for the payment of charges and expenses incurred at any time within six months before the making of the rate (c): in calculating the period of six months during which the rate may be made retrospectively, the time during which any appeal or other proceeding relating to such rate is pending shall be excluded (d).

Public notice (e) of intention to make any such rate, and of the time when it is intended to make the same, and of the place where a statement (f) of the proposed rate is deposited for inspection, shall be given by the urban authority in the week immediately before the day on which the rate is intended to be made, and at least (g) seven days previously thereto (h); but in case of proceedings to levy or recover any rate it shall not be necessary to prove that such notice was given (i).

(a) Though it is not desirable that an authority should levy rates if not duly constituted, it is nevertheless very doubtful whether the legality of the election can be tried in resisting a rate levied by them; see Sched. II., r. 70 (now repealed by the L. G. A., 1894), post, and Howitt v. Manful (1856), 6 El. & Bl. 736; 20 J. P. 387. In that case a local board had required justices to issue a distress warrant, and upon distraint an action of replevin was brought (as to this see Ex parte Crumpsall L. B. (1856), 20 J. P. 771). The point was not absolutely decided, for the court held that the board were legally constituted. It had been held that the validity of the election of members of a board of guardians could not be questioned upon a mandamus to enforce a contribution for the relief of the poor (R. v. St. Andrew's, Holborn (Guardians of) (1839), 10 A. & E. 736). Validity of rate in relation to constitution of urban authority.

(aa) See as to concurrent rates, R. v. Fordham (1839), 11 A. & E. 73; R. v. Best (1848), 16 L. J. M. C. 102; and Evans v. Battersea Borough Council (1908), 72 J. P. 189; and as to enforcing such a rate before justices, see Sandgate L. B. v. Pledge (1885), 14 Q. B. D. 730; 49 J. P. 342. Concurrent rate.

(b) These words remove a difficulty raised in R. v. Worksop L. B. (1865), 5 B. & S. 951; 28 J. P. 596. The members need not now sign the rate. Rates under seal.

The rates which can now be levied by an urban authority under this Act are the general district rate, the water rate, the highway rate, the private improvement rate, and, perhaps, in certain special cases, a burial rate. See Sched. V., Part III., post.

(c) Care must be taken not to provide in the general district rate for expenses otherwise chargeable. In Dryden v. Putney (Overseers of) (1876), 1 Ex. D. 223; 40 J. P. 263, the expenses of paving a footpath had been improperly charged to the general rate, and the board were afterwards ordered to restore to the general rate the sum so charged, and to levy the amount upon the owners liable. See also Att.-Gen. v. Wandsworth District Board of Works (1877), 6 Ch. D. 539. See R. v. Dublin Corporation, [1911] 2 I. R. 245, as to whether a rate intended to provide funds for (inter alia) an illegal purpose can be quashed on certiorari, or must be appealed against. In Att.-Gen. v. Newcastle-upon-Tyne (Mayor, etc. of), [1892] A. C. 568; 56 J. P. 836, the defendants were restrained from applying a borough rate to an illegal purpose. Retrospective rates.

One general rate may be made to include both past and future expenses if the amount of each is shown in the estimate. A question was raised in R. v. Worksop L. B., supra, as to the effect of insufficiently setting out the sums required in respect of each of the purposes for which the rate was made, but the court did not decide the point.

In Smith v. Southampton Corporation, [1902] 2 K. B. 244; 67 J. P. 5, a decision of quarter sessions quashing a rate on the ground that it included charges incurred more than six months before the making of the rate was upheld on appeal.

The effect of the section is to legalise a retrospective payment out of the rate, provided the charges or expenses have been incurred within six months before the making of the rate. No validity is given to payments in respect of debts incurred beyond that time, except when the charges are expressly authorised by this or some previous Act. In a former edition of this work it was stated that since the decision in Waddington v. City of London Union (1858), El. B. & E. 370; 22 J. P. 755, it had probably been a good ground of appeal against a rate that it was to be applied to pay debts due beyond the limited time. It has now been decided that there is a right of appeal to quarter sessions where it appears from the estimate that payment of a debt more than six months old is to be made out of the rate (see Smith v. Southampton Corporation, supra). In that case a borough council in their estimate for a general district rate included items which consisted of debts contracted in former years, and which had from year to year been carried to a "suspense account," opened for that purpose, and a balance due for works executed in previous years. The council from time to time paid these old debts by money borrowed from their bank by overdrafts, but, so far as the ratepayers were concerned, the items remained unpaid so long as they appeared in the suspense account. It was held that the rate was bad on the ground that it contained charges incurred more than six months before the making of the rate. See also Att.-Gen. v. De Winton, post, p. 521.

As to the meaning of the term charges, reference should be made to R. v. Rotherham L. B. (1857), 8 El. & Bl. 906; 22 J. P. 641. It was there held that a judgment recovered against a local board was a charge; but that execution having been stayed for a period under the consent order for judgment, the six months did not begin to run until the expiration of that period, so that a rate could be levied within six months therefrom. As the judgment was not satisfied, the court issued a mandamus to the local board to make a rate to discharge it. See also as to a judgment being "a charge," Croydon Corporation v. Croydon R. D. C., [1908] 1 Ch. 222; 72 J. P. 13. The judgment of NEVILLE, J., in this case was partly reversed on appeal, [1908] 2 Ch. 321; 72 J. P. 369.

In Collen v. Dublin C. C., [1908] 1 I. R. 503, it was held that the fact that a decree of the Chancery Division rectifying a contract was necessary owing to the contract amount having by mutual mistake been put at too low a figure did not justify a departure from the provisions of such a section; nor did it matter that the debtors delayed in the expectation that the L. G. B. would intervene in the dispute.

Where certain commissioners were turned into a local board after having incurred certain liabilities which, by the order constituting the local board, were charged upon their property, it was held that the board were bound to make a rate to discharge this liability, notwithstanding the lapse of this period (Ward v. Lowndes (1859), 29 L. J. Q. B. 40; 23 J. P. 357). The ground of this decision was that the debt was not a charge incurred by the board within the meaning of the section, and that the board had power, under the order declaring the debt to be a charge on the rates, to levy a rate to defray it without limitation of time.

A plaintiff in his declaration prayed a writ of mandamus to compel a local board to levy a rate and pay him an amount awarded by an arbitrator as compensation for damages. The damage occurred more than six months before the application, but the award was made within six months. The board resisted the claim on the ground that the expenses for which it was sought to compel them to levy the rate had not been incurred within the six months prescribed by the corresponding section (s. 89) of the P. H. A., 1848. It was held that the plaintiff was entitled to his writ, for the six months must be reckoned from the date of the award (Ringland v. Lowndes (1863), 15 C. B. (N.S.) 173; 33 L. J. C. P. 25). Note to Section 210.

A local board having erroneously made a special rate, B. paid his quota before the error was discovered. Five years afterwards he commenced an action against the board to recover the money, and obtained a judgment, and afterwards sued them on the judgment, demanding in his declaration, a mandamus to them to make and levy a rate for the purpose of satisfying the judgment:—Held, assuming the debt so contracted by the board to be a charge, B. was not entitled to a mandamus to levy a rate as the original action was not commenced within six months after the charge was incurred (Burland v. Kingston-upon-Hull L. B. (1863), 32 L. J. Q. B. 17; 27 J. P. 230). In the same case it was decided that it is no answer to an application for a mandamus to levy a rate in such a case that the board may possibly have funds to pay the amount required, and that a fresh rate may not be necessary.

For an instance of the claim of a mandamus being inapplicable, see Bush v. Beavan, ante, p. 451. In an Irish case, R. v. Tramore Drainage Board (1892), 30 L. R. Ir. 329, a contractor who had obtained judgment against a drainage board for extra works executed by him under agreement with the board, but not specified in the final award, applied for a mandamus to compel the board to levy a rate to satisfy the judgment, but it was held that the mandamus should be refused as rates were leviable by the board for the maintenance of works only and not for their construction, which was otherwise provided for.

Where a judgment was recovered against a local board in an action commenced after the expiration of six months from the accrual of the right of action, and a mandamus was sued out within six months to enforce the judgment, the court held that a peremptory writ might be granted if sufficient cause were shown to excuse the delay in commencing the action (Worthington v. Hulton (1865), L. R. 1 Q. B. 63; 30 J. P. 22). Referring to this case, and to R. v. Rotherham L. B., ante, p. 474, Lord Blackburn, in Julius v. Bishop of Oxford (1880), 5 App. Cas., at p. 243, said: "Though giving a power is primâ facie merely enabling the donee to act, and so may not inaccurately be said to be equivalent to saying he may act, yet if the object of giving the power is to enable the donee to effectuate a right, then it is the duty of the donee of the power to exercise the power when those who have the right call upon him to do so. . . . Thus, in 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 89, the words are, 'The local board may make rates prospectively,' etc.; yet on the application of a judgment creditor a mandamus will go to compel the making of a rate for the purpose of satisfying a judgment within six months after the judgment has been obtained." See also Wolstanton United U. D. C. v. Tunstall U. D. C., [1910] 2 Ch. 347; 74 J. P. 353; [1911] 1 Ch. 229; 75 J. P. 203.

In Swire v. Burley L. B. (1859), 33 L. T. (o.s.) 222, a rule for a mandamus to levy a rate for the payment of a debt was made absolute when the work, payment for which was claimed, was done in 1857, but the judgment was not obtained until 1859, Erle, J., remarking that there had been no wilful delay, but the judgment had been delayed by misfortune. In this case, however, the writ had been issued within six months from the completion of the work.

But where, through the delay of the plaintiffs it was necessary for the defendants, a local board, to have the authority of a mandamus to justify them in paying a sum of money, the court refused to make a rule absolute calling on them to pay the costs of the mandamus (R. v. Burleigh L. B. (1859), 1 L. T. 92). Blackburn, J., said: "In this case judgment was not signed until two years after the verdict; and that circumstance alone was sufficient to render it desirable that the local board should be justified in making the payment by the authority of a mandamus. There has been a delay of two years, and a great part of that time has not been satisfactorily accounted for."

A corporate body having raised money under statutory powers by debentures issued some of their debentures to one of their own body in payment of goods supplied by him, such a transaction being illegal under the statute by which they were constituted:—Held, in an action by the executors of an innocent holder for value of such securities, that the defendants were estopped from setting up as a defence the original illegality of the transaction, and that under the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, s. 68, the writ was in the proper form in praying for a mandamus to compel them to apply the money in their hands raised under the powers of the statute and applicable to that purpose, and that it was not necessary that the mandamus should direct the defendants to levy a rate for the purpose of satisfying the plaintiffs' demand (Webb v. Herne Bay Commissioners (1870), L. R. 5 Q. B. 642 ; 34 J. P. 629).

At the time when the parish of B. was by a Provisional Order separated from the local government district of M., the special district rates of that district were mortgaged for the unexpired period of twenty-three years to secure the repayment of a debt which had previously been incurred by the local board of the district of M. The statute 24 & 25 Vict. c. 39, which confirmed the Provisional Order, apportioned the amount which the parish of B. should contribute towards the payment of such debt, and provided that the overseers of that parish should raise the annual instalments required to pay off the sum the parish of B. was to contribute in the name and as part of the rates levied within such parish for the relief of the poor. In July, 1883, the local board paid off the last instalment of principal and interest due under the mortgage, and on March 25th, 1884, demanded from the overseers of the parish of B. payment of the amount due from the parish since January 13th, 1879, up to which date the parish had duly contributed in accordance with the 24 & 25 Vict. c. 39. The demand not having been complied with, application was made for a mandamus to compel the overseers to levy a rate in order to pay the amount in arrear. It was held that the obligation imposed by the statute on the parish of B. was that they should pay their proportion of the debt annually, and that the effect of the granting of the mandamus would be to enforce the levy of retrospective rates ; and the court therefore discharged the rule (R. v. Bedlington Overseers (1884), 48 J. P. 486).

The writ of mandamus, being a prerogative writ, is not a writ of right. The granting of it is, therefore, discretionary (R. v. All Saints', Wigan (1876), 1 App. Cas. 611 ; 41 J. P. 132). The application for it must be made to the King's Bench Division (per BRETT, L.J., in Glossop v. Heston and Isleworth L. B., ante, p. 67). The granting of a mandamus in an action is also discretionary. See Croydon Corporation v. Croydon R. D. C., infra.

The defendants, a rural district council, in 1895, incurred a debt to an urban district council in respect of water supply for a contributory place within their district. The defendants refused to pay the debt, setting up a cross-claim against the urban district council for damages, for breach of agreement, to a greater amount. In respect of these conflicting claims a prolonged correspondence and negotiation took place between the two councils ; but ultimately the urban district council brought an action for their debt in March, 1897, and on May 15th, 1897, the amount actually payable to them was ascertained by judgment being recovered by them for a balance of their debt over and above the sum recovered by the defendants on their counterclaim. On October 25th in the same year, the urban district council applied for a mandamus commanding the defendants to issue their precept to the overseers of the contributory place for payment of the amount recovered. And it was held that the delay in the commencement of the action being under the circumstances excusable, the mandamus ought to issue, and that the rate which would thereupon have to be made would not be illegal as being retrospective (R. v. Leigh R. D. C., [1898] 1 Q. B. 836 ; 62 J. P. 355).

By certain agreements entered into between the plaintiffs and the defendants, the drainage area of certain parishes in the defendants' district was extended and connected with the general drainage system of the plaintiffs, and it was by such agreements provided that the defendants should pay to the plaintiffs as yearly rent an amount calculated on the rateable value of all the property within such parishes liable to contribute to the rates for special expenses under the Sanitary Acts. As the result of a mutual mistake the defendants only paid to the plaintiffs the amount calculated on the houses in such parishes actually connected with and draining into the plaintiffs' general drainage system. In an action claiming judgment for the amount of the difference and for a mandamus to issue precepts for the levying of rates sufficient to cover the same, it was held that the debt being ascertainable at the time when it originally became payable, though it was not properly ascertained through a mistake common to both parties, there must be judgment for the amount claimed, and, further, that the effect of R. v. Leigh R. D. C., supra, being to give the court a discretion as to granting a mandamus to levy a retrospective rate, no relief should be granted to the plaintiffs by way of mandamus to issue precepts for the levying of rates to satisfy the amount of the claim, as the effect of the mandamus would be to throw on one set of ratepayers a burden which should have been borne by another set of ratepayers (Croydon Corporation v. Croydon R. D. C., [1908] 1 Ch. 222; 72 J. P. 13). On appeal the court granted a mandamus as to such portion of the plaintiff's claim as accrued due in the year 1904–5, because a demand for the right sum had been made during the course of that year, and it might have been complied with during the year, and negotiations were entered into with respect thereto, and continued until the action was commenced. As to the remainder of the claim, i.e., the amount which accrued due during 1903–4, the court held that they would not be justified in throwing upon present ratepayers arrears which were not demanded until April, 1905 ([1908] 2 Ch. 321; 72 J. P. 369). See also Belfast Guardians v. Belfast Corporation, [1912] 1 I. R. 104, as to a claim two years old arising out of an arithmetical error in an apportionment and precepts.

This section appears to afford no defence to an action for a debt more than six months old, for the plaintiff may be able to enforce any judgment that he may obtain by the ordinary process of execution without asking for a mandamus to levy a rate (South Metropolitan Gas Co. v. Mayor, etc. of Bermondsey (1901), 17 T. L. R. 520).

It was pointed out in R. v. Wicklow C. C., [1908] 2 I. R. 101, that want of ability to comply with a mandamus is a good answer to an application for such a writ, and also that funds specifically dedicated to particular purposes cannot by means of a judgment be made applicable to other purposes.

It is to be observed that this section applies only to urban authorities.

As to when, apart from any express statutory provision such as that in the text, a rate is bad as being retrospective, see Harrison v. Stickney (1848), 2 H. L. Cas. 108; Jones v. Johnson (1850), 5 Ex. 862; 15 J. P. 21; Woods v. Reed (1837), 2 M. & W. 777: R. v. Maidenhead (Mayor, etc. of) (1882), 9 Q. B. D. 494; 46 J. P. 724; Jersey (Earl of) v. Uxbridge R. S. A., [1891] 3 Ch. 183; Caistor Union v. North Kelsey (Overseers of) (1890), 59 L. J. M. C. 102; 62 L. T. 731; Easton v. Nar Valley Drainage Commissioners (1892), 8 T. L. R. 649; R. v. Wexford Corporation (1887), 18 L. R. Ir. 119, 129; R. v. Leigh R. D. C., ante, p. 476, and Croydon Corporation v. Croydon R. D. C., supra. Such an objection, if not raised by appeal against the rate, cannot be taken in proceedings to enforce payment (R. v. Streetfield (1863), 27 J. P. 391; 11 W. R. 736; R. v. Kingston (1858), El. B. & E. 256; Cheney v. Tallowin, [1904] 2 K. B. 763; 68 J. P. 528).

(d) This provision was introduced into 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 54, because the law officers of the Crown had advised, in 1854, that if a rate were quashed on appeal, the six months' period was not extended, and that any rate of a retrospective character would still be limited to that period independently of its date. But it is not easy to see how the clause is to be worked out. It appears to depend upon a result not ascertained at the time when the rate is made. It is impossible to declare that subsequent events can render an absolute act which was legally valid when done, such as the making of the rate, invalid at the time of its being made. But the delay caused by the appeal, and litigation arising out of it, may affect the legality of payments out of the rate. Time of appeal excluded.

(e) There is no precise direction as to how this notice is to be published, but it will be best to follow the course adopted with regard to all notices of a public nature required to be given by the authority. Notice of rate.

(f) It is by no means clear what is meant by this statement; probably it is the draft of the proposed rate, which, being open to inspection, may be corrected, if erroneous, before it is sealed. Statement for inspection.

(g) These words mean that both days are to be exclusive (R. v. Shropshire JJ. (1838), 8 A. & E. 173; 7 L. J. M. C. 56; Young v. Higgon (1840), 6 M. & W. 49; 9 L. J. M. C. 29). "At least."

(h) It is not apparent for what object this notice is to be given, as no ratepayer

Note to Section 210.

can interfere to prevent the rate from being made, unless, indeed, the matter be of sufficient importance to justify an application for an injunction.

Object of notice.

(i) But if it be shown that the notice was not given, the question will arise whether this notice is a necessary condition precedent, or whether this provision is directory only. It will be seen hereafter (s. 222, post, p. 505) that the publication of the rate is not a condition precedent, and there are no words of avoidance in the text in case the notice is not given.

Effect of no notice.

Assessment, etc. of general district rate.

211. With respect to the assessment and levying of general district rates under this Act the following provisions shall have effect (a); (namely,)

(1) General district rates shall be made and levied on the occupier of all kinds of property for the time being by law assessable (b) to any rate for the relief of the poor, and shall be assessed on the full net annual value (c) of such property, ascertained by the valuation list (d) for the time being in force, or, if there is none, by the rate for the relief of the poor made next before the making of the assessment under this Act, subject to the following exceptions regulations and conditions; (namely,)

(a) The owner (e), instead of the occupier, may at the option of the urban authority be rated in cases—

Where the rateable value (f) of any premises liable to assessment under this Act does not exceed the sum of ten pounds; or

Where any premises so liable are let to weekly or monthly tenants; or

Where any premises so liable are let in separate apartments, or where the rents become payable or are collected at any shorter period than quarterly (g):

Provided that in cases where the owner is rated instead of the occupier he shall be assessed on such reduced estimate as the urban authority deem reasonable of the net annual value, not being less than two-thirds nor more than four-fifths of the net annual value; and where such reduced estimate is in respect of tenements (h) whether occupied or unoccupied, then such assessment may be made on one-half of the amount at which such tenements would be liable to be rated if the same were occupied and the rate were levied on the occupiers (i):

(b) The owner of any tithes, or of any tithe commutation rent-charge (k), or the occupier of any land used as arable meadow or pasture ground only (l), or as woodlands (m) market gardens or nursery grounds (n), and the occupier of any land covered with water (o), or used only as a canal or towing-path for the same (p), or as a railway (q) constructed under the powers of any Act of Parliament (r) for public conveyance, shall be assessed in respect of the same in the proportion of one-fourth part only of such net annual value thereof :

(c) If within any urban district or part of such district any kind of property is exempted from rating by any local Act in respect of all or any of the purposes for which general district rates may be made under this Act, the same kind of property (s) shall, in respect of the same purposes, and to the same extent within the parts to which the exemption applies (but not further or otherwise), be exempt from assessment to any general district rates under this Act unless the Local Government Board by Provisional Order otherwise direct (t).

(2) If at the time of making any general district rate any premises in respect of which the rate may be made are unoccupied (u), such premises shall be included in the rate, but the rate shall not be charged on any person in respect of the same while they continue to be unoccupied ; and if any such premises are afterwards occupied during any part of the period (v) for which the rate was made and before the same has been fully paid, the name of the incoming tenant shall be inserted in the rate, and thereupon so much of the rate as at the commencement of his tenancy may be in proportion to the remainder of the said period shall be collected recovered and paid in the same manner in all respects as if the premises had been occupied at the time when the rate was made :

(3) If any owner or occupier assessed or liable to any such rate ceases to be owner or occupier of the premises in respect whereof he is so assessed or liable, before the end of the period for which the rate was made, and before the same is fully paid off, he shall be liable to pay only such part of the rate as may be in proportion to the time during which he continues to be such owner or occupier (w) ; and in every such case if any person afterwards become owner or occupier of the premises during part of the said period, he shall pay such part of the rate as may be in proportion to the time during which he continues to be such owner or occupier, and the same shall be recovered from him in the same manner as if he had been originally assessed or liable :

(4) The urban authority may (x) divide their district or any street (y) therein into parts (z) for all or any of the purposes of this Act, and from time to time abolish or alter any such divisions, and may make a separate assessment on any such part for all or any of the purposes for which the same is formed ; and every such part, so far as relates to the purposes in respect of which such separate assessment is made, shall be exempt from any other assessment under this Act : Provided that if any expenses are incurred or to be incurred in respect of two or more parts in common the same shall be apportioned between them in a fair and equitable manner (aa),

Note to Section 211.

General scheme of section.

(a) In South Wales Rail. Co. v. Swansea L. B., post, p. 487, ERLE, J., commenting upon the corresponding provisions of the P. H. A., 1848, s. 88, said: "The general scheme of the enactment is that the occupiers of the classes of property most benefited by the expenditure of the district rates shall be liable to be rated at a higher rate, the occupiers of the classes less benefited at a lower rate, and the class of property most benefited is that which is occupied immediately for the purpose of residence and the kinds of property not so occupied are not to be rated so highly." See also Tottenham U. D. C. v. Metropolitan Electric Tramways, Ltd., [1913] A. C. 702; 77 J. P. 413, per Lord MOULTON.

The Agricultural Rates Act, 1896, by s. 1 (a), does not apply to any rate which the occupier of agricultural land is liable, as compared with the occupier of buildings or other hereditaments, to be assessed to or to pay in the proportion of one-half or less than one-half; and s. 9 defines the expression "agricultural land."

One local authority cannot agree with another to levy an assessment within its own district in a manner other than that prescribed by the Act which empowers it to make the assessment (Wordie v. Lanarkshire C. C. (1895), 23 R. 168).

Discount for prompt payment of rate.

The L. G. B. expressed the opinion that an allowance by an urban district council of a discount, in cases where prompt payment of a general district rate is made by a ratepayer, would be contrary to the provisions of s. 211.

Exemptions from assessment.

(b) Reference must be made to text books on the law of rating (e.g., Ryde on Rating) in order to determine what properties are by law assessable to the poor rate. The principal exemptions from rating are Crown property, such as Royal Palaces, the Houses of Parliament; Government offices, such as the Post Office, the Horse Guards, and the Admiralty, Leith Harbour (Commissioners of) v. The Inspector of the Poor (1866), L. R. 1 H. L. Sc. 17; local post offices, Smith v. Birmingham (Guardians of) (1857), 7 El. & Bl. 483; 26 L. J. M. C. 105; Government telegraphs (see Telegraphs Act, 1868, s 22); bridges in the occupation of the Commissioners of works, R. v. McCann (1868), L. R. 3 Q. B. 141; 32 J. P. 579; barracks, Lord Amherst v. Lord Sommers (1788), 2 T. R. 372; military and naval storehouses R. v. Stewart (1855), 8 E. & B. 360; lighthouses and property belonging to or occupied by the general lighthouse authorities or the Board of Trade (57 & 58 Vict. c. 60, s. 731); prisons, Gambier v. Lydford (Overseers of) (1854), 3 El. & Bl. 346; 18 J. P. 456; county buildings, such as courts of assize and quarter sessions, judges' lodgings, police stations, etc., R. v. St. Martin's, Leicester (1867), L. R. 2 Q. B. 493; 31 J. There are also exemptions by virtue of statutes, e.g., personal property under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 89, an Act which is renewed annually; turnpike tolls, under 3 Geo. 4 c. 126, s. 51, and 4 Geo. 4, c. 95, s. 31; churches and places of religious worship under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 30; Sunday and ragged schools, under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 40 (see Bell v. Crane (1873), L. As to the privilege of an ambassador and his suite from payment of rates, see Parkinson v. Potter (1885), 16 Q. B. D. 152 ; 50 J. P. 470 ; Macartney v. Garbutt (1890), 24 Q. B. D. 368 ; 54 J. P. 437.

It is not now a ground of exemption from rating that the property is occupied for public purposes (Mersey Docks and Harbour Board Trustees v. Cameron (1865), 11 H. L. Cas. 443).

Unoccupied property cannot be rated (Smith v. New Forest Union (1889), 54 J. P. 324 ; 61 L. T. 870 ; New Ross Union v. Byrne (1892), 30 L. R. Ir. 160). Upon similar words in a local Act, it was held that the owner of unoccupied and unfurnished premises was not rateable (Sligo (Corporation of) v. Wynne (1873), 7 Ir. R. C. L. 465). Unoccupied property.

As to what amounts to occupation, see Southend-on-Sea (Mayor, etc. of) v. White (1900), 65 J. P. 7 ; 83 L. T. 408 ; Bootle Overseers v. Liverpool Warehousing Co. (1901), 65 J. Guardians were held to be in rateable occupation of a workhouse under similar words in 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 55 (Toxteth Park (Guardians of) v. Toxteth Park L. B. (1861), 1 B. & S. 167 ; 25 J. P. 645).

(c) See the definition of full net annual value in s. 4, ante, p. 15.

Annual value.

(d) The reference is to the valuation list made by the union assessment committee, which alone shows the annual value of properties assessed to the poor rate. The statutes in force with reference to the making and revising of valuation lists are the Union Assessment Committee Acts, 1862 and 1864. The L. G. A., 1858, s. 56, enabled a local board at their option to have a valuation made for themselves, but this option is taken away, and the valuation list must now be followed, or the poor rate in the very few cases where there is no such list. The term valuation list has acquired a technical meaning. As to what is the valuation list "in force" on any particular date, cf. Metropolitan Water Board v. Phillips, [1913] A. C. 86; 77 J. P. 73.

Valuation list.

A supplemental valuation list, in which the valuations of certain classes of property have been increased by a fixed percentage, is invalid (Stirk & Sons v. Halifax Assessment Committee, [1922] 1 K. B. 264; 86 J. P. 9).

Note to Section 211.

Section 221, post, p. 503, provides for the amendment of the rate when made.

Rating of owners.

(e) See the definition of "owner" in s. 4, ante, p. 8.

59 Geo. 3, c. 12, s. 19, and 13 & 14 Vict. c. 99, contained provisions with regard to the assessment of owners to the poor rate. The former was impliedly (West Ham (Churchwardens of) v. Fourth City Mutual Building Society, [1892] 1 Q. B. 654; 56 J. P. 438), and the latter expressly, repealed by 32 & 33 Vict. c. 41, s. 6, so far as it relates to the poor rate (and see 45 & 46 Vict. c. 27, as to highway rates). In parliamentary boroughs under the Representation of the People Act, 1867, where a dwelling-house or tenement is wholly let out in apartments or lodgings not separately rated, the owner shall be rated in respect thereof. Under this provision a rent collector cannot be rated as the "owner" (Nokes v. Strong, [1909] 2 K. B. 625; 73 J. P. 417). For other decisions under this section, see Griggs v. Stephens (1910), 74 J. P. 67; 101 L. T. 950; Crow v. Hilleary, [1913] 1 K. B. 385; 77 J. P. 164; R. v. Roberts, [1914] 1 K. B. 369; 77 J. P. 403; R. v. Carson Roberts, [1915] 3 K. B. 313; 80 J. P. 41; Reigate Corporation v. Wilkinson (1920), 84 J. P. 17; 18 L. G. R. 353.

When an urban authority determine to put in force this provision of the present section, the owner is to be rated. The statute does not require the occupier to be rated and enable the owner to pay the rate less a commission as in 32 & 33 Vict. c. 41, s. 3.

The authority may, it seems, select particular owners to be rated instead of the occupiers, and omit others. The words of the section give the authority a discretion in this respect.

The L. G. B. stated that it appeared to them that a council might cease to exercise their powers of rating owners to the general district rate under the section referred to, and might rescind any resolution in force on the subject. They were not aware of any statutory provision requiring a council to give notice in the district of their intention to alter their practice in the matter.

This provision applies only where there is an occupier who is not also the owner; an occupying owner cannot under the section be rated at a reduced figure (R. v. Propert, [1911] 1 K. B. 83; 74 J. P. 474).

Rateable value.

(f) This appears to mean the net rateable value as distinguished from the gross estimated rental. See afterwards in the section, and see also ante, p. 15. Refer also to s. 4, ante, p. 7, for the definition of premises.

Upon any change in the rateable value of the premises whereby the assessment is increased to more than £10, the owner will cease to be rateable under this provision (Norwood (Overseers of) v. Salter, [1892] 2 Q. B. 118; 56 J. P. 535).

Short terms.

(g) It is to be observed that where the premises are let to weekly or monthly tenants, or in separate apartments, there is no limit as to the annual value, and in some cases the authority may prefer to rate the actual occupiers instead of the owners. The provisions of 59 Geo. 3, c. 12, s. 19, may be usefully compared with those in the text, and a decision of the House of Lords thereon may be referred to (West Ham (Churchwardens of) v. Iles (1883), 8 App. Cas. 386; 47 J. P. 708).

Tenements.

(h) Note that the word tenements is here used in place of premises, but probably there is no difference in the meaning of the enactment. See New River Co. v. St. Pancras (Vestry of) (1880), 45 J. P. 75. As to the meaning of the expression "tenements," see R. v. Carson Roberts, supra.

Discretion as to assessment on one half.

(i) A discretionary power is given to the authority to rate an owner in respect of tenements, whether occupied or unoccupied; but when the owner is so rated the authority have no discretion to rate him at an amount other than one-half the rateable value (R. v. Barclay (1882), 8 Q. B. D. 486; 46 J. P. 693). If a rate (in the nature of a general district rate) is really made under a local Act and not under this one, an owner may in general be rated without any abatement (Ross U. D. C. v. Daniels, p. 471, ante).

The allowances made under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 41, ss. 3, 4, in the case of a poor rate, are different.

Rating tithe rent-charge.

(k) For the proper mode of rating tithe rent-charge to the poor rate, see R. v. Goodchild and R. v. Hawkins (1858), 27 L. J. M. C. 233; 22 J. P. 14; overruled in some respects by R. v. Sherford (1867), L. R. 2 Q. B. 503; 31 J. P. 629; Lawrence v. Tolleshunt Knights Overseers (1862), 2 B. & S. 533; 26 J. P. 422; Piggott v. Cuckfield Union, [1921] 2 K. B. 647; 85 J. P. 175; Keane v. Ashbocking Overseers

(1921), 85 J. P. 270; 19 L. G. R. 759. 14 & 15 Vict. c. 50, which is not repealed by this Act, provided that tithes, tithe rent-charges, moduses, compositions real, and other payments in lieu of tithes should be assessed under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 88, as and in the same proportion of their annual value as land used as arable, meadow, or pasture land only. The exemption conferred by the Tithe Rent-charge (Rates) Act, 1899, s. 1, is not applicable to rates made under the text (ibid., s. 4). Note to Section 211.

As to the recovery of rates on tithe rent-charge, see the Tithe Act, 1891, s. 6, and Roberts v. Potts; Jones v. Cooke, [1894] 1 Q. B. 213; 58 J. P. 333.

By the Ecclesiastical Tithe Rent-charge (Rates) Act, 1920, the owners of tithe rent-charge are given relief in respect of the payment of rates until January 1st, 1926, and to the extents therein specified, and are by the same Act given total exemption in certain cases: see the Act, post, Vol. II., and see also Keane v. Ashbocking Overseers, supra.

(l) For a case where there was an exemption of all arable land exceeding two acres under a local Act, and where there was, therefore, a conflict between the provisions of the local Act and the text, see Walton (Commissioners of) v. Walford, cited in the note to s. 227, post, p. 509. Arable, meadow and pasture.

Land occupied by a booth used at the time of races, but not otherwise used, was held not to fall under any of these exemptions, and was, therefore, to be assessed at its full value (R. v. Briscoe (1856), 20 J. P. 52).

When shooting rights over land which is arable, meadow or pasture ground are let, the tenant thereof is the occupier of a special incorporeal hereditament made rateable by the Rating Act, 1874, and is liable for the full amount of the rate (Alton U. D. C. v. Spicer, [1904] 1 K. B. 678; 68 J. P. 256). Sporting rights.

With reference to the assessments of rights of sporting in cases where land was occupied without buildings, and the landlord reserved the right of sporting, the L. G. B. stated that it seemed to them that the provision in the Rating Act, 1874, s. 6 (1), to the effect that where a right of sporting is severed from the occupation of the land, and is not let, and the owner of the right receives a rent for the land the right shall not be separately valued, must now be read together with the Agricultural Rates Act, 1896, s. 5 (a), which requires that in every valuation list the value of agricultural land shall be stated separately from that of any building or other hereditament. The Board thought that the latter enactment rendered it necessary that where, in cases of the class referred to, the rateable value of any agricultural land would, under the Rating Act, 1874, be increased by reason of its being estimated as if the rights of sporting were not severed, the amount of such increase should now be entered in the valuation list as the rateable value of the rights of sporting separately from the value of the land over which they are exercised. See also next note.

(m) This exemption is now extended to orchards by 53 & 54 Vict. c. 17, post, and to allotments by 54 & 55 Vict. c. 33, post. It is singular that the L. G. A., 1858, s. 56, contained the provision as to the rating of woodlands, although such property was not assessable to the poor rate, except when there were saleable underwoods, before 37 & 38 Vict. c. 54. That statute, in s. 12, enacts that "the provisions of the Sanitary Acts, as defined by the Public Health Act, 1872, with respect to any special assessment of woodlands for the purpose of any rate under those Acts shall be deemed to extend to and include land used for a plantation or a wood, or for the growth of saleable underwood, or for both such purposes, and made rateable by this Act to the poor rate." Under this Act, woods and woodlands must be rated in their natural and unimproved state. See Baker v. Beyford (Overseers of) (1876), 33 L. T. 755; Westmoreland (Earl of) v. Southwick and Oundle (1877), 41 J. P. 231; 36 L. T. 108. The right of sporting over such woodlands, if not severed from the occupation and let to a tenant, may be taken into account as enhancing their value (Eyton v. Mold (Overseers of) (1880), 6 Q. B. D. 13; 45 J. P. 54); if severed from the occupation and let, the tenant thereof is assessable in respect thereof, and is liable for the full amount of the rate (see Alton U. D. C. v. Spicer, supra; and see also note (l), supra). See also generally as to the rating of woodlands, a Circular of the L. G. B., dated April 18th, 1910. Woodlands, orchards and allotments.

(n) In 1885 the Middlesex Sessions decided that land covered with glass and used for the purposes of forcing fruit and flowers for early markets was within this exception as being a nursery or market garden (Kay v. Finchley L. B. (1885), 49 J. P. 488). And the High Court has since decided to the same effect (Purser v. Market gardens and nurseries.

Note to Section 211.

Worthing L. B. (1887), 18 Q. B. D. 818; 51 J. P. 596). These decisions are not affected by that in Smith v. Richmond, [1899] A. C. 448; 63 J. P. 804, to the effect that glasshouses on or in a market garden, if buildings, must, under the Agricultural Rates Act, 1896, be rated as buildings and not as agricultural land.

Land covered with water.

(o) These words apply to the reservoir, but not to the pipes and mains, of a water company. The pipes are merely the medium of carrying the water from the reservoir, and are not privileged (R. v. Birmingham Waterworks Co. (1861), 1 B. & S. 84; 25 J. P. 308). As to the rating of mains and pipes, see R. v. West Middlesex Waterworks Co. (1859), 28 L. J. M. C. 135; 23 J. P. 164; R. v. Southwark and Vauxhall Water Co. (1856), 6 El. & Bl. 1008; 21 J. The words "land covered with water" were held to apply to a dock belonging to a dock company (R. v. Newport Dock Co. (1862), 2 B. & S. 708; 31 L. J. M. C. 266; and see per Lord CAMPBELL, C.J., in Peto v. West Ham (Overseers of) (1859), 2 El. & El. 144, at p. 157; 23 J. P. 422; and per BLACKBURN, J., in R. v. Midland Rail. Co. (1875), L. R. 10 Q. B. 389; 40 J. P. 198); and to a canal and filter beds supported on brick arches and sometimes covered with water and sometimes not (East London Waterworks Co. v. Leyton Sewer Authority (1871), L. R. 6 Q. B. 669; 35 J. P. 677). "Dry" docks or graving docks into which water is only admitted for the floating of a vessel into and from a position for examination and repairs are not "land covered with water" within the meaning of the section (Mersey Docks and Harbour Board v. Birkenhead Corporation, [1916] 1 K. B. 695; 80 J. P. 217).

The appellants were rated at £4,700, being the full net annual value of certain pontoons, dock land and buildings occupied by them on the bank of the Tyne. At all states of the tide the water flowed under the pontoons, which were used for repairing ships and were kept in position by iron arms working on hinges, but could be detached. The pontoons were rated as part of the premises forming the shipbuilding or repairing yard of the appellants or as machinery or appliances attached and ancillary to the use of the yard, and enhancing its value as a rateable hereditament. It was held that the pontoons enhanced the value of the land beneath them, and that such land must be rated as "land covered with water" within the meaning of s. 211 (1) (b), at one-fourth only of the net annual value (Smith's Dock Co., Ltd. v. Tynemouth Corporation, [1908] 1 K. B. 948; 72 J. P. 201).

By the London Government Act, 1899, s. 19 (1), it was provided that a scheme under the Act should provide for placing Woolwich under the general law applicable to metropolitan boroughs, and for the repeal of the application thereto of the Public Health Acts; and by s. 10 (1) that a scheme under the Act should provide for all the expenses of a borough council being paid out of the general rate, but should make provision for protecting the interests of owners and occupiers of any hereditament which was exempt from any rate or liable to be assessed thereto at a less amount than other hereditaments. The London (Rating) Scheme, 1901, by s. 2 (1), provided for maintaining the exemption by a particular method of levying the rate. It was held that the partial exemption of land covered with water was preserved (London and India Docks Co. v. Woolwich Borough Council, [1902] 1 K. B. 750; 66 J. P. 484).

(p) Bridges over a canal, dry docks, and posts put up for purposes of navigation are all accessories to the canal, and must be treated as part thereof. Both the canal and its accessories must be treated as land covered with water (R. v. Neath (Overseers of) (1871), L. R. 6 Q. B. 707). This case may usefully be compared with Peto v. West Ham (Overseers of), ante, p. 486. Where the predecessors in title of a railway company were empowered by statute to scour, enlarge, deepen, and otherwise improve the navigation of a river, and to make a towing-path, it was held that the company were not in occupation of the bed of the river, but had merely an easement ; nor was the ownership or exclusive occupation of the towing-path vested in them ; and they were, therefore, not rateable in respect either of the bed of the river, or of the towing-path (Doncaster Union v. M. S. & L. Rail. Co. (1894), 71 L. T. 585 ; 6 R. 280). Canals.

(q) It was held in South Wales Rail. Co. v. Swansea L. B. (1854), 4 El. & Bl. 189 ; 24 L. J. M. C. 30, that the word "railway" in such a provision as the present means the way on which carriages actually go, including the line itself, the turntables, and sidings, and land used only for the supporting of this way, as for embankments, etc. All these are within the exemption, and are to be assessed at the lower rate. But adjuncts such as stations and warehouses, though necessary for the working of the railway, do not form part of it within the exemption, and land used for the latter purposes is assessable at its full net annual value. The principle of this case was followed by the House of Lords in L. & Y. Rail. Co. v. Liverpool Corporation, [1915] A. C. 152, where it was held (varying [1913] 3 K. B. 247 ; 77 J. P. 305) under a similar section in a local Act that loading ways or roads, loading platforms and mounds, sidings, turntables, hoist houses, hoists, capstans and cranes, and the land under all of these were rateable only at one-fourth of their value ; but that general approach roads, substantial roofs over lines, platforms, mounds and loading ways, and buildings generally were rateable at their full value. The earlier cases, infra, must now be read in the light of this decision. Railways.

A borough improvement Act contained a similar provision to the present section. Sidings and turntables occupying about ten acres of land were used for loading trucks and carriages with goods, and also as a standing place for laden and unladen carriages, and were necessary for conducting the traffic of the railway. These were held rateable at one-fourth of the net annual value (Midland Rail. Co. v. Birmingham Corporation (1865), 30 J. P. 197 ; 13 L. T. 404).

In N. E. Rail. Co. v. Scarborough L. B. (1868), 33 J. P. 244, it was held that in assessing a railway and sidings, etc. to the general district rate, the sidings, turntables, and strip of land adjacent to the line were all to be treated as part of the railway except such part of the strip of land as was not necessary for the use of the railway proper. In L. & N. W. Rail. Co. v. Llandudno Improvement Commissioners, [1897] 1 Q. B. 287 ; 61 J. P. 55, the exemption was held to extend to platforms at a station and to the roof covering them, the rails and sidings. Where the respondents were owners of a goods station containing a number of lines, sidings, and platforms for unloading goods, also turntables, cranes, a weighbridge and offices, and a yard for carts, the whole being situated half a mile from the main line, but connected with it by a line not belonging to the respondents which they were permitted to use, it was held that the goods station as a whole was not land used as a railway for public conveyance within the meaning of the Liverpool Corporation Act, 1893, and that, therefore, the respondents were not entitled to be rated in respect of it at one-fourth of the net annual value (Williams v. L. & N. W. Rail. Co., [1900] 1 Q. B. 760 ; 64 J. P. 372).

Note to Section 211.

A railway, constructed under an Act of Parliament for the transportation of traffic and as accessory to a dock, but free to the public on payment of certain rates and tolls, is a railway within this proviso, although neither used nor intended for the conveyance of passengers (R. v. Newport Dock Co., supra).

Certain local government Acts appointed improvement commissioners for sanitary purposes over a district which lay partly within and partly without the borough of Walsall. The commissioners had power to levy rates to defray expenses which they were bound to incur. The rate on any railway within the commissioners' district was, by a local Act of 1848, limited to one-fourth of the rateable value of the railway. Part of a line of railway ran through the district, and was so rated under the local Act up to 1872. By the P. H. A., 1872, urban authorities were constituted, and the mayor and town council became an urban authority for, amongst others, sanitary purposes in the borough. Both bodies, the commissioners and the town council, were given powers to make rates to defray the expenses incurred by them in the discharge of their respective duties. In the grant to the town council of rating powers, nothing was said with regard to any limit of rating upon any particular kind of property. Then came the present Act of 1875, which contained in particular s. 207, ante, p. 469, and the sub-section in the text. By a local Act of 1876, the limits of the borough were greatly extended, and the mayor, etc. of the borough became the sanitary authority for the extended borough. The local Act of 1848 was repealed, with the exception of certain sections. Among the excepted sections, that one which limited the amount of rateability of railways was not mentioned, but nothing was said specifically to put an end to that limited liability. It was held by the House of Lords, upon the true construction of the various Acts, public and local, that there having been no express revocation of the privilege granted in respect of rating the railway at only one-fourth of its rateable value, a borough rate calculated on its full rateable value could not be maintained (Walsall (Overseers of) v. L. & N. W. Rail. Co. (1879), 4 App. Cas. 467 ; 43 J. P. 748).

By a local improvement Act, "as to all rates made and levied by the municipal corporation of H.," the N. railway company were to be assessed at one-fourth of the net annual value. The H. corporation before and after the Act obtained their borough and watch rates in parish S. by means of warrants addressed by the mayor to the overseers of S., ordering them to pay the several amounts required out of the poor rate, and the overseers assessed the ratepayers accordingly. It was held that the H. corporation, and not the overseers, made and levied the borough and watch rates, and that the company were assessable only at one-fourth of the net annual value (N. E. Rail. Co. v. Sutton (Overseers of) (1886), 51 J. P. 165).

A railway company which received wharfage dues in respect of a piece of land between the lines of rails and a navigable river, was held to be properly rated at the full net annual value in respect of such land, as the land was used for a purpose other than that of a railway (R. v. Taff Vale Rail. Co. (1857), 22 J. P. 21).

Tramways, tramroads, and light railways.

In Swansea Improvements and Tramways Co. v. Swansea Urban Sanitary Authority, [1892] 1 Q. B. 357 ; 56 J. P. 248, the appellants, under powers given by local Acts, constructed a tramway communicating by points and switches with a railway in their possession, which was worked by them in conjunction with the tramway, and had been constructed by them under an Act of Parliament. It was held that the land occupied by the tramway was not "used only as a railway" within the meaning of the text, and that the appellants were not entitled to be rated in respect of it at one-fourth part only of its net annual value. This decision was followed in Tottenham U. D. C. v. Metropolitan Electric Tramways, Ltd., [1913] A. C. 702 ; 77 J. P. 413. There, the respondents worked as one connected system certain tramways and light railways. The tramways and light railways were identical as to mode of construction and materials, and the carriages used upon them were the same. The electrical energy used for working the tramways and light railways was generated at the same power station, and was thence transmitted over a common system of cables and mains to sub-stations. The appellants rated the light railway portion within their area at one-fourth its value, but the tramway portion at its full value. It was held that the tramway portion was not "land used as a railway" within s. 211 (1) (b). In an earlier case, the appellants had constructed under a special Act a tramroad connecting two tramways. This tramroad, except where it passed over roads by means of level crossings, was constructed on lands the exclusive property of the appellants, and these lands were fenced off from the adjoining lands. The rails were laid on sleepers in the manner usual with railways, and physically the tramroad resembled an ordinary railway. The special Act incorporated, as regards the tramroad, certain provisions of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, and provided that, for the purposes thereof, the tramroad should be deemed to be a railway, and it also applied to the tramroad certain other provisions of the Railways Clauses Act, 1845, and certain provisions of the Railways Clauses Act, 1863, as if the same were a railway:—Held, that the tramroad track was "land used as a railway" within the meaning of the text, and was entitled to the partial exemption from rating (Thornton U. D. C. v. Blackpool and Fleetwood Tramroad Co., [1909] A. C. 264; 73 J. P. 299). In another case the owners of a light railway, constructed under an Order made under the Light Railways Act, 1896, and laid in the public streets, had, by the terms of the Order, the exclusive use of the railway for carriages with flange wheels, without prejudice to the right of passage by the public over the highway with other carriages. Physically the light railway resembled a tramway:—Held, that by virtue of the Act of 1896, the light railway was a railway to which s. 211 (1) (b) applied, and that the owners thereof were occupiers of land used only as a railway constructed under the powers of an Act of Parliament for public conveyance within the section, and were, therefore, assessable to the general district rate in respect of the railway at one-fourth part only of its annual value (Wakefield and District Light Rail. Co. v. Wakefield Corporation, [1908] A. C. 293; 72 J. P. 315). Note to Section 211.

Where it was practically admitted that, in view of a recent decision as to the status of another part of the same tramroad, a tramroad was wrongly rated at its full value, it was held that magistrates were justified in refusing to order payment or issue a distress warrant for the full sum (Dixon v. Blackpool and Fleetwood Tramways Co., [1909] 1 K. B. 860; 73 J. P. 219). But in general such an objection should be taken by appeal against the rate (ibid.; Whaley v. G. N. (Ireland) Rail. Co., [1913] 2 I. R. 142; Naas U. D. C. v. G. S. & W. Rail. Co., [1915] 2 I. R. 14; 48 Ir. L. T. 83).

(r) A railway constructed over land without purchase, but under contract to pay wayleaves, used for the purpose of working mines and carrying goods, was held not to be within this exception, although under certain Acts of Parliament it had become vested in the railway company (N. E. Rail. Co. v. Leadgate L. B. (1870), L. R. 5 Q. B. 157; 34 J. P. 598). The tramroad and light railway respectively discussed in the Blackpool and the Wakefield Cases, supra, were both held to have been constructed "under the powers of an Act of Parliament for public conveyance." "Constructed under statute."

(s) The language of this proviso is the same as that used in the P. H. A., 1848, s. 88, and several cases have been decided upon the words "the same kind of property." By these cases it has been settled that the words do not apply to the locality or the situation or the mode of occupation of the property, but to the nature of the property itself. See Chelmsford Union v. Chelmsford L. B. (1852), 2 El. & Bl. 500; 16 J. P. 341; Tait v. Carlisle L. B. (1853), 2 El. & Bl. 492; 18 Jur. 374; Turner v. Halifax (Mayor, etc. of) (1868), 9 B. & S. 623. In Luscombe v. Plymouth L. B. (1858), 27 L. J. M. C. 299; 23 J. P. 212, there was a difference of opinion whether the exemption under the local Act could be properly considered as depending upon locality and situation, or upon the nature of the property referred to; the rate was to be assessed among other matters upon all gardens, tenements, and hereditaments, adjoining to or upon any of the streets, lanes, roads, messuages, or other public places made within the populous or town parts of the borough of Plymouth, or at no greater distance than 100 feet from such street within such populous or town part. ERLE, J., considered that this described a kind of property, namely, town property, upon which the rate was to be laid, and that the other, namely, country property, was exempt. The other judges, however, considered this to be only a description of the locality which was to be exempt, and, therefore, that the country property in the district was not exempt from the district rate. Exemption under local Act.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. cxxxii, s. 103, the commissioners of a town were authorised to make district rates for defraying the expenses of the Act, provided that none of the rates or assessments which should be made by virtue of the Act should be laid upon or in respect of "any houses or buildings used and occupied exclusively for the purposes of public charity." It was held that an orphanage founded for the purpose of boarding, lodging, clothing, and educating the children of deceased railway servants, and supported partly by subscriptions from railway servants, but mainly by donations from the public, was open to such an extensive class of the community that the premises were used and occupied exclusively for the purposes of public charity within the proviso, and, therefore, exempt from rateability under it (Hall v. Derby Sanitary Authority (1885), 16 Q. B. D. 163; 50 J. P. 278), and cf. Shaw v. Halifax Corp., [1915] 2 K. B. 170; 79 J. P. 257, a case decided under s. 168 of the Towns Imp. Clauses Act, 1847. For a decision where the meaning of the words "charitable purposes" as used in the Valuation (Ireland) Acts, 1852, and 1854, was considered, see O'Neill v. Commissioners of Valuation (1914), 2 Ir. R. 447.

By the Liverpool Corporation Act, 1893, s. 36, no person shall be rated to the general rate in respect of any building used for the education of the poor exclusively. An institution for the reception of pauper children from the age of two to that of sixteen, where they were received, clothed, maintained, instructed, and provided with medical attendance, was held not to be a building used for the education of the poor exclusively, within the meaning of the Act (Hadfield v. Lord Mayor, etc. of Liverpool (1899), 80 L. T. 566).

Compare with the proviso in the text, the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, s. 164, and the cases on that section cited in Woolrych's Metropolis Management Acts, at p. 105.

The exemption which is to be continued must be one of right and not one of fact only. By 41 Geo. 3, c. xxx, the occupiers of houses in S. under £8 yearly value were exempt from rates. The 4 Will. 4, c. v, rendered the owners of all houses under £10 yearly value liable to rates instead of the occupiers. By 17 & 18 Vict. c. ci, the owners of all houses under such value were rendered liable to an improvement rate; but s. 124, reciting that the occupiers of houses under the yearly value of £8 were exempt from rating by 41 Geo. 3, c. xxx, enacted that whatever exemption from rates was enjoyed in respect of the premises referred to in the recital should be enjoyed in the same way and manner and to the same extent as was enjoyed before the passing of the Act. S. having been included in the district of a local board, it was held that the owners of houses in S. under £8 were properly included in the district rate (Coates v. Kingston-upon-Hull L. B. (1856), 20 J. P. 467; 2 Jur. 1086).

Independently of this proviso, property which is exempt from poor or local rates by express statutes will be exempt from the general district rate. See note (b), supra. But a statutory exemption from "parochial rates" will not extend to general district rates (Whenman v. Clark, ante, p. 481).

If a corporation borrow money for purposes to which these Acts apply, and charge the borough rate, it may supersede all these exemptions, as they do not exist in reference to that rate. See Att.-Gen. v. Birmingham (Corporation of) (1866), L. R. 3 Eq. 552.

Provisional Order.

(t) See post, s. 297, p. 629, as to Provisional Orders, and s. 303, p. 637, as to the alteration of local Acts.

Unoccupied premises.

(u) This sub-section applies whether the occupiers are rated or the owners, except in the case of owners when they have elected to be rated, whether the premises are occupied or not, under the previous sub-section. See R. v. Barclay, ante, p. 484, per FIELD, J. The objection that an owner is improperly rated under this section may be taken before justices when proceedings are instituted to enforce payment: ibid, per CAVE, J. The question of rateable occupancy is one of fact, and the intention of an alleged occupier in respect to the hereditament is a governing factor in determining such question. See R. v. Melladew and the other cases collected therewith at p. 481, ante.

Period of rate

(v) It is here contemplated that the rate will be made for a certain period, but the Act does not expresssly require it to be so made. 32 & 33 Vict. c. 41, s. 14, requires the poor rate to be made for a period, and s. 16 of that Act contains a provision similar to that in the text. It has been decided that a poor rate sufficiently stated "the period for which the same is estimated" as required by 32 & 33 Vict. c. 41 s. 14, where it stated in the heading that it was estimated to meet all expenses to be incurred "before March 25th next," but did not mention the date at which the expenses began (Cheney v. Tallowin, [1904] 2 K. B. 763; 68 J. P. 528). In practice, rates are usually made half-yearly. The period is discretionary (Durrant v. Boys (1796), 6 T. R. 580); but a standing rate would be illegal (R. v. Audley (1700), 2 Salk. 526). Note to Section 211.

(w) By this provision an outgoing occupier is at liberty to pay only a proportionate part of the rate. Hence, it must be to the interest of every ratepayer not to pay his rate as long as he can postpone it, so as to have the benefit of any abatement. The question arises whether a ratepayer entitled to any such abatement might recover the amount after payment of the full rate. The L. G. B. have stated that they have no jurisdiction to determine general questions as to the power of councils to refund to an outgoing occupier a proportion of general district rate paid by him. They observed, however, that whilst they were not aware of any enactment expressly authorising repayment by the council, it appeared to them that, having regard to the provisions of s. 211 (3), and to judicial decisions, of which R. v. Parker, post, p. 605, might be cited as an example, it is competent to a council to refund a proportion of the rate where the premises in respect of which the rate was paid in full have afterwards become unoccupied during the currency of the rate. Payment of proportion by outgoing occupier.

An occupier who had paid the general district rate in full left during the currency of that rate, and was succeeded by another occupier. The council repaid the outgoing occupier a proportion of the rate, and the question arose whether, the rate having once been fully paid, a proportion could be demanded by the council from the incoming occupier in respect of the period of his tenancy during the currency of the rate. The L. G. B. stated that it appeared to them that s. 211 (3) recognises the right of the outgoing occupier to pay less than the full amount of the rate, that there seemed to be sufficient authority for repayment of an excessive levy, and that, in the circumstances, such repayment would not in itself afford a sufficient ground for refusal by the incoming occupier to pay a proportion estimated in strict accordance with the sub-section. It seems clear that if a ratepayer quits premises without payment, and has no immediate successor, the authority will lose the residue of the rate.

It is for the justices to determine what proportion of the rate is due, and an order for payment, or, in default of payment, a distress warrant, for such proportion may apparently be made or issued without a fresh demand being made for such proportion (Mansel v. Itchen Overseers, [1906] 1 K. B. 221: 70 J. P. 148).

There was no similar provision with regard to the poor rate until 45 & 46 Vict. c. 20, s. 3. Under that section it has been held that the proportion should be calculated from the time when the rate was actually made (Davis v. Woodfield (1900), 64 J. P. 215; 81 L. T. 782). See also R. v. Tempest (1898), 14 T. L. R. 199, and Cheney v. Tallowin, supra.

Where a deed of floating charge on the assets of a company gave power to the trustees to appoint a receiver and manager who was expressed to be the agent of the mortgagor, it was held that on a receiver duly appointed under such power entering into possession of the premises and commencing to carry on the business of the company, there was a change of occupation within the meaning of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 41, s. 16, and of the text (Richards v. Overseers of Kidderminster, [1896] 2 Ch. 212.) See also Madge v. Debenture Corporation (1896), 12 T. L. R. 203. Where an order was made appointing a receiver and manager, but not directing delivery-up of possession to him, and thereupon the receiver and manager entered upon the company's premises for the purpose of managing and carrying on the business, it was held that there was no change of occupation within the Poor Rate Assessment and Collection Act, 1869, s. 16 (In re Marriage, Neave & Co., [1896] 2 Ch. 663; and see In re Crosbie (1910), 74 J. P. 25; 8 L. G. R. 50). Occupation by a liquidator is the occupation of the company (Re Wearmouth Crown Glass Co. (1882), 19 Ch. D. 640; and see Re National Arms and Ammunition Co. (1885), 28 Ch. D. 474; Re International Marine Hydropathic Co. (1884), 28 Ch. D. 470; Re Blazer Fire Lighter Ltd., [1895] 1 Ch. 402; 71 L. T. 655).

As to the payment of rates as preferential debts in the distribution of the property of a bankrupt, see the Bankruptcy Act, 1914 (s. 33, sub-sections 1 and 2), and the notes thereto, post, Vol. II. As to preferential payment in the winding up of a Preferential payment of rate.

company and on the appointment of a receiver by debenture holders, see the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, ss. 107, 209, in App. I., post, Vol. II., and see also National Provincial Bank of England v. United Electric Theatres, [1916] 1 Ch. 132; 80 J. P. 153. As to preferential payment under a local Act in case of execution, see Vestry of St. Marylebone v. Sheriff of London, [1900] 2 Q. B. 591; 64 J. P. 628.

Discretionary division of district.

(x) This word gives a discretion to the authority. A local board laid out sums of money in permanent improvements, and, for defraying the expenses in part, borrowed money on mortgage of the special district rates. The permanent improvements consisted in works for lighting a town within the district, and for supplying it with water and for sewerage. A large part of the district, owing to the inclination of the ground and the character of the occupation, derived no direct or immediate benefit from these works. To defray the expenses and to raise the interest and the instalments of the debt, the board laid a special district rate on the whole district. It was held that the rate was valid, for it was discretionary with the board whether they would divide the district, and, as they had not done so, the rate must be laid on the whole (Dorling v. Epsom L. B. (1855), 5 El. & Bl. 471; 20 J. P. 20; followed and applied in Newport (Mayor, etc. of) v. Lang (1892), 57 J. P. 199). Compare the provisions of 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 159 (Metropolis), and the cases decided thereon, especially West Middlesex Water Co. v. Wandsworth District Board (1858), 22 J. P. 336.

Under a similar section a precept to overseers to levy a rate stated that the expenses, in respect of which it was needed, were not required for the equal benefit of the parish, and directed the rate to be levied as regarded such parts of the parish as consisted of land used as arable, meadow, or pasture land only, or as woodland, orchard, market garden, hop, herb, flower, fruit, or nursery ground, in proportion of one-fourth part only of the net annual value of such land. The classes of land mentioned did not lie together or form any division marked out by metes and bounds, but were scattered through the parish. It was held that the precept was good (R. v. L. B. & S. C. Rail. Co. (1879), 5 Q. B. D. 89; 43 J. P. 765).

A drainage board purporting to exercise powers conferred on them by a local Act and the Sewers Acts, levied within their district drainage rates based upon a classification of the rateable properties in accordance with the quantum of supposed benefit derived from the drainage by each property apart from its contiguity to other properties. It was held that such rates should be equal rates upon all the properties benefited, and that the board had no power to make such differential classification (Knight v. Langport Drainage Board, [1898] 1 Q. B. 588; 62 J. P. 245).

In Mayer v. Burslem L. B. (1875), 39 J. P. 437, a local board resolved to divide their district into three sub-districts, and by a byelaw afterwards resolved that the resolution should not be altered unless one month's notice was given. It was held that until the resolution was duly rescinded a general rate could not be made for the whole district.

The authority cannot under this sub-section charge the general district rate with private improvements. See Dryden v. Putney (Overseers of), ante, p. 473.

As to the reimbursement of the general district rate in respect of moneys borrowed for a part of the district, see s. 234, post, p. 527.

Provision not applicable to rural district.

The L. G. B. did not consider that the provisions of s. 211 (4) could be made applicable to a rural district. In answer to an application for an order for this purpose under s. 276, the Board stated that express provision was made in the Act as to the charging of the expenses of a rural authority, and that they considered that it would be contrary to the intention and policy of the Act to confer on such an authority the general power of dividing a contributory place in their district for the purpose of assessment in the manner authorised by the sub-section. See, however, s. 277 of the Act, and notes thereto, as to the constitution of special drainage districts, i.e., special rating areas in contributory places for all the purposes of the Acts. The views of the Ministry of Health on the above point are unknown.

"Street."

(y) See the definition in s. 4, ante, p. 15.

Parts of street.

(z) See R. v. L. B. & S. C. Rail. Co., supra. It would appear that a street need not be divided by a line at right angles to the centre line, but may be divided in any reasonable way the board think fit (per Cotton, L.J., in Nutter v. Accrington L. B., ante, p. 282).

Note to Section 211.

(aa) These are very indefinite terms. It seems that the apportionment is left to the urban authority, as no appeal against it is provided.

Manner of apportionment.

212. For the purpose of assessing general district rates any person appointed by the urban authority may inspect take copies of or make extracts from, any valuation list or rate for the relief of the poor within the district, or any book relating to the same.

Inspection of poor rate books for purposes of assessment.

Any officer having the custody of any such rate (a) or book who refuses to permit such inspection, or the taking of such copies or extract, shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds (b).

(a) The word "list" is here omitted. 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 56, from which this section is taken, did not give an inspection of the list. It is not, however, to be supposed that the clerk of the assessment committee, who has the custody of the list, will refuse to permit inspection, though he may not be liable to the penalty for refusal. No fee is chargeable for the inspection.

Inspection of list.

A collector of general district rates was required by the district council to make the rate, and was awarded extra remuneration for this purpose beyond his salary for collection. The assistant overseer at his request supplied a copy of additional assessments to the poor rate, and, with the approval of the council, was paid for this service. This payment was disallowed by the auditor, who surcharged the council, on the ground that they had authorised the payment. He contended that the payment could not in the circumstances be lawfully made out of the general district rate in view of the provisions of this section. On appeal, the L. G. B. decided that his decision could not be sustained. It appeared to them that while the effect of the section is to empower any person appointed by a district council to inspect, take copies of, or make extracts from the valuation list or poor rate, and while, for that purpose, the section requires any officer having the custody of any book relating to the valuation list or rate, to permit such inspection or the taking of such copies or extracts, yet the enactment does not make it illegal for a council to pay such officer for supplying the materials necessary to enable their collector to make a general district rate. The Board also considered that the council could lawfully pay for such materials, notwithstanding that the collector was required to make the rate. They accordingly reversed the decision of the auditor.

(b) As to the recovery of this penalty, see s. 251, post, p. 551.

Penalty.

Private Improvement Rate (a).

213. Whenever an urban authority (b) have incurred (c) or become liable to any expenses which by this Act are or by such authority may be declared to be private improvement expenses, such authority may, if they think fit, make and levy on the occupier of the premises in respect of which the expenses have been incurred (d), in addition to all other rates, a rate or rates to be called private improvement rates, of such amount as will be sufficient to discharge such expenses, together with interest thereon at a rate not exceeding five pounds per centum per annum, in such period not exceeding thirty years as the urban authority may in each case determine (e).

Power to make private improvement rates.

Provided that whenever any premises in respect of which any private improvement rate is made become unoccupied before the expiration of the period for which the rate was made, or before the same is fully paid off, such rate shall become a charge on and be paid by the owner (f) for the time being of the premises so long as the same continue to be unoccupied.

Note to Section 213.

What expenses included.

(a) The sections under which expenses may be declared to be private improvement expenses are ss. 23, 36, 41, 62, 150 of this Act, the Public Health (Water) Act, 1878, s. 3, some sections of the P. H. A., 1890, the Housing of the Working Classes Act, 1890, s. 38 (8), and the Private Street Works Act, 1892, s. 12. See s. 240, post, p. 536, as to rent-charges in respect of advances made for private improvements.

It seems that a rate made under the text is not a rate within the meaning of the Agricultural Rates Act, 1896, s. 9, for the proceeds are not applicable to public local purposes.

(b) Section 232, post, p. 520, provides for private improvement rates by a rural authority.

How expenses to be paid in first instance.

(c) Apparently the authority must either pay the expenses out of the funds raised by their other rates (as to which see ss. 207, 211 (4), ante, pp. 469, 472), or borrow the sum required under ss. 233 et seq., post, p. 521. See notes to s. 150 as to the practice of the M. of H. in regard to borrowing for such purposes. See also s. 240, post, p. 536, which provides a mode of securing repayment to the lender by means of a rent-charge to issue out of the premises.

Expenses must be ascertained.

(d) These words seem to imply that the expenses in question have been ascertained in respect of each separate premises as by apportionment. See the note on the subject, ante, p. 314.

Appeal.

(e) See, however, the appeal to the L. G. B. given in s. 268, post, p. 595.

Liability of owner.

(f) See the definition in s. 4, ante, p. 8. The owner will thus be liable to a rate in which his name does not appear. A local Act provided for the making of private improvement rates for the expenses of paving new streets. The rates were to be a charge on the lands adjoining, and the remedies for their recovery were the same as those contained in the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847. A rate was made in 1879, on P. for £26 4*s.* 8*d.*, payable in one sum. The appellants were then mortgagees of the premises, but were not in possession. In 1882 they entered into, and thenceforward remained in, possession and receipt of the rents. In 1885 the justices issued a distress warrant against the appellants in respect of a balance of the rate unpaid by P. amounting to £15. It was held that the justices were wrong in issuing a warrant against the appellants who were not named in the rate, though they had subsequently been in possession of the premises. It was held further that the justices were entitled to state a case as to their jurisdiction in enforcing such rate (Rochdale Building Society v. Mayor, etc. of Rochdale (1886), 51 J. P. 134; 2 T. L. R. 397).

Proportion of private improvement rate may be deducted from rent.

214. Where the occupier by whom any private improvement rate is paid holds the premises in respect of which the rate is made at a rent not less than the rack-rent (a), he shall be entitled (b) to deduct three-fourths of the amount paid by him on account of such rate from the rent payable by him to his landlord, and if he hold at a rent less than the rack-rent he shall be entitled to deduct from the rent so payable by him such proportion of three-fourths of the rate as his rent bears to the rack-rent; and if the landlord from whose rent any deduction is so made is himself liable to the payment of rent for the premises in respect of which the deduction is made, and holds the same for a term of which less than twenty years is unexpired (but not otherwise), he may deduct from the rent so payable by him such proportion of the sum deducted from the rent payable to him as the rent payable by him bears to the rent payable to him, and so in succession with respect to every landlord (holding for a term of which less than twenty years is unexpired) of the same premises both receiving and liable to pay rent in respect thereof (c).

Provided that nothing in this section shall be construed to entitle any person to deduct from the rent payable by him more than the whole sum deducted from the rent payable to him (d). Section 214.

(a) See the definition in s. 4, ante, p. 15. Rack-rent.

(b) But this right will be controlled by the language of any covenants contained in the lease. See s. 226, post, p. 506, and the notes thereon; and see in Smith v. Humble (1854), 15 C. B. 321; 18 J. P. 760, an illustration of the principle of deduction of a tax chargeable on the owner from the rent paid to him. By analogy from a decision in respect of income tax, it may be that a tenant is not bound to produce the receipt for the rate when making the deduction from his rent, see North London Property Co., Ltd. v. Moy, [1918] 2 K. B. 439. Extent of right to deduct.

The lease of a house contained a covenant by the tenant to pay the rent clear of all deductions, except the landlord's property tax, and to pay . . . all taxes, rates, and assessments charged upon the premises or upon the landlord or tenant in respect thereof, and all charges imposed by any local authority upon the frontagers in respect of the taking over and the making and repair of the road abutting on the premises. The local authority paved the road, and, having apportioned the expenses among the frontagers, gave notice to the tenant under the Metropolis Management Act, 1862, s. 96, not to pay his rent without first deducting the apportioned amount of the paving expenses due from the lessor as owner of the house. As the amount of the expenses so claimed exceeded the rent then due from him, he paid the authority the whole rent. His landlord, after a demand for the rent, distrained. It was held that under s. 96 of the Metropolis Management Act, 1862 (which contains terms corresponding to those of the text and its complement (s. 226)), the payment to the authority was to be taken, not as a payment of the rent, but as a payment of the apportioned expenses, and that, as the tenant had agreed to pay those expenses, the rent remained due and the distress was lawful (Skinner v. Hunt, [1904] 2 K. B. 452; 68 J. P. 402).

It would seem that the amount can only be deducted from the next rent payable to the landlord, and that if rent is paid without deduction it cannot be deducted from any subsequent rent. See Andrew v. Hancock (1819), 1 B. & B. 37; 3 Moore, 278; Dawes v. Thomas, [1892] 1 Q. B. 414; 56 J. P. 326; and Mile End Old Town (Vestry of) v. Whitby (1898), 78 L. T. 80; but cf. In re Sturmey Motors, Ltd., [1913] 1 Ch. 16. As regards income tax, it has been held that the deduction must be from the next payment of rent (Hill v. Kirshenstein, [1920] 3 K. B. 556).

(c) See the definition of owner in s. 4, ante p. 8. Thus, the rent received by the owner being £100, and the rent paid by him being £20, if the sum deducted by the tenant be £10, the landlord may deduct £2 from the rent paid to the owner in fee. Mesne landlord.

(d) This might possibly occur if a person who held lands at a certain rent were to grant an underlease at a lower rent for a heavy fine or other consideration.

215. At any time before the expiration of the period for which any private improvement rate is made, the owner or occupier of the premises assessed thereto may redeem the same, by paying to the urban authority the expenses in respect of which the rate was made (a), or such part thereof as may not have been defrayed by sums already levied in respect of the same: Redemption of private improvement rates.

Provided that money paid in redemption of any private improvement rate shall not be applied by the urban authority otherwise than in defraying expenses incurred by them in works of private improvement or in discharging the principal of any moneys borrowed by them to meet those expenses, whether by means of a sinking fund or otherwise (b).

(a) These words appear to assume that the amount of the expenses has already been ascertained, e.g., by apportionment. See the note on this subject, ante, p. 314.

(b) Quære, what is to be done with the payment if no further works of private

Note to Section 215. improvement are required, and no money has been borrowed, or if the loan has been discharged ?

Highway Rate.

Cost of repairs of highways.

216. In any urban district where the expenses under this Act of the urban authority are charged on and defrayed out of the district fund and general district rates, and no other mode of providing for repair of highways is directed by any local Act (a), the cost of repair of highways shall be defrayed as follows :

(1) Where the whole of the district is rated for works of paving water supply and (b) sewerage, or for works for such of these purposes as are provided for in the district, the cost of repair of highways shall be defrayed out of the general district rate (c) :

(2) Where parts of the district are not rated for works of paving water supply and sewerage, or for such of these purposes as are provided for in the district, the cost of repair of highways in those parts shall be defrayed out of a highway rate (d) to be separately assessed and levied in those parts by the urban authority as surveyor of highways (e), and the cost of such repair in the residue of the district shall be defrayed out of the general district rate :

(3) Where no public works of paving water supply and sewerage are established (f) in the district, the cost of repair of highways in the district shall be defrayed out of a highway rate, to be levied throughout the whole district (g) by the urban authority as surveyor of highways :

Provided that where part of a parish is included within an urban district, and the excluded part was, before the constitution of that district, liable to contribute to the highway rates for such parish, such excluded part shall (unless in the case of an urban district constituted before the passing of this Act a resolution deciding that such excluded part should be formed into a separate highway district has been passed in pursuance of the Local Government Act, 1858, Amendment Act, 1861), or unless such excluded part has been included in a highway district under the Highway Acts, for all purposes connected with the repairs of highways and the payment of highway rates, be considered to be and be treated as forming part of such district (h).

Provided also, that in the case of an urban district constituted after the passing of this Act a meeting of owners and ratepayers of the excluded part (to be convened and conducted in the manner provided by Schedule III. to this Act) may decide that such excluded part shall be a highway parish, and thereupon the excluded part shall for all purposes connected with highways, surveyors of highways, and highway rates, be considered and treated as a parish maintaining its own highways ; but the requisition for holding any such meeting shall be made within six months after the constitution of the urban district (h).

The court of quarter sessions may by order direct that for any such excluded part a waywarden or waywardens shall be elected, and may invest any waywarden elected in pursuance of any such order with all or any of the powers of waywardens under the Highway Acts (h).

(a) I.e., one applicable to the whole of the district, not merely to a part of it. See Hill v. Crediton U. D. C. (1898), 62 J. P. 340; 78 L. T. 351. On appeal it was held that the local Act in question had been altered, and the area thereunder extended so as to be co-extensive with the urban district by virtue of an order made under the L. G. A., 1888, s. 57, though such order was silent as to the local Act. See the decision of the C. A. in the notes to s. 207, ante, p. 471. Note to Section 216. "Local Act."

(b) Note the copulative. If the whole of the district be rated for some, but not all, of these purposes, yet if some are provided for the whole district, the charge will be upon the general district rate; when there is a part which is not liable to any general rate for any of the purposes specified, a highway rate is to be levied under the next sub-section. See the cases cited in note (f), infra.

(c) See s. 209, ante, p. 472. It may here be mentioned that in county boroughs the cost of repairing bridges and approaches formerly repairable by the county now falls on the borough fund. See the L. G. A., 1888, s. 34 (2), post.

In Ferrand v. Bingley U. D. C., [1903] 2 K. B. 445; 67 J. P. 370, the point was raised but was not decided whether when the cost of repair of highways is defrayed out of the general district rate such cost is to be deemed to be levied by an urban district council as surveyors of highways, acting under or by virtue of the Highway Act, 1835, so as to preserve an exemption given by s. 33 of that Act. The question decided in that case was that the fact that owners or occupiers of particular lands repair certain highways ratione tenuræ is not of itself sufficient to show that such owners or occupiers are legally exempt from liability for the repair of other highways.

(d) That is, a rate made and levied according to the provisions of the Highway Act, 1835, and amending Acts, of which note particularly the Highway Rate Assessment and Expenditure Act, 1882. Consequently the Agricultural Rates Act, 1896, and the Tithe Rent-charge (Rates) Act, 1899, will apply to such rate. As to the amount of the rate, see Dyson v. Greetland L. B. (1884), 13 Q. B. D. 946; 48 J. P. 596, cited on p. 266, ante. Highway rate.

(e) See s. 144, ante, p. 253.

(f) The meaning of this word has been discussed in two cases. In Oxenhope L. B. v. Bradford (Mayor, etc. of) (1882), 47 J. P. 21; 47 L. T. 344, the local board made a general district rate and a highway rate, and demanded the same from the respondents in respect of two reservoirs connected with the Bradford water supply. The respondents contended that the board had no power to levy a highway rate, because in 1880 they had laid down in their district a kerbstone about 200 yards long to a cinder pathway by a public road. It was held that the putting down of the kerbstone did not constitute the establishment of public works of paving within the meaning of the sub-section, and, therefore, that the appellants were entitled to levy a highway rate. FIELD, J., said: "What does established mean? One knows perfectly well it does not mean one single act. If a man on one particular day sells a particular class of goods, he does not thereby establish a business for the sale of those goods. I cannot think that the word established in this section was ever intended to mean that a single act of that kind was to be construed as being public works established in the district." The point of the dispute in this case was that the reservoirs were assessable to the district rate only at one-fourth their full net annual value. In R. v. Belper L. B. (1881), 46 J. P. 166, the facts were as follows: In the B. urban district when formed, and when the local board took charge of the repair of highways, there were some old-fashioned stone drains or culverts into which some houses sent their sewage, and into which storm water entered through gratings, but the board had not added to these, nor made any new works themselves. The board made a highway rate. It was held that the existing drains sufficiently answered the description of public works established in the district, and therefore that the expense of highway repairs should have been paid out of the general district rate, and not by a highway rate. GROVE, J., said: "I quite appreciate the argument that it is not because there may be a sewer having something of a public character, that there must necessarily be public works of sewerage within the meaning of the Act. There must be, to a reasonable extent, works of a public nature." In Birmingham Canal Co. v. Docker (1860), 24 J. P. 691, a local board had been in the habit, by arrangement with the owners or occupiers adjoining, of constructing stone kerbs along the footpaths of certain roads and streets "Established" works.

Note to Section 216.

in their district, and of paying half the expense :—Held, that this was not "a public work of paving" within the corresponding section of the L. G. A., 1858. It appears from the Oxenhope Case, supra, that an objection to a highway rate on the ground that public works are established in the district may be taken on the hearing of a summons to enforce payment.

"Whole" district.

(g) A district consisting of a parish comprising three townships came within the description set out in this sub-section. The local board levied a highway rate for one of the townships, but it was held that they had no authority to do so, and that the highway rate must be levied over the whole district (Re Broughton L. B. (1865), 29 J. P. 324 ; 12 L. T. 310).

Excluded parts.

(h) There are now no "excluded parts of parishes." By 45 & 46 Vict. c. 27, s. 9, it was provided that when at the time of the passing of that Act (July 12th, 1882), part of a parish was excluded from an urban sanitary district, but such excluded part was for purposes connected with the repairs of highways and the payment of highway rates, treated as forming part of the district, the owners and ratepayers of the excluded part might, by resolution passed at a meeting to be convened and conducted in manner provided by Sched. III., post, p. 685, decide that such part should be a highway parish, and if the resolution was approved by an Order of the L. G. B., the excluded part should, from a date to be fixed by the said Order, be, for the purposes connected with highways, surveyors of highways, and highway rates, considered and treated as a separate highway parish. By the L. G. A., 1894, s. 25 (4), post, it was provided that where the council of a rural district became the highway authority for that district (see sub-s. (1) of the same section) any excluded part of a parish under the present section, which was situate in that district, should cease to be part of any urban district for the purpose of highways, but that until the council became the highway authority such excluded part of a parish should continue subject to the said section. Rural district councils have become the highway authorities in every instance.

Certain acts not required to be done in case of highway rate made by urban authority.

217. It shall not be necessary for the urban authority, in the case of any highway rate made by them, to do the following acts or any of them (a) ; (that is to say,)

To lay such rate before any justices, or obtain their allowance ;

To annex thereto the signature of such urban authority (b) ;

To lay the same before the parishioners assembled in vestry ;

To verify before any justices any accounts kept by them of such highway rates ; and all such accounts shall be audited (c) in all respects in the same way as the other accounts of the urban authority.

(a) These are all matters required by 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, in respect of highway rates.

(b) According to s. 222, post, p. 505, the rate is to be made in such manner as the authority may appoint. It will be best to make it, like the general district rate, "in writing under their common seal." See s. 210, ante, p. 473.

(c) See ss. 245—250, post, pp. 540—550.

General Provisions as to Urban Rates.

Estimate to be prepared before making rates.

218. Every urban authority, before proceeding to make a general district rate or private improvement rate under this Act, shall cause an estimate (a) to be prepared of the money required for the purposes (b) in respect of which the rate is to be made, showing—

The several sums required for each of such purposes ; and

The rateable value of the property assessable ; and

The amount of rate which for those purposes it is necessary to make on each pound of such value (c) ; Section 218.

and the estimate so made shall forthwith, after being approved of by the urban authority, be entered in the rate book, and be kept at their office, open to public inspection during office hours thereat ; but it shall not be deemed part of the rate, nor in any respect affect the validity of the same (d).

(a) Much doubt existed as to the effect of this estimate as required by the P. H. A., 1848, s. 89. The Queen's Bench at first appears to have treated it as analogous to the title of the poor rate, so that if it contained an illegal item it was bad (see R. v. Worksop L. B. (1857), 21 J. P. 451). The question afterwards arose as to whether an insufficient statement of an item would avoid the rate ; and the consequences of such a decision were so serious that the court in a subsequent case arising out of the proceedings of the same board, declined to decide whether the section had that effect, or was directory only (R. v. Worksop L. B. (1865), 5 B. & S. 951 ; 29 J. P. 759). The question is now settled by the passage at the end of this section. It is to be observed, however, that this proviso does not operate to take away the general right of appeal to quarter sessions against a general district rate given by s. 269, post, p. 599, where it appears from the estimate that it is proposed to make illegal payments out of the rate. See Smith v. Southampton Corporation, [1902] 2 K. B. 244 ; 67 J. P. 5 ; cf. R. v. Dublin Corporation, [1911] 2 I. R. 245. Estimate of rate.

The proper mode of carrying this regulation into effect appears to be to enter the estimate in a page of the book preceding the rate.

The authority must be careful, besides this estimate, to cause the rate to have a good title, otherwise it will be void (R. v. Byron (1848), 12 Q. B. 321 ; 12 J. P. 362 ; Moulton (Overseers of) v. Eastern Counties Rail. Co. (1856), 5 El. & Bl. 974 ; 20 J. P. 566). In R. v. Wilkinson (1886), 2 T. L. R. 869, the court refused a mandamus to compel justices to allow a rate on the ground that the heading was left blank and did not show what the rate was for. See R. v. Monaghan R. D. C. (1904), 38 Ir. L. T. 218, as to a rate being undated when sealed.

Although the estimate may have no legal consequence in itself, its absence may perhaps invalidate the rate ; and if its absence may have this effect, so also might an illusory or defective estimate. It may, therefore, be noticed that the Queen's Bench held, in R. v. Worksop L. B. (1865), 5 B. & S. 951 ; 29 J. P. 759, that "election expenses, filling in drains, and cleansing drains and outfall," and also "law charges, surveyor's instruments, and incidental expenses," were respectively improperly grouped together in the estimate.

(b) Though the estimate will not affect its validity, it must not be considered that a rate will be valid if made for purposes which are illegal, and which may be shown in the estimate. See Smith v. Southampton Corporation, supra. Rates for illegal purposes.

The charges of an accountant employed to investigate the accounts of a local board were held by justices in quarter sessions to be illegal, being, under the circumstances of the case, in their judgment unnecessary ; and the court, holding that this was a question for the sessions, declined to reverse their decision (R. v. Worksop L. B. (1865), 5 B. & S. 951 ; 29 J. P. 759).

It was held that a local board could not make a district rate to pay the costs of defending certain quo warranto informations brought against individual members of the board, which did not impeach the status of the board as a whole ; nor the expenses of opposing a Bill promoted by the local gas company for an increase of powers. But the expenses of opposing Chancery proceedings against the board in respect of works which they had caused to be executed were held to be a legal charge, although the suit was not ended when payment was proposed to be made (R. v. Marris (1857), 21 J. P. 580 ; 28 L. T. 266). Where the consent of the ratepayers had not been obtained, the court restrained an urban district council from applying any part of the general district fund or rate in payment of the expenses incurred in opposing a Bill (Att.-Gen. v. Rickmansworth U. D. C. (1902), 66 J. P. 410 ; 86 L. T. 521) See now, however, the provisions of the Borough Funds Acts referred to on p. 502, post. And see R. v. Bridgewater (Mayor of) (1839), 10 A. &. E. 281 ; R. v. Leeds

Note to Section 218.

(Mayor of) (1843), 4 Q. B. 796. It has been held in the case of a municipal corporation, that they are justified in defraying out of the corporate funds the expenses of defending quo warranto informations against individual members of the corporation, if the object of such informations was to impeach the title or destroy the legal existence of the corporation as a body (Holdsworth v. Dartmouth (Mayor of) (1840), 11 A. & E. 490; 4 Jur. 605; and see Att.-Gen. v. Norwich (Corporation of) (1837), 2 My. & Cr. 406; 1 Jur. 398).

The court affirmed the disallowance by a district auditor of the cost of repairing an omnibus purchased by a district council for the purpose of conveying its members about the district when performing their ordinary duties as members. The district was a large and growing one, and members had frequently to go from one part of it to another (R. v. Dolby (1902), 66 J. P. 521; 87 L. T. 27).

A metropolitan vestry were restrained from applying any part of their rates in paying the expenses of a dinner or ball or other ceremonies in connection with the opening of a new vestry hall. But, as no part of the rates had been actually so applied, it was held that individual vestrymen who had voted for the resolution for the dinner, etc., could not be made parties to the action for the purpose of obtaining costs from them (Att.-Gen. v. Bermondsey (Vestry of) (1883), 23 Ch. D. 60; 47 J. P. 453. And see R. v. Bideford (Mayor of) (1883), 47 J. P. 756; Att.-Gen. v. Blackburn (Corporation of) (1887), 57 L. T. 385; Att.-Gen. v. Batley (Mayor, etc. of) (1872), 26 L. T. 392; Att.-Gen. v. Cardiff (Mayor of), [1894] 2 Ch. 337).

In O'Shea v. Cork R. D. C., [1914] 2 I. R. 16, the Irish M.R. laid down the rule that where misconduct in performance of their duties is alleged against a public body, and it becomes necessary to take legal proceedings against them, the individual members who are principally responsible ought to be made special defendants for the purpose of visiting them with the costs.

An action for an injunction to restrain improper payments out of rates must be in the name of the Attorney-General (Holden v. Bolton (Corporation of) (1887), 3 T. L. R. 676, and cf. Weir v. Fermanagh C. C., [1913] 1 I. R. 63, 193). See London C. C. v. Att.-Gen., on p. 208, ante, as to his discretion in allowing his name to be so used.

The jurisdiction of the High Court to declare payments actually made to be illegal is in practice exercised subject to the power of the M. of H. under the Poor Law Audit Act, 1848, s. 4, incorporated by s. 247, post, p. 541, to remit improper payments which have been disallowed by the auditor (Att.-Gen. v. Merthyr Tydfil Union, [1900] 1 Ch. 516; 64 J. P. 276; Att.-Gen. v. Tottenham U. D. C. (1909), 73 J. P. 437).

The L. G. B., in pursuance of their statutory powers, in anticipation of the King's coronation, issued a General Order whereby they sanctioned beforehand "any reasonable expenses" that might be incurred by any local authority in connection with any local public celebration on the occasion. The defendant council passed a resolution that a sum not exceeding three farthings in the pound should be expended out of the rates in carrying out the coronation festivities in the district. The three farthings rate would produce about £240. The Attorney-General, at the relation of certain ratepayers, brought an action to restrain the defendants from paying the £240 out of the rates on the ground that such payment would be ultra vires and illegal, and applied for an interim injunction. It was held that, whatever might be the merits of the action, the case was not one for an interim injunction (Att.-Gen. v. East Barnet Valley U. D. C. (1911), 75 J. P. 484; 9 L. G. R. 913).

In R. v. Marris, supra, it was held that as the rate was made for some items which were illegal, it was altogether void. This is in conformity with Chesterton v. Farlar (1836), 1 Curt. 345. See also R. v. Sillifant (1835), 4 A. & E. 354; 5 Nev. & M. 640; R. v. Byron (1848), 12 Q. B. 321; 12 J. P. 362; Tozer v. Child (1856), 6 El. & Bl. 289; 20 J. P. 805. It appears, however, that the rate may be enforced as long as it is good on the face of it. When this is the case the rate can only be impeached by appeal to quarter sessions on the ground that it has been made for an illegal purpose (Luton L. B. v. Davis (1860), 29 L. J. M. C. 173; 24 J. P. 677; Sandgate L. B. v. Pledge (1885), 14 Q. B. D. 730; 49 J. P. 342).

As illustrating the principle that local authorities may not pay out of their funds any sum for a purpose not expressly authorised by statute, reference may be made to a number of cases decided with regard to the power of a corporation to defray out of the rates expenses incurred in defending proceedings against their officers for acts done in the performance of their duty. In R. v. Thompson (1844), 5 Q. B. 477 ; R. v. Stamford (Town Council of) (1844), 13 L. J. Q. B. 177 ; 8 Jur. 588, it was held that a corporation could not pay the costs of defending borough constables in a prosecution against them for acts done in the course of their duty. See also R. v. Lichfield (Mayor of) (1847), 10 Q. B. 534. In Pickering v. Stephenson (1872), L. R. 14 Eq. 322, it was decided that a trading company could not pay out of their funds the cost of prosecuting a person for libelling the council of the company. And it has been held that expenses incurred by an officer of a borough in defending his character in relation to matters arising out of his official duties could not lawfully be paid out of the borough fund (R. v. Liverpool (Mayor of) (1872), 41 L. J. Q. B. 175 ; 26 L. T. 101 ; see also Att.-Gen. v. Compton (1842), 1 Y. & C. 417). The chief constable of a borough had, by direction of borough magistrates, laid an information against a person for conspiracy, and an action for malicious prosecution was brought by such person against him, and verdict recovered for £200. It was held that the council could not pay the chief constable's costs out of the borough fund or rate (R. v. Exeter (Mayor of) (1880), 6 Q. B. D. 135 ; 45 J. P. 158). On the other hand, when officers were sued for acts done on behalf of the authority, and under their direction or with their sanction, the authority might, as it seems from Att.-Gen. v. Pearson (1846), 10 Jur. 651, pay the costs, and even damages awarded against those officers, out of their funds. In Stops v. Northamptonshire JJ. (1887), 4 T. L. R. 78, it was held that the justices of a county could not lawfully pay out of the county fund the costs and damages incurred by the chief constable in an action brought against him in respect of acts done in the execution of his duty. It should be observed that these cases were all decided before the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 226, and the L. G. A., 1888, s. 66, which would now justify some, if not all, of the payments held to be illegal as above stated. But these Acts apply only to municipal corporations and county councils, and the principle of the decisions still applies to other local authorities. Reference should, however, be made to s. 265, post, p. 584, as to suing officers of local authorities. In a later case it was held, on the same principle, that a municipal corporation cannot, where there is no surplus of the borough fund, legally pay thereout costs incurred by the chief constable in opposing by the direction of the council appeals against the refusal of justices to renew the licences of publicans. And it was doubted whether, if there had been a surplus, it could be legally applied to payment of such costs (Tynemouth (Mayor, etc. of) v. Att.-Gen., [1899] A. C. 293 ; 63 J. P. 404).

When money had been bonâ fide paid upon an order to a town council of the town clerk for professional business done by him as a solicitor upon instructions given by the corporation, the mere fact of his having had no retainer under seal was held to be no sufficient ground why the court should, under 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 78, s. 14, quash the order of the council as a misapplication of the borough funds. It was further held that costs incurred by the council in taking legal advice as to the validity of a borough rate, litigation being threatened if they should persevere in their intention to enforce it, were costs chargeable upon the borough fund (R. v. Prest (1850), 16 Q. B. 32 ; 14 J. P. 750). And see R. v. Norwich (Mayor of), ante, p. 405.

The application of the doctrine of ultra vires to the proceedings of public boards cannot be fully discussed here, and reference should be made to the work of Mr. Seward Brice on the subject. A few cases may be cited, however, to illustrate the doctrine. In East Anglian Rail. Co. v. Eastern Counties Rail. Co. (1851), 11 C. B. 775, Jervis, C.J., said : "It is clear that the defendants have a limited authority only, and are a corporation only for the purpose of making and maintaining the railway sanctioned by the Act ; and that their funds can only be applied for the purposes directed and provided for by the statute." In Bateman v. Ashton-under-Lyne (Mayor of) (1858), 3 H. & N. 323 ; 27 L. J. Ex. 458, it was held that a waterworks company having certain powers for the supply of water to a district might lawfully apply to Parliament for the extension of those powers, and consequently contract with an engineer for the supply of plans and estimates essential to such application. Bramwell, B., however, dissented from this judgment. See also Stockport Waterworks Co. v. Manchester (Mayor of) (1863), 7 L. T. 545 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 266 ; Taylor v. Chichester and Midhurst Rail. Co. (1870), L. R. 4 H. L. 628 ; Chatham L. B. v. Rochester Paving Commissioners (1865), L. R. 1 Q. B. 24 ; 29 J. P. 805 ; Att.-Gen. v. London C. C., [1902] A. C. 165 ; 66 J. P. 340 ; Att.-Gen. v. Manchester Corporation

It seems to have been established by numerous decisions that when public bodies take proceedings in Parliament to protect the property under their control and management, the expenses which they incur are chargeable upon the funds at their disposal; but if they originate parliamentary measures for the purpose of increasing their property or extending their powers, they must rely upon obtaining express sanction from the legislature for charging the costs upon any of their funds. It is unnecessary to enumerate the decisions in question, for the Borough Funds Acts, 1872 and 1903, in App. I., post, Vol. II., now enable local authorities in certain cases to charge on their funds the costs of promoting or opposing parliamentary or other proceedings for the benefit of the inhabitants. And although there may be cases in which such expenditure might be justified without the aid of these statutes, it will be found in practice advisable to conform to their formalities in almost every instance. A private Bill before Parliament provided for the punctual payment of interest on the share capital of the undertaking by declaring that the overseers of the parish in which the undertaking was situated should, when required to do so, raise as part of the poor rate money for the payment of such interest. The overseers, with the authority of the vestry, successfully opposed the Bill, and, in so doing, incurred certain expenses which were not immoderate and were allowed by the auditor. It was held that the overseers were entitled to charge the expenses so incurred upon the poor rate (R. v. White (or Sibly) (1885), 14 Q. B. D. 358; 49 J. P. 294; see also Cleverton v. St. German's R. S. A., cited in the notes to the Borough Funds Act, 1872, in App. I., post, Vol. II.). In Att.-Gen. v. Lambeth (Vestry of) (1888), 4 T. L. R. 257, an injunction was granted restraining the vestry from applying their funds in promoting a Bill in Parliament. A municipal corporation is not entitled to charge upon the rates leviable by them under the Public Health Act, the costs incurred in opposition to a private Bill, although such opposition be successful and the Bill would, if passed, have put an end to the existence of the corporation (Leith (Magistrates and Council of) v. Leith Harbour Commissioners, [1899] A. C. 508). An urban district council incurred costs in opposing in Parliament a Bill for the confirmation of a Provisional Order made by the L. G. B. for carrying into effect a scheme for the inclusion of the district of the council in adjoining areas. It was held that the costs were properly incurred under ss. 297 and 298, post, pp. 629, 632, and that they were not subject to the requirements of the Borough Funds Act, 1872, but came within the exception of s. 8 of that Act (see Brooks, Jenkins & Co. v. Torquay Corporation, ante, p. 403).

Certiorari for rates.

In Ireland it has been held that there is jurisdiction to quash an illegal rate on certiorari, although, where the rate is subject to appeal, certiorari ought not to issue, at all events if the rate is good on its face (see R. v. Dublin Corporation, [1911] 2 I. R. 245, and cases there cited).

(c) The period for which the rate is to be made is not included in the matters which must appear in the estimate. This must, however, appear in the rate itself. See ante, p. 490, s. 211, note (v).

(d) See note (a), supra.

Rates to be open to inspection.

219. Any person interested in or assessed to any rate made under this Act may inspect the same, and any estimate (a) made previously thereto, and may take copies of or extracts therefrom without fee or reward; any person who, having the custody of any such estimate or rate, refuses to allow or does not permit such inspection, or such copies or extracts to be taken, shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds (b).

(a) This is an additional inspection to that provided for in the preceding section. On this occasion copies or extracts may be taken, but no such provision is made in respect of the previous inspection. Moreover, refusal of inspection in this case, subjects the officer to a penalty recoverable on summary conviction. No such summary remedy is given in the previous case. Cf. Davies v. Gas Light and Coke Co., [1909] 1 Ch. 708, as to a shareholder's statutory right to copies of certain books of a company. Note to Section 219.

See s. 210, ante, p. 473, as to the notice to be given of the intended making of the rate.

(b) See s. 251, post, p. 551, as to the recovery of this penalty.

220. Where the name of any owner or occupier liable to be rated under this Act is not known to the urban authority it shall be sufficient to assess and designate him in the rate as "the owner" or "the occupier" of the premises in respect of which the assessment is made, without further description. Description of owner or occupier in rates.

Nevertheless, it is most desirable that the utmost pains should be taken to ascertain the respective names of the owner or occupier. Much practical difficulty attends all proceedings when the name of the party proceeded against is not stated. Moreover, if it can be shown that the name was known to the authority, it may perhaps be held that the use of the term owner or occupier is not justified. Again, it may well be questioned whether, although these words are used, the assessment will be available against an owner or occupier who may succeed to the premises. See notes to s. 267, post, p. 593.

221. An urban authority may from time to time amend any rate made in pursuance of this Act by inserting therein the name of any person claiming and entitled to have his name inserted, or by inserting the name of any person who ought to have been assessed (a), or by striking out the name of any person who ought not to have been assessed, or by raising or reducing the sum at which any person has been assessed, if it appears to the urban authority that he has been under-rated or over-rated (b), or by making any other alteration which will make the rate conformable to the provisions of this Act; and no such amendment shall be held to avoid the rate. Rates may be amended.

Provided, that any person who may feel himself aggrieved by any such amendment shall have the same right of appeal therefrom as he would have had if the matter of amendment had appeared on the rate originally made (c), and with respect to him an amended rate shall be considered to have been made at the time when he first received notice (d) of the amendment; and an amended rate shall not be payable by any person the amount of whose rate is increased by the amendment, or whose name is thereby newly inserted until seven days (e) after such notice has been given to him.

(a) Except in the metropolis, where it can be done by the justices (see Valuation (Metropolis) Act, 1869, s. 72, and Westminster Corporation v. Edgcome (1903), 67 J. P. 25), there is no such power in the case of a poor rate: see Pembroke v. Wye (Overseers of) (1883), 47 J. P. 359; Sawtry School Board Election Petition; Yethard v. Turnhill, Times, May 21st, 1895; R. v. Monken Hadley Overseers (1910), 74 J. P. 169. For an Irish case decided under s. 174 of the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, see Naas U. D. C. v. Gt. Southern and Western Rail. Co., ante, p. 489. Insertion of names.

(b) These words raise a difficulty. An under-rating or over-rating may arise out of an error in computation, or an inaccurate reference to the valuation list, and this would clearly be within the section. But it may be contended that the value is wrongly entered in the valuation list. Nevertheless, according to s. 211, that list is to be followed. Can the authority entertain this inquiry? If so, they can depart from the valuation list wholly or to a great extent. This is so contrary to the Under and over-rating.

Note to Section 221.

apparent intention of the legislature that the courts can hardly be expected to sanction it. At the same time, it is not easy to see any serious ground for the appeal given by the section in respect of any other amendment.

S. was assessed to a general district rate, and five weeks later applied to the assessment committee to reduce his assessment, which they did; he did not appeal against the general district rate. The urban authority took out a summons against him under s. 256, and the justices made an order for payment of the rate as originally made. It was held that they were wrong, and ought to have held it a sufficient cause for non-payment that the assessment in the valuation list had been reduced before the summons was taken out (Sheffield Waterworks Co. v. Mayor, etc. of Sheffield (1885), 55 L. J. M. C. 40; 50 J. P. 6). From this case it may be inferred that upon an alteration of the valuation list during the currency of an urban rate, the rate should be amended under this section, or in any event can only be enforced upon the altered valuation. Respondents were summoned for non-payment of the balance of the third instalment of general district and water rates and special rates in the nature of general district rates leviable under a local Act which provides that the corporation may levy any rate by any number of instalments, and that all their powers for recovering any such rate shall apply to each instalment thereof, as if the same were a separate rate. After payment of the first and second instalments the valuation list was, on notice of objection by the respondents, amended by reducing both the gross estimated rental and the rateable value, and the rates were altered accordingly. When a demand was made for payment of the amount claimed in respect of the third instalment, calculated upon the reduced rateable value, the respondents claimed to deduct from the third instalment the difference between the sums paid by them in respect of the first and second instalment, and the sums which would have been payable in respect of those instalments if they had been calculated upon the reduced rateable value. It was held that the instalments were not separate rates but instalments of one rate, and that the respondents were entitled to make the deduction claimed (Hastings Corporation v. Queen's Hotel Co., Ltd. (1907), 71 J. P. 369; 97 L. T. 310; and cf. M'Dermott v. M'Morrow (1904), 38 Ir. L. T. 200).

The opinion of the L. G. B. was once sought as to the power of an urban district council, in the event of a general district rate being demanded and paid whilst an appeal against the assessment of a particular property was under consideration, to return a proportion of the rate if the assessment was reduced. The Board, after referring to the Sheffield Waterworks Case, supra, observed that it would be for the auditor to decide as to the legality of any repayment made by the council. They added, however, that it was open to the council to consider whether, in view of the case above referred to, and of the principle of the decision in R. v. Great Western Rail. Co. (1874), 38 J. P. 822, an amount corresponding to any reduction of rateable value made by the assessment committee in the valuation list might not properly be repaid by the council in respect of a general district rate current at the date of the occupier's notice of objection to the valuation list in force. See also Tynemouth Union v. Backworth Overseers, in notes to s. 231, post, p. 519, and Keeton v. Sheffield Coal Co. (1901), 70 L. J. K. B. 374; 65 J. P. 341.

An urban district council inquired of the L. G. B. whether they would be justified in adding new properties in the rate book which have been occupied, and have been included in a supplemental valuation list, but which were not at the time of the general district rate included in the rate book. The Board disclaimed authority to decide the question, but stated that they are disposed to consider that where a supplemental valuation list has been approved by the assessment committee with reference to a new house or building under the Poor Law Amendment Act, 1868, s. 38, the council may at any time before the end of the period for which the general district rate was made assess the occupier or owner of the premises to the rate under s. 221. Under the proviso to the section, however, the amended rate would be considered to have been made at the time when the person assessed first received notice of its amendment.

(c) See s. 269, post, p. 599. Doubtless a ratepayer may appeal against the reduction of another person's rate on this amendment, if he can find it out.

Notice of amendment.

(d) As to the authentication and service of this notice, see ss. 266, 267, post, p 593.

(e) The days will be one inclusive and one exclusive.

222. All rates made or collected (a) under this Act shall be published in the same manner as poor rates (b), and shall commence and be payable at such time or times (c), and shall be made in such manner and form (d), and be collected by such persons, and either together or separately, or with any other rate (e) or tax, as the urban authority may from time to time appoint: Provided that no publication shall be required of any private improvement rate (f).

Section 222. —— Publication and collection of rates.

(a) There does not appear to be any rate collected under this Act which is not made under it. Collection.

(b) The P. H. A., 1848, s. 99, required the rate to be published in the same manner as the poor rate. But it was decided that rates made under that section were not void if not published in the same manner as the poor rate, there being no words of avoidance in the Act as in 17 Geo. 2, c. 3, which relates to the poor rate (Lefeuvre v. Miller (1857), 8 El. & Bl. 321; 21 J. P. 436). Publication.

A local Act, which made provision for the collection of the general district rate by overseers, directed that "such rate shall be made assessed and levied by the overseers in the same manner and under the same provision . . . as in the case of the poor rate," and by a later sub-section that "the overseers shall recover and enforce the poor rate in the same manner as the general district rate is recoverable and enforceable under the P. H. A., 1875." It was held that the general district rate was placed on the same footing as the poor rate as regards necessity for publication, and that an objection on the ground of want of publication might be taken on a summons for a distress warrant, although the rate was good upon the face of it (Beeson v. Derby Overseers (1903), 67 J. P. 282; 89 L. T. 47).

Publication of a poor rate is effected by giving public notice thereof on the following Sunday, by affixing the notice before morning or evening service at or near the principal door of every church and chapel of the Established Church at which divine service is actually performed; if the parish contains no such building, the notice must be affixed in some conspicuous place. See the Poor Rate Act, 1743; the Parish Notices Act, 1837, s. 2; the Poor Rate Assessment and Collection Act, 1882, s. 4; R. v. Marriott (1840), 12 A. & E. 779; R. v. Whipp (1843), 4 Q. B. 141; Ormerod v. Chadwick (1847), 16 M. & W. 367; Burnley v. Methley Overseers (1859), 1 El. & El. 789; 28 L. J. M. C. 152, and cf. R. v. Wolferstan, [1893] 2 Q. B. 451; 57 J. P. 452.

Allowance by justices is not necessary in the case of any rate made by an urban authority under this Act.

(c) This enables the authority to make a rate payable by instalments. Instalments

If the council wish that the rate should be collected by instalments, they should give formal directions under s. 222 to that effect and fix the times of payment of the instalments. It is not clear that where a rate is not duly made payable by instalments, the council may in any case in which part payment of a rate is tendered allow the payment of an instalment to be accepted, but there would seem to be no practical objection. The council, of course, would be responsible for securing that the due collection of the rate was not prejudiced by any arrangements made.

If no time is fixed by the authority under the section as the date at which such a rate is payable, it would seem that the rate is payable on demand. See also s. 256, post.

As regards a water rate, reference must be made to the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847, s. 70, which prescribes payment at the usual quarter days.

(d) Though the form may be prescribed by the authority, it is submitted that this provision does not authorise the omission of any material part such as the usual heading, as to which see R. v. Wilkinson (1886), 2 T. L. R. 869. Form.

(e) This must mean some other rate or tax over which the authority have a control. It often proves inconvenient to have several rates and taxes collected together, and therefore the authority which levies a rate ought to have exclusive power of regulating its collection. It cannot be presumed that the legislature intended that such power should be interfered with by the urban authority. Reference should be made to 25 & 26 Vict. c. 82, which provides for the consolidation of the proceedings for the Collection with other rates.

Note to Section 222.

recovery of several local rates and taxes due from the same person before the justices. Poor rate and general district rate may under that Act be included in one summons (R. v. Glover, Ex parte Hornsey U. D. C. (1900), 35 L. J. N. 269).

As to recovery of rates generally, see s. 256, post, p. 64.

(f) See s. 213, ante, p. 493. This rate is merely a reimbursement of expenses incurred for the benefit of a property owner of which he has had ample notice.

Evidence of rates.

223. The production of the books purporting to contain any rate or assessment made under this Act shall, without any other evidence whatever, be received as primâ facie evidence of the making and validity of the rates mentioned therein.

Section 262, post, p. 582, provides that no rate shall be vacated for want of form; but if the rate show on the face of it that it is defective in substance (as if there be no estimate, or if it appear to be made for illegal purposes), it is presumed that the objection may nevertheless be taken to it with success. Hence, it is incumbent upon authorities to prepare rates with proper attention and care. The text only makes the production primâ facie evidence of the rate's validity.

Power to make deduction from rate in certain cases.

224. Where it appears to an urban authority that any premises were sufficiently drained before the construction of any new sewer laid down by them, they may deduct from the amount of rates otherwise chargeable in respect of such premises such a sum for such time as they may under all the circumstances of the case deem just.

See s. 24, ante, p. 86.

This section is difficult to apply. The P. H. A., 1848, s. 86, provided for a special district rate in respect of the making of a sewer, and contained a proviso as in the text, which was not unreasonable. By 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, special district rates were abolished, but the proviso was re-enacted as a substantive clause, and consequently it is inserted as above, but how an authority can carry it into effect in their general district rate is not known. They will make the full rate and insert that amount in the book, but from this amount so formally inserted, they may deduct. Assuming that the section can be carried into execution, though the words are discretionary, the nature of the case seems to require that they should be construed as imperative, with this qualification, that the authority must exercise their judgment as to the amount and the period of the deduction.

In response to an application from a rural authority for an order investing them with the powers of s. 224, the L. G. B. said that apart from any other question it appeared to them that such a power could not properly be exercised by an authority who did not levy rates, but issued precepts for the sums they required.

Power to reduce or remit rates.

225. An urban authority may reduce or remit the payment of any rate on account of the poverty of any person liable to the payment thereof.

Such remission will not deprive the person of a parliamentary or municipal franchise on the ground of receiving parochial relief (Mashiter v. Dunn (1848), 18 L. J. C. P. 13). Therefore, presumably it will not deprive a parochial elector of the franchise for the purposes of elections of urban authorities elsewhere than in municipal boroughs or of rural authorities.

Saving for existing agreements.

226. Nothing in this part of this Act shall alter or affect any lease contract or agreement made or entered into between the landlord and tenant of any premises.

See the similar provision in s. 104, ante, p. 189, and the notes thereon.

Note to Section 226.

A person who agrees to take a lease at a "net annual rent of £—," cannot object that the lease contains a covenant for him to pay the sewers rate (Bennett v. Womack (1828), 7 B. & C. 627).

Covenants to pay rates.

By an agreement marsh lands were demised subject to a condition that the tenant should pay all outgoings, rates, taxes, costs, etc., whether parochial or parliamentary, which were and might be chargeable on the lands. An assessment was made by commissioners of sewers for the permanent benefit of the lands, in certain proportions upon the owners and occupiers. For four years the tenant paid in the first instance both his own share and that of his landlord, and upon each half-year's settlement of account with the landlord's agent, who was ignorant of the terms of the agreement, the sum so paid was allowed towards the rent, and receipts were given for the balance :—Held, in an action brought upon the agreement to recover the sums so allowed as arrears of rent, that the facts supported a plea of payment of the rent (Waller v. Andrews (1838), 7 L. J. Ex. 67 ; 3 M. & W. 312). If a tenant voluntarily pays taxes which he alleges ought to have been paid by the landlord and afterwards pays rent without deduction, he cannot recover the amount against the landlord (Saunderson v. Hanson (1828), 3 C. & P. 314 ; and see Andrew v. Hancock (1981), 1 B. & B. 37 ; 3 Moore, 278 ; Fuller v. Abbott (1811), 4 Taunt. 105, and cases collected in note (b) under s. 214, ante, p. 495). To entitle a tenant to deduct from his rent a payment which he is entitled to deduct under a statute, the money must have been actually paid (Ryan v. Thompson (1868), L. R. 3 C. P. 144 ; 32 J. P. 135). In Reigate Corporation v. Wilkinson (1920), 84 J. P. 17 ; 18 L. G. R. 353, the tenants had paid the rates to the landlord as part of the rent, and the landlord had requested the authority to send the claims for the rates to him, but the authority had not exercised their option under s. 211 (1) (a), ante, p. 478, to charge the owner direct.

It was held that the defendant was liable, as by the correspondence he had agreed to discharge the rates if the authority withheld application to the tenants.

As to the rating of mines, and the right to deduct one-half of the rates under the Rating Act, 1874, s. 8, see Devonshire (Duke of) v. Barrow Hæmatite Steel Co. (1877), 2 Q. B. D. 286 ; Challoner v. Bolckow (1878), 3 App. Cas. 933 ; 42 J. P. 756.

A. demised land to B. upon a building lease, at a yearly rent of £60 clear of all rates and assessments, sewers rates and land tax excepted, with the usual covenent for payment of rent. B. by building on the land increased its rateable value to £300 per annum :—Held, that he was only entitled to deduct the sewers rate and land tax upon the original rent, and not upon the improved value (Smith v. Humble (1854), 15 C. B. 321 ; 3 C. L. R. 225 ; and see Watson v. Atkins (1820), 3 B. & A. 647 ; Graham v. Wade (1812), 16 East, 29 ; Watson v. Home (1827), 7 B. & C. 285). Watson v. Home, and Smith v. Humble, supra, were followed by the Court of Appeal in Mansfield v. Relf, [1908] 1 K. B. 71 ; 71 J. P. 556. See all these three cases distinguished in Salaman v. Holford, [1909] 2 Ch. 602. When a lessee covenanted that he would pay all taxes, charges, rates, tithes, etc., which then were or should at any time thereafter during that demise be taxed, charged, assessed, or imposed upon the said demised premises :—Held, that the covenant was not confined to rates payable by the landlord, but meant all rates then imposed on the lessee in respect of his occupation, and all future rates which might be imposed on the land itself (Hurst v. Hurst (1849), 4 Ex. 571) ; and as to inhabited house duty, see Eastwood v. McNab, [1914] 2 K. B. 361.

Contribution to bridge repairs ratione tenuræ.

A landlord, liable with others to repair a bridge ratione tenuræ, demised the land, and the lessee covenanted to pay the rent, clear of land tax and all other taxes and deductions whatsoever, either parliamentary or parochial, taxed or imposed, or to be taxed or imposed, upon the premises, or upon the lessor in respect thereof, property tax excepted. By statute, reciting the liability ratione tenuræ and that part of the bridge was out of repair, it was enacted that the landowners liable as above should repair such part during the continuance of the Act ; and on their default road trustees were empowered to do the repairs and recover against the owners. A power of distress under a justices' warrant was given to enforce payment, and for raising the sums required power was given to the landowners to call meetings, and to make rates according to the value of the chargeable lands, such rates to be levied, if necessary, by distress. A subsequent Act, also reciting the liability, made further provision as to holding meetings, and levying rates :—Held, that the original liability for contribution to repairs did not, by these enactments, become a parliamentary tax or deduction within the lessee's covenant, and, therefore (the court finding no clause in the statutes which extended the ultimate liability to lessees and occupiers as well as owners) that the lessee having been compelled, in the lessor's default, to pay a rate made as above and charged upon him as lessee and occupier, might recover the amount from the lessor (Baker v. Greenhill (1842), 3 Q. B. 148; 11 L. J. Q. B. 161).

Note to Section 226.

Sewer rate.

A sewer rate is not a "parliamentary tax" within the meaning of a covenant to pay such taxes (Brewster v. Kitchel (1697), 2 Salk. 615; Palmer v. Earith (1845), 14 L. J. Ex. 256; 14 M. & W. 428). See also Earl of Cork v. Cork C. C., [1903] 2 I. R. 490.

Drainage rate under local Act.

A tenant from year to year agreed to pay all outgoings. In the course of the tenancy a new drainage rate was imposed by a local Act, to be paid by the tenant, who might deduct it from the rent in the absence of any agreement to the contrary. It was held that the tenant could deduct it, for his agreement did not apply to such new rate, but that the current rate could only be deducted from the current rent, and past payments could not be deducted (Vestry of Mile End Old Town v. Whitby (1898), 78 L. T. 80).

Water rate.

In a lease of a shop, basement and three rooms on the third floor of a house, the lessor covenanted to pay "all rates and taxes chargeable in respect of the demised premises." Water was supplied separately by a water company to the shop and basement, and was paid for by the tenant. It was held that he was entitled to recover from the lessor the sum so paid, as being a "rate" within the meaning of the covenant (Direct Spanish Telegraph Co., Ltd. v. Shepherd (1884), 13 Q. B. D. 202; 48 J. P. 550). This decision was discussed in Badcock v. Hunt (1888), 22 Q. B. D. 145; 53 J. P. 340, where, by a covenant in a lease of a warehouse, the lessor covenanted to pay all rates, taxes, and impositions whatsoever, whether parliamentary, parochial, or imposed by the corporation of London, or otherwise howsoever, which then were or thereafter might be rated, charged, or assessed on the said premises, or any part thereof, or on the said yearly rent, or on the landlord, owner, or tenants of the said premises in respect thereof. Water having been supplied to the premises for domestic purposes by the New River Company under the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847, the lessees paid the water rates due therefor and sought to recover them from the lessor:—Held, that such water rates were not rates or impositions imposed on or in respect of the premises within the meaning of the covenant, and that the lessees were not entitled to recover the same from the lessor. It was again discussed, and followed with reluctance by BUCKLEY, J., in a case where in a lease of the whole of the basement and a portion of the ground floor of a block of buildings, the lessors covenanted to pay "all rates and taxes payable in respect of the said demised premises," and water was supplied for domestic purposes by a water board to the whole block by a common pipe (see Bourn and Tant v. Salmon and Gluckstein, Ltd. (1906), 70 J. P. 462, affirmed on appeal ([1907] 1 Ch. 616; 71 J. P. 329) on the ground of the particular circumstances of the case, and on the ground that the case was indistinguishable from Direct Spanish Telegraph Co., Ltd. v. Shepherd, supra). In Elliott v. Russell, [1902] 2 K. B. 748; 67 J. P. 158, a Divisional Court held that a rent for water supplied under agreement made under s. 56, ante, p. 129, was a "rate made under this Act" within the meaning of s. 256, post, p. 564. In Northampton Corporation v. Ellen, [1904] 1 K. B. 299; 68 J. P. 197, the Court of Appeal held that a water rate was not a "rate" within the meaning of an order extending the boundaries of the borough, Article 36 whereof provided that the general district rate to be levied in the added part should not in any one year during a period of ten years exceed such an amount in the pound as, "when added to the poor rate and to the borough rate and any other rate made by the corporation" in the same year, would make up a total rate of 5*s.* 6*d.* in the pound.

Cost of water for trade purposes.

Under a covenant by a lessor to pay all water rate imposed or assessed upon the premises or on the lessor or lessee in respect thereof, the lessor is not bound to pay for water supplied to the lessee for trade purposes (Re Floyd, Floyd v. Lyons & Co., [1897] 1 Ch. 633); so too a lessor's covenant in the case of a lock-up shop to pay all rates and taxes except gas and electric light was held to include water rate for water supplied for domestic purposes, but not the rate for water supplied for trade purposes (Drieselman v. Winstanley (1909), 53 Sol. J. 631).

227. Any limit imposed on or in respect of any rate by any local Act of Parliament shall not apply to any rate required to be levied for the purpose of defraying any expenses incurred by an urban authority in the execution of this Act.

Section 227. —— Limit in local Act not to apply to rate for purposes of this Act.

It was held that the corresponding section in 35 & 36 Vict. c. 79, s. 43, did not affect exemptions from assessment under a local Act (Walton Improvement Commissioners v. Walford (1875), L. R. 10 Q. B. 180; 39 J. P. 183).

A local Act provided that no borough rate levied thereafter should exceed in any year the sum of 1*s.* in the £, provided that with the consent of a majority of the persons liable to be rated thereto, the corporation might increase such rate above that amount. It further provided that no such increase should be leviable upon the owner or occupier of any coal mine in respect thereof, or upon any person assessable in the proportion of one-fourth only of any rate, other than the highway rate, in respect of his property or of premises occupied by him:—Held, that this was not an exemption of property from liability, but a limit imposed on the borough rate leviable upon colliery and certain other property; that though the limit still existed so far as any rate leviable by the corporation for borough purposes was concerned, the provision in the text prevented its applying to rates leviable by the corporation for the purposes of this Act, and that the corporation were unrestricted in the amount of any rate leviable by them thereunder (St. Helen's (Corporation of) v. St. Helen's Colliery Co. (1883), 48 J. P. 39). A provision in a local Waterworks Act that the rates should not exceed so much in the pound was held to be superseded by the corresponding section of the Public Health (Ireland) Act, 1878 (R. v. Wexford (Corporation of) (1886), 18 L. R. Ir. 119). Where a local Act enacted that the amount of the improvement rates made thereunder without the consent of the ratepayers should not exceed 4*s.* in the £, or with their consent 5*s.*, provided that in respect of so much of any rate which might be made without such consent as exceeded 2*s.* 6*d.* in the £, or with such consent 3*s.* 6*d.*, the occupier of any land used as a canal, towing-path, or railway should be assessed in the proportion of one-fourth part only of the net annual value thereof, it was held that, although the 4*s.* and 5*s.* limit was taken away by the text, the exemption of canal and railway owners was not affected (Bingley U. D. C. v. Midland Rail. Co. (1899), 80 L. T. 725). See also Hill v. Crediton U. D. C., and Ross U. D. C. v. Daniels, ante, p. 471.

Rates for purposes outside this Act.

The text extends only to rates levied for defraying expenses incurred in the execution of this Act. It does not extend to rates including other purposes. In Manly v. Young, [1896] 2 I. R. 126, a rate, exceeding 2*s.* in the £, was made by town commissioners acting under a special Act. They were also the sanitary authority for the township, not only for strictly sanitary purposes, but also for all the purposes of the special Act, which provided that the township rate should not exceed in any year the sum of 2*s.* in the £, without the consent of two-thirds of the ratepayers at a special meeting. This rate was made without such consent and was held invalid notwithstanding the provisions of the corresponding section of the P. H. (Ireland) A., 1878.

228. Nothing in this Act shall be deemed to alter or interfere with any liability existing at the time of the passing of this Act of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge respectively to contribute towards the expenses of paving and pitching repairing lighting and cleansing, under the powers of any local Act under which the Oxford and Cambridge commissioners respectively act, the several streets and places within the jurisdiction of such commissioners respectively.

Quota of rates to be paid by the universities, etc.

If any difference arises between either of the said universities and the urban authority with respect to the proportion and manner in which the university shall contribute towards any expenses under this Act, and to which the university is not liable under any such local Act, the same shall be settled by arbitration in manner provided by this Act (a).

Section 228. All rates, contributions, and sums of money which may become payable under this Act by the said universities respectively, and their respective halls and colleges, may be recovered from such universities halls and colleges in the same manner in all respects as rates contributions and sums of money may now be recovered from them by virtue of any such local Act.

(a) See s. 179, ante, p. 425. The Commissioners of Oxford and Cambridge have now been superseded by the respective corporations. See also the notes to s. 342, post, p. 667, and to the L. G. A., 1888, s. 52, post.

EXPENSES OF RURAL AUTHORITY.

Expenses of rural authority.

229. The expenses incurred (a) by a rural authority in the execution of this Act shall be divided into general expenses and special expenses.

General expenses (other than those chargeable on owners and occupiers under this Act) (b) shall be the expenses of the establishment and officers of the rural authority (c), the expenses in relation to disinfection, the providing conveyance for infected persons and all other expenses not determined by this Act (d) or by order of the Local Government Board (e) to be special expenses.

Special expenses shall be the expenses of the construction maintenance and cleansing of sewers in any contributory place (f) within the district, the providing a supply of water to any such place, and maintaining any necessary works for that purpose, if and so far as the expenses of such supply and works are not defrayed out of water rates or rents under this Act (g), the charges and expenses arising out of or incidental to the possession of property transferred to the rural authority in trust for any contributory place, and all other expenses incurred or payable by the rural authority in or in respect of any contributory place within the district, and determined by order of the Local Government Board (h) to be special expenses.

Where the rural authority make any sewers or provide any water supply or execute any other work under this Act for the common benefit of any two or more contributory places within their district, they may apportion (i) the expense of constructing any such work, and of maintaining the same, in such proportions as they think just, between such contributory places, and any expense so apportioned to any such contributory place shall be deemed to be special expenses legally incurred in respect of such contributory place.

The overseers (j) of any contributory place, if aggrieved by any such apportionment (k), may, within twenty-one days after notice (l) has been given to them of the apportionment, send or deliver a memorial (m) to the Local Government Board stating their grounds of complaint, and the said Board may make such order in the matter as to it may seem equitable, and the order so made shall be binding and conclusive on all parties concerned (n).

General expenses shall be payable out of a common fund to be raised out of the poor rate of the parishes in the district (o) according to the rateable value of each contributory place in manner in this Act mentioned.

Special expenses shall be a separate charge on each contributory place. Section 229.

The following areas situated in a rural district shall be contributory places for the purposes of this Act; that is to say,

(1) Every parish (p) not having any part of its area within the limits of a special drainage district formed in pursuance of the Sanitary Acts (q) or of this Act, or of an urban district; and

(2) Every such special drainage district as aforesaid (q); and

(3) In the case of a parish wholly situated in a rural district, and part of which forms or is part of any such special drainage district as aforesaid, such portion of that parish as is not comprised within such special drainage district; and

(4) In the case of a parish a part of which is situated within an urban district, such portion of that parish as is not comprised within such urban district, or within any such special drainage district as aforesaid (r).

(a) "Expenses incurred" in the corresponding section of the Irish statute has been held to mean actual or estimated expenses (R. v. L. G. B., [1906] 2 I. R. 206).

Under the L. G. A., 1894, s. 29, the expenses of a rural district council are, subject to the provisions of that Act, to be defrayed in manner directed by the P. H. A., 1875. Highway expenses must be defrayed as general expenses, though a rural district council may, under certain circumstances, charge a contributory place with the cost of maintaining its own highways. See the section and notes thereto, post.

(b) These are such expenses as are made recoverable from owners of premises, for example under, ss. 23, 98, 150, and similar sections. Expenses chargeable on owners.

(c) The expenses of the establishment and officers of a rural authority are chargeable as general expenses, and the L. G. B. were given no power under this Act to declare such expenses, or part thereof, to be special expenses. This provision does not apply, however, to the remuneration of servants, which is properly chargeable in the same manner as the other expenses connected with the works upon which they are engaged. Thus, the workmen employed at the waterworks or in flushing the sewers in a rural parish may properly be paid out of the special expenses rate as part of the expense of supplying water, and of maintaining sewers, and the wages of scavengers are similarly chargeable if the cost of scavenging work (under s. 42) has been declared "special." It is not always easy to draw a line between officers and servants, but it seems reasonable to hold that such employees as waterworks managers, superintendents of sewers, caretakers of cemeteries, etc., are not included within the former category for the purposes of this section. Sanitary officers.

See, however, the P. H. A., 1890, s. 49, post, which, when in force in a rural district, enables the M. of H., upon application, to declare any expenses to be special expenses. The Ministry are willing to entertain applications under this section relating to the remuneration of such officers as secretaries to parochial committees (see notes to s. 202), water rate collectors, and other officers solely engaged for the benefit of particular parishes, and also relating to special remuneration awarded to clerks and surveyors (see s. 190 and notes) in respect of extra work from which particular contributory places benefit, e.g., the execution of a sewerage scheme.

Compensation payable to existing officers by a rural council under the L. G. A., 1894, s. 81 (7), post, is, under that sub-section, to be paid as general expenses.

(d) Expenses incurred by a rural council and allowed by the Light Railway Commissioners with reference to any application for an order authorising a light railway under the Light Railways Act, 1896, may under s. 16 of that Act be paid as general expenses. The next paragraph specifies the expenses which the Act determines to be special expenses. See also the Housing of the Working Classes Act, 1890, ss. 42 and 65, post, Vol. II. Highway expenses, etc.

Note to Section 229.

Where a rural authority obtained urban powers under the first paragraph of s. 161, ante, p. 364, it was held that their expenses in the execution of such powers were general expenses (Lanc. and York. Rail. Co. v. Bolton Union, ante, p. 366). Such orders usually, however, contain a provision that lighting expenses shall be special. See the notes to the section.

The plaintiff brought an action against a rural sanitary authority, to restrain them from fouling a stream, and in 1885 recovered judgment with costs. The costs were not taxed until 1890. In 1891, the costs not having been paid, the plaintiff sued out a writ of elegit under which an inquisition was taken, and the sheriff delivered in execution to the plaintiff certain lands which had been acquired by the defendants for the purpose of sewage works in the parish of N., a contributory place within their district, by means of money borrowed on the security of the separate rates of that parish. Upon motion by the defendants to set aside the writ of inquisition, it was held that the lands in question were held by the defendants on trust for the parish of N., and could only be taken in execution for judgment debts exclusively chargeable against that place; that the costs of the action were "general expenses" not chargeable against that place of the separate funds levied within it, but against the common fund of the district; and that the judgment could only be enforced against property which had been acquired by means of that common fund. It was also held that the writ and inquisition being regular, the motion to set them aside was wrong in form, but that under the circumstances the court would, in the exercise of its discretion, under the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 24 (5), stay all further proceedings under the writ and inquisition (Jersey (Earl of) v. Uxbridge R. S. A., [1891] 3 Ch. 183).

Order of M. of H.

(e) As explained in note (c) above, the powers of the L. G. B. (now exercised by the M. of H.) for the issue of orders declaring to be "special" expenses which would otherwise fall upon the common fund of a rural district, were considerably enlarged by the P. H. A., 1890, s. 49. If a rural council desire an order in relation to certain expenses which under the former Act must be charged as general expenses, they should, unless Part III. of the Act of 1890 has been adopted, apply for an order making s. 49 of that Act operative. The application for a special expenses order must be then renewed.

See also the L. G. A., 1894, s. 29 (b), which enacted that when the L. G. B. declare any expenses to be special expenses they may further direct that such expenses shall be raised in like manner as general expenses instead of by a separate rate for special expenses. Such a direction would seem to be unnecessary when the special expenses of a contributory place are very small in amount (see first proviso to s. 230), but it is a useful provision in cases where the land in a contributory place ought to contribute in full to the expenses in question.

The M. of H. issue many orders annually under these provisions declaring expenses to be special. An order is only retrospective so far as the expenses have not appeared in closed and audited accounts, and it is usually worded so as to apply only to expenses which have been or will be legally incurred. An order cannot be issued for expenses which have been the subject of a sanction by the L. G. B. under the Local Authorities (Expenses) Act, 1887, for such a sanction does not legalise expenses. In many of the orders of the Board investing rural councils with urban powers a provision was inserted declaring the expenses to be special.

An order cannot be issued restricting the incidence of expenses to part only of a contributory place. But see a case decided under the corresponding section of the P. H. (Ireland) Act, 1878: R. v. L. G. B. (1915), 2 I. R. 55.

It will be observed that the M. of H. have no power to declare to be general any expenses expressly declared to be special. See also the following notes.

Retrospective rate for special expenses.

(f) Between 1874 and 1879 some parishes in the W. union were sewered. Cheques were drawn from time to time for the expenses, and were paid out of the common fund, being entered in the ledger as "incidental expenses." In 1879 the sums so paid amounted to £831, and this balance was carried forward each half-year until 1883 and passed the auditor. In 1883 this £831 was apportioned as special expenses amongst the parishes concerned, the share of parish B. being £280. This sum of £280 was carried forward as due from B. each half-year till at length a rate was made on B. for the sum under s. 230, post, p. 514. S. appealed against the rate as being bad on the ground of retrospectiveness, and it was held that it was bad for this reason (Saul v. Wigton Rural Sanitary Authority (1886), 51 J. P. 406), and see note (l) to s. 230, post, p. 517. But see Caistor Union v. North Kelsey (Overseers of (1890), 59 L. J. M. C. 102; 62 L. T. 731; R. v. Leigh R. D. C., ante, p. 476, and Croydon Corporation v. Croydon R. D. C., ante, p. 477. Note to Section 229.

The L. G. B. always held that if expenses are incurred by a rural council in the preparation of a scheme of sewerage or of water supply, and the same is not carried out for any reason, such expenses are chargeable as general expenses in the absence of an order declaring them to be special; and, further, that such an order should only be issued under special circumstances, as, for instance, when the plans first prepared have been useful in connection with another scheme which has been carried out. There must be an exception to this rule, however, when a rural council have borrowed money with the Board's sanction for experimental works of water supply, which prove unsuccessful. The loan in this case must continue to be borne by the contributory place. Cost of abortive schemes.

The section does not include the expenses of disposing of sewage among those which are to be special, although they are usually so considered (being allied to sewerage expenses) when the question is raised by the district auditor or otherwise an Order is issued for the purpose. Expenses of sewage disposal.

(g) See s. 57, ante, p. 131, with respect to the levying and recovery of water rates. It is to be observed that when the supply has been provided, water rates or rents are to be obtained, and so far as the amount so obtained is deficient to meet the charges on the authority for such supply, a precept for special expenses must be issued. See also the Public Health (Water) Act, 1878, post. Expenses of providing a water supply.

The expenses of opposing a Bill in Parliament are not chargeable as special expenses without an Order. Expenses of a Provisional Order for land purchase (see s. 298) also require an Order before they can be charged to the contributory place benefited.

It has been held that repairing a public well was work for which a rural authority might issue a precept for special expenses (Witney v. Wycombe Union (1876), 40 J. P. 149).

Where a rural council has, under s. 51, ante, p. 119, supplied water to part of a contributory place, the expenses both of supply and of maintenance must, so far as they cannot be defrayed by a reasonable water rate or water rent to be paid by the consumers, be raised as special expenses by a rate on the whole contributory place (Horn v. Sleaford R. D. C., [1898] 2 Q. B. 358; 62 J. P. 502).

(h) See note (e), supra. This order is conclusive. See s. 295, post, p. 627. Such orders may, however, be varied or rescinded.

(i) Only the expenses of works which are chargeable as special expenses, and which will be of common benefit to two or more contributory places, are to be apportioned. Thus, in the case of a joint sewerage scheme for two parishes the rural council must charge the cost of all internal sewers to the parishes separately, and confine their apportionment to the cost of the outfall sewer, engineer's fee, and other items in the estimate which are in the interests of the whole area to be drained. This point is important, as any other course may lead to difficulties. If a loan is proposed in the case of a joint scheme, the M. of H. will require to be furnished, in addition to other particulars, with copies of the notices served upon the overseers of the respective parishes, endorsed with the dates of service, and a statement distinguishing the items in the estimate which represent works which will be of exclusive and of common benefit. Apportionment.

The Ministry do not advise as to the basis upon which an apportionment should be made, in view of the fact that they may be called upon to settle an appeal. The assessable value of the parishes is very frequently taken as a basis of division, but the section gives full discretion to the district council in the matter. It is well to bear in mind in framing notices of apportionment that the estimated cost of works may be exceeded, and that unless provision is made for this contingency further notices will be necessary.

When it is proposed to borrow money there is a difficulty in apportioning the cost of works upon a varying basis, such as rateable value in successive years. The loan must be divided, and each parish must be liable throughout the term for the sums required for repayment with interest. There have been several instances, however, in which the L. G. B. and M of H. have regarded as valid notices of apportionment which have made provision for a quinquennial readjustment of charges. Maintenance expenses can, of course, be apportioned from time to time as the council think just.

Note to Section 229.

A council who purchase water in bulk, and supply it to different parishes, making a profit in some and a loss in others, may not set off the losses against the profits for the purposes of assessment to income tax (Wakefield R. D. C. v. Hall, [1912] 3 K. B. 328; 76 J. P. 437).

Appeal against apportionment.

(j) Note that it is still the overseers who must appeal, not the parish council (see also note (k)). At first sight it would appear that the appeal must be made by both the overseers, or by all when there are more than two, but an appeal by a majority of them would probably be held sufficient; see R. v. Warwickshire JJ. (1837), 6 L. J. M. C. 113; 6 A. & E. 873. In a case where a memorial was addressed to the L. G. B. by an assistant overseer, the Board required a statement from the overseers that the appeal was forwarded by their instructions. In another case where one overseer only signed a letter of appeal, inquiry was made whether the other overseer concurred in it.

It is essential that a memorial of appeal should state the "grounds of complaint," and these grounds must be confined to the question of the apportionment. A memorial which merely alleges that a scheme is unnecessary, or is too costly, is not an appeal under the section; it is merely an objection to the execution of the work.

In the case of an apportionment between a special drainage district which is part of a parish and the contributory place comprising the remainder of that parish, there is, of course, only one set of overseers upon whom notices can be served. They can therefore appeal on behalf of either contributory place.

Whilst an appeal against an apportionment is under the M. of H.'s considera tion, justices need not issue a distress warrant against the overseers to compel them to pay a precept calling for the sum apportioned on the parish (R. v. Fox (1908), 72 J. P. 331; 99 L. T. 90). If in such circumstances a summons against the overseers is adjourned pending the decision, and new overseers come into office before the decision is given, a distress warrant cannot afterwards be issued against the overseers originally summoned who have gone out of office (Plympton St. Mary R. D. C. v. Reynolds, [1909] 1 K. B. 768; 73 J. P. 156). See also note (i), supra.

(k) See note (i) as to what is a proper apportionment. Before appealing, the overseers will probably lay the matter before the parish council, if there is one.

(l) See ss. 266, 267, post, p. 593, as to the authentication and service of this notice.

(m) See note (j) as to this memorial. It must be received by the Ministry within twenty-one days from the receipt of the notice of apportionment. A letter will suffice, if sufficiently signed. The usual course taken by the Ministry is to direct a local inquiry to be held by one of their engineering inspectors, combined with an inquiry into any proposed loan. If, however, the district council admit the unfairness of the apportionment there would seem to be no objection to their making an amended apportionment, and, if there is no appeal against this, the Ministry need make no order.

(n) See also s. 295, post, p. 627. It is to be noticed that no appeal is given against the order of the Ministry in this matter.

(o) See following section and notes thereto. See also Clark v. Rochford R. D. C. (1897), 13 T. L. R. 371.

(p) See the definition in s. 4, ante, p. 5.

Special drainage districts.

(q) Such districts, if in existence in 1875, were formed under 29 & 30 Vict. c. 90, ss. 5, 7; 30 & 31 Vict. c. 113, ss. 7, 9; or 33 & 34 Vict. c. 53, ss. 3, 4. See also s. 277 of the present Act, and notes thereto.

(r) Such contributory places have now become separate parishes. See the L. G. A., 1894, s. 36.

Mode of raising contributions in rural district.

230. For the purpose of obtaining payment from the several contributory places (a) within their district of the sums to be contributed by them, the rural authority shall issue their precept to the overseers of each such contributory place requiring such overseers to pay, within a time limited by the precept, the amount specified in such precept to the rural authority or to some person appointed by them (b), care being taken to issue separate precepts in respect of contributions for general expenses and special expenses, or to make such expenses respectively separate items in any precept including both classes of expenses (c).

Where a contributory place is part of a parish as defined by this Act (d), the overseers of such parish shall for the purposes of this Act be deemed to be the overseers of such contributory place, and where any part of a contributory place is part of a parish (e) the overseers of such parish shall for the like purposes be deemed to be the overseers of such part of such contributory place.

The overseers shall comply with the requisitions of such precept by paying the contribution required in respect of general expenses out of the poor rate of their respective parishes, and with respect to special expenses by raising the contribution required by the levy (in the case of an entire parish on the whole of such parish, and in the case of a contributory place or part of a contributory place forming part of a parish, by the levy on such place, or such part thereof, exclusive of the rest of the parish) of a separate rate (f) in the same manner as if it were a rate for the relief of the poor, with this exception ; (namely,)

That the owner of any tithes, or of any tithe commutation rent-charge, or the occupier of any land used as arable meadow or pasture ground only, or as woodlands market gardens or nursery grounds, and the occupier of any land covered with water, or used as a canal or towing path for the same, or as a railway constructed under the powers of any Act of Parliament for public conveyance (g), shall, where a special assessment is made for the purpose of such rate, be assessed in respect of one-fourth part only of the rateable value (h) thereof, or where no special assessment is made, shall pay in respect of the said property one-fourth part only of the rate in the pound payable in respect of houses and other property : (i)

Provided that where the amount required by any precept or precepts (k) from a contributory place in respect of special expenses is less than ten pounds, or is so small that a rate less than one penny in the pound would be required to raise the same, the overseers shall not assess and levy any special rate for the same, but shall pay the amount as if it formed part of the contribution required from them in respect of general expenses.

A separate rate under this section shall, as respects the powers of the overseers in relation to making assessing and levying such rate, and as respects the appeal against such rate, and all other incidents thereof (l) except the purposes to which it is applicable, and such exemption as aforesaid (m), and except the allowance of justices, which shall not be required, be subject to the same provisions as apply in law to a rate levied for the relief of the poor ; and the overseers of a parish shall have the same powers of levying such separate rate in a contributory place or part of a contributory place forming part of their parish, as they would have if such contributory place or such part thereof formed the whole of their parish (n).

Where a contribution for general expenses is required from a contributory place or part of a contributory place which is part of a parish, the overseers shall from time to time (o) levy such increase of rate from

Section 230. the contributory place or such part thereof as may be sufficient to recoup the parish for the sum it has paid on account of the contributory place or such part thereof in respect of general expenses under this Act, and carry the same to the general account of the parish, and such increase of rate shall be raised in such contributory place or part of a contributory place by an addition to the poor rate (p), or by a separate rate to be assessed made allowed (q) published collected and levied in the same manner as a poor rate (r). The officers ordinarily employed in the collection (s) of the poor rate shall, if required by the overseers, collect any separate rate made under this section, and receive out of such separate rate (t) such remuneration for the additional duty as the overseers with the consent of the vestry may determine.

The overseers shall at the expiration of their term of office pay any surplus in their hands arising from any separate rate levied in pursuance of this Act, above the amount for which the rate was made, to the rural authority or to such person as they may appoint, to the credit of the contributory place within which or within part of which such rate was made; and such surplus shall go in reduction of the next call that may be made on such contributory place or such part thereof for the purpose of defraying the expenses incurred by the rural authority (u).

(a) See the last section.

(b) This should be the treasurer of the rural authority.

(c) It is desirable, as far as possible, to include all in one document with a view to saving labour and expense. But the sums must be kept distinct. See Jersey (Earl of) v. Uxbridge R. S. A., ante, p. 512.

(d) See definition in s. 4, ante, p. 5, and notes (q) and (r) to s. 229.

Part of parish.

(e) Contributory places may, under s. 277 (or corresponding provisions in previous Acts), consist of parts of two or more parishes. In that case it seems that the overseers of the parishes respectively will be the overseers of the respective parts for the purpose of raising these expenses.

"Separate rate."

(f) By the L. G. A., 1894, s. 29, post, when the M. of H. determine any expenses under that Act to be special expenses, and a separate charge on any contributory place, and such expenses would, if not separately chargeable on a contributory place, be raised as general expenses, they may further direct that such special expenses shall be raised in like manner as general expenses, and not by such separate rate for special expenses as is mentioned in this section. See also note (e) to s. 229, and cf. the provisions of the Housing, Town Planning, etc. Act, 1909, s. 31 (1), post, Vol. II.

Exemptions.

(g) These are the same exemptions as are contained in s. 211, ante, p. 478, and the notes on that section should be referred to. The exemption was extended to orchards by 53 & 54 Vict. c. 17, post, and to allotments by 54 & 55 Vict. c. 33, post. Having regard to the exemption, the Agricultural Rates Act, 1896, and the Tithe Rentcharge (Rates) Act, 1899, do not apply.

An auditor surcharged overseers in respect of a portion of a separate rate for special expenses not collected by them. It appeared that in the valuation list in force at the time the rate was made, certain property was shown as an undivided assessment under the heading "Buildings and other hereditaments not being agricultural land." It was contended by the owner that under s. 230 he was entitled to an abatement on account of a portion of the property, and the overseers accepted as payment in respect of this portion a sum representing only one-fourth of the rate, The auditor stated that no appeal has been made to the assessment committee against the assessment or for its division, and he assigned as one of his reasons for the surcharge that the overseers had no power to divide an assessment fixed by the committee without obtaining the approval of the committee thereto. The L. G. B., on appeal, expressed the opinion that if the case was one in which as regards a portion of the property the ratepayer was entitled to the partial exemption provided for by s. 230 of the Act, it was competent to the overseers in making out the rate to divide the assessment into two parts, and to make the rate in respect of each portion in accordance with the provisions of the section. The rate, however, having once been duly made, reduction of the rate on the property could (the Board considered) legally be made only in pursuance of a decision of a competent authority upon an appeal against the rate, and as the reduction represented by the sum in question was not so made, the Board confirmed the auditor's decision. They, however, exercised their powers of remission and remitted the surcharge. Note to Section 230.

(h) In the former section the term is net annual value, defined in s. 4, ante, p. 15, under the word rack-rent. There is no definition in the Act of rateable value, but the two phrases have the same meaning, being, in fact, convertible terms. "Rateable value."

A Provisional Order of the L. G. B. confirmed by a local Act provided that the expenses incurred by a joint board should be defrayed out of a common fund to be contributed by the component districts in manner provided by s. 283, post, p. 618, and that the contributions of certain of the component districts should be contributed and raised as if they were required to defray "special expenses" within the meaning of this Act. It was held (on a special case) that the joint board should apportion the contributions of the component districts according to the rateable values of the properties in such districts, to be ascertained according to the valuation list, and that the rateable value of tithe, tithe commutation rent-charges, land used as arable, meadow, or pasture ground only, or as woodlands, market gardens, or nursery grounds, or covered with water, or used as a canal or towing-path, or as a railway, should be taken at the full value appearing in the valuation list, and not at one-fourth thereof (Darenth Main Valley Sewerage Board v. Dartford Union (1887), 19 Q. B. D. 270).

(i) This refers to the poor rate. There is great difficulty in dealing with a hereditament consisting of house and land where the valuation list does not sever the values of each. Where a valuation has been made under the Union Assessment Committee Act, 1862, the valuer ought, according to 27 & 28 Vict. c. 39, s. 4, to show the particulars of his valuation, and the respective values of such particulars. Where this has been done the separate values of the house and land can be obtained.

(k) These plural words appear to contemplate that several precepts may be issued so as to be outstanding at the same time. Nevertheless, if the whole of the sum required be of the limited amount stated in the text, no special rate can be made. Where this proviso is acted on and no separate rate is made the exceptions as to rating at one-fourth only of the rateable value do not apply (Sheffield (Mayor, etc. of) v. Bradfield Union Assessment Committee (1891), 7 T. L. R. 571). Several precepts.

The precept should not under any circumstances direct these expenses to be paid out of the poor rate.

The L. G. B. expressed the following opinion as to the meaning of this proviso: Section 230 of the Act of 1875, as amended by the Public Health (Rating of Orchards) Act, 1890, and the Allotments Rating Exemption Act, 1891, provides that the overseers shall comply with the requisitions of a precept for special expenses by raising the contribution required by the levy of a separate rate in the same manner as if it were a rate for the relief of the poor, with certain exceptions for rating special classes of property at a reduced amount. Where the amount required by any precept or precepts from a contributory place in respect of special expenses is less than ten pounds or is so small that a rate of less than one penny in the pound would be required to raise the same, it is provided that the overseers shall not assess and levy any special rate for the same, but shall pay the amount as if it formed part of the contribution required from them in respect of general expenses, that is, out of the poor rate. The Board consider that the effect of this provision is that payment out of the poor rate of a contribution for special expenses is only to be made where the amount is less than £10, or is so small that a rate less than one penny in the pound upon the rateable value as estimated for the purposes of a separate rate would be required to raise the same. Precepts for small amounts.

(l) A question has been asked whether the term incidents includes the reductions allowed by the Poor Rate Assessment and Collection Act, 1869. The word was found in 30 & 31 Vict. c. 113, which was passed before that Act, and it might there- "Incidents."

Note to Section 230.

fore appear that the provisions of the Act of 1869 did not apply. On the other hand, there seems to be no reason why an incident of the poor rate should not apply to a rate made under this section, even although such incident has been created since the passing of the Act in which it was first used. See hereon R. v. Lambert (1854), 2 C. L. R. 883. A rate made under this section must not be retrospective. See Saul v. Wigton R. S. A., on p. 512, ante; but see Easton v. Nar Valley Drainage Commissioners (1892), 8 T. L. R. 649; R. v. Leigh R. D. C., ante, p. 476; and Croydon Corporation v. Croydon R. D. C., ante, p. 477.

(m) That is, the reduction in the amount of the assessable value. The P. H. A., 1872, s. 18, referring to 30 & 31 Vict. c. 113, described these allowances as exemptions.

(n) See note (g), supra.

"From time to time."

(o) The words "from time to time" ought not to be so construed as to throw upon the ratepayers for one year what ought to have been borne by their predecessors. See per BLACKBURN, J., in Market Harborough and Brampton Turnpike Trustees v. Kettering Highway Board (1873), L. R. 8 Q. B. 308; 37 J. P. 551.

(p) It is difficult to see how this can be carried out, except by including the amount in the ordinary estimate for that rate.

Allowance necessary.

(q) This separate rate must be allowed by the justices, though the separate rate in the previous part of the section is free from that requisition.

(r) The exemption previously referred to (m) is not referred to here. Quære whether it can be implied? If not, it seems that the Agricultural Rates Act, 1896, and the Tithe Rentcharge (Rates) Act, 1899, will apply.

Rate collectors to collect.

(s) Note it is the collector who is to be employed, not an assistant overseer who is not engaged in the collection. The officers referred to cannot, it appears, decline to collect the rate if required to do so, but they are to be remunerated, and can compel the overseers to remunerate them.

At an audit of overseers' accounts the auditor disallowed a sum paid to a person, who was not assistant overseer, for his services in making and collecting a separate rate levied to meet special expenses of a rural district council. He assigned as his reasons that the person had not been duly appointed assistant overseer, and that he, not being the officer legally employed in the collection of the poor rate, the provisions of s. 230, as to remuneration for collecting a separate rate, did not apply; that the sum was not a legal charge upon the proceeds of a separate rate, and there was no authority enabling the overseers to charge the same in their accounts. On an appeal to the L. G. B. against the auditor's decision, the Board stated that they concurred in the opinion of the auditor that there was no legal authority for charging the sum in question, and accordingly they confirmed the disallowance with remission however.

Remuneration.

(t) These words supplied a defect in the P. H. A., 1872, s. 18, which omitted to declare whence the remuneration was to come. Care must be taken to ascertain whether the securities given by the officers will apply to this collection. In parishes with a parish council, the power of the vestry under this enactment has passed to the parish council. See the L. G. A., 1894, s. 6 (1) (a). In parishes without a parish council, the power has passed to the parish meeting (ibid. s. 19 (4)).

(u) Unless the authority appoint the succeeding overseers to receive it, the surplus must not be paid to them. In default of any order of the authority, it must be paid to their treasurer, to be applied, however, as in the text mentioned.

Remedy for non-payment by overseers of amount required by precept of rural authority.

231. If the amount required by any precept of a rural authority to be paid by the overseers of any parish is not paid in manner directed by such precept, and within the time therein specified for that purpose, the rural authority shall have the like remedy for recovery from the overseers of such amount as is not paid as guardians have for the time being for recovery from overseers of contributions of parishes, and for that purpose the precept of the rural authority requiring the payment shall be conclusive evidence of the amount thereof.

Procedure for recovery.

As to the provisions for recovery, see 2 & 3 Vict. c. 84, s. 1; 12 & 13 Vict. c. 103, s. 7; and 14 & 15 Vict. c. 105, s. 9. Where the district of a rural council extends into several petty sessional divisions, the justices of the county sitting in any of those divisions have jurisdiction to hear a complaint preferred by the council against overseers who are overseers of a parish situate in another division, and are resident in that other division, for neglecting to pay a contribution required by a precept of the council (Caistor R. D. C. v. Taylor (1907), 71 J. P. 310).

The procedure is as follows: Application is made under the hand of the chairman of the council for a summons to show cause. At the hearing of the summons if cause is not shown the justices issue their warrant for the amount in arrear and costs, which is levied upon the overseers as in the case of a warrant for poor rates.

A Divisional Court held that a sufficient remedy is given by this section if overseers fail to raise the money required, and that an authority whose precept had not been obeyed were not entitled to a mandamus (R. v. Bermondsey Borough Council (1908), 72 J. P. 330; 99 L. T. 14). In a later case it was pointed out by a divisional court that in the Bermondsey Case, first, it was sought on behalf of the guardians to compel by mandamus the immediate raising of a balance of a capital sum of £65,000, which would usually be raised, and which the borough were of opinion ought under the circumstances then existing to be raised by annual sums over a period of years. Secondly, there was a dispute as to the liability for the sum of £20,000 which the court held could be more conveniently decided if the alternative remedy were adopted. The court also stated that there must be strong reasons which were present in the Bermondsey Case to induce the court to refuse mandamus and leave the parties to an alternative remedy of distress in a case like that then under consideration. When the case now being referred to reached the Court of Appeal it was held that the alternative remedy was inadequate and the appeal from the making of a rule absolute for a mandamus was dismissed (R. v. Poplar Borough Council (No. 1), [1922] 1 K. B. 72). It might therefore be that under some circumstances a district council might be entitled to a mandamus. In the Poplar Case further points arose as to the enforcing of the mandamus the overseers there being the borough council and not individuals; see R. v. Poplar Borough Council (No. 2), [1922] 1 K. B. 95, but in a rural district where the overseers are individuals these points cannot arise.

Defences available.

The overseers of B. paid to the guardians of T. union contributions on the basis of a valuation list afterwards found by arbitration to be excessive. On the overseers refusing to pay the amount of two later precepts on the ground that they had already paid too much under the incorrect valuation list, and were entitled to be credited with the surplus, the guardians applied to justices for a distress warrant to enforce their precepts. The justices refused. On a case stated, it was held that the justices had a discretion as to granting the warrant and had exercised it properly; it was held also that the overseers were entitled to be credited on the later precepts with the amounts previously overpaid under the incorrect list (Tynemouth Union (Guardians of) v. Backworth (Overseers of) (1888), 57 L. J. M. C. 53; 52 J. P. 357). See also a decision of petty sessions at 72 J. P. N. 496.

Though the amount of the precept cannot be disputed, it is probably open to the overseers to dispute the validity of the precept itself before the justices. See Newbould v. Coltman (1851), 6 Ex. 189; 15 J. P. 372; Pedley v. Davis (1861), 30 L. J. C. P. 374; 26 J. P. 343; Waddington v. City of London Union (1858), 28 L. J. M. C. 113; 22 J. P. 367, 703, 755; Witney v. Wycombe Union, ante, p. 513. But the justices have not an arbitrary discretion to grant or withhold process (R. v. Boteler (1864), 4 B. & S. 959; 28 J. P. 453). In Read v. Punter (1898), 14 T. L. R. 455, a precept had been issued for the payment of special expenses incurred in repairing a footway in the contributory place. Materials and labour had been supplied by a member of the district council, and the amount paid to him was disallowed by the auditor and surcharged on the councillors signing a cheque for it. It formed a very large part of the whole amount for which the precept was issued. The parties surcharged not having paid, proceedings were taken to enforce the precept, and the justices refused to issue a warrant. The High Court held that they were wrong. Objections on the face of the precept, or personal to the person against whom the rate was to be levied, or that the contributory place was outside the jurisdiction of the justices, might perhaps be considered, but objections to the purpose for which the money was to be expended ought not to be entertained.

A rural district council having incurred expenses for the common benefit of several parishes within their district, apportioned them between the parishes, and issued a precept to the overseers of one of the parishes to pay to them the contribution of that parish. The overseers appealed against the apportionment to the L. G. B., who held an inquiry; but before this could be held proceedings were taken by the council against the overseers to recover the amount of the precept. The justices adjourned the hearing pending the announcement of the Board's decision. It was held that they were entitled to take into consideration the fact that an appeal was pending, and were not bound to issue their distress warrant until such appeal had been determined (R. v. Fox (1908), 72 J. P. 331; 99 L. T. 90). The L. G. B. having affirmed the apportionment, the summons was restored for hearing, and the justices again refused to issue a warrant on the ground that in the interval there had been a change of overseers (one only of the old ones being reappointed):—Held, that they were right (Plympton St. Mary R. D. C. v. Reynolds, [1909] 1 K. B. 768; 73 J. P. 156). As to the issuing of precepts which will involve the levying of retrospective rates, reference may be made to Croydon Corporation v. Croydon R. D. C., [1908] 1 Ch, 222; 2 Ch. 321; 72 J. P. 13, 369. By agreements between the plaintiffs and defendants, the drainage area of some parishes in the defendants' district was extended and connected with the general drainage system of the plaintiffs, and it was provided that the defendants should pay to the plaintiffs as yearly rent an amount calculated on the rateable value of all the property within such parishes liable to contribute to the rates for special expenses under the Sanitary Acts. As the result of a mutual mistake the defendants only paid to the plaintiffs the amount calculated on the houses in such parishes actually connected with and draining into the plaintiffs' general drainage system. In an action claiming judgment for the amount of the difference and for a mandamus to issue precepts for the levying of rates sufficient to cover the same, NEVILLE, J., held that the debt being ascertainable at the time when it originally became payable, though it was not properly ascertained through a mistake common to both parties, there must be judgment for the amount claimed; but that (the effect of R. v. Leigh R. D. C. (cited at p. 476, ante) being to give the court a discretion as to granting a mandamus to levy a retrospective rate) no relief should be granted to the plaintiffs by way of mandamus to issue precepts for the levying of rates to satisfy the amount of the claim, as the effect of the mandamus would be to throw on one set of ratepayers a burden which should have been borne by another set of ratepayers. On appeal the court granted a mandamus as to such portion of the plaintiffs' claim as accrued due in the year 1904—1905, because a demand for the right sum was made during that year and negotiations were entered into with respect thereto and continued until the action was commenced. As to the remainder of the claim, i.e., the amount which accrued due during 1903—1904, the court held that they would not be justified in throwing upon the ratepayers of 1908 arrears which were not demanded until April, 1905.

In the last-mentioned case precepts had been previously issued, and the overseers of one parish had refused to levy a rate in order to meet them. In another parish a rate was levied, but on appeal to quarter sessions it was quashed on the ground that it was retrospective and illegal.

As to private improvement expenses.

232. Whenever a rural authority have incurred or become liable to any expenses which by this Act are, or by such authority may be declared to be private improvement expenses, such authority may make and levy a private improvement rate in the same manner as private improvement rates may be made and levied by an urban authority; and all the provisions of this Act applicable to private improvement rates leviable by an urban authority shall apply accordingly to any private improvement rate leviable by a rural authority.

See ss. 213—215, ante, pp. 493—496. And see also the last paragraph of s. 234, infra. It seems that a private improvement rate made under this section is not a "rate" within the meaning of the Agricultural Rates Act, 1896, s. 9, or the Tithe Rentcharge (Rates) Act, 1899, because the proceeds are not applicable to public local purposes.

BORROWING POWERS (a).

Power to borrow on credit of rates.

233. Any local authority may, with the sanction of the Local Government Board (b), for the purpose of defraying any costs charges and expenses incurred (c) or to be incurred by them in the execution of the Sanitary Acts (d) or of this Act (e), or for the purpose of discharging any loans contracted under the Sanitary Acts or this Act, borrow or re-borrow (f), and take up at interest, any sums of money necessary for defraying any such costs charges and expenses, or for discharging any such loans as aforesaid.

An urban authority may borrow or re-borrow any such sums on the credit of any fund or all or any rates or rate out of which they are authorised to defray expenses incurred by them in the execution of this Act, and for the purpose of securing the repayment of any sums so borrowed, with interest thereon, they may mortgage to the persons by or on behalf of whom such sums are advanced any such fund or rates or rate (g).

A rural authority may borrow or re-borrow (f) any such sums, if applied or intended to be applied to general expenses of such authority, on the credit of the common fund out of which such expenses are payable (h), and if applied or intended to be applied to special expenses of such authority, on the credit of any rate or rates out of which such expenses are payable, and for the purpose of securing the repayment of any sums so borrowed, with interest thereon, they may mortgage to the persons by or on behalf of whom such sums are advanced any such fund rate or rates (i).

Loans Acts.

(a) In connection with this part of the Act reference should be made to the following Acts, which are printed in App. I., post, Vol. II. in so far as they are not repealed or relate only to local matters: The Local Authorities Loans Act, 1875; various Public Works Loans Acts, viz., 38 & 39 Vict. c. 89; 39 & 40 Vict. c. 31; 41 & 42 Vict. c. 18; 42 & 43 Vict. c. 77; 44 & 45 Vict. c. 38; 45 & 46 Vict. c. 62; 48 & 49 Vict. c. 30 (as to Sinking Funds); 50 & 51 Vict. c. 16; 50 & 51 Vict. c. 37; 55 & 56 Vict. c. 61; 57 & 58 Vict. c. 11; 59 & 60 Vict. c. 42; 60 & 61 Vict. c. 51; 61 & 62 Vict. c. 54; 1 & 2 Geo. 5, c. 17; the Finance Acts, 1899, s. 8, and 1907, s. 10, and the Local Authorities (Financial Provisions) Act, 1921.

Borrowing by statutory bodies.

The existence of an express power of borrowing prevents any implication of other powers of borrowing (R. v. Reed (1880), 5 Q. B. D. 483; 44 J. P. 633; Wenlock (Baroness) v. River Dee Company (1887), 36 Ch. D. 674; Att.-Gen. v. De Winton, [1906] 2 Ch. 106; 70 J. P. 368). It is incumbent on any one who proposes to lend money to a local authority to ascertain what are its powers, for all persons dealing with such a body are presumed to know the nature and extent of its powers (Macgregor v. Dover and Deal Rail. Co. (1852), 18 Q. B. 618, 631; Balfour v. Ernest (1859), 5 C. B. (N.S.) 601; Gloucester County Bank v. Rudry Merthyr Steam and House Coal Colliery Co., [1895] 1 Ch. 629; Chaples v. Brunswick Building Society (1881), 6 Q. B. D. 696, 712, 713).

A local authority cannot under the section in the text borrow without the previous sanction of the Ministry of Health. A loan without such sanction would be void (In re Sheffield Permanent Building Society, Ex parte Watson (1888), 21 Q. B. D. 301; 52 J. P. 742; R. v. Reed, supra; Att.-Gen. v. De Winton, supra; Att.-Gen. v. Tottenham U. D. C., infra; and Att.-Gen. v. West Ham Corporation, infra).

Overdrafts.

An overdraft is a loan (Cunliffe Brooks and Co. v. Blackburn and District Benefit Building Society (1884), 9 App. Cas. 857; R. v. Reed, supra; Smith v. Southampton Corporation, [1902] 2 K. B. 244; 67 J. P. 5; Att.-Gen. v. De Winton, [1906] 2 Ch. 106; 70 J. P. 368; Att.-Gen. v. Tottenham U. D. C. (1909), 73 J. P. 437; 8 L. G. R.

Note to Section 233.

95; Att.-Gen. v. West Ham Corporation, [1910] 2 Ch. 560; 74 J. P. 406). Overdrafts are therefore illegal unless the local authority hold a sanction by the M. of H. to the borrowing, and payments for interest on same are also illegal. See the provisions now made in the Local Authorities (Financial Provisions) Act, 1921, post, or the borrowing by overdraft with the sanction of the Ministry for the purposes of current expenditure.

Unauthorised loans.

Funds under the control of local authorities are held by them upon trusts in the nature of charitable trusts, and the court has jurisdiction to restrain an authority from misapplying such funds, or to order the restoration of funds which have been misapplied (see Att.-Gen. v. Newcastle-upon-Tyne (Mayor, etc. of) (1889), 23 Q. B. D., at p. 497; 54 J. P. 292; Att.-Gen. v. De Winton, infra; Att.-Gen. v. Aspinall (1838), 2 My. & Cr. 613, 618). This jurisdiction is not affected by the fact that there may be a remedy in respect of improper payments out of such funds in some other way, e.g., by certiorari, or by appeal against a rate (Tynemouth Corporation v. Att.-Gen., [1899] A. C. 293, 305; 63 J. P. 404; Att.-Gen. v. De Winton, [1906] 2 Ch. 106; 70 J. P. 368). If, therefore, a local authority has obtained a loan which is ultra vires and proposes to repay the same, or to pay interest thereon, any ratepayer may invoke the assistance of the Attorney-General and obtain an injunction forbidding the payments out of any of the public funds under its control. In Att.-Gen. v. De Winton, supra, the facts were as follows: A municipal corporation had exhausted their statutory borrowing powers and overdrawn their banking account, which was in the name of the defendant, the borough treasurer, who was also the manager of the bank where the borough funds were kept. They directed the bank to honour all cheques drawn on the treasurer, and the bank charged interest on the overdrafts. The treasurer, in his accounts with the borough, debited the borough with such interest and credited himself as manager of the bank therewith. His accounts were audited by the borough auditors, who passed them, and the borough council approved them as audited. It was held that the corporation were not necessary parties to an action brought by the Attorney-General against the treasurer in respect of the charges for interest; that the overdraft and payments of interest thereon were ultra vires; that the defendant could not debit the borough funds, nor credit himself with interest on the overdrafts; that the treasurer was in a fiduciary position towards the burgesses, and not merely a servant of the corporation; that the orders of the corporation were not available to him as a defence; and that the audit was not conclusive on the borough and the burgesses. In Att.-Gen. v. Tottenham U. D. C., supra, the facts were as follows: The council having in 1903 obtained a sanction of the L. G. B. to a loan for the erection of municipal buildings, spent, beyond the amount of the loan, a further sum of £18,350, which was borrowed from its bankers by overdraft. In 1907 it applied to the L. G. B. for leave to borrow the amount thus overspent; but as to £4,910, a portion thereof, sanction was refused. In October, 1908, it proposed to levy a general district rate to enable it to pay the £4,910, but, in an action brought by the Attorney-General, it was restrained from doing so until trial. Before action it had paid a sum of £855 for interest on the overdraft, and it proposed to pay a further sum of £900 for interest. At the trial it was held that the loan of £4,910, not being sanctioned by the L. G. B., was illegal; that the council must be restrained from applying any part of the general district fund or rate or any other public fund or rate under its control in repayment of the said loan or any part thereof; that the council was not entitled to make any payment of interest upon money borrowed without the sanction of the L. G. B., whether such borrowing was by means of overdraft or otherwise; that the payment of the £855 was unlawful and ought to be disallowed by the auditor on auditing the council's accounts; and that the council must be perpetually restrained from making any further payments of interest upon money borrowed without the sanction of the L. G. B. or other statutory sanction, whether such borrowing should be by way of overdraft or otherwise. With reference to the declaration "that the payment of £855 (for interest on the loan) was unlawful and ought to be disallowed by the auditor on auditing the council's accounts," it should be mentioned that it was stated by the court "that the declaration was in no way to affect the power of the L. G. B. to remit such disallowed payment under any statute enabling them to do so." This qualification was put in at the instance of counsel for the defendants, who cited section 3 of the Local Authorities (Expenses) Act, 1887, which provides as follows: "Expenses paid by any local authority whose accounts are subject to audit by a district auditor shall not be disallowed by that auditor if they have been sanctioned by the Local Government Board." It is difficult to see how this section can afford protection when money has been illegally paid, for even in those cases where a local authority has realised that it is proposing to pay money illegally and has applied for sanction, the section only provides that the auditor shall not surcharge the amount. It does not make the payment a legal one, and therefore, probably, a sanction would be no defence to an action claiming restoration of the money. It is to be observed, moreover, that the Act only applies to a local authority whose accounts are subject to audit by a district auditor, and therefore it does not apply to the majority of municipal corporations as to whose illegal payments there is no corresponding statutory provision.

Whilst the last-mentioned case was standing for trial, the bank sued the council for the principal sum of £4,910, and asked in their statement of claim for a mandamus to the council to levy a rate. The bank based their claim on a right to be subrogated to the rights of creditors who had been paid with their money. The council were willing that the bank should have judgment, and did not argue the point, and judgment was obtained for the £4,910, but, in view of the Attorney-General's action, the bank did not at the trial ask for a mandamus (see London and Provincial Bank v. Tottenham U. D. C., Times, April 5th, 1909).

Further questions of the greatest importance were decided in Att.-Gen. v. West Ham Corporation, [1910] 2 Ch. 560; 74 J. P. 406. It was there held that where a local authority have statutory borrowing powers for specific purposes, any moneys raised under such powers must be used for those specific purposes, and cannot be used for any general purposes of the local authority, and that it is therefore ultra vires for a local authority to borrow for general purposes from their bankers by way of overdraft on the security of their statutory borrowing powers for specific purposes; and, semble, the bankers may be liable in such circumstances to refund any interest they have received on such an overdraft. It was further held in this case that when a local authority have statutory power to borrow to such an amount as may from time to time be sanctioned, it is ultra vires the local authority to borrow from their bankers by way of continuous overdraft on the security of such power to an amount in excess or in anticipation of the sanctions they may obtain. The defendant corporation were by local Acts authorised to raise loans by creating and issuing corporation stock, and the statutory enactments provided for the establishment of a "loans fund" for the redemption and extinction of the stock, and directed that any moneys paid into the "loans fund," and not immediately required, should be invested in statutory securities. It was held that it was ultra vires the corporation to apply or set-off the amount standing to the credit of the "loans fund" in reduction of their general overdraft at their bankers. See also this case at an interlocutory stage, 74 J. P. 196.

Mode of exercising borrowing powers.

In R. v. Locke, [1910] 2 K. B. 201; 74 J. P. 238, it was held by the Divisional Court that the borrowing powers conferred upon an urban authority by the section in the text did not enable it to borrow money (for other than temporary purposes) without securing the repayment of the loan by a mortgage of the rates or fund on the credit of which the money was borrowed, and that, therefore, a payment of interest made on behalf of the authority upon money borrowed for a permanent purpose without security was illegal. On appeal, a further agreed statement of facts was before the court, and upon these further facts it was held that the interest had been paid on an old loan which was secured by a mortgage of the rates and had been transferred to the bank, to whom the interest had been paid, and that there had therefore been no new borrowing. It was held accordingly that the payment of interest was lawful, and on this ground the decision of the Divisional Court was reversed. No decision was given by the majority of the judges in the Court of Appeal on the point on which the case was decided by the court below, but KENNEDY, L.J., expressed the view that the section did not require the execution of a mortgage. See [1911] 1 K. B. 680.

Practice of the L. G. B.

(b) Applications to the Ministry of Health, successors of the L. G. B., for sanction to loans should be made by resolution of the authority, of which a certified copy should be forwarded by the clerk. If the application relates to the purchase of land, the clerk should state whether a provisional agreement has been entered into with the owner, and a plan of the land should be forwarded. If works are in question,

Note to Section 233.

plans and estimates will be required (on special forms supplied in the case of sewers, street improvements, or waterworks), and in every case particulars must be furnished as to the assessable value and existing debt of the district.

The further requirements of the Ministry are set out in notes to the sections of the Act which authorise the particular works.

A local inquiry is usually directed to be held by one of the Ministry's engineering or medical inspectors, at which any person interested can be present and give evidence.

For the provisions enacted to simplify the mode of giving sanctions, etc. during the recent war, see s. 12 of the Local Government (Emergency Provisions) Act, 1916.

Works should not be executed without sanction to loan.

Where an authority contemplate the purchase of land or the execution of works by means of borrowed moneys, the Ministry regard it as important that sanction to the loan should be obtained before the expenditure is incurred. They point out that if this course is not followed and they should subsequently find themselves, for any reason, unable to sanction the required loan, the authority would have to defray the expenditure out of current revenue.

When expenses have actually been defrayed before application is made for sanction to a loan, the Board require some evidence to rebut the presumption that it was not originally intended to defray the expenditure out of income. They rarely accord sanction when the expenditure has appeared in accounts which have been closed and audited.

In some cases of belated applications the Ministry have deducted from the proposed loan a sum representing the amount of principal which would have been repaid if application had been made more promptly, and have made a corresponding reduction in the period for repayment of the loan.

Superseded works.

Where an authority seek sanction to a loan for the execution of works to replace works the cost of which has been defrayed out of a loan not yet entirely repaid, the Ministry require to be furnished with information as to the amount of the loan of which the outstanding debt forms part, the date on which such loan was sanctioned, the original cost of the works to be superseded, and the approximate amount of the debt outstanding in respect of such works. The reason is to be found in the practice of the Ministry of making a deduction from the proposed loan in respect of outstanding debt on works which are to be superseded. The Ministry explain that the principle upon which they act in such cases is that there should not be any outstanding debt upon works which have ceased to exist or to be of use. This object might, of course, be attained by the immediate repayment out of revenue of the sum outstanding on the superseded works, but, as the terms upon which the original borrowing was effected would in many cases preclude this, the Ministry endeavour to secure the same result by a deduction of this sum from the new loan. They point out, however, that such deduction is not intended to debar the authority from expending the amount deducted; they merely stipulate that, whatever the new scheme may cost, this amount shall be provided out of revenue.

Municipal trading.

Upon an application for sanction to a loan for the provision of a refuse destructor, the proposed works including plant for making mortar out of the products of the destructor, the L. G. B. stated that, pending the decision of Parliament on the general question of municipal trading, it would be contrary to their practice to sanction a loan for plant of this kind except on the condition that the authority would not manufacture material for sale, but would only sell such surplus products of the plant as they could not themselves use. Upon receipt of a copy of the resolution of the district council undertaking to observe this condition the loan was sanctioned.

Loans for highway purposes in rural districts.

The L. G. A., 1894, s. 29, provides that the expenses incurred by a rural district council shall, subject to the provisions of that Act, be defrayed in manner directed by the P. H. A., 1875, with respect to expenses incurred in the execution of that Act by a rural sanitary authority, and the provisions of the Public Health Acts with respect to those expenses shall apply accordingly. Any loans required by a rural district council for highway purposes should therefore be raised under the provisions of the Act of 1875, and with the sanction of the Ministry. The result would seem to be (though this view is not universally accepted) that s. 47 of the Highway Act, 1864, which enabled highway boards to borrow with the consent of quarter sessions, is practically superseded.

Note to Section 233.

The Ministry hold that a district council have no general power under this Act of providing dwelling accommodation for their own workmen unless the provision of dwellings is reasonably necessary for the purposes of an undertaking—for example, for the management of a sewage farm. They have entertained a number of applications recently for the borrowing of money by rural district councils for the provision of roadmen's cottages, in view doubtless of the scarcity of accommodation in rural localities. The powers of district councils for the provision of dwellings under the Housing Acts (see Vol. II.) are, of course, quite distinct.

Dwellings for workmen.

If works are to be executed on leasehold land the term of the loan cannot exceed that of the lease. So, too, if a right to take water from springs can only be secured for a short term of years, the period of the loan required for mains will be similarly curtailed. If, however, in the latter case it could be shown that most of the works would not be rendered useless upon the loss of the particular springs, i.e., if water could be obtained from some other source, the normal term might possibly be granted.

Works on leasehold land, etc.

A town council accepted tenders for the supply of materials in connection with their electric light undertaking, and arranged for payment therefor by instalments, with interest. This course was preferred to the payment of the cost out of borrowed moneys, in view of the economies expected to be effected by the new works, which were considered to justify the expense being charged to revenue. The attention of the L. G. B. was directed to the course of procedure proposed, and they communicated with the council. In the result the Board stated that it appeared to them that the proposed contract involved an expenditure for interest in respect of the deferred payment for which they were not aware of any authority in the absence of a proper loan sanctioned by them and secured by mortgage of the rates. The transaction, in so far as it involved expenditure in respect of interest on the deferred payment, seemed to the Board to be in the nature of a loan or an advance by the vendors of the materials to the council on terms agreed upon between them, one of the conditions of such advance being the payment of interest at the rate specified. The Board referred to R. v. St. Michael's, Southampton (1856), 6 El. & Bl. 807; 25 L. J. Q. B. 379, where a debt due to a contractor (not, indeed, by a local authority), in somewhat similar circumstances, was regarded as being a loan by the contractor. And, as regards cases in which local authorities are concerned, and in which their arrangements with contractors involve forbearance or delay for the benefit of the authorities in the matter of obtaining payment of money for goods supplied or work done, they stated that there would appear to be good ground for contending that the outstanding amount is essentially an advance (Heilzmann v. Gavenlock (1891), 7 T. L. R. 611). They further stated that in view of the reasoning of the judgment in R. v. Reed, ante, p. 521, it must be taken that the power of a corporation established for certain specified purposes will, except so far as express powers are given to it, be only such as are necessary for the purpose of enabling it to discharge in a reasonable and proper way the duties with which it is entrusted. It could not, in the Board's view, be contended that an implied power to defer payments and charge interest otherwise than by means of a loan on a properly executed mortgage of the rates, was necessary to enable the council to give lawful effect to their intentions in the particular instance in a reasonable and proper way, and consequently such an implied power could not be assumed to exist. Looking to the decision in the case above referred to, the Board were unable to say that they regarded the course contemplated as free from all legal objection.

Payment by instalments regarded as borrowing.

See also as to security given to a creditor being a "borrowing," Bank of England v. Anderson (1837), 3 Bing. New Cases, 589.

In the case of the purchase of steam rollers, fire engines, etc. by local authorities upon the instalment system, the Board invariably stated that such a procedure was not one recognised by the P. H. A., 1875, and that the proper course, when it was proposed to spread a payment over a term of years was to obtain the Board's sanction to a loan for the whole amount of the purchase-money. The M. of H. probably hold the same views.

There are many instances in which capital expenditure on a particular purpose is of a continuous character (such as the laying of gas and water mains to keep pace with a growing district), and under such circumstances it is difficult to furnish plans and full particulars. To meet these cases the Ministry consider applications for sanction to loans for prospective expenditure without requiring details beforehand. The loan may be of such an amount as will be sufficient to defray anticipated expenditure on a particular purpose during an ensuing period of not more than three years. At the end of this period particulars will be required of the works upon which the money has been spent.

Loans for prospective expenditure.

Note to Section 233.

No payments to officers or permanent workmen out of loan moneys.

See note (e) to s. 189, ante, p. 459, as to payments out of loan moneys to officers and to workmen permanently employed by the authority.

With regard to payments to workmen the department was once asked whether the restriction applied to workmen who leave a council's employment at the commencement of a summer season and engage in occupations peculiar to the district. The reply was that the question whether a workman is or is not in the permanent employment of a council depends upon whether he is specially engaged to carry out a particular work and is discharged on the completion of that work, or is retained in the employment of the council irrespective of any particular works.

Procuration fees.

(c) The guardians of a union being authorised to raise £6,000 by loan, advertised for tenders and received six, and accepted one from an agent offering the sum at a certain interest and charge for commission. The guardians paid by cheque £50 commission. The auditor disallowed £38 10*s.*, part of the commission, and surcharged one of the guardians with that sum as having been illegally paid. It was held that the auditor was wrong, as there was no rule against paying a commission if in the circumstances the terms were the most advantageous to the ratepayers (R. v. Haslehurst (1886), 51 J. P. 645). A fee payable to a financial agent for introducing a district council to a lender must, therefore, be regarded as legal, being part of the cost of raising the loan.

Sanitary Acts.

(d) See the definition in s. 4, ante, p. 35. This section does not apply, unless it is specially incorporated (as it sometimes is), to works executed or to be executed under any local Act, though for sanitary purposes.

Local Acts.

Some recent cases have, however, shown a disposition by the M. of H. to permit the use of the borrowing powers of this Act to supplement those of a local Act when the purposes are such as are contemplated by the general Act. The notes to ss. 175, 176 may be referred to. The precise terms of the local Act have to be considered.

Amending Acts.

(e) With this Act must now be read the amending Acts, e.g., the Public Health (Water) Act, 1878, the Public Health (Interments) Act, 1879, and the other Acts which are to be construed as one with this Act, and which are all set out post.

Re-borrowing.

(f) The re-borrowing should be deferred until sanction has been obtained. In a recent Annual Report the L. G. B. stated as follows: "A difficulty arose in a Leigh case in which the rural district council proposed to re-borrow a sum of £2,250. This sum represented at one time the outstanding balance of a loan of £2,500, but when application was made to us for sanction to re-borrow, the whole had in fact been discharged by means of moneys taken from the common fund of the rural district, the intention of the council being to recoup this fund by means of a new loan as soon as our sanction could be obtained. The difficulty arose, however, that there no longer existed any purpose for which a re-borrowing could be properly effected, and consequently no sanction to re-borrow could effectively be given. We have drawn particular attention to this case as we have reason to believe that all local authorities are not alive to the difficulty which results from a failure to observe that s. 233 of the P. H. A., 1875, contemplates sanction to re-borrow for the discharge of existing loans and does not admit of such sanction where the loans have been discharged."

When the same lender agrees to renew the loan for a further period within the maximum allowed by the sanction, at the same rate of interest, and upon the same conditions of repayment as are stipulated in the original mortgage, or in cases where the money is to be obtained from another lender by a transfer of the original mortgage without an alteration of the rate of interest or the conditions as to repayment, sanction is unnecessary.

The L. G. B. once stated that they were not aware of any legal objection to the payment of a bonus to the lenders of money in consideration of the lenders accepting immediate repayment of the amount outstanding, assuming that the arrangement was beneficial to the ratepayers.

Security.

(g) For the most part the subject to be charged is some rate or fund derived from rates. Municipal corporations in some cases have corporate property, and, perhaps, that can be charged for some of the purposes of this Act. In s. 235, post, p. 532, it will be seen that the land obtained for purposes of sewage disposal may be mortgaged. Where an urban authority have adopted the P. H. A., 1890, s. 52, they may, with the consent of the L. G. B., raise loans by the issue of stock.

Note to Section 233.

As to whether a mortgage of a district fund and rates creates any charge on surplus lands of the local authority, which should under s. 175, ante, p. 412, be sold, see In re Thomson, Bedford v. Teal (1890), 45 Ch. D. 161.

(h) See s. 229, ante, p. 510.

(i) Thus, for sewerage or water supply, the separate rate for special expenses may be charged, and for private improvements the private improvement rate is to be charged. One result of this is that property purchased out of money borrowed on the credit of a separate rate cannot be taken in execution for a debt properly payable out of general expenses (Jersey (Earl of) v. Uxbridge R. S. A., [1891] 3 Ch. 183).

234. The exercise of the powers of borrowing conferred by this Act shall be subject to the following regulations ; (namely,)

Regulations as to exercise of borrowing powers.

(1) Money shall not be borrowed except for permanent works (including under this expression any works of which the cost ought in the opinion of the Local Government Board to be spread over a term of years) (a) :

(2) The sum borrowed shall not at any time exceed, with the balances of all the outstanding loans contracted by the local authority under the Sanitary Acts (b) and this Act, in the whole the assessable value for two years (c) of the premises assessable within the district in respect of which such money may be borrowed :

(3) Where the sum proposed to be borrowed with such balances (if any) would exceed the assessable value for one year of such premises, the Local Government Board shall not give their sanction to such loan until one of their inspectors has held a local inquiry (d) and reported to the said Board :

(4) The money may be borrowed for such time, not exceeding sixty years, as the local authority, with the sanction of the Local Government Board (e), determine in each case (f) ; and, subject as aforesaid, the local authority shall either pay off the moneys so borrowed by equal annual (g) instalments of principal or of principal and interest, or they shall in every year set apart as a sinking fund and accumulate in the way of compound interest by investing the same in the purchase of Exchequer bills or other Government securities (h), such sum as will with accumulations in the way of compound interest be sufficient, after payment of all expenses, to pay off the moneys so borrowed within the period sanctioned :

(5) A local authority may at any time apply the whole or any part of a sinking fund set apart under this Act in or towards the discharge of the moneys for the repayment of which the fund has been established (i) : Provided that they pay into the fund in each year and accumulate until the whole of the moneys borrowed are discharged, a sum equivalent to the interest which would have been produced by the sinking fund or the part of the sinking fund so applied :

(6) Where money is borrowed for the purpose of discharging a previous loan, the time for repayment of the money so borrowed shall not extend beyond the unexpired portion of the period for which the original loan was sanctioned, unless with the sanction of the Local Government Board; and shall in no case be extended beyond the period of sixty years (j) from the date of the original loan.

Where any urban authority borrow any money for the purpose of defraying private improvement expenses (k), or expenses in respect of which they have determined a part only of the district to be liable (l). it shall be the duty of such authority, as between the ratepayers of the district, to make good, so far as they can (m), the money so borrowed, as occasion requires, either out of private improvement rates, or out of a rate levied in such part of the district as aforesaid.

See also notes to s. 233.

What are "permanent works."

(a) Although the M. of H. have power under the Act, by sanctioning a loan, to place any works in the category of permanent works, the Ministry and their predecessors have always adopted the ordinary acceptation of the term, and refused to permit money to be borrowed for any purpose unless benefit would accrue to the ratepayers for some considerable term of years. There are, of course, many degrees of permanency, and accordingly a scale of periods is acted upon, ranging from five to sixty years, for the repayment of loans sanctioned by the Department: see note (e) for further particulars on this subject.

In some cases it is difficult to form an opinion whether a work involving a considerable expenditure will be of permanent benefit to the district or not, as, for example, the work of boring and carrying out the necessary pumping tests in connection with a new waterworks scheme. In cases of this kind the Ministry express willingness to sanction a loan for a term of five years, on the understanding that if the works are successful the term will be extended by sanctioning a re-borrowing of the amount then owing.

See now, however, s. 3 of the Local Authorities (Financial Provisions) Act, 1921 (post), as to the borrowing of money for the purpose of providing for current expenditure by loan or overdraft.

Modification of plans.

Money borrowed for the execution of approved schemes must be applied in carrying out those works. If any material modification or deviation becomes desirable, the Ministry should be consulted.

Unexpended balances.

It is only in case of loans advanced by the Public Works Loans Commissioners (see the Public Works Loans Act, 1881, s. 9) that the Ministry are empowered to give their consent to application of loan moneys to purposes other than those for which they were borrowed. In other cases the balances should be returned to the lenders if they can be required or are willing to receive them; if not, the balances should be invested, and treated as a sinking fund, from which proportionate sums should be applied each year in meeting the instalments of principal and interest due on the loans of which they form part. See also notes to s. 243. Where, however, the new proposal is in the nature of a mere modification of the original scheme rather than a suggested diversion of funds to a different purpose the department is said to sometimes give its assent.

(b) See the definition in s. 4, ante, p. 35. Observe that the restriction is applied to indebtedness under the general Sanitary Acts only.

"Assessable value for two years."

(c) The term "assessable value for two years" is a little ambiguous; but it is construed as meaning twice the assessable value at any given time.

The term "assessable value" in s. 234 means (in the case of an urban district) the assessable value for the purposes of a general district rate, and the property referred to in s. 211 (1) (b) must therefore be reckoned on the reduced estimate of one-fourth. With regard to the reduction of assessments under the proviso to s. 211 (1) (a), where owners are rated instead of occupiers, the L. G. B. held the opinion that, as such reduction is at the option of the authority, the authority are not under any legal obligation to take it into account in arriving at the assessable value of the district. Note to Section 234.

A similar view holds with regard to rural districts where a special expenses rate takes the place of a general district rate (see s. 230). Presumably a rural council can only borrow up to twice the assessable value of a contributory place for purposes of special expenses. Whether they have an additional and distinct borrowing power up to twice the assessable value of the district for purposes of general expenses (e.g., offices, hospitals, highways, etc.) is not clear.

Several later Acts such as the Small Dwellings Acquisition Act, 1899, provide that the loans raised thereunder shall not count towards this limitation of borrowing. See also s. 6 of the Local Authorities (Financial Provisions) Act, 1921, as to loans for "unemployed" purposes and current expenses.

(d) See s. 293, post, p. 626, as to these inquiries. "Local inquiry."

(e) The M. of H. pay regard almost exclusively to the character of the works. The following are examples of the terms prescribed for repayment in sanctions to loans for various purposes: Periods allowed for repayment.

60 years	- -	Land (freehold).
30 „	- -	Buildings (of brick or stone), sewers, water mains, reservoirs, bridges, underground conveniences.
20 „	- -	Walls, sea defence works, granite paving, new road construction.
15 „	- -	Furniture of buildings, refuse destructors, machinery.
10 „	- -	Fire engines, road rollers, iron urinals, lamp columns, carts, hard-wood paving.
5 „	- -	Gravel footways, horses and harness, soft-wood paving and macadam.

In the case of loans under the Housing Acts the maximum period has now been extended to eighty years. See the Housing of the Working Classes Act, 1903, s. 1 (1), and the Housing, Town Planning, etc. Act, 1909, s. 3 (b), Vol. II., post. After the expiration of the prescribed period, the local authority will have no power to make a rate for the purpose of paying any part of the money borrowed. See R. v. All Saints, Wigan (Churchwardens of) (1876), 1 App. Cas. 611; 41 J. P. 132.

(f) As to loans borrowed under previous Sanitary Acts, see s. 321, post, p. 654.

(g) The provision as to annual instalments does not prohibit a loan from being repaid by equal annual instalments of principal or of principal and interest combined defrayed by means of half-yearly payments.

(h) These limits of investment were extended by the Trust Investment Act, 1889, s. 7, which enacted that where any urban or rural sanitary authority are authorised or required to invest any money for the purpose of a loans fund or a sinking fund, any enactment relating to such investment shall be modified so far as to allow such money to be invested in any of the stocks, funds, shares, or securities in which trustees are authorised by this Act to invest, except that such authority shall not by virtue of this section invest in any stocks, funds, shares, or securities, issued or created by themselves, nor in real or heritable securities: Provided that it shall not be lawful for any such authority to retain any securities which are liable to be redeemed at a fixed time at par or at any other fixed rate, and are at a price exceeding their redemption value, unless more than fifteen years will elapse before the time fixed for redemption. Limits of investment.

For the investments authorised by the above Act are now substituted the investments authorised by the Trustee Act, 1893, s. 1, which enacts that a trustee may, unless expressly forbidden by the instrument (if any) creating the trust, invest any trust funds in his hands, whether at the time in a state of investment or not, in manner following, that is to say:

(a) In any of the parliamentary stocks or public funds or Government securities of the United Kingdom:

(b) On real or heritable securities in Great Britain or Ireland:

(c) In the stock of the Bank of England or the Bank of Ireland:

(d) In India three-and-a-half per cent. stock and India three per cent. stock, or in any other capital stock which may at any time hereafter be issued by the Secretary of State in Council of India under the authority of Act of Parliament, and charged on the revenues of India:

(e) In any securities the interest of which is for the time being guaranteed by Parliament:

(f) In consolidated stock created by the Metropolitan Board of Works, or by the London County Council, or in debenture stock created by the Receiver for the Metropolitan Police District:

(g) In the debenture or rent-charge or guaranteed or preference stock of any railway company in Great Britain or Ireland incorporated by special Act of Parliament, and having during each of the ten years last past before the date of investment paid a dividend at the rate of not less than three per centum per annum on its ordinary stock: [See, hereon, In re Tattersall, Topham v. Armitage, [1906] 2 Ch. 399; 70 J. P. 537.]

(h) In the stock of any railway or canal company in Great Britain or Ireland whose undertaking is leased in perpetuity or for a term not less than two hundred years at a fixed rental to any such railway company as is mentioned in sub-section (g), either alone or jointly with any other railway company:

(i) In the debenture stock of any railway company in India, the interest on which is paid or guaranteed by the Secretary of State in Council of India:

(j) In the "B" annuities of the Eastern Bengal, the East Indian, and the Scinde Punjaub or Delhi Railways, and any like annuities which may at any time hereafter be created on the purchase of any other railway by the Secretary of State in Council of India, and charged on the revenues of India, and which may be authorised by Act of Parliament to be accepted by trustees in lieu of any stock held by them in the purchased railway; also in deferred annuities comprised in the register of holders of annuity class D., and annuities comprised in the register of annuitants class C. of the East Indian Railway Company:

(k) In the stock of any railway company in India upon which a fixed or minimum dividend in sterling is paid or guaranteed by the Secretary of State in Council of India, or upon the capital of which the interest is so guaranteed:

(l) In the debenture or guaranteed or preference stock of any company in Great Britain or Ireland, established for the supply of water for profit, and incorporated by special Act of Parliament or by royal charter, and having during each of the ten years last past before the date of investment paid a dividend of not less than five pounds per centum on its ordinary stock: [By the Metropolis Water Act, 1902, s. 17 (4), water stock created under that Act is included amongst securities in which a trustee may invest.]

(m) In nominal or inscribed stock issued, or to be issued, by the corporation of any municipal borough having, according to the returns of the last census prior to the date of investment, a population exceeding fifty thousand, or by any county council, under the authority of any Act of Parliament or Provisional Order: [The census returns for 1901 gave the population of B. as 47,003. A footnote stated that, since the date of the actual census, the borough had been extended so as to include some extra parishes, adding: "The figures at the date of the census were as follows—Bournemouth, C.B. 59,762." It was held that B. was a borough "having, according to the returns of the last census," a population exceeding 50,000 (In re Druitt, Druitt v. Dehler, [1903] 1 Ch. 446; 67 J. P. 99).]

(n) In nominal or inscribed stock issued or to be issued by any commissioners incorporated by Act of Parliament for the purpose of supplying water, and having a compulsory power of levying rates over an area having, according to the returns of the last census prior to the date of investment, a population exceeding fifty thousand, provided that during each of the ten years last past before the date of investment the rates levied by such commissioner shall not have exceeded eighty per centum of the amount authorised by law to be levied:

(o) In any of the stocks, funds, or securities for the time being authorised for the investment of cash under the control or subject to the order of the High Court [as to this see R. S. C. Order XXII. r. 17]:

and may also from time to time vary any such investment.

This section has been extended by 9 & 10 Geo. 5, c. 99, s. 9, to include local bonds issued under that Act and certain mortgages of funds or rates. See the Act, post, Vol. II.

Note to Section 234.

Section 2 of the same Act provides that:—"(1) A trustee may under the powers of this Act invest in any of the securities mentioned or referred to in section one of this Act, notwithstanding that the same may be redeemable, and that the price exceeds the redemption value. (2) Provided that a trustee may not under the powers of this Act purchase at a price exceeding its redemption value any stock mentioned or referred to in sub-sections (g), (i), (k), (l), and (m) of section one, which is liable to be redeemed within fifteen years of the date of purchase at par or at some other fixed rate, or purchase any such stock as is mentioned or referred to in the sub-sections aforesaid, which is liable to be redeemed at par or at some other fixed rate, at a price exceeding fifteen per centum above par or such other fixed rate. (3) A trustee may retain until redemption any redeemable stock, fund, or security which may have been purchased in accordance with the powers of this Act."

Under the Colonial Stock Act, 1900, s. 2, trustees can also invest in colonial stocks registered in the United Kingdom in accordance with the provisions of the Colonial Stock Acts, 1877 to 1900, and with respect to which there have been observed such conditions (if any) as the Treasury may by Order notified in the London Gazette prescribe.

Sinking fund investment and application of.

A local Act enacted that the municipal council of B. might from time to time borrow at interest any sum which, together with any previous loan, should not exceed £150,000, on the credit of the rates authorised to be raised by that Act, and directed that the council should appropriate out of the annual rates a proportion upon the amount borrowed, and should apply the same either to the gradual extinction of the debt, or to the formation of a fund to be accumulated for its discharge; and that it should be lawful for the council to invest the fund to be so accumulated in the public stocks or in Government or real securities. The council appropriated a yearly sum, and permitted it to accumulate as a sinking fund; but instead of investing the amount in any of the securities specified, they directed the borough treasurer to place it upon loan in a private bank of which he was director, and on behalf of which he claimed a lien on the sum as against an advance made to the council on some overdrawn accounts. It was held that it was the duty of the council, as they had not paid off any portion of the debt, to have formed a sinking fund in the manner and for the purpose mentioned in the Act; and the treasurer and the other members of the corporation were ordered to make good the amount with interest and to invest it in stock, and transfer the same to the credit of the cause (Att.-Gen. v. Mayor, etc. of Belfast (1855), 4 Ir. Ch. Rep. (N.S.) 119).

The corporation of L. on issuing debenture stock entered into an indenture with certain trustees, whereby, for the better securing and providing for the redemption of the stock, they created a fund by setting aside a certain sum half-yearly to be invested in the trustees' names as the corporation should think fit, with full power to them to vary the investments: the income of such investments was to be accumulated, and the fund so created was to be applied by the corporation in or towards the redemption of the stock after it should have become redeemable. The half-yearly sums were duly invested in the names of the trustees. The Crown claimed to be entitled, under the Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1885, s. 11, to corporation duty on the income of the fund so invested:—Held, that corporation duty was payable inasmuch as, although by arrangement the fund was invested in the names of trustees who received the money, the fund, nevertheless, belonged, and the income accrued, to the corporation within s. 11 (Att.-Gen. v. City of London Corporation, [1913] 2 K. B. 497).

(i) But what if they apply it to any other purpose? The legislature did not in this Act give the L. G. B. the power of supervision over this sinking fund, which, for some time, had been introduced in local Acts, where borrowing powers were conferred upon sanitary authorities. Doubtless, reliance was placed upon the action of the auditor, who is required to see that the requirements of the law are duly executed. Moreover, as the Central Department require particulars of the financial condition of a district to be supplied in the case of each fresh proposal to borrow, a considerable amount of control is obtained and exercised. It would appear from cases such as R. v. St. Michael's, Pembroke (1836), 5 A. & E. 603; 6 L. J. K. B. 28; and R. v. St. Michael's, Southampton (1856), 6 El. & Bl. 807; 25 L. J. Q. B.

Note to Section 234.

379, that the authority might be compelled by mandamus to set aside moneys to satisfy the requirements of this section.

A local authority having obtained sanction to a loan under the present Act was desirous of deferring the establishment of a sinking fund for its repayment for a few years until the works were completed and in working order. The L. G. B. considered such an arrangement of very doubtful legality as the law then stood and refused to assent to it. Such a power is, however, given in some local Acts.

The attention of the L. G. B. was drawn to the fact that an urban district council deposited the sums so set apart at the local bank. The Board drew the council's attention to the obligation imposed upon them by the statute, and expressed the view that the investments should be made as soon as possible after the sums are set aside, in order to avoid the possibility of any loss of interest.

See also as to the illegality of a temporary use of funds standing to the credit of a sinking fund, Att.-Gen. v. West Ham Corporation, [1910] 2 Ch. 560; 74 J. P. 406.

Under the Local Authorities (Financial Provisions) Act, 1921, s. 4, the Central Department may authorise the suspension of sinking fund payments, etc. while expenditure remains unremunerative.

(j) When a loan has once been raised there is no method of effecting an extension of the term even with the sanction of the M. of H, except by means of a re-borrowing.

Loan for private improvement expenses.

(k) See s. 213, ante, p. 493. The text appears to assume that the authority will borrow money and charge it upon their general district rate, though it is only required for special application and this may be usual. But see the second paragraph in s. 233, ante, p. 521.

(l) See s. 211 (4), ante, p. 479.

(m) This is an indefinite provision. It is doubtful whether any legal obligation can arise out of it.

Power to borrow on credit of sewage land and plant.

235. Where any local authority are possessed of any lands works or other property for the purposes of disposal of sewage pursuant to this Act, they may borrow any moneys on the credit of such lands works or other property, and may mortgage such lands works or other property to any person advancing such moneys, in the same manner in all respects as if they were the absolute owner, both at law and in equity, of the lands works or other property so mortgaged (a). The moneys so borrowed shall be applied for purposes for which moneys may be borrowed under this Act (b); but it shall not be in any way incumbent on the mortgagees to see to the application of such moneys, nor shall they be responsible for any misapplication thereof.

The powers of borrowing conferred by this section shall, where the sums borrowed do not exceed three-fourths of the purchase-money of such lands (but not otherwise), be deemed to be distinct from and in addition to the general borrowing powers conferred on a local authority by this Act. Any local authority may pay out of any rates leviable by them for purposes of this Act the interest on any moneys borrowed by such authority in pursuance of this section (c).

(a) The powers of this section are sometimes useful to local authorities when they have exhausted their borrowing powers under ss. 233, 234 of the Act. They cannot mortgage any land other than that used for sewerage purposes.

As to a mortgage of land under this section being an interest in land within the meaning of the earlier Mortmain Acts, i.e., impure personalty, reference might be made to Buckley v. Royal National Lifeboat Institution (1889), 43 Ch. D. 27; Re Yerbury's Estate, Ker v. Dent (1889), 62 L. T. 55; In re Thompson, Bedford v. Teal, ante, p. 417; In re Holmes (1890), 60 L. J. Ch. 267; 63 L. T. 477; In re Parker, Wignall v. Parker, [1891] 1 Ch. 682; In re Crossley, Birrell v. Greenhough, [1897] 1 Ch. 928; 61 J. P. 390; Re Pickard, Emsley v. Mitchell, [1894] 3 Ch. 704. Impure personalty may, however, now be given or disposed of by will for charitable purposes (see the Mortmain and Charitable Uses Act, 1891). Note to Section 235.

(b) The charge is to be upon the sewage property, and is thus in accordance with 35 & 36 Vict. c. 79, s. 41, but the money to be borrowed is not confined to sewage purposes. It may be applied to any purpose authorised by s. 234 of the Act. The property charged may have come into the possession of the local authority under s. 27, ante, p. 89.

The mortgage referred to is not limited as to time. It may or may not be made redeemable within a specified time, but apparently it will be open to the mortgagee, in default of express stipulation to the contrary, to require payment at any time, and in default of payment to foreclose.

The power hereby granted is free from the direct control of the M. of H. as their consent to its exercise is not required (but see note (c), infra).

The section imposes no limit on the amount which may be borrowed thereunder, but s. 234 provides that the total sums borrowed under ss. 233 and 234 shall not exceed two years' assessable value, and sums raised under s. 235 may only be disregarded when they do not exceed three-fourths of the purchase-money of the land.

(c) Although this section refers to the interest only, the authority may pay off the principal, if so minded, and the L. G. B. frequently brought pressure to bear on authorities to take this course. If not paid off out of rates, the principal can only be paid off out of profits or out of a fresh loan contracted under s. 233, ante, p. 521, with the consent of the Ministry of Health.

As to the position of a local authority, whose lands are mortgaged, in regard to income tax, reference may be made to Att.-Gen. v. London C. C., [1907] A. C. 131; 71 J. P. 217. There the council were in receipt of an annual income derived from interest on loans and rents; they also possessed certain lands which they occupied themselves. They had from time to time borrowed large sums of money under statutory powers, and in respect thereof had created capital stock which, with the dividends thereon, was charged upon all their property, including the land occupied by them. The annual interest payable on that stock was in excess of the annual income received by them together with the annual value of the land occupied by them. The amount by which their income was insufficient to pay the interest upon the stock was raised by means of rates. The council, when paying dividends upon the stock, deducted income tax under Sched. (D). It was held that the council were not entitled to retain out of the income tax so deducted from the dividends such a sum as would recoup them the income tax which they had already paid under Sched. (A) in respect of the lands in their occupation. See also cases in notes to the P. H. A., 1890, s. 52, post.

236. Every mortgage authorised to be made under this Act shall be by deed, truly stating the date consideration and the time and place of payment, and shall be sealed with the common seal of the local authority, and may be made according to the form contained in Schedule IV. to this Act, or to the like effect. Form of mortgage.

See Form H., which, however, is only the form of a mortgage of rates, not of the land or works referred to in the last section. Forms will also be found in Davidson's Conveyancing (ed., 1881), Vol. II., Part II., p. 649; Prideaux's Conveyancing (17th ed.), Vol. I., p. 624; and in the Encyclopædia of Forms and Precedents, Vol. VIII., at pp. 200—203. Mortgages made prior to 35 & 36 Vict. c. 79, were free from stamp duty, but since that Act there has been no exemption.

A mortgage (of rates) entered into before sanction is obtained to the loan will not be legalised by a subsequent sanction.

As to borrowing money to be secured by debentures, debenture stock, and annuity certificates, see the P. H. A., 1890, s. 52, post, and the Local Loans Act, 1875 (App. I., post, Vol. II.).

Where an officer of a local board fraudulently obtained money on a mortgage of rates to which he had affixed the seal of the board, the board were held not liable to repay the money, as the officer's fraud was for his own benefit, not for that of the board, as the negligence of the board in permitting him to have custody of the seal was not the proximate cause of the loss of the money, and as there was no evidence that the board had held out the officer as having authority to borrow money (Crapp v. East Stonehouse L. B. (1889), 5 T. L. R. 501).

Note to Section 236.

Register of mortgages.

237. There shall be kept at the office of the local authority a register of the mortgages on each rate, and within fourteen days after the date of any mortgage an entry shall be made in the register of the number and date thereof, and of the names and description of the parties thereto, as stated in the deed (a). Every such register shall be open to public inspection during office hours at the said office, without fee or reward; and any clerk or other person having the custody of the same, refusing to allow such inspection, shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds (b).

(a) For a discussion as to the object of this provision, see R. v. Locke, p. 523, ante. Semble, omission to register, or any delay in registration, will not invalidate the creditor's claim.

(b) As to the recovery of this penalty, see s. 251, post, p. 551.

Transfer of mortgages.

238. Any mortgagee or other person entitled to any mortgage under this Act may transfer his estate and interest therein to any other person by deed duly stamped, truly stating its date and the consideration for the transfer; and such transfers may be according to the form contained in Schedule IV. to this Act, or to the like effect (a).

There shall be kept at the office of the local authority a register of the transfers of mortgage charged on each rate, and within thirty days after the date of such deed of transfer, if executed within the United Kingdom, or within thirty days after its arrival in the United Kingdom, if executed elsewhere, the same shall be produced to the clerk of the local authority, who shall, on payment of a sum not exceeding five shillings, cause an entry to be made in such register of its date, and of the names and descriptions of the parties thereto, as stated in the transfer; and until such entry is made the local authority shall not be in any manner responsible to the transferee (b).

On the registration of any transfer the transferee his executors or administrators shall be entitled to the full benefit of the original mortgage and the principal and interest secured thereby; and any transferee may in like manner transfer his estate and interest in any such mortgage; and no person except the last transferee his executors or administrators shall be entitled to release or discharge any such mortgage or any money secured thereby (c).

If the clerk of the local authority wilfully neglects or refuses to make in the register any entry by this section required to be made, he shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding twenty pounds (d).

Form of transfer.

(a) See Form I. in the Schedule. It would appear that in order to secure the stamp the consideration must be stated and stated truly, but whether the transfer would be avoided by an error or omission may be doubted.

Registration of transfer.

(b) The section does not prohibit registration after the specified period of thirty days, nor does it invalidate the transfer if not registered within the time (see R. v. Locke, p. 523, ante). But until registration the local authority are not bound to recognise the transfer. As regards the arrival in the United Kingdom of a transfer executed abroad, there must necessarily be some doubt as to the time in many cases.

Note to Section 238.

(c) Where turnpike trustees who had power to mortgage their tolls, but not their toll houses, mortgaged both by deed, it was held that they could recover the toll houses from their mortgagees (Fairtitle v. Gilbert (1787), 2 T. R. 169; approved by LINDLEY, M.R., in St. Mary, Islington (Vestry) v. Hornsey U. D. C., [1900] 1 Ch. 695; 82 L. T. 580). A board of commissioners empowered by their private Act to borrow money and issue debentures chargeable on their local rates, contracted with one of themselves that he should supply bricks for their works, and gave him debentures purporting to be for money advanced, and such debentures were duly transferred by him to bona fide holders for value. The supply of the bricks by him was contrary to the provisions of the Act. It was held that whatever might be the case as between him and the commissioners, they were estopped by the debentures from setting up the illegality as an answer to the demands of the transferees (Webb v. Herne Bay (Commissioners of) (1870), L. R. 5 Q. B. 642; 34 J. P. 629; and see In re Romford Canal Co. (1883), 24 Ch. D. 85).

Effect of transfer.

The decision in Webb v. Herne Bay (Commissioners of), supra, does not extend to securities issued by the local authority without sanction for the loan. It will be seen that the Local Loans Act, 1875, in App. I., post, Vol. II., provides a means whereby local securities may be granted with an indefeasible title.

Reference may here be made to the Acts for preserving purchasers of stock from losses by forged transfers (54 & 55 Vict. c. 43, and 55 & 56 Vict. c. 36, in App. I., post, Vol. II.), which may possibly apply to transfers under this section.

(d) See, as to the recovery of this penalty, s. 251, post, p. 551.

Penalty.

239. If at the expiration of six months from the time when any principal money or interest has become due on any mortgage of rates made under this Act, and after demand in writing, the same is not paid, the mortgagee or other person entitled thereto may, without prejudice to any other mode of recovery, apply for the appointment of a receiver to a court of summary jurisdiction (a); and such court may, after hearing the parties (b), appoint in writing under their hands and seals some person to collect and receive the whole or a competent part of the rates liable to the payment of the principal or interest in respect of which the application is made, until such principal or interest, or both, as the case may be, together with the costs of the application and of collection, are fully paid (c).

Receiver may be appointed in certain cases.

On such appointment being made all such rates, or such competent part thereof as aforesaid, shall be paid to the person appointed, and when so paid shall be so much money received by or to the use of the mortgagee or mortgagees of such rates, and shall be rateably apportioned between them (d):

Provided that no such application shall be entertained unless the sum or sums due and owing to the applicant amount to one thousand pounds (e), or unless a joint application is made by two or more mortgagees or other persons to whom there may be due, after such lapse of time and demand as last aforesaid, moneys collectively amounting to that sum (f).

(a) See the definition, ante, p. 36. In a case of money borrowed by a corporation under an Act containing no such provision as that in the text, the Court of Chancery refused of itself to appoint a collector of local rates (Preston v. Yarmouth (Corporation of) (1872), L. R. 7 Ch. 655).

As regards loans granted under previous Acts, s. 343, post, p. 668, preserves all rights under those Acts, and consequently a right to a receiver. As to the appointment of a receiver in case of default by a metropolitan local authority, see 11 & 12 Geo. 5, c. 67, s. 2.

Note to Section 239.

(b) Hence a summons must be issued to the authority in default.

The duties on appointments to offices were repealed by 38 & 39 Vict. c. 23, s. 14, and were not re-enacted by the Stamp Act, 1891.

(c) Note carefully what rates are to be collected by this receiver, as he will not have a general authority to collect all rates. This provision is ambiguous, as it does not clearly state whether the money is to be paid to all the mortgagees or to such only as have applied for the appointment of the receiver.

The statute does not enable the receiver to make the rate. The authority may be compelled by mandamus to make it.

(d) In practice the ordinary collector of the rates, if there be one, will pay over the rates to the receiver, unless, as may be the case, the collector is himself made the receiver.

(e) Perhaps the sum may be made up of principal and arrears of interest.

(f) Under 35 & 36 Vict. c. 79, s. 40, a mortgage might obtain a receiver to enforce payment of arrears of principal and interest, and there was no specified limit as to the debt; but that part of the section has not been re-enacted. When less than £1,000 is overdue it would appear that an action for a mandamus would lie to compel the authority to make a rate sufficient for the payment of the principal and interest in arrear, and to apply the rate accordingly (Ward v. Lowndes (1859), 28 L. J. Q. B. 265; Drewry v. Barnes (1826), 3 Russ. 94).

Rent-charge may be granted in respect of advances made for private improvements.

240. Where any person has advanced money for any expenses which by this Act are, or by the local authority may be declared to be private improvement expenses (a), the local authority, on being satisfied by the report of their surveyor or otherwise that the money advanced by such person has been duly expended, may issue a grant in the form in Schedule IV. to this Act (b) to such person of a yearly rent-charge issuable out of the premises (c), in respect whereof such advance has been made, or out of such part thereof, to be specified in such grant, as the local authority may think proper and sufficient.

Such rent-charge shall be personal estate (d), and shall begin to accrue from the day of completion of the works on which the money advanced has been expended, and shall be payable by equal half-yearly payments during a term not exceeding thirty years (e), in such manner that the whole of the sum advanced, with the costs of preparing the said grant, together with interest thereon respectively, at a rate not exceeding six pounds per centum per annum on the sum from time to time remaining unpaid, shall be repaid at the end of the said term.

The provisions of this Act with respect to deduction from the rent of a proportion of private improvement rates (f), and with respect to redemption of private improvement rates (g), shall, mutatis mutandis, apply to rent-charges granted under this section.

(a) See s. 213, ante, p. 493.

Rent-charges.

Under this provision a stranger is entitled to acquire a rent-charge upon the land of another, but it is analogous to the enactments by which rents have been charged upon lands in commutation of tithes, except that there a right of action is given for the recovery of the rent. No right of action is expressly given by this section. See Willoughby v. Willoughby (1843), 4 Q. B. 687; Bedford v. Sutton Coldfield (1857), 3 C. B. (N.S.) 449; 27 L. J. C. P. 105. But since the case of Thomas v. Sylvester (1873), L. R. 8 Q. B. 368, it would probably be held that an action would lie. And see Scottish Widows' Fund v. Craig (1882), 20 Ch. D. 208; Booth v. Smith (1883) (No. 1), 47 J. P. 759; 51 L. T. 395; Searle v. Cooke (1890), 43 Ch. D. 519; Pertwee v. Townsend, [1896] 2 Q. B. 129; Re Herbage Rents, Greenwich, [1896] 2 Ch. 811; Foley's Charity Trustees v. Dudley Corporation, [1910] 1 K. B. 317; Cundiff v. Fitzsimmons, [1911] 1 K. B. 513.

Note to Section 240.

21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 58, gave a summary remedy for the recovery of these rent-charges, but this part of that section is not re-enacted, and the form does not contain in it a power of distress. Possibly the case may be considered to fall within s. 251, post, p. 551. As to the recovery of arrears of rent-charge after sale of part of the property subject to the charge, see Booth v. Smith (1884) (No. 2), 14 Q. B. D. 318. As to the remedy against the owner for the time being of part of the lands, see Christie v. Barker (1884), 53 L. J. Q. B. 537. As to the right of proof for arrears against a company in liquidation, see Re Blackburn Benefit Building Society, Ex parte Graham (1889), 42 Ch. D. 343. As to extinguishment by non-payment during the period of limitation, see Jones v. Withers (1896), 74 L. T. 572.

A similar provision is contained in the Housing of the Working Classes Act, 1890, s. 36, post, Vol. II.

(b) See Form K., post, p. 693. It is not now free from stamp duty; see 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 151; 35 & 36 Vict. c. 79, s. 42.

(c) If the premises charged be afterwards severed, the rent will continue a charge upon every portion. With reference to the difficulty arising out of such a state of circumstances, see Bedford v. Sutton Coldfield, supra; Rivis v. Watson (1839), 5 M. & W. 255; 9 L. J. Ex. 67. See also as to apportionment in case of eviction from part of the premises charged by title paramount, Hartley v. Maddocks, [1899] 2 Ch. 199.

(d) This provision affects the devolution of the property in the case of intestacy. See the observations of the judges in Bligh v. Brent (1837), 2 Y. & C. 268; per WOOD, V.-C., in Hayter v. Tucker (1858), 4 Kay & J., at p. 248; Thompson v. Thompson (1844), 1 Coll. 381; Robinson v. Addison (1840), 2 Beav. 515. See also the cases referred to in the notes to s. 235, ante, p. 532.

(e) It is somewhat uncertain when the rent is to commence, and the form in the schedule does not help further than to determine when the first payment shall be made.

(f) See s. 214, ante, p. 494.

(g) See s. 215, ante, p. 495.

Rent-charges to be registered.

241. Rent-charges issued in pursuance of this Act, and transfers thereof, shall be registered in the same manner respectively as mortgages and transfers are required to be registered under the provisions of this Act.

See ss. 237, 238, ante, p. 534, as to the default of registration with reference to other charges, and see In re Wynn Hall Coal Co. (1870), L. R. 10 Eq. 515.

Power of Public Works Loan Commissioners to lend to local authority.

242. The Public Works Loan Commissioners may, if they see fit, on the application of any local authority, make any loan to such authority for any of the purposes of this Act on the security of any fund or rate applicable to any of the purposes of this Act, without requiring any further or other security.

This section appears to contain a general power to the commissioners to lend money at such rate of interest as appears to them to be satisfactory. The next section enables them to do so at a specific low rate of interest, but under certain restrictions.

The statutes which now govern the advances by the commissioners are mentioned in note (a) to s. 233, ante, p. 521, and are (except in so far as they are repealed or relate only to local matters) set out in App. I., post, Vol. II. Attention may be particularly directed to the Public Works Loans Act, 1875, s. 50, under which loans granted under the Public Health Acts are to be deemed loans under the Public Works Loans Acts.

As to the application of balances of loans advanced by the commissioners to purposes other than those originally intended, see the Public Works Loans Act, 1881, s. 9. It is the practice of the M. of H., when the final payments have been made by a local authority out of a loan advanced by the commissioners and any balance remains, to request that such balance should, in accordance with the provisions of the Public Works Loans Act, 1878, s. 4, be remitted as soon as practicable to the commissioners to be applied by them to the reduction of the debt.

Power of Public Works Loan Commissioners to lend to local authority on recommendation of Local Government Board.

243. The Public Works Loan Commissioners may, on the application of any local authority and on the recommendation of the Local Government Board, make any loan to such authority in pursuance of any powers of borrowing conferred by this Act (a), whether for works already executed (b) or yet to be executed, on the security of any fund or rate (c) applicable to any of the purposes of this Act, and without requiring any further or other security, such loan to be repaid within a period not exceeding fifty years, and to bear interest . . . (d) :

Provided—

(1) That in determining the time when a loan under this section shall be repayable, the Local Government Board shall have regard to the probable duration and continuing utility of the works in respect of which the same is required (e) :

(2) That this section shall not extend to any loan required for the purpose of defraying expenses incurred by the Local Government Board in the performance of the duty of a defaulting local authority after the passing of the Public Health Act, 1872 (f).

In the case of a loan made before the passing of the Public Health Act, 1872, to any local authority in pursuance of any powers conferred by the Sanitary Acts, the Public Works Loan Commissioners may reduce the interest payable thereon to the rate of not less than three and a half per centum per annum (g).

This section is largely affected by the Public Works Loans Act, 1898. In a Circular dated October 15th, 1898, explanatory of the Act, the Local Government Board stated as follows :—Section 11 of the Public Works Loans Act, 1875, provided that every loan granted by the Public Works Loan Commissioners under that Act should be repaid within a period from the date of the actual advance of such loan not exceeding the period authorised by the special Act relating to the loan, or, if no period was so authorised, not exceeding twenty years. In the latter case, however, the Treasury might, on the recommendation of the commissioners, stating special circumstances, extend the period of repayment. By s. 5 of the Public Works Loans Act, 1898, thirty years are substituted for twenty in s. 11 of the Act of 1875. Hence, in the case of any sum borrowed by the council from the Public Works Loan Commissioners, the commissioners will be able to lend the money for a period not exceeding thirty years without any action on the part of the Treasury. No recommendation from the Board will be required in any such case; but a recommendation from them under s. 243 of the P. H. A., 1875, will still be necessary where the council propose to borrow from the commissioners for a longer period than thirty years for works executed under the Public Health Acts. The Board also understand that the commissioners consider that they can only lend money for the purposes of Part I. of the Housing of the Working Classes Act, 1890, when the loan is recommended under s. 25 (5) of that Act. Hence a recommendation from the Board will always be requisite, if the council propose to borrow from the commissioners for these purposes, whatever may be the period within which the loan is to be repaid.

With reference to the italicised words of the circular, supra, note that the limit of "thirty years" has been extended to "fifty years" by the Public Works Loans Act, 1911, s. 4. It is understood that the commissioners are unwilling to lend money for the repayment of an existing loan.

Local Act loans.

(a) Note that this section does not apply to loans which are authorised by a local Act, though for purposes such as would be provided for by this Act. But the Public Works Loans Act, 1896, s. 2, enacts that there shall be added to the works for the purpose of which the Public Works Loan Commissioners may lend in Great Britain under the Public Works Loans Act, 1875, the following works, namely (inter alia), any work for which the council of a county, borough, district, or parish are authorised to borrow.

Note to Section 243.

(b) These words are evidently used with reference not to the date of this Act, but to the time when the loan is applied for.

(c) It is presumed that the fund and rate here referred to are the district fund and general district rate of the urban authority, and the common fund or separate rate for special expenses in the case of a rural authority. See also the next section.

Rate of interest.

(d) The provision which here followed as to the rate of interest, was repealed by the Public Works Loans Act, 1897, s. 12 (4). The rates of interest vary frequently now.

Period of repayment.

(e) See notes (a) and (e) to s. 234, ante, pp. 528, 529, as to terms allowed for loans.

Default expenses.

(f) The L. G. B., in fact, never did undertake works in default of a local authority nor do the M. of H. See s. 299, post, p. 632 and notes thereto.

Reduction of interest.

(g) The Public Works Loans Act, 1875, s. 33, provided that every sum payable in respect of a loan granted by the Loan Commissioners (either before or after the passing of that Act) or under the security for such loan, should be compounded for or released only under the authority of Parliament in each case. The amending Act of the following year, 39 & 40 Vict. c. 31, s. 6, after reciting that doubts had arisen whether the said enactment would prevent the reduction of interest in accordance with s. 243 of the P. H. A., 1875, provided that the commissioners might, on or before July 31st, 1876, if they thought it expedient, with the consent of the Treasury, reduce the interest payable on any loan made before the commencement of the Public Works Loans Act, 1875, to any rate not less than four per centum per annum: Provided always, that nothing in the Public Works Loans Act, 1875, should be deemed to take away or abridge the power of the commissioners under s. 243 of the P. H. A., 1875, to reduce, if they thought fit, any interest payable on any such loan to a local authority as in that section mentioned.

The Public Works Loans Act, 1875, s. 36, required the L. G. B. to satisfy themselves that the money advanced by the commissioners is duly applied to the purpose of the loans—a duty now performed by the M. of H. Ibid., s. 37, empowers the Treasury to postpone for periods, not exceeding five years, the payment of the instalments of principal and interest, due on loans from the Public Works Loan Commissioners. No such power exists in respect of loans from other bodies or private individuals.

Borrowing powers of joint boards and certain other authorities.

244. Joint boards and port sanitary authorities under this Act (a), and the local board of health of any main sewerage district (b) and any joint sewerage board (c) constituted under any of the Sanitary Acts and existing at the time of the passing of this Act shall, for the purposes of their constitution, have like powers of borrowing on the credit of any fund or rate applicable by them to purposes of this Act or on the credit of sewage land and plant (d) as are by this Act conferred on local authorities, and in the exercise of those powers shall be subject to the like restrictions; and the Public Works Loan Commissioners may make any loan to any of the above-mentioned authorities which they may make to a local authority under this Act.

(a) See s. 279, post, p. 616, as to the formation of joint boards, and s. 287, post, p. 622, as to port sanitary authorities.

(b) Main sewerage districts were formed under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 10, and were referred to in 35 & 36 Vict. c. 79, s. 58.

(c) See 28 & 29 Vict. c. 75, s. 9; 30 & 31 Vict. c. 113, s. 10; 35 & 36 Vict. c. 79, s. 26.

(d) See s. 235, ante, p. 532. Here, however, the purpose of the loan is necessarily limited to that for which the joint board is constituted.

Section 245.

AUDIT.

Audit of Accounts of Local Authorities.

Accounts of local authorities.

245. Accounts of the receipts and expenditure under this Act of every local authority shall be made up in such form and to such day in every year as the Local Government Board may appoint.

The subject of "Accounts and Audit" is fully dealt with in Vol. I. of the Encyclopædia of Local Government Law, to which reference might be made.

By the L. G. A., 1894, s. 58 (1), post, the accounts of the receipts and payments of district councils and their committees and officers shall be made up yearly to March 31st, or, in the case of accounts which are required to be audited half-yearly (e.g., the accounts of municipal corporations as urban sanitary authorities under s. 246, infra, and the accounts of rural district councils, their committees and officers under the L. G. A., 1894, s. 58 (2)), then half-yearly to September 30th and March 31st in each year, and in such form as the L. G. B. prescribe. This enactment practically supersedes the text.

In connection with this subject reference should be made to the District Auditors Act, 1879, in App. I., post, Vol. II. The L. G. B. under the powers conferred upon them by s. 245, supra, and the District Auditors Act, 1879, s. 5, issued a General Order, dated March 22nd, 1880, prescribing the accounts to be kept by a local board, and a similar Order dated March 8th, 1881, as to the accounts of improvement commissioners. Both bodies have, as previously explained, become urban district councils, and the above Orders are still applicable to the accounts of such councils. No Order prescribing the form of the accounts of rural district councils has as yet been issued. In a Circular Letter of December 24th, 1894, the L. G. B. stated that they thought the accounts should be kept in the form which had hitherto been adopted for the accounts of rural sanitary authorities.

See s. 206, ante, p. 469, as to the annual report.

The accounts of municipal corporations have in some instances been brought under district auditors by means of provisions in local Acts or in Orders under s. 303 of this Act. See note (a) to next section.

Audit where urban authority are a town council.

246. Where an urban authority are the council of a borough the accounts of the receipts and expenditure under this Act of such authority shall be audited and examined by the auditors of the borough, and shall be published in like manner, and at the same time as the municipal accounts, and the auditors shall proceed in the audit after like notice and in like manner, shall have like powers and authorities, and perform like duties, as in the case of auditing the municipal accounts (a).

Each of such auditors shall in respect of each audit be paid such reasonable remuneration, not being less than two guineas for every day in which they are employed in such audit, as such authority from time to time appoint (b). Any order of such authority for the payment of any money may be removed by certiorari, and like proceedings may be had thereon as under section forty-four of the Act of the first year of her Majesty, chapter seventy-eight, with respect to orders of the council of a borough for payments out of the borough fund (c).

Powers and duties of auditors.

(a) For the election and duties of borough auditors, see the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, ss. 25—27, and s. 62. The borough treasurer is required to make up his accounts half-yearly, submit them to the auditors, and print a full abstract of his accounts for the year. The abstract is to be open to the inspection of ratepayers, who are also entitled to obtain copies at a reasonable price (s. 233 (4)).

Note to Section 246.

In a number of cases local Acts have provided for the audit of borough accounts by a district auditor instead of in the manner prescribed by s. 246.

A municipal corporation having represented to the M. of H. that the system of audit laid down in the Municipal Corporation Acts should be replaced in their borough by a Government audit, the Ministry replied that they had no power to accede to the application unless there was some local Act or Provisional Order which could be altered by Order under s. 303 of the P. H. A., 1875, so as to effect what was desired.

An Act confirming a Provisional Order under s. 54 of the L. G. A., 1888, for the extension of a borough may contain a provision on this subject. See the L. G. B. Provisional Orders Confirmation (No. 12) Act, 1912 (relating to Barnsley).

In the case of a new borough also the scheme of the Privy Council, if submitted to Parliament for confirmation, may be amended by Parliament so as to provide for a Government audit (Merthyr Tydfil being an example).

The following are boroughs in which Government audits are now held:—Aberystwith, Barnsley, Bournemouth, Chelmsford, Cheltenham, Christchurch, Dover, East Ham, Gravesend, Hastings, Ilkeston, Lancaster, Llanelly, Maidstone, Margate, Merthyr Tydfil, Monmouth, Newbury, Newcastle-under-Lyme, Plymouth, Pontefract, Poole, Reigate, Shrewsbury, Southampton, Southend-on-Sea, Swindon, Totnes, Tunbridge Wells, Warrington, and Weymouth.

Remuneration of auditors.

(b) Borough auditors are not entitled to any remuneration for their services in auditing the municipal accounts, but under this provision they must be paid for auditing the accounts of the council as the sanitary authority. Their duties in regard to these accounts are not confined to seeing that there are vouchers in respect of items for which the urban sanitary authority claims credit; they ought to make a reasonable examination to see that the payments made by such authority are authorised by the duty of the authority (Thomas v. Mayor, etc. of Devonport, [1900] 1 Q. B. 16; 63 J. P. 740). See also observations as to the duties of a borough auditor in Stevenson v. Mayor, etc. of Bexhill (1906), 70 J. P. N. 364, and Att.-Gen. v. De Winton, infra. The auditors may only claim in respect of such number of days as are properly occupied in the work (Thomas v. Devonport, Stevenson v. Bexhill, supra).

Orders for payment.

(c) 1 Vict. c. 78, s. 44, was repealed by the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, which, by s. 141, provides as follows in lieu thereof: "An order of the council for payment of money out of the borough fund shall be signed by three members of the council, and countersigned by the town clerk. Any such order may be removed into the Queen's Bench Division of the High Court by writ of certiorari, and may be wholly or partly disallowed or confirmed on motion and hearing, with or without costs, according to the judgment and discretion of the court." And by s. 242 and Sched. IX., a reference to the new Act is to be deemed to be substituted for a reference to any Act amending the Municipal Corporations Act, 1835. With reference to the construction of the repealed statute, see R. v. Lichfield (1843), 4 Q. B. 893; R. v. Greene (1843), 4 Q. B. 646; R. v. Dunn (1844), 5 Q. B. 959; R. v. Prest (1851), 16 Q. B. 32; 14 J. P. 750; Att.-Gen. v. Wigan (Mayor, etc. of) (1854), 23 L. J. Ch. 429; 1 Kay, 268; R. v. Sheffield (Mayor, etc. of) (1871), L. R. 6 Q. B. 652; 36 J. P. 37; R. v. Norwich (Mayor of), ante, p. 405.

Although the section provides a special mode of testing the validity of orders of a borough council this is not the only mode of challenging orders which are illegal. The Attorney-General, at the relation of a party interested, may obtain an injunction to restrain the payment of money being made under an order of the council, for which there is no legal warrant (Tynemouth (Mayor, etc. of) v. Att.-Gen., [1899] A. C. 293; 63 J. P. 104; Att.-Gen. v. De Winton, [1906] 2 Ch. 106; 70 J. P. 368). The fact that accounts have been audited is no bar to an action brought for the purpose of challenging illegal payments, for the Act does not make an audit finally binding and conclusive on the borough and the burgesses (ibid., and cf. Edinburgh Magistrates v. Edinburgh Distress Committee, [1910] S. C. 153).

Reference should also be made to the Borough Funds Acts, 1872 and 1903, in App. I., post, Vol. II.

Audit where urban authority are not a

Section 247.

town council. [Repealed as to words in italics by 42 Vict. c. 6, s. 11.]

(1) The accounts of the receipts and expenditure under this Act of such authority (b) shall be audited and examined once (c) in every year, as soon as can be after the twenty-fifth day of March, by the auditor of accounts relating to the relief of the poor (d) for the union in which the district of such authority or the greater part thereof is situate, unless such auditor is a member of the authority whose accounts he is appointed to audit, in which case such accounts shall be audited by such auditor of any adjoining union as may from time to time be appointed by the Local Government Board:

(2) There shall be paid to such auditor in respect of each audit under this Act, such reasonable remuneration, not being less than two guineas for every day in which he is employed in such audit, as such authority from time to time appoint, together with his expenses of travelling to and from the place of audit:

(3) Before each audit such authority shall, after receiving from the auditor the requisite appointment (e), give at least fourteen days notice (f) of the time and place at which the same will be made, and of the deposit of accounts required by this section, by advertisement in some one or more of the local newspapers circulated in the district; and the production of the newspaper containing such notice shall be deemed to be sufficient proof of such notice on any proceeding whatsoever (g):

(4) A copy of the accounts duly made up and balanced, together with all rate books account books deeds contracts accounts vouchers and receipts mentioned or referred to in such accounts, shall be deposited in the office of such authority, and be open, during office hours thereat, to the inspection of all persons interested (h) for seven clear days (i) before the audit, and all such persons shall be at liberty to take copies of or extracts from the same, without fee or reward; and any officer of such authority duly appointed in that behalf neglecting to make up such accounts and books (j), or altering such accounts and books, or allowing them to be altered when so made up, or refusing to allow inspection thereof, shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds (k):

(5) For the purpose of any audit under this Act, every auditor may, by summons in writing, require the production before him of all books deeds contracts accounts vouchers receipts and other documents and papers which he may deem necessary (l), and may require any person holding or accountable for any such books deeds contracts accounts vouchers receipts documents or papers to appear before him at any such audit or any adjournment thereof, and to make and sign a declaration as to the correctness of the same (m); and if any such person neglects (n) or refuses so to do, or to produce any such books deeds contracts accounts vouchers receipts documents or papers, or to make or sign such declaration, he shall incur for every neglect or refusal a penalty not exceeding forty shillings (o); and if he falsely or corruptly makes or signs any such declaration, knowing the same to be untrue in any material particular, he shall be liable to the penalties inflicted on persons guilty of wilful and corrupt perjury :

(6) Any ratepayer (p) or owner (q) of property in the district may be present at the audit, and may make any objection to such accounts before the auditor ; and such ratepayers and owners shall have the same right of appeal against allowances by an auditor as they have (r) by law against disallowances :

(7) Any auditor acting in pursuance of this section shall disallow every item of account contrary to law, and surcharge the same on the person making or authorising the making of the illegal payments (s) ; and shall charge against any person accounting the amount of any deficiency or loss incurred by the negligence or misconduct (s) of that person, or of any sum which ought to have been but is not brought into account by that person, and shall in every such case certify the amount due from such person ; and on application by any party aggrieved shall state in writing the reasons for his decision in respect of such disallowance or surcharge, and also of any allowance which he may have made :

(8) Any person aggrieved by disallowance (t) made may apply to the Court of Queen's Bench for a writ of certiorari to remove the disallowance into the said court, in the same manner and subject to the same conditions as are provided in the case of disallowances by auditors under the laws for the time being in force with regard to the relief of the poor (v) ; and the said court shall have the same powers with respect to allowances disallowances and surcharges under this Act as it has with respect to disallowances or allowances by the said auditors ; or in lieu of such application any person so aggrieved may appeal to the Local Government Board, which Board shall have the same powers in the case of the appeal as it possesses in the case of appeals against allowances disallowances and surcharges by the said poor law auditors (w) :

(9) Every sum certified to be due from any person by an auditor under this Act shall be paid by such person to the treasurer of such authority within fourteen days after the same has been so certified, unless there is an appeal against the decision (x) ; and if such sum is not so paid, and there is no such appeal, the auditor shall recover the same from the person against whom the same has been certified to be due by the like process and with the like powers as in the case of sums certified on the audit of the poor rate accounts, and shall be paid by such authority all such costs and expenses, including a reasonable compensation for loss of time incurred by him in such proceedings, as are not recovered by him from such person (y) :

(10) Within fourteen days after the completion of the audit, the auditor shall report on the accounts audited and examined, and shall deliver such report to the clerk of such authority, who shall cause the same to be deposited in their office, and shall publish an abstract of such accounts in some one or more of the local newspapers circulated in the district (z).

Where the provisions as to audit of any local Act constituting a board of improvement commissioners are repugnant to or inconsistent with those of this Act, the audit of the accounts of such improvement commissioners shall be conducted in all respects in accordance with the provisions of this Act (aa).

(a) As to the audit of the accounts of rural authorities, see notes to next section.

Extra-ordinary audit.

There is no provision in the Act (as in the Poor Law Amendment Act, 1866, in the case of overseers, etc.) for holding an extraordinary audit of accounts.

"Such authority."

(b) These words did not apply to the officers of the authority. Officers were not mentioned in 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 60, but were provided for in 37 & 38 Vict. c. 89, s. 38, which is re-enacted in s. 250, post, p. 550.

"Once in every year."

(c) Thus it appears that the accounts of a borough council, in respect of this expenditure, will, at present, be audited twice every year, while those of other urban authorities will be audited only once. Moreover, the dates for the auditing of the accounts differ.

Repeal.

(d) The remainder of this and the whole of the following sub-section were repealed by the District Auditors Act, 1879. Section 5 of that Act provided that the L. G. B. should make the necessary regulations as to the audit of these accounts. As to an irregular appointment of an auditor, see R. v. Dublin Town Clerk (1906), 40 Ir. L. T. 241.

Appointment of audit.

(e) The auditor appoints the time for the audit.

"At least."

(f) The words "at least" have a technical meaning, and exclude both the first and the last day. See R. v. Shropshire JJ. (1838), 7 L. J. M. C. 56; 8 A. & E. 173.

Proof of notice.

(g) See 11 & 12 Vict. c. 91, s. 7, which contains a similar enactment in reference to the audit of union accounts. And see the L. G. A., 1894, s. 58 (3), post, which provides that the L. G. B. may make rules modifying the enactments as to publication of notice of the audit, and of the abstracts of accounts and of the report of the auditor.

"Persons interested."

(h) Who are the persons interested? 24 & 25 Vict. c 61, s. 15, which modified the 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 60, gave the right of inspection to owners and ratepayers; but this section has not been altogether re-enacted. In a former edition of this Work it was stated that the phrase "persons interested" might possibly include others than ratepayers or owners—for example, contractors, and a recent case shows that persons other than ratepayers or owners are so included. M., a member of an urban district council, and chairman of the finance committee, became disqualified for membership through being adjudicated bankrupt in April, 1901. He was not a ratepayer or property owner within the area of the authority; but while chairman he had signed cheques, and so was liable to be surcharged. In May, 1902, a copy of the accounts was deposited for inspection before the audit. M. was refused inspection, but it was held that, notwithstanding his bankruptcy, he was a person interested and entitled to inspect the accounts (Marginson v. Tildsley (1903), 67 J. P. 226; 1 L. G. R. 333). This decision was given in March, 1903, and in the meantime the audit had been held, commencing in May, 1902, and closing in December, 1902. M. attended the audit and saw the books. In July, 1903, he applied for inspection of the books and was refused, and in November, 1903, he moved for a mandamus to compel the clerk to allow him inspection. It was held that, no substantial reason having been put forward for seeing the books, the court would, in their discretion, refuse the mandamus (R. v. Fleetwood U. D. C. (1904), 68 J. P. 314; 2 L. G. R. 1209). It was held in Davies v. Gas Light and Coke Co., [1909] 1 Ch. 708, that, where "a shareholder" was given a statutory right to demand copies of a certain book of the company, any inquiry as to the motives for his demand was irrelevant.

"Clear days."

(i) Both the day of the publication and the day of the audit must be excluded: see Liffin v. Pitcher (1842), 1 Dowl. (N.S.) 767; 6 Jur. 537).

Duty of officers.

(j) See also the provision in s. 196, ante, p. 462. And see the Orders of the L. G. B. already referred to as to the attendance of the officers of the authority at the audit.

(k) See as to the recovery of the penalty, s. 251, post, p. 551.

Note to Section 247.

(l) It is no answer to the demand of the auditor that the books relate to other matters as well as those under audit. He has a right to see them, in order that he may be satisfied whether or not they relate to the subjects of his audit. See Williams v. Mayor, etc. of Manchester (1897), 45 W. R. 412 ; 13 T. L. R. 299. Penalty. Production of books.

As to a mandamus to a town clerk to produce books which his council order him not to produce, see R. v. Dublin Town Clerk (1906), 41 Ir. L. T. 97.

(m) This is similar to 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 47, and 7 & 8 Vict. c. 101, s. 33. "Declaration."

(n) The word wilful is not inserted ; therefore any neglect will subject the person to a penalty. See King v. Burrell (1840), 9 L. J. Q. B. 337 ; 12 A. & E. 460 ; King v. Share (1842), 3 Q. B. 31 ; see also Hughes v. Fry (1907), 29 M. C. C. 17, where a penalty for neglect was imposed by justices. A mere failure to comply with the requirement of this section may amount to neglect. See Ex parte Loughman (1907), 52 S. J. 47. "Neglect."

(o) See the provisions as to the recovery of penalties in s. 251, post, p. 551, and refer to 7 & 8 Vict. c. 101, s. 33.

(p) There is no definition in the Act, except in reference to elections, of the term ratepayer. In this place it probably means every person assessed to the rate under audit.

The Act does not give to any persons other than ratepayers or owners the right of attending at an audit, or of making objections to the accounts, nor does the enactment expressly confer on the persons authorised the right of being represented by agents. It is believed, however, to be the practice of auditors to admit to the audit and receive objections from duly accredited agents of ratepayers or owners who are unable to attend in person.

(q) See the definition in s. 4, ante, p. 8.

(r) There was an inadvertence in 24 & 25 Vict, c. 61, s. 15, and it is re-enacted here. The ratepayer has no appeal against a disallowance ; he cannot be aggrieved thereby as a ratepayer. The passage should have run "as is given," and reference would then have been made to sub-s. (8). Appeal against disallowance.

(s) The law as to the limits of an auditor's power to surcharge is in a somewhat unsettled condition. In Bayley v. Wilkinson (1864), 10 Jur. (N.S.) 726, ERLE, C.J., made some observations upon his duties and powers, but they are by no means intelligible, and do not appear in the report of the same case in 16 C. B. (N.S.) 161. As to his duties in disallowing illegal payments, see Barton v. Piggott (1874), L. R. 10 Q. B. 86 ; 39 J. P. 454, from which it appears that he has no discretion as to disallowing a payment which is illegal. See, however, the Local Authorities (Expenses) Act, 1887, in App. I., post, Vol. II., which provides that payments made by an authority shall not be disallowed if they have been sanctioned by the L. G. B. Powers of surcharge.

In R. v. Knott (1866), 15 L. T. 291, it was said that he has power to surcharge for any deficiency that may on the face of the documents submitted to him appear to have risen through negligence or misconduct, and the court will not interfere with his surcharge where, on the face of the documents submitted to him, there is evidence from which he might reasonably have concluded that there had been such misconduct or negligence.

In an Irish case it was held that there is no power to surcharge a person not having a direct and immediate control over the funds out of which the illegal payment is made, and that therefore a surveyor could not be surcharged for giving a certificate without which an illegal payment to a contractor could not have been made (R. (O'Leary) v. Calvert, [1898] 2 I. R. 266). In R. v. Carson-Roberts, [1908] 1 K. B. 407 ; 72 J. P. 81, where it was held that for a council to accept a tender which is not the lowest is not of itself evidence of negligence or misconduct, COZENS-HARDY, M.R., and FARWELL, L.J., expressed the opinion, that an auditor is authorised and required by sub-s. (7) to decide whether any member or officer of the council has been guilty of negligence or misconduct in relation to the accounts whereby loss has been occasioned to the council, and to assess the amount of the loss. FLETCHER MOULTON, L.J., however, considered that the powers and duties of the auditor are strictly confined to auditing, and that the words "person accounting" in the latter part of the sub-section (which requires the auditor to "charge against any person accounting the amount of any deficiency or loss incurred by the negligence or misconduct of that person") mean the person who brings in accounts for audit, and that therefore when the accounts submitted are those of the council the person accounting is the council, and the auditor has no power to inquire into the negligence or misconduct of the individual members or servants of the council.

An Irish rural council had erected labourers' cottages by means of a loan. Part of the district was created an urban district, and the "adjustment" award directed the cottages and future liability for the loan to be transferred to the urban council. The rural council's solicitor delayed making arrangements for the formal transfer, and in the interval that council paid off further instalments of the loan. The auditor having surcharged the councillors signing the cheques, the court reversed his decision, on the ground that the payments were not "unfounded" or "illegal." The court refused to decide whether in such a case the auditor had power to hold that the council or its members were or were not guilty of negligence as accounting persons. He had at any rate not so found (R. v. Browne, [1909] 2 I. R. 333). See also R. v. Browne, [1907] 2 I. R. 505, as to alleged improvidence in instructing a solicitor to do clerical work. As to the respective jurisdictions of auditor and taxing master, see In re Porter, p. 550, post.

Persons to be surcharged.

The persons signing or countersigning the cheque are the persons "making" the payment (Lanark County Auditor v. Lambie (1905), 7 F. 1049); but in England any member who "authorises" an illegal payment is also liable to be surcharged, and the ordinary practice is for the auditor to surcharge one or more of the persons who sign the cheque. It is open to him, however, to surcharge any person who votes for or otherwise concurs in the payment. Cf. R. v. Fermanagh JJ. (1910), 44 Ir. L. T. 188.

The responsibility incurred by persons who sign cheques laid before them only for conformity's sake, or in the supposed routine of business, is shown in the cases of Land Credit Co. of Ireland v. Lord Fermoy (1869), L. R. 8 Eq. 7; Joint Stock Discount Co. v. Brown, ibid., at p. 404.

Appeal against surcharge.

An auditor usually supplies a person aggrieved by a disallowance or surcharge with a paper of instructions as to the mode of appealing to the M. of H. As to this see note (w).

As to the notices which the auditors must give to persons not present at the audit before surcharging such persons, see 11 & 12 Vict. c. 91, s. 8, in App. I., post, Vol. II., and see R. v. Local Government Board (1909), 73 J. P. 186; 100 L. T. 434, as to when orders of surcharge should be signed by the auditor.

If an auditor disallows items of account and surcharges them on the person making or authorising the payments, the court has power to review his decision, not only if it is erroneous in point of law, but also if it is wrong on the merits (per CAVE, J., in R. v. Haslehurst (1887), 51 J. P. 645; per PALLES, C.B., in R. (O'Leary) v. Calvert, [1898] 2 I. R. 266; R. v. More O'Ferrall, [1903] 2 I. R. 141; R. v. Carson-Roberts, ante, p. 545).

(t) See sub-s. (6), ante, and the note (r) thereto.

Conditions of certiorari.

(v) In App. I., post, Vol. II., are the provisions of the statutes which relate to the powers and proceedings of poor law auditors and the powers of the Poor Law Board (now the M. of H.) with reference to appeals arising out of the audit of poor law accounts. They are the following: 7 & 8 Vict. c. 101, ss. 32, 33, 35; 11 & 12 Vict. c. 91, ss. 4, 5, 7—10; 12 & 13 Vict. c. 103, ss. 8, 9, 11; 39 & 40 Vict. c. 61, s. 38. As to the matters open to the court on an application for a certiorari, see R. v. Carson-Roberts, ante, p. 545. The auditor if successful is not entitled to solicitor and client costs of the application for a certiorari (Roberts v. Battersea Borough Council (1914), 78 J. P. 265; 12 L. G. R. 898; 110 L. T. 566).

With reference to the taxation and audit of solicitor's bills, see s. 249, post, p. 549.

Powers of M. of H. on appeal.

(w) The Poor Law Board disposed of appeals made to them by correspondence between the parties interested, the auditor and themselves, but occasionally referred matters of fact to their inspectors, who could examine witnesses and parties on oath. They were empowered, when they upheld the auditor's decision, to remit the disallowance and surcharge when they found that the subject-matter was incurred under circumstances that made it fair and equitable that it should be remitted upon payment of the auditor's costs (11 & 12 Vict. c. 91, s. 4). 29 & 30 Vict. c. 113, s. 5, enabled them to declare their decision by a certificate signed by the president and countersigned by a secretary or assistant secretary. The M. of H. continue the same course of practice as that of the Poor Law Board. Cf. however, R. v.

Note to Section 247.

Local Government Board, Ex parte Arlidge (or Arlidge v. Local Government Board), on p. 598, post.

The printed "instructions" issued by the L. G. B. (see App. II., post, Vol. II.), explained that any person desiring to appeal, must, unless the auditor has already entered his reasons in the book of account in which the disallowance or surcharge was made, apply to him to enter his reasons in that book; and for this purpose the book should be submitted to him. When the auditor has entered his reasons, an exact copy of them and also a copy of his certificate of disallowance or surcharge, including his signature and the date of the entry, should be forwarded to the M. of H. with the appeal. The appeal should be by letter on foolscap paper, addressed to the Secretary of the M. of H., Whitehall, London, and must be signed by the appellant in his own handwriting. Where two or more persons are mentioned in the auditor's certificate, the appeal should be signed by each of those desirous of appealing. The appeal should contain a full statement of the facts which the appellant may desire to lay before the Ministry; and the grounds upon which the appeal is made should be explicitly set out. If there are any (1) cheques; (2) bills; (3) vouchers, or (4) other papers or documents bearing upon the matter, they should be forwarded to the Ministry with the appeal; and copies of any resolutions of the local authority with reference to the subject-matter of the expenditure, should also be sent.

The jurisdiction of the High Court to restrain improper payments out of the rates is not exercised so as to interfere with the powers of the Board under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 91, s. 4, or 50 & 51 Vict. c. 72, post, Vol. II. (Att.-Gen. v. Merthyr Tydfil Union, [1900] 1 Ch. 516; 64 J. P. 276; Att.-Gen. v. Tottenham U. D. C. (1909), 73 J. P. 437; 8 L. G. R. 95; Att.-Gen. v. East Barnet Valley U. D. C. (1911), 75 J. P. 484; 9 L. G. R. 913; and cf. Att.-Gen. v. Rickmansworth U. D. C., in note (y) to s. 3 of the Local Authorities (Expenses) Act, 1887, post, Vol. II.

Stay of payment pending appeal.

(x) The appeal referred to is that given by the previous sub-section to the King's Bench Division or the M. of H. According to the ordinary construction the days are to be counted one day inclusive and the other exclusive.

7 & 8 Vict. c. 101, s. 32, requires payment in respect of poor law accounts to be made within seven days after the certificate. The S. J. A., 1848, s. 11, imposed a general limitation of time in the case of proceedings to obtain orders of justices. The Poor Law Amendment Act, 1849, s. 9, prevents its operation upon these proceedings, but requires the auditor to proceed within nine months from the disallowance or surcharge, or in the event of an appeal to the court or the M. of H. within nine months from the determination thereof (R. v. Tyrwhitt (1850), 15 Q. B. 249; 14 J. P. 482). As to what is the determination of an appeal, see Brooks v. Dolby, infra.

Enforcement of payment.

(y) Where there has been no appeal, or the appeal has been decided in favour of the auditor's decision, and there has been no remission, the justices must enforce the auditor's decision. They have no discretion in the matter (R. v. Tyrwhitt (1853), 2 El. & Bl. 77; 17 Jur. 893; R. v. Linford (1857), 7 El. & Bl. 950; R. v. Finnis (1859), 28 L. J. M. C. 301; 23 J. P. 340; cf. R. v. Fermanagh JJ. (1910), 44 Ir. L. T. 188, and see also note (d) to s. 32 of the Poor Law Amendment Act. 1844, post, Vol. II. As to the period of limitation, see preceding note. "Determination of the appeal" means the final determination, and the M. of H. may, with the consent of all parties, reconsider their determination, and the time for enforcing the auditor's certificate runs from the determination upon the reconsideration (Brooks v. Dolby (1902), 66 J. P. 532). In R. v. Fordham (1873), L. R. 8 Q. B. 501; 37 J. P. 420, it was held that while the certificate of the auditor was primâ facie evidence of the amount due, it was not conclusive. Where, therefore, the certificate was for £139, and the overseers upon whom the surcharge was made proved a subsequent payment of £84, it was held that the justices were right in issuing their distress warrant for the balance only. In R. v. Master (1869), L. R. 4 Q. B. 285; 33 J. P. 436, it was held that a balance due on an auditor's certificate was a debt only, and that the mode given for enforcing it did not make the non-payment an offence. Therefore, when an overseer to whom a certificate related obtained his discharge under an adjudication in bankruptcy, it was held that the debt being provable was barred by the order of discharge, and no proceedings could be taken to enforce it. The payment of the sum certified, together with the costs of the proceedings for the recovery thereof, must now be enforced as if it were a poor rate 47 & 48 Vict. c. 43, s. 11). With regard to the provision as to the auditor's costs, reference should be made to Prest v. Royston Union (1875), 33 L. T. 564; 24 W. R.

Note to Section 247.

174, which was the sequel to R. v. Fordham, ante, p. 547. The justices having refused their warrant for more than £84, the auditor applied for a mandamus to the justices, but it was refused. The overseer then applied to the L. G. B., who consented to remit the disallowance, on condition that the overseer would pay the auditor's costs incurred before the justices and the court. The auditor, having failed to obtain the performance of this condition by the overseer, brought an action against the guardians for his costs under the corresponding provisions of 7 & 8 Vict. c. 101, s. 32. It was held that under the circumstances the defendants were liable. "The intention of the legislature clearly was that such an officer should not suffer the costs incurred by his bonâ fide discharge of duties imposed upon him."

Publication of abstract.

(z) The accounts are those which have been audited. It is left to the clerk to make the abstract. It would have been better if the abstract were made by the auditor, or at least acknowledged and verified by him. But see now the L. G. A., 1894, s. 58 (3), cited in note (g), supra.

Audit under local Acts.

The charges for publication are to be borne by the general district fund.

(aa) A doubt arose as to whether the accounts of Commissioners acting under local Acts were, after 35 & 36 Vict. c. 79, liable to be audited by the district auditor. This was decided in the affirmative in R. v. West Bromwich (Commissioners of), Q. B. Trin. Term, 1875; Gibson v. Bell (1875), 39 J. P. 421. The language of this section in sub-s. (1), however, is clear. But there may be other provisions in the local Act with reference to another audit; and where they are contradictory to those of this Act, the latter are to prevail. If they are not so, they may continue to be acted upon. See s. 341, post, p. 666. Where the Commissioners have other than sanitary duties to perform, and have, therefore, accounts as to other matters, if they can keep the accounts separate, the auditor referred to in this section will have no authority to audit them; but if they are not distinct, the whole must be submitted to him. And he is entitled to call for all the accounts so as to satisfy himself that they are distinct. This was stated by the court when the cases above referred to were argued.

Audit of accounts of rural authority. [Repealed in part by 56 & 57 Vict. c. 73, s. 89.]

248. The accounts under this Act of every rural authority shall be audited by the same persons and in every respect in the same manner as the accounts of guardians are audited under the Acts for the relief of the poor for the time being in force.

The accounts of the overseers collecting or paying any money for the purposes of this Act shall be audited in the same manner as the accounts of overseers collecting or paying any money for the purposes of the Acts relating to the relief of the poor for the time being in force.

An auditor shall, with respect to the accounts audited under this section, have the like powers and be subject to the like obligations in every respect as in the case of an audit under the Acts relating to the relief of the poor, and any person aggrieved by the decision of the auditor shall have the like rights and remedies as in the case of such last-mentioned audit.

See also the statutory provisions as to audit in App. I., post, Vol. II., and as regards overseers' accounts, see the General Order for Accounts dated Jan. 14th, 1867, in Macmorran and Lushington's Poor Law General Orders, 2nd ed. by Macmorran and Naldrett, p. 399.

The overseers of every parish are, by a General Order of the L. G. B., dated Sept. 8th, 1903, required to make up and balance their books and accounts to March 31st and Sept. 30th in each year. This Order also prescribes a form of balance-sheet for use by overseers.

The L. G. A., 1894, s. 89, Sched. II., repealed the present section except so far as it relates to overseers. By s. 58 (2) of the same Act the said accounts (i.e., the accounts of the receipts and payments of district councils, their committees, and officers) shall, except in the case of the accounts audited by the auditors of a borough (i.e., the accounts of municipal corporations as urban sanitary authorities), but inclusive of the accounts of a joint committee appointed by a borough council with another council not being a borough council, be audited by a district auditor, and the enactments relating to audit by district auditors of accounts of urban sanitary authorities and their officers, and to all matters incidental thereto and consequential thereon, shall apply accordingly, except that in the case of the accounts of rural district councils, their committees, and officers, the audit shall be half-yearly instead of yearly. By s. 58 (3) the L. G. B. may, with respect to any audit to which that section applies, make rules modifying the enactments as to publication of notice of the audit and of the abstract of accounts and the report of the auditor. And by s. 58 (5) every parochial elector of a parish in a rural district may, at all reasonable times, without payment, inspect and take copies of and extracts from all books, accounts, and documents belonging to or under the control of the district council of the district. See the General Order of the Ministry of Health dated December 16th, 1915, in Appendix II., post, Vol. II., as to the audit of the accounts of rural district councils, which contains modifications of sub-sections (3) and (10) of s. 247 of the P. H. A., 1875.

Note to Section 248.

249. On the application of any local authority whose accounts are required by this Act to be audited to the clerk of the peace of the county in which the district of such authority is wholly or in part situated, the said clerk or his deputy shall tax any bill due to any solicitor in respect of legal business performed on behalf of such authority; and the allowance of any sum on such taxation shall be primâ facie evidence of the reasonableness of the amount, but not of the legality of the charge.

Taxation of bill of solicitor or attorney.

The clerk of the peace shall be allowed for such taxation a remuneration after the rate to be fixed by the Master of the Crown Office, and declared by an order of the Local Government Board (a).

If any such bill is not taxed by the clerk of the peace or some other duly authorised taxing officer before being presented to the auditors or auditor, the decision of the auditors or auditor upon the reasonableness and the legality of the charge shall be final (b).

(a) It will be observed that this section applies to all sanitary authorities.

The L. G. B. on April 20th, 1877, issued a General Order relating to the taxation of law bills of urban and rural sanitary authorities; it recites the first two paragraphs of this section, and then proceeds thus:—

General order on taxation of law bills.

"And whereas the Master of the Crown Office has fixed the rate of allowance to the clerk of the peace in respect of such taxation as herein declared:

"Now, therefore, We, the Local Government Board, in pursuance of the Act above recited, hereby order and declare that the clerk of the peace of every county or place in England and Wales shall be allowed after the rate of fourpence per sheet or folio of seventy-two words for the taxation of every bill due to any solicitor in respect of legal business performed on behalf of any local authority whose accounts are required by that Act to be audited."

As to the employment by a local authority of a solicitor as their clerk, and their right to recover costs for his services, see Henderson v. Merthyr Tydfil U. D. C., ante, p. 452.

The M. of H. hold that the costs of a local authority in promoting or opposing a Provisional Order, or in parliamentary proceedings of any kind, should be taxed by the taxing officer of one of the Houses of Parliament, and they usually decline to accept as sufficient in such cases (for the purposes of s. 247 or s. 298) a taxation by the clerk of the peace (cf. Lurgan U. D. C. v. Moore and Johnston, [1906] 1 I. R. 599). The L. G. B. stated that the costs of proceedings in any particular court must be submitted to the proper officer of that court, not to the clerk of the peace, but it is understood that the M. of H. do not entirely concur in the above view. The advisers of the Ministry think that the proper and normal procedure is for the solicitor's bill to be taxed by the clerk of the peace in all cases, save and except in those cases in which such bill relates to litigation and where, in the course of that litigation, it falls to a taxing master to tax the bill; see 85 J. P. N. 485.

It will be observed that the section only applies to bills in respect of legal business performed on behalf of the local authority. Consequently the costs of the solicitor to the vendor of land purchased by a local authority do not come within the section, even though such costs may be payable by the authority.

See also s. 52 of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845.

Finality of auditor's decision.

(b) In R. v. Hunt (1856), 6 El. & Bl. 408, the Queen's Bench held, upon the construction of 7 & 8 Vict. c. 101, s. 39, from which this section is taken, that the auditor's decision in such a case could not be investigated or controlled by them, and the M. of H. consider themselves equally concluded.

Taxation.

It is to be observed that the taxation by the clerk of the peace is only primâ facie evidence of the reasonableness of the charges, and does not conclude the auditor. Nor is it any evidence of retainer. See also Southampton Guardians v. Bell (1888), 21 Q. B. D. 297; 52 J. P. 567, a decision on the similarly-worded provision (s. 39) of the Poor Law Amendment Act, 1844. It was there held that a solicitor employed by guardians was entitled, notwithstanding that his bill of costs had been taxed by the clerk of the peace, to an order for taxation as between solicitor and client under the Solicitors Act, 1843.

It should be observed that a bill against a sanitary authority may be ordered to be taxed in the ordinary way, and an order to refer to a master for taxation was held good in Blake v. Croydon Rural Authority (1886), 2 T. L. R. 336.

As to the wording of the common form order to tax a solicitor's bill of costs, of which some items may be statute barred, see In re Brockman, [1909] 2 Ch. 170. Even though the client is a local authority, the taxing officer taxing a bill as between solicitor and client must allow items incurred on the client's special instructions for which usual charges are made. The question whether the items ought to be allowed as between the authority and the ratepayers is one for the auditor and not for the taxing officer (In re Porter, Amphlett v. Jones, [1912] 2 Ch. 98). There is no reason why a local authority employing a solicitor in respect of a sale, purchase or mortgage of land should not assent to his election to charge according to the old system instead of by scale (In re Evans, [1905] 1 Ch. 290; 69 J. P. 104). See also as to disallowing an item which the authority are willing to pay, In re Frank James & Sons, [1903] W. N. 99, discussed in the two preceding cases.

Two local authorities agreed to carry out a joint sewerage scheme by an agreement which stipulated that all disputes as to the matters comprised therein should be settled by arbitration in the manner provided by ss. 179, 180, ante, pp. 425, 426. An award given in an arbitration arising out of the agreement directed that one of the authorities should pay to the other the costs of the reference and award. Upon motion for an order directing the taxation of the costs:—Held, that as the submission to arbitration had been made a rule of court, the taxing master was bound to tax the costs upon the application of the successful party; and that it was not obligatory on such party to bring an action upon the award in order to obtain such a taxation (Chesterfield (Corporation of) v. Brampton L. B. (1886), 50 J. P. 824).

As regards the charges of local authorities in promoting or opposing Bills in Parliament, the Borough Funds Acts, 1872 and 1903, in App. I., post, Vol. II., post, must be attended to. See the notes to s. 218, ante, p. 499.

Auditor to audit accounts of officers.

250. The accounts under this Act of officers or assistants of any local authority who are required to receive moneys or goods on behalf of such authority shall be audited by the auditors or auditor of the accounts of such authority, with the same powers incidents and consequences as in the case of such last-mentioned accounts.

See the notes on s. 247, ante, p. 541. This section does not prevent the local authority from exercising their own supervision over the accounts of their officers according to s. 195, ante, p. 461.

PART VII.

LEGAL PROCEEDINGS.

Prosecution of Offences and Recovery of Penalties, etc.

Summary proceedings for offences, penalties, etc.

251. All offences under this Act, and all penalties forfeitures costs and expenses under this Act directed to be recovered in a summary manner, or the recovery of which is not otherwise provided for (a), may be prosecuted and recovered in manner directed by the Summary Jurisdiction Acts before a court of summary jurisdiction (b). The court of summary jurisdiction, when hearing and determining an information or complaint under this Act, shall be constituted of two or more justices of the peace in petty sessions, sitting at a place appointed for holding petty sessions (c), or of some magistrate or officer for the time being empowered by law to do alone any act authorised to be done by more than one justice of the peace sitting at some court or other place appointed for the administration of justice (d).

(a) See s. 196, ante, p. 462, as to proceedings against officers in default, and s. 256, post, p. 564, as to the recovery of rates.

A local authority sued ratepayers for services rendered by a fire brigade on two days. On the first day the brigade were employed in pumping water to prevent a fire. On the second day certain men of the brigade were retained, at the defendants' request, to be on hand during the removal of debris, but it was found as a fact that there was very small, if any, risk of fire breaking out on this day. It was held that the defendants were bound to pay for the employment of the men on the second day, and that the sum due was not a "cost or expense under this Act" but was recoverable by action (Grays Thurrock U. D. C. v. Grays Chemical Works, Ltd., [1918] 2 K. B. 461; 82 J. P. 207).

The P. H. A., 1907, s. 6, provides that offences under that Act, or under any bye-law made under the powers of that Act, or under the powers of this Act, or any enactment amending or extending this Act, may be prosecuted, and penalties, forfeitures, costs, and expenses recovered, in like manner and subject to the same provisions as offences which may be prosecuted, and penalties, forfeitures, costs, and expenses which may be recovered, in a summary manner under the Public Health Acts.

(b) See the definition of those terms in s. 4, ante, p. 36. The Summary Jurisdiction Acts are 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43; 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49: 44 & 45 Vict. c. 24; 47 & 48 Vict. c. 43, and 62 & 63 Vict. c. 22. See also the Criminal Justice Administration Act, 1914 (4 & 5 Geo. 5, c. 58).

Effect of S. J. A., 1879.

It is, of course, impossible to incorporate here the provisions of these Acts. At the same time it is necessary to offer a few observations with reference to the S. J. A., 1879, which was passed after this Act, and in some respects created important changes in the law. The principal change consists in the distinction drawn by it between informations for offences of a criminal nature and complaints for the payment of money. Under the Act of 1848 there was no such distinction, so far as concerned the enforcing of a conviction or order; both were enforced by distress and imprisonment. Now by s. 6 of the Act of 1879, when, under any Act, whether past or future, a sum of money claimed to be due is recoverable on complaint to a court of summary jurisdiction, and not on information, such sum shall be deemed to be a civil debt, and if recovered before a court of summary jurisdiction, shall be recovered in the manner in which a sum declared by that Act to be a civil debt recoverable summarily, is recoverable under that Act, and not otherwise. And the payment of any costs ordered to be paid by the complainant or defendant in case of any such complaint, are to be enforced in like manner as such civil debt and not otherwise. By s. 35, any sum declared by the Act or by any future Act to be a civil debt which is recoverable summarily, or in respect of the recovery of which jurisdiction is given by such Act to a court of summary jurisdiction, shall be deemed to be a sum for payment of which a court of summary jurisdiction has authority by law to make an order on complaint in pursuance of the Summary Jurisdiction Acts. The section goes on to provide that a warrant shall not be issued for apprehending any person for failing to appear to answer any such complaint, and that the order is not to be enforced by imprisonment, except after proof of means on judgment summons in the same way as is provided in the case of ordinary debts under s. 5 of the Debtors Act, 1869. This distinction between a conviction on information and an order made on complaint for the recovery of a sum of money, is very clearly set out in the judgment of FIELD, J., in R. v. Paget (1881), 8 Q. B. D. 151; 46 J. P. 151, and in R. v. Kerswill (or Torquay JJ.), [1895] 1 Q. B. 1; 59 J. P. 342. The distinction is of peculiar importance with reference to its application to this Act. It happens more than once, for example in s. 21, ante, p. 78, that a penalty is imposed for an offence which the local authority are authorised to remedy, and that the local authority are empowered to recover summarily the expense incurred in providing this remedy. In proceeding for the penalty, the local authority lay an information, and the defendants may be convicted; in proceeding to recover these expenses, they make a complaint and the defendant is ordered to pay the money, which is thus a civil debt. The importance to the defendant is obvious. If he is convicted of the offence and fined, he may be sent to prison in default of distress; if he is ordered to pay a sum of money he cannot be imprisoned except by order made on judgment summons on proof of means.

Note to Section 251.

Reference should also be made to the provisions of the Criminal Justice Administration Act, 1914 (4 & 5 Geo. 5, c. 58).

"Criminal proceedings."

The test of criminal proceedings is stated by BRAMWELL, B., in R. v. Whitchurch, ante, p. 184, to consist in the liability to have the penalty enforced by imprisonment in default of distress or payment. See also per CROMPTON, J., in Parker v. Green (1862), 31 L. J. M. C. 133; per PALLES, C.B., in R. v. Sullivan (1874), I. R. 8 C. L. 404; Reeve v. Wood (1864), 34 L. J. M. C. 15; Mellor v. Denham (1880), 5 Q. B. D. 467; 44 J. P. 472; Att.-Gen. v. Kissane (1893), 32 L. R. Ir. 220; Ex parte Schofield, [1891] 2 Q. B. 428; 56 J. P. 4; Burnett v. Berry (1896), 60 J. P. 550; 12 T. L. R. 464; Seaman v. Burley, [1896] 2 Q. B. 344; 60 J. P. 772; Southport (Mayor, etc. of) v. Birkdale U. D. C. (1897), 76 L. T. 318; 18 Cox C. C. 537; Southwark and Vauxhall Water Co. v. Hampton U. D. C., [1899] 1 Q. B. 273; 63 J. P. 100; R. v. D'Eyncourt (1901), 85 L. T. 501; Robson v. Biggar, [1908] 1 K. B. 672; R. v. Garrett; Ex parte Sharf. [1917] 2 K. B. 99; 81 J. P. 145; Clifford and O'Sullivan, [1921] 2 A. C. 570; R. v. Manchester Profiteering Committee (1920), 84 J. P. 177; 36 T. L. R. 715. The distinction between civil and criminal proceedings is important for other reasons. In a criminal proceeding, if the justices dismiss the information, no appeal will lie to quarter sessions; if a case is stated for the opinion of the High Court, no appeal will lie to the Court of Appeal from the decision of the High Court.

As to the procedure to compel justices to hear and determine a case, see R. v. Phillimore (1884), 48 J. P. 774; 51 L. T. 205; R. v. Biron (1884), 14 Q. B. D. 474; 49 J. P. 68.

Special cases.

When justices decide that they have no jurisdiction, it is often difficult to say whether mandamus or special case is the appropriate remedy (see, e.g., Wakefield L. B. v. West Riding Rail. Co. (1866), 35 L. J. M. C. 69; Muir v. Hore (1877), 47 L. J. M. C. 17; R. v. Wisbech JJ. (1890), 54 J. P. 743; 7 T. L. R. 21).

The practice as to the stating of a special case under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, or under the S. J. A., 1879, cannot be fully treated in this Work. The law on the subject will be found in Stone's Justices' Manual and in the Encyclopædia of Local Government Law, Vol. I., at pp. 475 et seq., but the principal cases decided with reference thereto may be referred to:—

The court will not allow a case to be argued where the statutory requirements have not been complied with; and neither the justices nor the parties can excuse or waive non-compliance with a condition precedent (Westmore v. Paine, [1891] 1 Q. B. 482; 55 J. P. 440). Subject to the qualification that compliance is a condition precedent only when it is possible to comply (Mayer v. Harding (1867), L. R. 2 Q. B. 410; Syred v. Carruthers (1858), 27 L. J. M. C. 273; 23 J. P. 37; Morgan v. Edwards (1860), 29 L. J. M. C. 108; 24 J. P. 245; Woodhouse v. Woods (1859), 29 L. J. M. C. 149; 23 J. P. 759; R. v. Leicestershire JJ. (1850), 15 Q. B. 88; Anderson

v. Reid (1902), 66 J. P. 564 ; 86 L. T. 713), the appellant must bear in mind that the following omissions will, as a rule, prove fatal :

(1) Omission to apply in writing (South Staffordshire Water Co. v. Stone (1887), 19 Q. B. D. 168 ; 51 J. P. 662 ; Lockhart v. St. Alban's (1888), 21 Q. B. D. 188 ; 52 J. P. 420). It makes no difference that, at the hearing, the Bench, in reply to a verbal request, undertook to state a case (Westmore v. Paine, supra). At the time when the above cases were decided, Rule 18 of the Summary Jurisdiction Rules, 1886, required a copy to be served on each of the justices. By a Rule of March 20th, 1906, the application was to be left with the clerk to the justices, and a copy was to be left with him for each of the justices. It was, however, held to be a sufficient compliance with the new Rule when each of the justices was served personally, and a copy left with the clerk (R. v. Woodcock, [1907] 2 K. B. 104 ; 71 J. P. 241). The Rule now in force is No. 52 of the S. J. Rules, 1915, and is as follows :— "An application to a court of summary jurisdiction under s. 33 of the S. J. Act, 1879, to state a special case shall be made in writing and shall be left with the clerk of the court at any time within seven clear days from the date of the proceedings to be questioned and there shall also be left with him a copy of such application for each of the justices constituting such court which shall be duly forwarded by him to each of the said justices. The case shall be stated within three calendar months after the date of the application and after the recognizance shall have been entered into."

(2) Omission to serve the application for a case upon the justices' clerk within seven days. See R. v. Knill (1893), 57 J. P. 277, and new Rule of 1915, referred to, supra.

(3) Omission to enter into the recognizance before the case is stated (Walker v. Delacambo (1894), 63 L. J. M. C. 77 ; 58 J. P. 88). See also as to the recognizance, Stanhope v. Thorsby (1866), L. R. 1 C. P. 423 ; Chapman v. Robinson (1859), 28 L. J. M. C. 30 ; 1 El. & El. 25 ; R. v. Kettle, [1905] 1 K. B. 212 ; 69 J. P. 55 ; as to recognizances by a corporation, see Southern Counties Bank v. Boaler (1895), 59 J. P. 536 ; 73 L. T. 155.

(4) Omission to serve personally upon the respondent notice in writing of the appeal, together with a copy of the case, before transmitting to the Crown Office (Woodhouse v. Woods, ante, p. 552 ; Hill v. Wright (1896), 60 J. P. 312 ; Rust v. St. Botolph, Bishopsgate (1906), 94 L. T. 575 ; Foss v. Best, [1906] 2 K. B. 105 ; 70 J. P. 383 ; South Dublin Union v. Jones (1883), 12 L. R. Ir. 358 ; Hollidge v. Ruislip-Northwood U. D. C. (1913), 77 J. P. 126. But see Syred v. Carruthers ; Anderson v. Reid ; Morgan v. Edwards ; Woodhouse v. Woods, ante, p. 552 ; Clarke v. McGuire, [1909] 2 I. R. 682 ; Wills v. McSherry ; Teddington U. D. C. v. Vile ; Godman v. Crofton, post, p. 554). The actual receipt of the notice and copy case (whether through the post or otherwise) must be prior to the lodgment at the Crown Office (Edwards v. Roberts, [1891] 1 Q. B. 302 ; 55 J. P. 439 ; Ashdown v. Curtis (1862), 31 L. J. M. C. 216 ; 26 J. P. 312). Where service of the notice and copy is made on the same day as the lodgment at the Crown Office, the appellant will not be required to prove that the lodgment was at a later period of the day (Verney v. Fletcher, [1909] 1 K. B. 444 ; 73 J. P. 131). As to the form of notice of appeal, see Provincial Motor Cab Co. v. Dunning, [1909] 2 K. B. 599 ; 73 J. P. 387 ; Dickeson & Co., Ltd. v. Mayes, [1910] 1 K. B. 452 ; 74 J. P. 139.

(5) Omission to lodge the case at the Crown Office within three days after its receipt (Aspinall v. Sutton, [1894] 2 Q. B. 349 ; 58 J. P. 622 ; Phillips v. Jones (1893), 57 J. P. 84). In Syred v. Carruthers, supra, delivery to the solicitor who represented the party at the hearing, and was, so far as the justices knew, still acting for him, was held to be a receipt. See, too, Pennell v. Uxbridge (1862), 31 L. J. M. C. 92 ; 5 L. T. 685 ; Banks v. Goodwin (1863), 32 L. J. M. C. 87 ; 27 J. P. 404. As to lodgment at the Crown Office on holidays or after closing time, see Holland v. Peacock, [1912] 1 K. B. 154 ; 76 J. P. 68, and cf. Mayer v. Harding, supra.

(6) Omission to lodge a restated case within three days of its receipt from the justices (Gloucester L. B. v. Chandler (1863), 32 L. J. M. C. 66). After the lapse of the three days the case is dead, and cannot be revived by the justices making a further alteration and re-signing it (ibid., and cf. Aspinall v. Sutton, ante, p. 553).

In computing the periods of three and seven days respectively, Sunday counts; if, therefore, the last day be a Sunday, the periods are reduced to two and six days respectively (Peacock v. R. (1858), 27 L. J. C. P. 224; 4 C. B. (N.S.) 264; Wynne v. Ronaldson (1865), 29 J. P. 566; 12 L. T. 711; Pennell v. Uxbridge, ante, p. 553; Ex parte Simpkin (1859), 2 El. & El. 392; 29 L. J. M. C. 23; but cf. Holland v. Peacock, ante, p. 553).

The following are some of the cases in which failure to comply with the statute or rule has been held to be not fatal:—An appellant demanded from justices a special case on September 29th. On receiving a draft case he asked for alterations, and, without any fault of his, the case was not finally stated till February 19th, when it was duly lodged in the Crown Office. The respondents moved to strike out the case, as it had not been stated within three months pursuant to Summary Jurisdiction Rule 18; it was held that the provision as to stating a case within three months was not a condition precedent, but merely directory, and that the court had jurisdiction to hear the case (Hughes v. Wavertree L. B. (1894), 58 J. P. 654; 10 T. L. R. 357; and cf. Lane v. Rendall, [1899] 2 Q. B. 673; 63 J. P. 757).

Where, on receipt of the case, the respondent could not be found, and therefore could not be served within three days with notice of the appeal and a copy of the case, it was held sufficient that the solicitor who appeared for him before the justices had been served within the three days, the respondent having, on being afterwards found, received the notice and copy (Syred v. Carruthers, ante, p. 552).

In another case the notice of appeal and the copy of the special case could not be personally served on the respondent (a sailor), as he had left the country on board his ship, and it was served on the solicitor who represented him before the magistrate, but who had ceased to represent him in the matter. The respondent was not personally served till some months afterwards on his return home. It was held that the service was sufficient (Anderson v. Reid (1902), 66 J. P. 564; 86 L. T. 713; cf. Wills v. McSherry, [1913] 1 K. B. 20; 77 J. P. 65).

Where no copy of a special case with notice in writing of the appeal had been given to the respondent, but every effort had been made to serve her and the court was satisfied that she knew about it, the court heard the appeal (Teddington U. D. C. v. Vile (1906), 70 J. P. 381).

These cases are instances of the qualification (of the rule) previously mentioned, that when the appellant had done all that he possibly can to comply with the requirements of the statutes and rule, he is entitled to have the case argued. The only decision opposed to this conclusion is Foss v. Best, ante, p. 553, and in that case the attention of the court was not drawn to the dicta of the learned judges in Woodhouse v. Woods, ante, p. 552; Morgan v. Edwards, ante, p. 552; and the decision in Anderson v. Reid, supra.

In Godman v. Crofton (1914), 3 K. B. 803; 79 J. P. 12, service on respondent's solicitor who had undertaken to accept service was held sufficient.

Signature of case.

All the adjudicating justices should sign the case (Barker v. Hodgson (1904), 68 J. P. 310); but see Nantyglo U. D. C. v. Ebley (1905), 69 J. P. N. 40 (absence abroad), and Kean v. Robinson, [1910] 2 I. R. 306 (death); and cf. Toppin v. Marcus (1908), 42 Ir. L. T. 87. When a magistrate resigns after having agreed to state a case, the fact that he did not sign the case until after his resignation does not preclude the court from hearing the appeal (Grocock v. Grocock (1919), 83 J. P. 185; 17 L. G. R. 623). Justices stating a case under 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, are to be deemed to have stated it under all their powers, including 42 & 43 Vict. c. 49 (Rochdale Building Society v. Rochdale (Mayor, etc. of) (1886), 51 J. P. 134; Stokes v. Mitcheson, [1902] 1 K. B. 857; 66 J. P. 615).

As to the effect of the death of a party pending the hearing, see Finchley U. D. C. v. Blyton (1913), 77 J. P. N. 556, and cases on pp. 603, 604, post.

Points open on argument of case.

Upon the argument, a point cannot be taken upon the facts stated which was not taken before the justices except upon a question of law which no evidence could alter (Kates v. Jeffery, [1914] 3 K. B. 160; 78 J. P. 310).

Costs on special case.

The costs of a special case are entirely in the discretion of the court, whether it be duly heard, or previously struck out, or abandoned, or not heard as being irregular (Crowther v. Boult (1884), 13 Q. B. D. 680; 49 J. P. 135; G. N. Rail. Co. v. Inett (1877), 2 Q. B. D. 284; Diss Urban Sanitary Authority v. Aldrich (1877), 2 Q. B. D. 179, 285, note (3); 41 J. P. 549), and this discretion is not excluded by the fact that the Crown is directly or indirectly a party to the appeal (Moore v. Smith (1859), 1 El. & El. 597; 28 L. J. M. C. 126; Thomas v. Pritchard, [1903] 1 K. B. 209; 67 J. P. 71). As to allowing costs to the Crown where the Crown if unsuccessful would not be liable for costs, see R. v. G. N. Rail. Co., [1908] 2 I. R. 32.

Where the respondent succeeds the appellant will almost invariably have to pay his costs (Davis v. Douglas (1859), 23 J. P. 135); but see as to an appeal dismissed on a technical preliminary point, Rust v. St. Botolph, Bishopsgate (1906), 94 L. T. 575, and Eustace v. Cooke & Co., Ltd., ibid. 577 n.

Where both parties appear and the appellant succeeds, the same general rule as to "costs following the event" prevails (Davis v. Douglas, supra). In one case, however, where the question of law to be decided was very doubtful the court refused to give the successful appellant his costs (Leech v. North Staffordshire Rail. Co. (1860), 29 L. J. M. C. 150; 1 L. T. 332). A successful appellant will usually be deprived of his costs if the court decide in his favour upon a point not taken before the justices (Stinson v. Browning (1866), L. R. 1 C. P. 321; Ex parte Markham (1870), 34 J. P. 150; 21 L. T. 748). In London, Edinburgh and Glasgow Assurance Co. v. Partington (1903), 67 J. P. 255; 88 L. T. 732, where the court allowed to be taken a point which was not taken below, the successful appellants were ordered to pay the costs thrown away by their not taking the point at the proper time.

Where the appellant succeeds, the respondent not appearing, no definite rule can be laid down; it has been stated that in such cases it is not usual to allow costs (Lee v. Strain (1859), 28 L. J. M. C. 221; 7 W. R. 432; Smith v. Butler (1886), 16 Q. B. D. 349; 50 J. P. 260); but the court can, and frequently does, allow them (Halse v. Alder (1874), 38 J. P. 407; Wednesbury L. B. v. Stephenson (1864), 33 L. J. M. C. 111; 9 L. T. 731; Shepherd v. Folland (1884), 49 J. P. 165; Greenbank v. Sanderson (1884), 49 J. P. 40; Solomon v. St. Mary's, Islington (1900), Times, February 16th; Usk U. D. C. v. Mortimer (1903), 68 J. P. 38; 90 L. T. 25; Robinson v. Gregory, [1905] 1 K. B. 534; 69 J. P. 161).

In Greenbank v. Sanderson, supra, it was said that it is usual to allow costs where it was necessary for the appellant to appeal in order to have a judgment reversed. In a recent case (Pearks, Gunston & Co. v. Van Tromp, heard on June 23rd, 1902, but which does not appear to have been reported), the court said that it was usual to allow costs against a respondent who does not appear where the respondent was the party who set the law in motion; see also Booth v. Helliwell (1915), 78 J. P. 223, per AVORY, J.; and cf. Gordon v. Cann (1899), 63 J. P. 324; 15 T. L. R. 165. In another recent case (Usk U. D. C. v. Mortimer, supra), it was held that where it is the duty of a public body to take proceedings before justices of a civil nature, and the defendant raises an untenable point which succeeds, then, although he does not appear on the argument of the case, it was proper that costs should be allowed against him. So, too, where the proceedings taken are of a criminal nature (Robinson v. Gregory, supra).

In one case where the respondent did not appear, but the justices did and were allowed to oppose the appeal, costs were given against them (Heywood v. Whitehead (1896), 76 L. T. 781). Apparently the attention of the court was not directed to the S. J. A., 1857, s. 6, supra, and the case stands alone, not merely upon the point as to costs, but also as to the justices being allowed to appear at all, as to which see Smith v. Butler (1886), 16 Q. B. D. 349; 50 J. P. 260.

Notwithstanding a statement to the contrary in Wednesbury L. B. v. Stephenson (1864), 33 L. J. M. C. 111; 9 L. T. 731, it is not now the practice to include costs in the judgment as a matter of course. They must be asked for, and at the hearing of the appeal; any delay will be fatal, unless there be some good ground to account for it. See Cook v. Montague, infra; Budenburg v. Roberts (1867), L. R. 2 C. P. 292; Newman v. Jones (1886), 17 Q. B. D. 132; 50 J. P. 373.

The allowance of "costs" by the court means costs of the appeal only, but the court has power to, and may in a case of oppressive or vexatious proceedings, order the respondent to pay the appellant's costs before the justices (Cook v. Montague (1873), 28 L. T. 494; 21 W. R. 670). It is true that in a later case the court doubted whether they had power to make such an order, and declined to do so (Slaughter v. Sunderland (Mayor, etc. of) (1891), 60 L. J. M. C. 91; 55 J. P. 519); but Cook

v. Montague, supra, was not cited. See also Newman v. Jones (1886), 17 Q. B. D. 132; 50 J. P. 373.

"Costs" include any costs properly incurred in connection with the preparation and amendment of the case, and are not restricted to the fees payable to the clerk to the justices (Glover v. Booth (1862), 31 L. J. M. C. 270; 2 B. & S. 807).

Order to state case.

If justices refuse to state a special case, the court may order them to do so; see as to costs in such an event, R. v. Bell (1899), 15 T. L. R. 487; R. v. Bradford JJ. (1884), 48 J. P. 149. On an application for such an order it is now common, if the parties agree, to treat the affidavits as amounting to a case and to dispose finally of the real point in issue (R. v. Denman (1907), 5 L. G. R. 649).

Justices will not as a rule be ordered to state a case where the point in issue could more conveniently be raised on certiorari (R. v. Owen (1907), 72 J. P. 60; 52 Sol. J. 132). A person who asks for a case waives any right of appeal to sessions (S. J. A., 1857, s. 14) and also, as a rule, his right to a certiorari (Palmer v. Thatcher (1878), 3 Q. B. D. 346; 42 J. P. 213; R. v. Thomas (1901), 18 T. L. R. 71; but see R. v. Part (1906), 70 J. P. 398; 4 L. G. R. 1122; R. v. Hodgson (1864), 12 W. R. 423).

Justices cannot state a special case on the hearing of an application for a cinematograph licence (Huish v. Liverpool JJ., [1914] 1 K. B. 109; 78 J. P. 45); nor semble on an ex parte application (Dunlop v. Boal (1913), 47 Ir. L. T. 14; but see Ex parte Flinn (1899), 15 T. L. R. 406, 487).

When justices find that an offence is proved but dismiss the information under the Probation of Offenders Act, 1907, there is a "determination" by the justices, and the accused is entitled to appeal therefrom by way of case stated (Oaten v. Auty [1919] 2 K. B. 278; 83 J. P. 173).

As to stating a case where the statute says that a decision of justices shall be final, see Kydd v. Liverpool Watch Committee, [1908] A. C. 327; 72 J. P. 395; Westminster Corporation v. Gordon Hotels, Ltd., [1908] A. C. 142; 72 J. P. 201; Wills v. McSherry (No. 2), [1914] 1 K. B. 616; 78 J. P. 120.

See as to power to state a case on hearing of an appeal from a refusal to grant a licence (London Corporation v. Wolff (1916), 80 J. P. 453; 14 L. G. R. 1123).

In an Irish case it was held that when a case is sent back for the justices to find further facts the justices should give the parties an opportunity of being reheard, and, if they so desire, of giving evidence in relation to the facts required to be found (Vincent Forte v. McAlister, [1917] 2 I. R. 387).

Procedure where justices equally divided.

Where there is an equal division of opinion amongst the justices they may adjourn a case for a rehearing before a reconstituted court (Bagg v. Colquhoun, [1904] 1 K. B. 554; 68 J. P. 159). If they do not adjourn, they should apparently dismiss the information or complaint (R. v. Ashplant (1888), 52 J. P. 474). Cf., however, R. v. Wardle (1898), 14 T. L. R. 424, where it was doubted if this was a proper course to be adopted in a civil case. If a case is so dismissed the matter becomes res judicata so far as summary proceedings are concerned (Kinnis v. Graves (1898), 67 L. J. Q. B. 583; 78 L. T. 502). As a further alternative, one of the justices might retire or withdraw his opinion (Ex parte Evans, [1894] A. C. 16; 58 J. P. 260; and see R. v. Thomas, [1914] 1 K. B. 32; 78 J. P. 55).

The Probation of Offenders Act, 1907, s. 1, provides as follows:

Trifling offences.

"(1) Where any person is charged before a court of summary jurisdiction with an offence punishable by such court, and the court thinks that the charge is proved, but is of opinion that, having regard to the character, antecedents, age, health, or mental condition of the person charged, or to the trivial nature of the offence, or to the extenuating circumstances under which the offence was committed, it is inexpedient to inflict any punishment or any other than a nominal punishment, or that it is expedient to release the offender on probation, the court may, without proceeding to conviction, make an order either—

"(i) dismissing the information or charge; or

"(ii) discharging the offender conditionally on his entering into a recognizance, with or without sureties, to be of good behaviour and to appear for conviction and sentence when called on at any time during such period, not exceeding three years, as may be specified in the order.

"(2) Where any person has been convicted on indictment of any offence punishable with imprisonment, and the court is of opinion that, having regard to the character, antecedents, age, health, or mental condition of the person charged, or to the trivial nature of the offence, or to the extenuating circumstances under which the offence was committed, it is inexpedient to inflict any punishment or any other than a nominal punishment, or that it is expedient to release the offender on probation, the court may, in lieu of imposing a sentence of imprisonment, make an order discharging the offender conditionally on his entering into a recognizance, with or without sureties, to be of good behaviour and to appear for sentence when called on at any time during such period, not exceeding three years, as may be specified in the order.

"(3) The court may, in addition to any such order, order the offender to pay such damages for injury or compensation for loss (not exceeding in the case of a court of summary jurisdiction ten pounds, or, if a higher limit is fixed by any enactment relating to the offence, that higher limit) and to pay such costs of the proceedings as the court thinks reasonable, and, if the offender is under the age of sixteen years, and it appears to the court that the parent or guardian of the offender has conduced to the commission of the offence, the court may under and in accordance with the Youthful Offenders Act, 1901, order payment of such damages and costs by such parent or guardian. [Italicised words repealed by the Children Act, 1908. See now s. 99, ibid.]

"(4) Where an order under this section is made by a court of summary jurisdiction, the order shall, for the purpose of revesting or restoring stolen property, and of enabling the court to make orders as to the restitution or delivery of property to the owner and as to the payment of money upon or in connection with such restitution or delivery, have the like effect as a conviction."

This section (Probation of Offenders Act 1907, s. 1) is not to be too strictly or narrowly construed (Dunning v. Trainer (1909), 73 J. P. 400; 101 L. T. 421). As to its applicability reference may be made to the following cases decided under the S. J. A., 1879, s. 16, which it replaced: Banton v. Davies (1892), 56 J. P. 294; Phillips v. Evans, [1896] 1 Q. B. 305; 60 J. P. 120; Vinters v. Freedman (1901), 66 J. P. 135; Salt v. Scott-Hall, [1903] 2 K. B. 245; 67 J. P. 306; Pomeroy v. Malvern U. D. C. (1903), 67 J. P. 375; 89 L. T. 555; Nisbet v. Lloyd (1904), 68 J. P. 396; Barnard v. Barton, [1906] 1 K. B. 357; 69 J. P. 281; Lee Conservancy Board v. Bishop's Stortford U. D. C. (1906), 70 J. P. 244; 4 L. G. R. 641. See also Rogers v. Barlow & Sons (1906), 70 J. P. 214; 94 L. T. 519; Ex parte Marshall (1907), 71 J. P. 501; Oaten v. Auty, [1919] 2 K. B. 278; 83 J. P. 173.

Justices are not justified in holding an offence created by statute to be a trifling offence, but may hold that the particular circumstances affecting the commission of it in a particular case make it trifling (Rennie v. Boardman (1914), 78 J. P. 420, and Vigers Brothers v. L. C. C., [1919] 1 K. B. 56; 83 J. P. 6: per AVORY, J.).

No action for money recoverable summarily.

As the statute has provided this summary remedy for the recovery of the sums adjudged and penalties, an action for such sums and penalties will not be maintainable. See St. Pancras (Vestry of) v. Batterbury (1857), 2 C. B. (N.S.) 477; 21 J. P. 424; Blackburn (Mayor of) v. Parkinson (1858), 28 L. J. M. C. 7; 23 J. P. 262; Lamplugh v. Norton (1889), 22 Q. B. D. 452; 53 J. P. 389; G. W. Rail. Co. v. Sharman (1892), 61 L. J. Q. B. 600; 40 W. R. 643. In the first of these cases it was laid down that when a pecuniary obligation is created by a statute, and a remedy expressly given for enforcing it, that remedy must be adopted. There is no right to come into the High Court for a declaration that the applicant has a right to recover in a court of summary jurisdiction; he can only proceed in the latter court (Barraclough v. Brown, [1897] A. C. 615; 62 J. P. 275). Cf. however, Barwick v. S. E. Rail. Co., [1921] 1 K. B. 187; 85 J. P. 65, where it was held that in very special circumstances a declaration may be made, and see Simmonds v. Newport Abercarn Black Vein Steam Coal Co., [1921] 1 K. B. 616; 85 J. P. 109. In some cases the remedy in the civil courts is expressly reserved, for example, s. 261, post, p. 581, gives an alternative remedy in the county courts for demands under £50.

It may here be mentioned that any information, complaint, warrant, or summons issued for the purpose of the Public Health Acts may contain in the body thereof or in a schedule thereto several sums (cf. P. H. A., 1890, s. 8; P. H. A., 1907, s. 8, post). See also R. v. Glover, ante, p. 506.

Under the Revenue Act, 1898, s. 8, receipts given by or on behalf of a clerk to justices or a magistrate for money received in respect of a fine need not be stamped.

Note to Section 251.

(c) Consequently the court will be a petty sessional court, as defined by the S. J. A., 1879, s. 20. The same section requires the justices to sit in open court.

(d) These words include stipendiary magistrates, who are empowered by statute to do alone whatever is authorised by the Summary Jurisdiction Acts to be done by one or more justices. See 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 33; 21 & 22 Vict. c. 73; 32 & 33 Vict. c. 34.

It should here be observed that the jurisdiction of a county justice extends to the whole of his county, and is not limited to the division in which he usually acts (R. v. Beckley (1887), 20 Q. B. D. 187; 52 J. P. 120; Caistor R. D. C. v. Taylor (1907), 71 J. P. 310; 5 L. G. R. 767; and R. v. Beacontree JJ., [1915] 3 K. B. 388; 79 J. P. 461). As to the jurisdiction of borough justices, see the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, ss. 154—157, and R. v. Williamson (1891), 7 T. L. R. 534. See also Ely v. Godfrey (1922), 44 M. C. C. 76.

As to the appearance of the local authority in legal proceedings, see s. 259, post, p. 580.

General provisions as to summary proceedings. [Repealed by 47 & 48 Vict. c. 43.]

252. Any complaint or information made or laid in pursuance of this Act shall be made or laid within six months from the time when the matter of such complaint or information respectively arose (a).

The description of any offence under this Act in the words of this Act shall be sufficient in law (b).

Any exception exemption proviso excuse or qualification whether it does or does not accompany the description of the offence in this Act, may be proved by the defendant, but need not be specified or negatived in the information; and, if so specified or negatived, no proof in relation to the matters so specified or negatived shall be required on the part of the informant (b).

Time limitation.

(a) This clause being identical with the S. J. A., 1848, s. 11, was really superfluous, and was, therefore, repealed by the S. J. A., 1884. The following cases may be referred to:

When an offence is in the nature of continued disobedience to, or default in conforming with a requirement which contemplates the execution of works necessarily taking some time to execute, the time of limitation does not run from the date of the requirement itself. See Chepstow Electric Light Co., Ltd. v. Chepstow Gas Co., Ltd., [1905] 1 K. B. 198; 69 J. P. 72. It is doubtful whether the time can be said to begin to run when a person is continuing to disobey an order which is always operative until it is obeyed (ibid.).

Where an Act enabled commissioners to pull down dangerous structures and recover the expenses for so doing from the owner in a summary manner according to the S. J. A., 1848, it was held that the six months ran from the date of the demand and refusal, and not from the incurring of the expense (Labalmondiere v. Addison (1858), 28 L. J. M. C. 25; 23 J. P. 261). The subsequent case of Eddlestone v. Francis (1860), 7 C. B. (N.S.) 568; 25 J. P. 235, appears at first sight to be inconsistent with the earlier decision; but this is not the case, for the court considered that there had been such a demand in 1854 as would have entitled the local board to have proceeded within six months after that time, and proceedings were not, in fact, taken until 1858. And see Pool and Forden Highway Board v. Gunning (1882), 51 L. J. M. C. 49; Corbett v. Badger, [1901] 2 K. B. 278; and Grece v. Hunt, ante, p. 308.

If information is laid within six months, a subsequent amendment, if a different offence is not thereby charged, does not amount to institution of proceedings (R. v. Wakeley, [1920] 1 K. B. 688; 84 J. P. 31).

In proceedings under the Metropolis Management Act, 1862, s. 75, for infringing a building line, the six months under s. 107 was held to begin to run from the time when the structure was discovered to be so far advanced as to show the full extent of the projection complained of, and not from the completion of the building (Brutton v. St. George's, Hanover Square (Vestry of) (1871), L. R. 13 Eq. 339; 36 J. P. 580). This was dissented from in Bermondsey (Vestry of) v. Johnson (1873), L. R. 8 C. P. 441; 37 J. P. 392, where it was held that the particular section (s. 107), limiting the time for proceedings, applied only to pecuniary penalties and not to an order under s. 75 for the demolition of a building. But in Morant v. Taylor (1876), 1 Ex. D. 188 ; 40 J. P. 501, it was held that the S. J. A., 1848, s. 11, which, as already stated, is identical with the text, applied to every kind of order made by a court of summary jurisdiction, and applied therefore to an order for the demolition of a building under a local Act. In that case the complaint was made more than six months after the completion of the building. And see London C. C. v. Cross (1892), 66 L. T. 731 ; 8 T. L. R. 506 ; Hull v. London C. C., [1901] 1 K. B. 580 ; 65 J. P. 309. In calculating the period of six months, the day on which the offence is committed or the matter of complaint arises must be excluded. See Radcliffe v. Bartholomew, [1892] 1 Q. B. 161 ; 56 J. P. 262. Note to Section 252.

The application of this clause to proceedings under s. 150, for the recovery of expenses of paving, etc., in private streets, will be found discussed in the notes to that section. See also s. 257, post, p. 568.

It is to be observed that this clause does not apply to continuing offences. See Mayer v. Harding (1867), 32 J. P. 421 ; 17 L. T. 140 ; Higgins v. Northwich Union (1870), 34 J. P. 806 ; 22 L. T. 752 ; Ranking v. Forbes (1869), 34 J. P. 486, 513 ; Marshall v. Smith (1873), L. R. 8 C. P. 416 ; 37 J. P. 471 ; Rumball v. Schmidt (1882), 8 Q. B. D. 603 ; 46 J. P. 567 ; Metropolitan Board of Works v. Anthony (1884), 54 L. J. M. C. 39 ; 49 J. P. 229. And see R. v. Slade and other cases cited in the notes to s. 158, ante, p. 359. Continuing offences.

This section applies only to summary proceedings. Penal actions are governed by 31 Eliz. c. 5, as to which see Dyer v. Best (1866), L. R. 1 Ex. 152 ; 30 J. P. 151.

As to the application of this clause to complaints for the recovery of rates, see s. 256, post, p. 564.

(b) These clauses were repealed by the S. L. R. A., 1883, presumably because they are practically identical with the Summary Jurisdiction Acts, 1848, s. 14, 1879, and s. 39 (1), and the Criminal Justice Administration Act, 1914.

253. Proceedings for the recovery of any penalty under this Act shall not, except as in this Act is expressly provided (a), be had or taken by any person other than by a party aggrieved (b), or by the local authority of the district in which the offence is committed, without the consent in writing of the Attorney-General (c) : Provided, that such consent shall not be required to proceedings which are by the provisions of this Act relating to nuisances or offensive trades authorised to be taken by a local authority in respect of any act or default committed or taking place without their district, or in respect of any house building manufactory or place situated without their district (d). Restriction on recovery of penalties.

The P. H. A., 1907, s. 6, provides that " offences under this Act or under any bye-law made under the powers of this Act or under the powers of the Public Health Act, 1875, or any enactment amending or extending that Act, may be prosecuted, and penalties, forfeitures, costs, and expenses recovered, in like manner and subject to the same provisions as offences which may be prosecuted, and penalties, forfeitures, costs, and expenses which may be recovered, in a summary manner under the Public Health Acts."

(a) In Fletcher v. Hudson (1880), 5 Ex. D. 287 ; 45 J. P. 5, BRAMWELL, L.J., said : " I think the words ' except as in this Act expressly provided ' must mean ' except when there is an express provision that some person may sue who is neither a party aggrieved, nor a local authority, nor a person acting with the consent in writing of the Attorney-General.' In other words, s. 253 may be read thus : Proceedings may be taken by a party aggrieved ; they may be taken by a person who has the consent of the Attorney-General ; and, lastly, they may be taken by a person who, not being one of the preceding, is expressly authorised to do so. Now I find in the Act three cases, there may be more, in which such persons are expressly so authorised, namely, ss. 192, 193, and rule 70 ; in each of these it is provided that the penalty may be recovered by any person." In addition to the cases cited by the learned judge, Express exceptions.

Note to Section 253.

ss. 68, 105 and 106 may be referred to as being cases in which proceedings may be taken by persons other than parties aggrieved or persons acting with the consent of the Attorney-General.

The provisions of ss. 116 and 117, ante, pp. 218, 220, are not express provisions taking proceedings for the possession of unsound meat out of s. 253. Therefore, where a medical officer of health had seized unsound meat, and it had been destroyed by order of a justice, it was held that such proceedings could not be taken by a superintendent of police without the authorisation of the local authority or the consent of the Attorney-General, as the superintendent was not a party aggrieved (Dodd v. Pearson, [1911] 2 K. B. 383; 75 J. P. 343).

In the metropolis it has been held that the Metropolitan Paving Act, 1817, s. 123, which empowers justices to proceed on the complaint of the persons having the control of the pavements or of any person appointed in writing for the purpose, does not apply to proceedings under s. 65, which enables justices to entertain proceedings for street obstruction on the complaint of one or more credible witnesses; therefore in proceedings under s. 65 the complainant need not be authorised in writing to make the complaint (Keep v. Alexander (1909), 73 J. P. 423; 101 L. T. 430).

"Party aggrieved."

(b) "Prima facie there is no doubt that anybody may take proceedings to recover a penalty. That is an old rule and is well established. In order to prevent the application of the general rule it must be shown that the Act in plain terms prevents anyone, except certain specified persons, from prosecuting for offences under the Act": per KAY, L.J., in R. v. Stewart, [1896] 1 Q. B. 300; 60 J. P. 356. See also Cole v. Coulton (1860), 29 L. J. M. C. 125; Kenealy v. O'Keeffe, [1901] 2 I. R. 39; Allman v. Hardcastle (1903), 67 J. P. 440; 89 L. T. 553; Badcock v. Sankey (1890), 54 J. P. 564; Crabtree v. Bulman (1896), 60 J. P. 489; Jobson v. Henderson (1901), 64 J. P. 425; Young v. Peck (1913), 29 T. L. R. 31; 77 J. P. 49; Savill v. Harben (1919), 83 J. P. 286. It was held that a ratepayer in the district of a local board was not a party aggrieved by a member of the board voting in a matter wherein such member had an interest, and therefore that he could not sue for a penalty without the consent of the Attorney-General (Boyce v. Higgins (1853), 14 C. B. 1; 23 L. J. C. P. 5); but quære whether this case would now be considered law, having regard to Fletcher v. Hudson, supra, which expressly overrules Smith v. Fieldhouse (1876), 35 L. T. 602. The same observation applies to Hollis v. Marshall (1858), 22 J. P. 210; 2 H. & N. 755, where a disqualified person was returned as member of a board and acted; and it was held that a defeated candidate at the election, or a ratepayer in the district, was not a party aggrieved. Again, in Rochfort v. Atherley (1876), 1 Ex. D. 511, the defendant, who was acting as chairman of a local board after disqualification, made a complaint to the members thereof as to certain conduct of the plaintiff, who was clerk of the board; the plaintiff fearing that he might be dismissed from his office, resigned it and sued the defendant for a penalty under Sched. II., r. 70. It was held that he was not a party aggrieved within this section. While these decisions may stand as to the construction of the words party aggrieved, they had ceased to be of any authority for the proposition that a person other than a party aggrieved might not sue for penalties under Sched. II., r. 70, even before it was repealed, for the words to which note (a), supra, refers have been held to create an exception to the general rule established by this section. Moreover, the law as to suing members of local boards and officers was altered by the Public Health (Officers) Act, 1884, and the Public Health (Members and Officers) Act, 1885, post.

A chairman of a local board was charged with an offence under the P. H. A., 1848, s. 28, which corresponds with r. 68 of Sched. II. of this Act. The prosecutor, though a member of the board, had not been a candidate at the election. It was held that he was not a party aggrieved so as to be able to institute the proceedings without the consent of the Attorney-General (R. v. Blanshard (1866), 30 J. P. 280).

By Sched. II., r. 69 (now repealed by the L. G. A., 1894), a penalty was imposed upon any one fabricating a voting paper. The appellant was one of two candidates for election to a local board and was in a minority of five at the close af the poll. The respondents were charged with fabricating a voting paper for three votes in favour of the successful candidate. It was held that the appellant was a party aggrieved within the section. Per LUSH, J.: "Independently of any consideration of the effect of a fabricated vote upon the result of any election, any candidate is aggrieved by the fabrication of a vote within the meaning of the Act" (Verdin v. Wray (1877), 2 Q. B. D. 608; 41 J. P. 484). Note to Section 253.

In R. v. Garratt (1884), 12 Q. B. D. 620; 48 J. P. 357, the mortgagee of licensed premises was held to be a person aggrieved by the refusal of justices to renew the licence on account of his pecuniary interest in the premises. Query, whether the principle of this decision would apply so as to enable mortgagees to take proceedings under this Act in respect of offences causing injury to their property. See also Moss v. Hancock, [1899] 2 Q. B. 111; 63 J. P. 517, and Ex parte Stott, [1916] 1 K. B. 7; 80 J. P. 169, where it was held that the bailor of a cinematograph film was not an aggrieved party as regards a notice of objection to the film given by justices acting under a condition attached to the licence for the exhibition of the film.

In Harring v. Stockton (Mayor of) (1867), 31 J. P. 420, it was held that the surveyor of a corporation might lay an information under the P. H. A., 1848, though he was not authorised to do so by writing under seal.

"A party aggrieved is not brought into existence by the statute which gives him a penalty: he is a person who is supposed to exist, and the statute is passed on account of his grievance, and the action for the penalty is given to him": per BRAMWELL, L.J., in Robinson v. Currey (1881), 7 Q. B. D., at p. 470; see also Drapers Company v. Haddon (1892), 57 J. P. 200; 9 T. L. R. 36.

An association of retail dealers, many of whom dealt in tollable articles in a place in which the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847, was applicable under s. 167, ante, p. 385, were held entitled by their servant to take proceedings as a party aggrieved within the meaning of the text for the recovery of penalties for selling tollable articles in that place contrary to s. 13 of the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, 1847 (Ross v. Taylerson (1898), 62 J. P. 181).

An inspector of mines who had laid an information under the Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1887, which was dismissed, was held to be a person aggrieved within the meaning of the S. J. A., 1879, s. 33 (Stokes v. Mitcheson, [1902] 1 K. B. 857; 66 J. P. 615).

In Hilton v. Hopwood (1899), 34 L. J. N. 667, it was held that the owner of a cottage situate at a distance of almost six miles from the chimneys of a factory which emitted black smoke was not a party aggrieved within the meaning of the text, although the court of summary jurisdiction had found as a fact that her property was damaged by the smoke generally, though not particularly on the days charged in the summons.

A district superintendent of police can lay an information under the Towns Police Clauses Act, 1847, s. 28, although not a party aggrieved nor authorised by the local authority (Jobson v. Henderson (1900), 64 J. P. 425; 82 L. T. 260).

The appellant, who was chief ranger of Burnham Beeches, and had general power to prosecute on behalf of the corporation of London for offences against the byelaws, laid an information against the respondents "on behalf of the mayor and corporation of the City of London" under the Malicious Damage Act, 1861, s. 22, for damage to a holly tree in Burnham Beeches which belonged to the corporation. No resolution of the corporation authorising the prosecution was produced, and the justices dismissed the information on the ground that the prosecution had not proved by proper documentary evidence that the proceedings had been instituted by a duly constituted attorney of the corporation. It was held, that as any person could prosecute in such a case, and as the words "on behalf, etc.," could either be regarded as surplusage or be taken as meaning that the information was laid by the appellant because the tree was the property of the corporation and he was their officer, the case must be remitted to the justices (Duchesne v. Finch (1912), 76 J. P. 377; 107 L. T. 412). See also Giebler v. Manning, [1906] 1 K. B. 709; 70 J. P. 181; Lake v. Smith (1912), 76 J P. 71.

(c) In an action where the Attorney-General's consent is required, it would appear to be necessary to allege in the statement of claim that his consent has been obtained. See Hollis v. Marshall, ante, p. 560. As to the procedure for obtaining the consent of the Attorney-General, see Garrett on Nuisances, 2nd ed., pp. 360—362, Daniel's Chancery Forms, 5th ed., by Burney, p. 33. Consent of Attorney-General.

(d) See ss. 108, 115, ante, pp. 208, 217. In these cases there can be strictly no person aggrieved, and the authority which would institute the proceedings is not the authority of the district.

Section 254. Application of penalties.

254. Where the application of a penalty under this Act (z) is not otherwise provided for, one half thereof shall go to the informer, and the remainder to the local authority of the district in which the offence was committed (a): Provided, that if the local authority are the informer they shall be entitled to the whole of the penalty recovered; and all penalties or sums recovered by them on account of any penalty shall be paid over to their treasurer, and shall by him be carried to the account of the fund applicable by such authority to the general purposes of this Act.

(z) See the P. H. A., 1907, s. 6, in first note to s. 253, ante, p. 559.

(a) But for this provision penalties would have been payable to the treasurer of the county, borough, etc., under the S. J. A., 1848, s. 31, and the Justices Clerks Act, 1877, s. 6.

The provisions of section 5 of the Criminal Justice Administration Act, 1914, as to the payment and allocation of fines and fees should be referred to, and also the provisions of s. 34 (6) of the same Act as to accounting by a clerk to justices for fines.

The Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 221, provides that where by any Act passed or to be passed, any fine, penalty, or forfeiture is made recoverable in a summary manner before any justice or justices, and payable to the Crown or to any borough corporate, or to any person whomsoever, the same if recovered before any justice of a borough having a separate court of quarter sessions shall, notwithstanding anything in the Act under which it is recovered, be recovered for and adjudged to be paid to the treasurer of the borough; but this section is not to apply to any fine, penalty, or forfeiture, or part thereof, where the Act under which it is recovered, if passed since the Municipal Corporations Act, 1835, directs that the same shall go in any other manner and not to the borough fund. The present Act is, therefore, within the later part of the section.

The following cases may be referred to for the purpose of elucidating the text: Seamen's Hospital Society v. Liverpool (Mayor of) (1849), 4 Ex. 180; 18 L. J. Ex. 371; Wray v. Ellis (1858), 1 El. & Bl. 276; 22 J. P. 800; Receiver of Metropolitan Police District v. Bell (1872), L. R. 7 Q. B. 433; 37 J. P. 55; Att.-Gen. v. Moore (1878), 3 Ex. As to the payment into the Police Fund of fines awarded to police constables (being common informers), see the Penalties (Application) Act, 1850, s. 1; the Police Pensions Act, 1921, Sch. II.; Alison v. Charlesworth (1885), 49 J. P. 294; Alison v. Hall, supra.

Proceedings in certain cases against nuisances.

255. Where any nuisance under this Act appears to be wholly or partially caused by the acts or defaults of two or more persons, it shall be lawful for the local authority or other complainant to institute proceedings against any one of such persons, or to include all or any two or more of such persons in one proceeding; and any one or more of such persons may be ordered to abate such nuisance, so far as the same appears to the court having cognizance of the case to be caused by his or their acts or defaults, or may be prohibited from continuing any acts or defaults which, in the opinion of such court, contribute to such nuisance, or may be fined or otherwise punished, notwithstanding that the acts or defaults of any one of such persons would not separately have caused a nuisance; and the costs may be distributed as to such court may appear fair and reasonable (a).

Proceedings against several persons included in one complaint shall not abate by reason of the death of any among the persons so included, but all such proceedings may be carried on as if the deceased person had not been originally so included. Section 255.

Whenever in any proceeding under the provisions of this Act relating to nuisances, whether written or otherwise, it becomes necessary to mention or refer to the owner or occupier of any premises, it shall be sufficient to designate him as the "owner" or "occupier" of such premises, without name or further description (b).

Nothing in this section shall prevent persons proceeded against from recovering contribution in any case in which they would now be entitled to contribution by law (c).

(a) Sewage overflowing from the premises of the respondent and the premises of other persons ran some distance in the premises of A., where it accumulated and constituted a nuisance. Whilst it was upon the premises of the respondent and the others it was no nuisance, and became such only when it reached the premises of A.:—Held, that an order might be made on each party whose sewage assisted in causing the nuisance (Hendon Union (Guardians of) v. Bowles (1869), 34 J. P. 19; 20 L. T. 609). See also the cases cited in the notes to s. 94, ante, p. 176, especially Brown v. Bussell and Scarborough (Mayor of) v. Scarborough R. S. A.

Different persons whose independent acts amount to separate torts upon the plaintiff cannot be joined as defendants in one civil action (Sadler v. G. W. Rail. Co., [1896] A. C. 450; Munday v. South Metropolitan Electric Light Co., Ltd. (1913), 29 T. L. R. 346).

(b) Notwithstanding this provision, it will be advisable to name the person who is subject to the process when he can be ascertained. It is to be observed that this provision is confined to nuisances, and is not of general application. See, however, R. v. Mead, [1894] 2 Q. B. 124; 58 J. P. 448.

(c) The law does not generally allow of contribution among wrongdoers. See Merryweather v. Nixan (1799), 8 T. R. 186; 1 Sm. L. C. (11th ed.) 398; Betts v. Gibbins (1834), 2 A. & E. 57; Palmer v. Wick Steam Shipping Co., [1894] A. C. 318. Most of the cases as to nuisances arising under this Act are misfeasances or criminal acts of nonfeasance, and in such cases it would seem that the rule just mentioned would operate to prevent the recovering of contribution. There may, however, be cases in which contribution may be required.

Section 120 (1) of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, is in similar terms to the first paragraph of this section, and s. 120 (3) provides that when some only of the persons by whose act or default, etc., have been proceeded against they shall, without prejudice to any other remedy, be entitled to recover in a summary manner from the other persons who were not proceeded against, a proportionate part of the costs of and incidental to such proceedings, and abating such nuisance and of any fine, etc. This section was considered under the following circumstances: The plaintiff and the defendants occupied adjoining houses, and the defendants had the right of sending sewage from their house through a pipe under the plaintiff's house into the main sewer. Twelve feet of this pipe was used solely to convey sewage from the defendants' premises. Proceedings under ss. 4, 5 of the London Act having been taken against the plaintiff for a nuisance arising from the said pipe being defective, and a magistrate's order obtained, the plaintiff did the required repairs to the pipe, including the said portion of twelve feet, and brought an action in the county court to recover contribution under s. 120 (3). The county court judge found that there was no evidence to show that the defendants were liable to repair or make good the drain, and therefore held that the nuisance was not caused by any act or default of the defendants, and gave judgment for them. It was held, on appeal, that, as there was no evidence of any obligation on the defendants to repair any portion of the pipe on the premises occupied by the plaintiff, the decision was right, and, semble, s. 120 of the London Act only applies when an order is obtained against one of several persons who might all have been proceeded against as responsible for causing the nuisance (Nathan v. Rouse and Another, [1905] 1 K. B. 527; 69 J. P. 135).

Section 256.

Summary proceedings for recovery of rates.

256. If any person assessed to any rate made under this Act (a) by any urban authority fails to pay the same when due and for the space of fourteen days after the same has been lawfully demanded in writing (b), or if any person quits or is about to quit any premises without payment of any such rate then due from him in respect of such premises, and refuses to pay the same after lawful demand thereof in writing (b), any justice may summon the defaulter to appear before a court of summary jurisdiction to show cause why the rate in arrear should not be paid; and if the defaulter fails to appear, or if no sufficient cause for non-payment is shown, the court may make an order for payment of the same, and, in default of compliance with such order, may by warrant cause the same to be levied by distress of the goods and chattels of the defaulter (c).

The costs of the levy of arrears of any rate may be included in the warrant for such levy.

(a) See ss. 209—217, ante, pp. 472—498.

It has been held that, notwithstanding the incorporation with this Act of the provisions of the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847, as to the recovery of water rates, a water rent accrued due under an agreement for supply of water is a rate "made under this Act" within the meaning of this section, and that the period of limitation applicable to the recovery thereof commences to run on a failure to pay within fourteen days after demand thereof (Elliott v. Russell, [1902] 2 K. B. 748; 67 J. P. 158)

Demand.

(b) As to the service of this demand, see s. 267, post, p. 593. A demand will, it is presumed, be sufficient if made by the collector of the rate.

Enforcement of payment.

(c) In the case of a poor rate, payment is enforced by distress and imprisonment under the Distress for Rates Act, 1849; such a rate is not a "civil debt" within the meaning of the S. J. A., 1879: see R. v. Price (1880), 5 Q. B. D. 300; 44 J. P. 248; In re Allen, [1894] 2 Q. B. 924; 59 J. P. 229; Southwark and Vauxhall Water Co. v. Hampton U. D. C., [1899] 1 Q. B. 273; 63 J. P. 100; Atkins v. Hutton (1910), 74 J. P. 329; 103 L. T. 514.

Duty of justices.

Formerly in enforcing payment of poor rates, justices were not a court of summary jurisdiction, seeing that they did not act under or by virtue of the Summary Jurisdiction Acts (R. v. Price (1880), 5 Q. B. D. 300; 44 J. P. 248—the latter is a verbatim report, and should be referred to). Since the passing of the S. J. A., 1884, s. 7 (repealed and re-enacted by the Interpretation Act, 1889, s. 13), justices are probably a court of summary jurisdiction when sitting to hear complaints for poor rates (see p. 36, ante); but this does not make poor rates civil debts (see cases supra). In the case of urban rates the text expressly provides for the making of an order by a court of summary jurisdiction, and urban rates are civil debts (Southwark and Vauxhall Water Co. v. Hampton U. D. C., supra). The section makes no provision for imprisonment in default of distress, but that defect is supplied by the S. J. A., 1848, s. 22, as amended by the S. J. A., 1879, ss. 6, 35, the effect of which is that in default of distress the defendant may be committed, but only upon proof of means given on judgment summons.

The provisions of this section are different from those contained in the corresponding P. H. A., 1848, s. 103, which provided that in case the defaulter failed to appear according to the exigency of the summons, or no sufficient cause for non-payment were shown, the justice might by warrant cause the rate to be levied by distress of the goods and chattels of the defaulter. With reference to this provision it was held that the section did not confer a discretionary power upon the justice, but that he was bound to act ministerially (R. v. Newman (1860), 29 L. J. M. C. 117; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 293). It was also decided that the justices could not, when required to enforce payment of this rate, entertain any question as to the legal election of the members of the board who made the rate (R. v. Derbyshire JJ. (1855), 19 J. P. 772); nor as to the purpose to which the rate was to be applied (Luton L. B. v. Davis (1860), 29 L. J. M. C. 173; 24 J. P. 677; see also Sandgate L. B. v. Pledge, p. 567, post). In fact, the duties of justices resembled their duties in enforcing a poor rate.

In Stirk v. Halifax Assessment Committee, [1922] 1 K. B. 264, it was held that a valuation list which purported to amend the existing valuation of certain classes of property by an addition of 25 per cent. all round, was bad. But notwithstanding this it was held that the justices on a summons to enforce payment of the rate made on such list, had no jurisdiction to refuse to issue their distress warrant (Shillito v. Hinchcliffe, [1922] W. N., p. 149). But quære, Whether this applies to proceedings to enforce a general district rate, having regard to the provisions of the above section.

Notwithstanding the alteration in the text the justices, to a great extent at any rate, still act ministerially, and have not unfettered discretion to determine when rates are or are not paid; and it is for the urban authority to remit for poverty. See s. 225, ante, p. 506. As to whether justices can grant time to a ratepayer or order payment by instalments, see an article at 75 J. P. N. 193. The point appears to be doubtful. Reference should be made to the cases in the preceding paragraph and infra, and on p. 566, post, for decisions as to what defences are open to a ratepayer before justices: but it may be well to refer here to the language of JAMES, L.J., in Ex parte Neath and Brecon Rail. Co. (1874), L. R. 9 Ch. 263; "By the courtesy of Parliament when dealing with courts of justice, the word 'lawful' is used, but when it is said that it shall be lawful for the court to do a certain thing, it means that it shall be done, and it is in fact unlawful to do anything else." In Julius v. Oxford (Bishop of) (1880), 5 App. Cas. 214; 44 J. P. 600, Lord CAIRNS, L.C., said that "where a power is deposited with a public officer for the purpose of being used for the benefit of persons who are specifically pointed out, and with regard to whom a definition is supplied by the legislature of the conditions upon which they are entitled to call for its exercise, that power ought to be exercised, and the court will require it to be exercised."

As already stated, the "order" here required was a new provision, and was not required by the previous statute (R. v. Tottenham L. B., Ex parte Perry (1860), 24 J. P. 87; 1 L. T. 413). It was therefore held that justices in acting under that statute were not affected by the limitation of time imposed by the S. J. A., 1848, s. 11 (Sweetman v. Guest (1868), L. R. 3 Q. B. 262; 32 J. P. 212). The necessity for an order under the present section brings in the limit of time prescribed by the S. J. A., 1848, s. 11. That section takes effect in every case where upon a complaint a justice is authorised by law to make an order, and requires the complaint to be made within six calendar months from the time when the matter of such complaint arose. As (except in cases of "quitting") no ground for making a complaint arises till 14 days after demand, it would appear that complaint for these rates must be laid within a period of six months plus 14 days after they have been demanded, as required by this section (see Elliott v. Russell, on p. 133, ante). It is provided, however, by the Rates (Proceedings for Recovery) Act, 1914 (4 & 5 Geo. 5, c. 85), that s. 11 shall not apply to any proceedings for the recovery of any rate when the institution of the proceedings has been deferred by the rating authority for the purpose of allowing time to persons who by reason of circumstances attributable directly or indirectly to the War are temporarily unable to pay the rate. It should be observed that there is no limit of time within which a demand must be made (see Keeton v. Sheffield Coal Co. (1901), 70 L. J. K. B. 374; 65 J. P. 341). In this case, after the rate was demanded, the assessment was reduced, and thereupon an amended demand was made. It was held that the six months ran from the time of the amended, and not of the original, demand.

In R. v. Hannam (1886), 34 W. R. 355, the Court of Appeal held that on an application before justices for payment of a rate under this section, the rate being good on the face of it, and the property in respect of which the occupier is rated being within the district of the local authority, the justices' duty is merely ministerial, and they have no jurisdiction to inquire into the validity of the rate. The judgment of BOWEN, L.J., in this case is worthy of careful perusal, as stating in a concise form the chief exceptions to the general rule that justices are bound to enforce a rate good upon the face of it, e.g., non-occupation (R. v. Bradshaw (1860), 2 El. & El. 836; R. v. Bagshawe (1896), 75 L. T. 513); and where the property is outside the district of the rating authority (Walker v. G. W. Rail. Co. (1859), 2 El. & El. 325; Baglan Bay Tin Plate Co. v. John (1895), 72 L. T. 805; but see R. v. Jefferson (1884), 48 J. P. 393); the Lord Justice reserved his opinion whether there would not be another exception in the case of an exemption from rating under a public general statute. As to this last point, see Bates v. Plumstead Overseers (1895), 64 L. J. M. C. 127; 59 J. P. 118; Rayner v. Drewitt (1900), 64 J. P. 567; 82 L. T. 718; and see also Wixon v. Thomas, [1911] 1 K. B. 43; 75 J. P. 58, where it was held that the fact of premises being in the occupation of the Crown may be accepted by justices as a reason for not enforcing a poor rate. A dispute as to the liability of a railway company under their special Act to make good a deficiency of rates may be entertained (Overseers of St. Stephen, Coleman Street v. Great Northern and City Rail. Co. (1902), 86 L. T. 390; 66 J. P. 373). See also on this subject, articles at 78 J. P. N. 301, 315.

In Whenman v. Clark, [1916] 1 K. B. 94; 80 J. P. 128, it was held that a Court of Summary Jurisdiction (upon an application to them for an order for payment under this section) has jurisdiction to entertain the question whether the occupier by reason of a public Act is exempt from being rated, the facts not being in dispute. And per SWINFEN EADY and PICKFORD, L.JJ.: it is a good working rule, provided there is no dispute as to facts, that justices upon such an application have jurisdiction to entertain a defence that the defendant ought not to have been rated at all, or, if rateable at all, ought not to be rated upon the full rateable value. Reference might be made to an interesting discussion upon the last mentioned decision in Stevenson v. Orr, [1916] 2 I. R. 619.

Where there is occupation of part only of the property rated the remedy is by appeal against the rate, and justices must as a rule issue a warrant to enforce payment (Manchester (Overseers of) v. Headlam (1888), 21 Q. B. D. 96; 52 J. P. 517). The test appears to be whether it is possible to satisfy the description in the rate book without including property not occupied by the defendant (Margate Corporation v. Pettman (1912), 106 L. T. 104; 76 J. P. 145). See also Langford v. Cole (1910), 102 L. T. 808; 74 J. P. 229, and Curzon v. Westminster Corporation (1916), 80 J. P. 468; 14 L. G. R. 1112, in both of which cases, the ratepayer not being in occupation of the whole of the property rated, it was held that a distress warrant ought not to have been issued.

In cases arising out of "passive resistance," it has been held that where a ratepayer tenders a portion of a poor rate which is refused, and the amount tendered is again tendered before the justices and again refused by the overseers, the justices have a discretion whether they will issue a distress warrant for the whole rate or require the overseers to accept the sum tendered, and issue a warrant for the balance (R. v. Gillespie, [1904] 1 K. B. 174; 68 J. P. 11; Ex parte Wyles (1903), 73 L. J. K. B. 112 n.; 68 J. P. 13).

In Sheffield Waterworks Co. v. Mayor, etc. of Sheffield (1885), 55 L. J. M. C. 40; 50 J. P. 6, the respondents summoned the appellants to recover payment of a general district rate on certain property of the appellants. The rate was made, as regards some of the appellants' property on the basis of a supplemental valuation list, and as regards the remainder on the basis of the valuations on which the previous rates had been made. After the rate had been demanded and before the summons was issued, the assessment committee reduced the net rateable value of the hereditaments and premises occupied by the appellants:—Held, that sufficient cause was shown for non-payment of the rate within the meaning of this section. The court distinguished Sandgate L. B. v. Pledge, post, p. 567, on the ground that in that case the validity of the rate was sought to be impeached, while here only a wrong amount had been demanded. It is obvious, therefore, that in similar cases an authority ought to amend their rates under s. 221, ante, p. 503, and proceed only for the reduced amount.

For a case in which it was held that sufficient cause had been shown by overseers as regards precepts served upon them by the guardians, see Tynemouth Union (Guardians of) v. Backworth (Overseers of), cited in the notes to s. 231, ante, p. 519. It would seem that an owner may show cause if summoned for rates as an owner under s. 211 by proving that the rated premises are assessed at a sum greater than the prescribed amount, and that therefore the occupier is rateable (Norwood (Overseers of) v. Salter, [1892] 2 Q. B. 118; 56 J. P. 535).

The fact that the property rated was at a distance of three miles from any of the paving, lighting, or drainage for which the rate was made, was held to be no sufficient cause for non-payment (Newport (Mayor, etc. of) v. Lang (1892), 57 J. P. 199).

After a poor rate and a district rate had been made, a ratepayer gave notice to the assessment committee of an objection to his assessment. After hearing the objection the committee raised his assessment, and amended demands were served claiming rates upon such increased assessment. The ratepayer paid the amounts originally named in the rates and originally demanded. It was held that the committee had no power to increase the assessment, and that a distress warrant for the balance was properly refused (Hudson v. Rhodes, [1909] 1 K. B. 85; 73 J. P. 66).

In Rochdale Building Society v. Mayor, etc. of Rochdale (1886), 51 J. P. 134, commissioners made a rate in 1876 on P., an owner, for improvement expenses, and he paid part thereof and died. At the date of the rate P. had executed a mortgage to B., who entered into possession in 1882. In 1885 the justices issued a distress warrant against B. for the unpaid rate made on P. :—Held, that the justices had no power to issue a distress warrant against B., who was not named in the rate.

In January, 1907, upon an appeal against a general district rate made by the Thornton U. D. C., the Court of Appeal held that the B. & F. Tramway Co. were rateable in respect of their tramroad upon one-fourth only of its value, and this decision was subsequently affirmed (see p. 489, ante). In June, 1907, a neighbouring urban council made a district rate in which they rated another portion of the same tramroad at its full value and demanded payment. On a summons to enforce payment the company contended that they were liable to pay on one-fourth part only of the net annual value of the tramroad, and that a distress warrant should not be granted for the full amount. The justices held that the company had shown sufficient cause for non-payment of the full amount, and they reduced the rate and made an order for the reduced amount, which was demanded and paid. The council obtained a special case but withdrew it owing to failure to comply with the C. O. rules. A rule nisi was then obtained calling upon the justices to show cause why they should not hear and determine an application for the issue of a distress warrant for the full amount of the rate. It was held that, whether the justices were or were not entitled to make an order for a less amount than that appearing on the face of the rate, the court would not in the circumstances issue a mandamus to them to issue a distress warrant for the full amount (R. v. Shuttleworth and Others (1908), 72 J. P. 329). In June, 1908, the same council made another rate, rating the tramroad at one-fourth only. On a summons to enforce payment of this rate (£447), it was proved that whilst the company's original appeal (begun in 1904) against the Thornton U. D. C. claiming to be rated as a railway was pending, the council now concerned made rates in 1905 and 1906, in which the company were rated in full for the tramroad, and not at one-fourth, which would have reduced their liability from £1,056 to £596. It was also proved that in August, 1905, the council undertook to refund to the company the difference, if they were successful in their appeal. The company consequently paid the full amount of £1,056, and had thus made an over-payment of £460. It was held, that they had shown sufficient cause for non-payment of the rate dated June, 1908 (Blackpool and Fleetwood Tramway Co., Ltd. v. Bispham-with-Norbreck U. D. C., [1910] 1 K. B. 592; 74 J. P. 141). In July, 1907, a third urban council made general and special improvement rates in which they rated another portion of the same tramroad at the full value instead of at one-fourth. The company, relying on the decision in the Thornton U. D. C. Case, claimed to pay only on one-fourth; and it was held that sufficient cause had been shown to justify the bench in refusing a distress warrant for the full amount (Dixon v. Blackpool & Fleetwood Tramway Co., [1909] 1 K. B. 860; 73 J. P. 219).

As to the recovery of a number of local rates of different kinds in the same summons, see the Poor Rates Recovery Act, 1862; the P. H. A., 1890, s. 8, post; the P. H. A., 1907, s. 8, post, and R. v. Glover (1900), 35 L. J. N. 269, where it was held that a poor rate and general district rate could be included in one summons.

For a case where damages were recovered for wrongful distress put in after payment in pursuance of an order, see Mutton v. Hornsey U. D. C., Times, April 15th, 1899; and see Atkins v. Hutton (1910), 74 J. P. 329, as to the civil liability of a landlord who, having agreed with his tenant to pay the rates, fails to do so, with the result that the tenant is imprisoned. See also on this point Reigate Corporation v. Wilkinson (1920), 84 J. P. 17.

It would seem that an appeal to quarter sessions against the order lies under s. 269, post, p. 599. In the case of a poor rate an appeal lies against the levy of distress but not before actual levy against the issuing of the warrant (R. v. London JJ., Ex parte Bayne, [1899] 1 Q. B. 532; 63 J. P. 388; R. v. Lindsey JJ. [1912] 2 K. B. 413; 76 J. P. 311).

A special case may be stated by justices under the S. J. A., 1879, s. 33, upon an application to enforce payment of a general district rate under this section. Where, however, a rate is good upon the face of it, the justices may not refuse to make an order for payment on the ground that there is a concurrent rate made for the same purpose (Sandgate L. B. v. Pledge (1885), 14 Q. B. D. 730; 49 J. P. 342).

Note to Section 256.

An application to a court of summary jurisdiction for an order to enforce payment of a general district rate under the text is not a criminal cause or matter, and therefore an appeal lies to the Court of Appeal from the judgment of the High Court upon a case stated by the court of summary jurisdiction (Southwark and Vauxhall Water Co. v. Hampton U. D. C., [1899] 1 Q. B. 273 ; 63 J. P. 100).

By s. 33 of the Criminal Justice Administration Act, 1914, the provisions of the Summary Jurisdiction Acts, relating to the backing of warrants, and of s. 41 of the Summary Jurisdiction Act, 1879, relating to the proof of service of documents, and of the handwriting and seal on documents, shall apply to the proceedings in respect of the non-payment of any rate.

By the Bills of Sale Act, 1882, s. 14, a bill of sale is no protection against the seizure of goods for poor and parochial rates. But the general district rate of an urban authority is not a tax or poor or other parochial rate within the meaning of that section (Richards v. Kidderminster Overseers, [1896] 2 Ch. 212). It had previously been held that the section did not apply where proceedings had been taken in the county court under s. 261, post, p. 581 (Wimbledon L. B. v. Underwood, [1892] 1 Q. B. 836 ; 56 J. P. 633). For a case where, upon a distress for rates, it was held that there had been a bonâ fide sale of chattels, and that a document was not a bill of sale, see Prudential Mortgage Co., Ltd. v. Marylebone Borough Council (1909), 8 L. G. R. 901. As to the recovery of rates upon tithe rent-charge, see the Tithe Act, 1891, s. 6, and Roberts v. Potts ; Jones v. Cooke, [1894] 1 Q. B. 213 ; 58 J. P. 333. And see also the Ecclesiastical Tithe Rent-charge (Rates) Act, 1920. As to the recovery of rates in case of bankruptcy or liquidation, see Bankruptcy Act, 1914 (4 & 5 Geo. 5, c. 59) s. 33, and the Companies Act, 1908, in App. I., post, Vol. II.

An assistant overseer has no authority to accept payment of poor rates in the form of bills of exchange accepted by the ratepayer ; and a ratepayer cannot plead payment if the assistant overseer applies such bills to his own purposes (Smith v. Barham (1887), 51 J. P. 581). By fraudulently representing that a rate had been made, an assistant overseer obtained from the respondents payment of the amount of the imaginary rate. He paid the amount into his banking account, and then out of it transferred to the overseers, in payment of prior rates previously collected from other ratepayers, but not accounted for, a sum nearly as large as the sum paid to him by the respondents. A rate for the period in respect of which the respondents had made the payment was subsequently made, the amount due from the respondents being the same as that already paid by them. On an application by the overseers against the respondents for a distress warrant on the ground of non-payment of the rate, the justices found that the overseers had received the proceeds or the greater part of the proceeds of the payment made by the respondents, and refused to issue a distress warrant. It was held, that there was no evidence that the respondents had paid the rate in question, and that the justices were not, on the ground of payment, entitled to refuse to issue a warrant (Hornchurch Overseers v. L. T. and S. Rail. Co. (1912), 76 J. P. 385 ; 107 L. T. 293).

Where a person was induced, by a false statement that rates had been made and were due, to pay money to a rate collector by cheque crossed generally and marked not negotiable, and the collector cashed such cheque at a bank where he had been in the habit of cashing cheques for rates, but where he had no account, it was held that the bank was not protected by the Bills of Exchange Act, 1882, s. 82, and were liable for the amount of the cheque to the person defrauded (G. W. Rail. Co. v. London and County Banking Co., [1901] A. C. 414). See further as to this point the notes to s. 195, p. 461, ante.

Recovery of expenses by local authority from owners.

257. Where any local authority have incurred expenses for the repayment whereof the owner of the premises for or in respect of which the same are incurred is made liable under this Act (a) or by any agreement with the local authority, such expenses may be recovered, together with interest at a rate (b) not exceeding five pounds per centum per annum, from the date of service of a demand for the same (c) till payment thereof, from any person who is the owner (d) of such premises when the works are completed for which such expenses have been incurred, and until recovery of such expenses and interest the same shall be a charge on the premises in respect of which they were incurred (e). In all summary proceedings by a local authority for the recovery of expenses incurred by them in works of private improvement, the time within which such proceedings may be taken shall be reckoned from the date of the service of notice of demand (f). Section 257.

Where such expenses have been settled and apportioned by the surveyor of the local authority as payable by such owner, such apportionment shall be binding and conclusive on such owner, unless within three months from service of notice on him by the local authority or their surveyor of the amount settled by the surveyor to be due from such owner, he shall by written notice dispute the same (g).

The local authority may, by order (h), declare any such expenses to be payable by annual instalments within a period not exceeding thirty years, with interest at a rate not exceeding five pounds per centum per annum, until the whole amount is paid; and any such instalments and interest, or any part thereof, may be recovered in a summary manner (i) from the owner or occupier for the time being of such premises, and may be deducted from the rent of such premises, in the same proportions as are allowed in the case of private improvement rates under this Act (k).

(a) See ss. 23, 36, 41, 62, 150, 158, ante. See also various sections of subsequent Acts which are to be read with this Act, e.g., the P. H. A., 1890, ss. 19, 35; the Private Street Works Act, 1892, s. 13, etc.

(b) It is not clear who is to settle the amount of this rate. Probably the justices or the court. The owner cannot claim to deduct income tax from the interest (Gateshead Corporation v. Lumsden, [1914] 2 K. B. 883; 78 J. P. 283).

(c) This supplies an omission in previous legislation, which was referred to in Wallingford (or Wallington) v. Willes (1864), 16 C. B. (N.S.) 797; 33 L. J. M. C. 233, as to the commencement of the interest. As to what is a sufficient demand, see Wilson v. Bolton Corporation (1872), L. R. 7 Q. B. 105.

(d) See the definition of owner in s. 4, ante, p. 8. And see R. v. Swindon L. B., and other cases cited therewith on pp. 310, 311.

As to summary proceedings for the recovery of paving expenses under s. 150, see that section and the notes thereunder at pp. 286 et seq., ante.

(e) Though the owner is personally liable in so far as summary proceedings may be taken against him, yet the words of the text, which make the expenses a charge on the premises, do not create a personal liability. Accordingly the Court of Appeal refused leave to prove for them in an administration action (West v. Downman, ante, p. 305).

Remedies of local authority: Charge.

This section "imposes a charge on the premises immediately the expenses have been incurred, and there is no limitation of time during which that charge is to remain effective. The condition upon which the charge is made to arise is nothing but this, 'where the local board have incurred expenses for the repayment whereof the owner is made liable.' Directly, therefore, the local board have incurred such expenses, the section must be read as if immediately after that, there came these words, 'such expenses shall be a charge on the premises.' Therefore, directly from the moment the expenses which are named in that section have been incurred, such expenses are a charge on the premises, that is, the charge is imposed then and there by the statute. Moreover, the phrase is grammatically a phrase of addition, because the earlier part of the section names the other remedies to which the board may resort, and it adds the words 'and such expenses shall be a charge on the premises.' Therefore, it seems to me that, upon the reading of that section, this is a charge the moment the expenses are incurred, and it is a charge which exists although other remedies exist at the same moment that that commences, or other remedies may by different processes be made to arise either as against the owner, who is, in the first place, the person liable, or as against other persons. It is true that the owner is liable to another remedy the moment the expenses have been incurred which he ought to have defrayed himself. There is a remedy against him personally for the whole sum, which remedy is to be enforced within six months; but if the board claim the whole payment from him at once, yet fail to recover it from him personally, and there are no means of recovering it from him by distress, or if they pass by the personal remedy, then, if they have done nothing to prevent them from putting the charge into effect, I see no reason why the charge might not then and there be put into effect for the whole sum as against the owner. But the board has also the power of causing other remedies as against other persons to arise. They may declare the expenses to be private improvement expenses (see ss. 150, 213). That is the first resolution which they may pass. Having done that, they may deal with that in one of two ways. Having declared the expenses to be private improvement expenses, they may make a private improvement rate, and if they do so, they at once have a remedy against the occupier, and they may distrain upon the occupier, and the occupier is given a remedy over against the owner to a certain extent. If they do make a private improvement rate, they can only put their remedies upon that rate into effect under what are called Jervis's Acts; and if they do attempt to put their remedy into effect against the occupier they are at once as against him limited in time. They may not only attempt to use the summary remedy, but, as it was said, may, up to a certain amount, sue in the county court, and then the decision in Tottenham L. B. v. Rowell (1876), 1 Ex. D. 514, which, if I may venture to say so, was perfectly right, is that the same limit of time applies. But that limit only affects remedies which they have as against the occupier or owner personally by summary proceedings. Well, having declared those expenses to be private improvement expenses, there is another mode in which they may deal with it. They may come to a resolution that the whole sum shall be divided into instalments and spread over a certain number of years, not exceeding thirty. If they do that, that at once gives them remedies against the occupier and against the owner. Having made the sum payable by instalments, I incline to agree that it makes the Act more reasonable and more fair, to say that they could not retract that and insist, either by putting the charge into effect or otherwise, upon an immediate payment of the whole. Having once made the sum payable by instalments, it must so remain; but then, it being payable by instalments, they have a summary remedy against the occupier or against the owner as each instalment falls due. Although they have all these remedies they may be ineffectual, because the occupier may be unable to pay, the owner may be unable to pay, there may not be sufficient to enable them to recover by distress; all those remedies may fail, but if they do fail, it seems to me that there is nothing which, upon the failure of these remedies, has done away with that charge, which existed from the beginning, and which is not limited in time upon the arising of any condition subsequent by any words in the Act from the beginning to the end; but when the payment has come to be payment by instalments, then I think that if the charge is to be made effective it could only be made effective for instalments in arrear. . . . All the remedies which are either existing at the time when the charge takes effect, or which are, by following the forms of the statute, made to arise after the charge has taken effect, have nothing to do with the charge—they make it neither greater nor less. If these remedies fail, or are not put into effect, nevertheless the charge which exists absolutely independent of them, may always be made effective by the process of the court, and there is no limitation of time as to that, except, I suppose, the ordinary Statutes of Limitation": per BRETT, L.J., in Tottenham L. B. v. Rowell (1880), 15 Ch. D. 378.

Time for enforcing charge

The period of limitation within which an action to enforce a charge on the premises must be brought, is twelve years (Real Property Limitation Act, 1874, s. 8); and the time begins to run from the date of the completion of the works, not from the date of the apportionment (Hornsey L. B. v. Monarch Investment Building Society (1889), 24 Q. B. D. 1; 54 J. P. 391).

Time when charge takes effect.

The charge takes effect on the completion of the works. See Tottenham L. B. v. Rowell, supra, and Newcastle-upon-Tyne (Mayor, etc. of) v. Houseman (1898), 63 J. P. 85. Leasehold houses in an urban district abutting partly on a private road were sold under an open contract. At the date of the sale works had been done by the local board under s. 150; the final demand for payment of the sums apportioned in respect of the premises was served after the purchase ought to have been completed. It was held that as between the vendor and purchaser the expenses were payable by the vendor (Re Bettesworth and Richer's Contract (1888), 37 Ch. D. 535; 52 J. P. 740). It was otherwise held in the metropolis, for there the expenses are not charged on the premises (Egg v. Blayney (1888), 21 Q. B. D. 107; 52 J. P. 517; and see Re Field, W. N. (1888), p. 36). The charge given by the Private Street Works Act, 1892, s. 13, post, like that under the text, takes effect on the completion of the works. If, therefore, premises are sold by the owner free from incumbrances after the completion of the works but before the date of final apportionment, the vendor must indemnify the purchaser against the sum finally apportioned in respect of the premises (Stock v. Meakin, [1900] 1 Ch. 683). This case was followed in Surtees v. Woodhouse, [1903] 1 K. B. 396; 67 J. P. 232, under the following circumstances: By a covenant in a lease the lessee covenanted that he would during the term pay and bear all present and future rates, etc., charged upon the demised premises, or the owner or occupier in respect thereof. It was held that the covenant did not apply to expenses incurred under the Act of 1892, which had become a charge on the completion of the works before the date of the commencement of the term granted by the lease, but which were not payable until after that date. This decision was followed in Lumby v. Faupel (1904), 68 J. P. 265; 90 L. T. 140. Stock v. Meakin, supra, was distinguished in a case as to a "betterment" charge under a London Improvement Act. See Re Farrer and Gilbert's Contract, [1914] 1 Ch. 125.

In In re Allen and Driscoll's Contract, [1904] 2 Ch. 226; 68 J. P. 469, the question as to the date when the charge takes effect again came up for consideration, it being argued that the point did not expressly arise in any of the above cases. The Court of Appeal held, however, that it was in each of those cases essential for the court to determine that date, and it was again held that expenses become a charge on the premises in respect of which they are incurred "as from the date of the completion of the works."

By the leases of two houses abutting on a private road, the lessee covenanted to pay all rates and taxes and to keep up the road. In 1882, the lessee executed a deed of gift of the two houses to his son upon trust for the father for life, he paying "all outgoings and performing the covenants in the leases," and after his death upon trust for the son absolutely. In 1884 the local board served notices on the father under s. 150, requiring him to make up the portions of the road on which the houses abutted; but the notice was not complied with, and the board themselves did the work, which was completed in February, 1885. In June, 1885, the father died, and the son entered into possession of the houses. In 1886 the son was served with notices of apportionment of the expenses, and in 1887 with demands and orders for payment of the assessed amounts by instalments, with interest:—Held, in an action by the son claiming repayment out of his father's estate—(1) that the expenses were not a debt due from the father's estate, inasmuch as the relation of debtor and creditor was not created by the P. H. A., 1875, between the board and an owner of property for expenses incurred by the board; and (2) that the charge of the expenses under s. 257 could not be recovered by the son against the estate of the tenant for life (In re Boor, Boor v. Hopkins (1889), 40 Ch. D. 572; 53 J. P. 467). With the above decisions upon the point as to when a charge under s. 257 takes effect may be contrasted Tubbs v. Wynne, ante, p. 197, where, default having been made in complying with a magistrate's order under the Metropolitan Building Acts, it was held that the expenses of the works became a liability from the date of the magistrate's order. And see In re Barney, Harrison v. Barney, at p. 190, ante.

Charge affects total ownership.

The charge is one, not on the interest of any particular owner of the premises, but on the total ownership, that is to say, on the respective interest of every owner for the time being in proportion to the value of his interest. Therefore, where the owner of leasehold premises had mortgaged them for the full term less a nominal reversion, it was held that the mortgagee was liable, and JESSEL, M.R., declared the sum claimed with interest to be a charge on the mortgagee's interest in the premises (Birmingham (Corporation of) v. Baker (1881), 17 Ch. D. 782; 46 J. P. 52).

Note to Section 257.

For a case under a local Act where an owner was required to attend in chambers for examination as to other charges on the property and a writ of attachment was issued on his failure to do so, see Tottenham U. D. C. v. Neilson & Co. (1915), 79 J. P. 504.

The word "owner" in s. 150 and in the above section does not include a person who has the benefit of a covenant restricting the use of the premises in respect of which expenses for street improvements have been incurred. Therefore where an authority had obtained a charge under this section on a piece of land which was subject to a covenant restricting the owner thereof from building on it, it was held that they were not entitled to an order for sale of the land free from such restrictive covenant. The court distinguished Birmingham (Corporation of) v. Baker, ante, p. 571 (Tendring Union (Guardians of) v. Dowton, [1891] 3 Ch. 265).

Under the School Sites Act, 1841, s. 6, a piece of land was conveyed in the form given in s. 10 to trustees for ever for the purposes of the Act as a site for a national school and for no other purpose whatever; and a national school was afterwards erected upon it. The local authority under s. 150 made up a street on part of which the school premises abutted, and served the trustees with notice to pay the apportioned expenses. It was held by the Court of Appeal that the trustees were liable for these expenses as "owners" within the meaning of the Act, and that therefore the expenses were until recovery thereof a charge on the premises under s. 257, but that the authority could not enforce the charge by order for sale since such an order would be a contravention of the School Sites Act, 1841 (Hornsey U. D. C. v. Smith, [1897] 1 Ch. 843).

Incidence of costs.

Where a tenant for life has paid the expenses out of his own pocket he is entitled to keep the charge alive in his own favour, and to raise the amount by mortgage of the settled land under the Settled Land Act, 1890, s. 11 (In re Smith's Settled Estates, [1901] 1 Ch. 689). See also as to the incidence of the cost of drainage and paving expenses as regards settled estates, the notes to s. 104. For a case under a local Act relating to an improvement charge as to which an apportionment was claimed as between freehold and leasehold interests, see Holborn and Frascati, Ltd. v. L. C. C. (1916), 80 J. P. 225; 14 L. G. R. 538.

Action to enforce charge: service of process where owner unknown.

A local authority, being unable to find an owner in default under s. 150, purported to commence an action in the county court to enforce their charge. In their plaint note they described the defendant as "the owner of plot, No. 188, Canning Road, W." An order for substituted service on the defendant by advertisement was then obtained on an affidavit by the plaintiffs' surveyor that he had made repeated efforts, but had failed, to ascertain the present owner of the plot, and that notices of apportionment and of a demand for payment had been posted on the land. Subsequently an order was made that the expenses and interest were a charge upon the land, and that the plaintiffs were to be at liberty to sell the premises, and a further order was made declaring that upon such sale the owner of the plot should be a trustee for the purchaser within the meaning of the Trustee Act, 1893, and that the plaintiffs be appointed to convey the land for the estate of the said owner. A purchaser objected to the title and refused to complete. It was held that the order for substituted service and the orders based thereon were bad (Wealdstone U. D. C. v. Evershed (1905), 69 J. P. 258; 3 L. G. R. 722).

Jurisdiction of High Court.

It was held by the Court of Appeal that an action could not be maintained in the High Court to enforce a charge under this section for a sum less than £10 (Westbury-on-Severn R. S. A. v. Meredith (1885), 30 Ch. D. 387).

Notice under s. 150 a condition precedent.

The plaintiffs incurred expenses in paving a street without having served a notice under s. 150 upon the then owners of certain premises. Subsequently they brought an action against the defendants, the present owners, to enforce a charge upon the premises under this section. It was proved that B., a predecessor in title of the defendants, had taken from the plaintiffs a receipt for payment of an instalment of the same expenses. It was held that the plaintiffs were not entitled to the declaration claimed, for service of the notice was a condition precedent to liability on the part of the defendants, and the payment by B. could not operate as a waiver of the omission (Farnworth L. B. v. Compton (1886), 34 W. R. 334; and see Bacup (Corporation of) v. Smith (1890), 44 Ch. D. 395; Hackett v. Smith, [1917] 2 I. R. 508).

See also Bristol Corporation v. Sinnott, noted at p. 303, ante, where a claim for a charge failed because of the insufficiency of the preliminary notice.

Note to Section 257.

It was held that the charge might be enforced against an owner of premises for the time being, although he was not the owner at the time the works were completed, and although the authority had omitted to enforce their summary remedy against the then owner (Sunderland (Mayor of) v. Alcock (1882), 51 L. J. Ch. 546); and see East London Waterworks Co. v. Kellerman, [1892] 2 Q. B. 72; 56 J. P. 773; as to the liability of a purchaser in respect of a charge under 50 & 51 Vict. c. 21, s. 4 (in App. I., post, Vol. II.), for arrears of water rates.

Charge continues on premises in hands of owner "for the time being."

In 1879 the owner of premises abutting on H. street and E. street, Blackburn, mortgaged them to the defendant. In 1880 the plaintiff corporation paved H. street, and in 1881 the mortgagor, in accordance with the provisions of the Blackburn Improvement Act, 1870, executed a charge on the premises in favour of the corporation for the payment by instalments of his share of the expenses. In 1882, and prior to the commencement of the Blackburn Improvement Act, 1882, the corporation paved E. street; and in 1883 the mortgagor further charged his premises, in accordance with the Act of 1882, with the payment by instalments of the expenses. The mortgagor made default in payment of the instalments, and on his death in 1883 the defendant took possession of the premises under his mortgage. In an action by the corporation against him to recover the unpaid instalments under s. 247 of their Act of 1882, which entitles the corporation to institute an action at law against "successive owners" of premises for the recovery of the expenses of paving streets, it was held that the defendant, being mortgagee in possession, was a "successive owner"; that the execution of a charge in favour of the corporation did not preclude them from their remedy by action; and that the Act of 1882 was applicable to the recovery of expenses incurred prior to its commencement (Blackburn Corporation v. Micklethwait (1886), 50 J. P. 550; 54 L. T. 539).

Recovery under local Act against successive owners.

On the hearing of a summons for expenses under s. 150, the defendant contended that the sewer was not one for which owners could be made liable, that the road was a highway, and that it was not a street. The magistrate dismissed the summons, but it did not appear on what ground. Afterwards the surveyor made a new apportionment, under which the sum apportioned as the defendant's share was less than that formerly claimed. The local board brought an action under s. 257 to have the sum declared a charge on the premises. The court gave judgment for the plaintiffs for the amount of the second apportionment. They held that they were not estopped by the magistrate's decision, as the grounds of it did not appear; that the magistrate had not, as was suggested, jurisdiction to finally decide whether the street was a highway (R. v. Hutchins, ante, p. 294), and that there was power to make a second apportionment (Manchester (Mayor and Corporation of) v. Hampson (1886), 3 T. L. R. 466; 35 W. R. 334). The Court of Appeal agreed that there was no estoppel, the matter not being res judicata, and that the surveyor had power to make a new apportionment; they, however, ordered a new trial on defendant's counsel stating that they had evidence to show that the street was a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large (35 W. R. 591).

By a special Act, which was to be read together with the P. H. A., 1875, as one Act, a local authority were empowered to apportion the "estimated expenses" of sewering, paving, and other works in a street among frontagers, and recover the expenses so apportioned either before the work was commenced, during its progress, or after its completion, by action at law or summary proceedings, and if the actual expenses were less than the estimated sum, the difference was to be paid to the frontagers who had paid such sum, or whose property might have been "charged therewith":—Held, that the right conferred by s. 257 of the P. H. A., 1875, to charge the property of frontagers with expenses incurred was not, by virtue of the above provisions of the special Act, extended to estimated expenses (Mayor, etc. of West Ham v. Grant (1888), 40 Ch. D. 331).

The expenses in respect of which a charge is given by this section are not land charges within the meaning of the Land Charges Registration and Searches Act, 1888, so as to require registration under that Act (R. v. Land Registry (Vice-Registrar of) (1889), 24 Q. B. D. 178; 54 J. P. 120). But where the Private Street Works Act, 1892, has been adopted, a register of charges under that Act must be kept by the authority: see ibid., s. 13 (2), post, p. 884.

Registration of charges.

(f) As to the limitation of time for summary proceedings, see note (l) to s. 150, ante, at p. 305. But there is no limitation of the time within which a demand must be made (Wortley v. St. Mary, Islington (Vestry of) (1886), 51 J. P. 166; Hampstead Borough Council v. Caunt, [1903] 2 K. B. 1; 67 J. P. 344).

Time limit.

Note to Section 257.

It is only upon this notice that the board can recover summarily, and that appeal lies to the M. of H. under s. 268, post, p. 595. See per BRETT, L.J., in R. v. Local Government Board, in notes to s. 268, post, at p. 596.

Conclusiveness of apportionment.

(g) With reference to the conclusive character of the apportionment, see Cook v. Ipswich L. B., ante, p. 306; Shanklin L. B. v. Millar, ante, p. 311; Tunbridge Wells L. B. v. Akroyd, ante, p. 313; Hesketh v. Atherton L. B., ante, p. 306; Manchester (Mayor of) v. Hampson, ante, p. 311; Sandgate L. B. v. Keene, ante, p. 312. From these cases it would seem that failure to dispute the apportionment does not prevent the owner, when before the justices, from disputing his liability in toto, but that where his objection is only to part of the sum apportioned, so that there is jurisdiction as to the residue, that objection can only be taken by way of objection to the apportionment under this section. See per SMITH, J., in Bournemouth Commissioners v. Watts, ante, p. 307; Midland Rail. Co. v. Watton, ante, p. 307. In the latter case it was held that when the apportionment has not been disputed, it is no answer to summary proceedings that the defendant has been charged in respect of a greater extent of frontage than he possesses. And see also Eccles v. Wirral Sanitary Authority, ante, p. 306.

This dispute is to be settled by arbitration. See s. 150, note (o), ante, p. 312, as to arbitrations arising under that section.

In Re Stoker and Morpeth Corporation, [1915] 2 K. B. 511; 79 J. P. 201, an apportionment had been made under s. 150 to which a frontager gave notice of objection whereupon the local authority appointed an arbitrator. The frontager did not appoint an arbitrator within fourteen days as required by s. 180 (ante), but within that time withdrew his objection disputing the apportionment. The arbitration then proceeded ex parte and upon an action to set aside the award it was held that a frontager who had not appointed an arbitrator to act for him was entitled to withdraw his notice disputing the apportionment within fourteen days. The arbitrator had therefore no power to act and the award was a nullity.

Non-applicability of paragraph if no apportionment necessary.

Where no apportionment is necessary, e.g., where expenses have been incurred by an authority under the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, s. 75, in erecting a hoarding in front of a dangerous building, the second paragraph of s. 257 as to the time for disputing apportionments has no application (Usk U. D. C. v. Mortimer (1903), 90 L. T. 25; 68 J. P. 38. See also Bower v. Caistor R. D. C. (1911), 75 J. P. 186).

Order for instalments.

(h) This is an alternative provision to that in s. 213, which deals with private improvement rates. That section enables an authority to make a rate on the occupier for these expenses. This section enables the authority to make an order on the owner for the same, and to charge the amount on the premises, the amount to be payable by annual instalments, and the rate of interest to be settled by themselves. It would seem that the authority must in the first instance decide which course they will adopt (see Wilson v. Bolton (Mayor of), ante, p. 314), but their decision will not affect their right to enforce the charge on the premises created by the first paragraph of the section, at any rate in respect of payments due and in arrear: see the judgment of BRETT, L.J., in note (e), supra.

An urban authority, after giving notice to N. to pave, etc., a new street, did the work at a cost of £4,758, to defray which they borrowed, with the sanction of the L. G. B., money at 4 per cent. The sum apportioned on N. was £2,412, and the authority duly resolved to make the sum payable by instalments during twenty years with interest at £5 per cent. On non-payment of an instalment by N.:—Held, the justices were right in enforcing payment, and were not bound to allow the objection that the authority charged higher interest than they themselves paid (N. B. Rail. Co. v. Holme Cultram L. B. (1889), 54 J. P. 86).

Recovery of instalments.

(i) See s. 251, ante, p. 551.

There must apparently be a fresh demand for each instalment, and the six months' limitation will run from such demand. See Prescott v. Nicholson (1889), 53 J. P. 597. As to enforcing the charge on the premises in respect of unpaid instalments, see the judgment in Tottenham L. B. v. Rowell, ante, p. 308.

Deduction from rent.

(k) See s. 214, ante, p. 494.

258. No justice of the peace shall be deemed incapable of acting in cases arising under this Act by reason of his being a member of any local authority, or by reason of his being as one of several ratepayers, or as one of any other class of persons liable in common with the others to contribute to, or to be benefited by any rate or fund, out of which any expenses incurred by such authority are under this Act to be defrayed.

Section 258.

Justices may act though members of local authority or liable to contribute.

A justice may be disqualified for dealing with a matter either by pecuniary interest, or by interest other than pecuniary if it is such as to create a real possibility of bias in him. As to what amounts to pecuniary interest, see R. v. Cambridge (Recorder) (1857), 8 E. & B. 637; 27 L. J. 160; R. v. Cheltenham (1841), 1 Q. B. 467; R. v. Rishton (1813), 1 Q. B. 479 n.; R. v. Hammond (1863), 27 J. P. 793; 9 L. T. 423; R. v. Mackenzie, [1892] 2 Q. B. 519; 56 J. P. 712; R. v. Burton, post, p. 577; Wildridge v. Anderson (1898), 25 R. 275; R. v. London JJ. (1908), 72 J. P. 137; 98 L. T. 519; R. v. Middlesex JJ. (1908), 72 J. P. 251; 52 Sol. J. 458. This section removes the disqualification on the ground of bias, which would otherwise arise from membership of a local authority, party to the proceedings, and also the disqualification arising from pecuniary interest to the extent therein appearing. It does not, however, as appears from the following cases, enable a justice to act in cases where he has, as a member of the local authority, taken part in setting the law in motion.

Interested justices.

H., the owner of a farm in Edmonton, entered into an agreement with the Enfield Local Board, under which he received the sewage of the Enfield district, and disposed of it over his farm. After a few months disagreements arose, and the Enfield board took proceedings against H. to enforce the agreement. While these were pending, H., after notice given to the board, diverted the sewage from his farm through a pipe into the old watercourse in Edmonton, through which the sewage had been used to flow into the river Lee. On this the Edmonton Local Board threatened proceedings against the Enfield board for the nuisance; and the Lee Conservancy took out summonses against H. for having opened the pipe into the watercourse, etc., and for continuing the use of it. On the summonses coming on for hearing, M., who was chairman of the Enfield board, and had taken an active part in its proceedings, sat with three other justices on the bench. H. objected to M. sitting, but he remained, and H. was convicted. A rule for a certiorari was then obtained to quash the conviction, on the ground that M. was an interested justice. On showing cause M. made affidavit that, though he sat on the bench, he took no part until the other justices had unanimously determined to convict, when he proposed a mitigation of the penalties, and that he did not sign the conviction:—Held, that M. had such an interest as might give him a real bias in the matter; consequently, he ought not to have sat as a justice, and it was immaterial what part he really took in the matter; and the court made the rule absolute with costs against M. (R. v. Meyer (or Harrison) (1875), 1 Q. B. D. 173; 40 J. P. 645). See also R. v. Lancashire JJ. (1906), 75 L. J. K. B. 198; 70 J. P. 337, where it was held that the mere presence of disqualified justices on the bench at quarter sessions, even though they took no part in the proceedings, rendered the proceedings irregular, and the appeal was directed to be reheard. In R. v. Spurgeon and Others (1920), 42 M. C. C. 176, the Divisional Court discharged a rule for a certiorari. The interested justice remained on the bench, but sat back from the other justices and took no part in the proceedings.

Complaint having been made to the L. G. B. of a nuisance upon premises belonging to B., in the borough of W., the Board called upon the town council to abate the nuisance. The council having made inquiries, passed a resolution that steps should be taken for the removal of the nuisance, and took out a summons against B. At the hearing an order for the abatement of the nuisance was made. Two of the justices present were members of the council when the resolution was passed:—Held, that the councillors who were justices had such an interest as might give them a bias in the matter; that, consequently, they ought not to have sat as justices on the hearing of the summons, and that the rule for a certiorari to quash the order must be made absolute (R. v. Milledge (or Weymouth JJ.) (1879), 4 Q. B. D. 332; 43 J. P. 606). But where justices who were members of a town council, and as such had taken an active part in making an order under the Dogs Act, 1871, sat to hear a complaint of non-observance of the order, it was held they had no such interest in the subject-matter of the complaint as to oust their jurisdiction (R. v. Huntingdon JJ. (1879), 4 Q. B. D. 522; 43 J. P. 767). It will be observed that in this case the justices had not taken any part in ordering the prosecution. Upon this ground the decision in Harring v. Stockton (Mayor of) (1867), 31 J. P. 420, may be supported.

By a borough improvement Act, the corporation was made the authority for its execution, with power to direct prosecutions for that purpose. An information for an offence under the Act having been preferred by an officer on behalf of the corporation, a summons was issued upon it by a justice, who as an alderman was a member of the council, but it came on for hearing before county justices, none of whom were connected with the corporation. It was held that the justices could not properly proceed with the hearing, as the summons had been issued by one who was virtually a prosecutor (R. v. Gibbon (or Lancashire JJ.) (1880), 6 Q. B. D. 168). This decision was disapproved in R. v. Handsley (or Burnley JJ.) (1881), 8 Q. B. D. 383; 46 J. P. 119. In that case it was laid down that where by statute a member of a town council may act as a justice in matters arising under the Act, in order to disqualify him from acting, it is not sufficient to show that, as a member of the council, he has a pecuniary interest in the result of the information or complaint, or that the corporation of which he is a member are the prosecutors, but it must be established that he has such a substantial interest in the result of the hearing as to make it likely that he has a real bias in the matter. An officer of a corporation appointed to collect the borough rate obtained a summons against a ratepayer in arrear. In so doing he acted in the discharge of his duty, but upon his own responsibility, and without consulting the council. At the hearing the justices dismissed the summons on the ground that one of the sitting magistrates, being a town councillor, was thereby disqualified from adjudicating. On motion for a mandamus, it was held that there was no ground for supposing either substantial interest or likelihood of bias, and consequently no disqualification (cf. R. v. Pettitmangin (1864), 33 L. J. M. C. 99 n.). Where a justice was a member of a town council, and was present when a prosecution for selling unsound meat was resolved upon, it was held that he was disqualified from sitting to hear the summons (R. v. Lee (1882), 9 Q. B. D. 394; 47 J. P. 118). So also where a justice had been a member of a committee appointed to report upon certain mining pollutions, and had acted upon such committee, he was held disqualified from hearing a summons for polluting the stream, though he had not actually taken part in ordering the prosecution (R. v. Spalding (or Spedding) (1885), 49 J. P. 804; 2 T. L. R. 163). In an Irish case where a person was convicted for obstructing a highway on two separate occasions, one of the justices who adjudicated was a member of the finance committee of the county, and also a cesspayer. The complainant was the district surveyor, an officer of the grand jury, having statutory duty of reporting generally on the state of all roads, the name and description of persons prosecuted by him for any injury to roads or like offences, the result of such prosecutions, and generally on all matters given in charge to him by the finance committee. The first prosecution was undertaken in obedience to a direction from the finance committee, but the second on his own responsibility. The justice in question when adjudicating was not aware of the direction above-mentioned:—Held, that he was not disqualified either as a member of the committee or as a cesspayer (R. v. Dublin County JJ., [1894] 2 I. R. 527).

As to disqualification on grounds other than pecuniary interest, the true question is whether the relation of the impugned member to the inquiry is such that he can be reasonably suspected of bias. This rule was laid down by the Court of Appeal in Allinson v. General Medical Council, [1894] 1 Q. B. 750; 58 J. P. 542. There an inquiry before the General Medical Council whether the plaintiff, a medical practitioner, had been guilty of infamous conduct in a professional respect, so as to entitle the Council to erase his name from the register, was instituted at the instance of the committee of the Medical Defence Union, whose objects were "to support and protect the character and interests of medical practitioners; to promote honourable practice; and to suppress or prosecute unauthorised practitioners." One member of the Council who took part in the inquiry had been a member and vice-president of the Union, and as vice-president was an ex officio member of its committee. He had, however, never attended any meeting of the committee, and until after he had been elected a member of the Council did not know that proceedings were being taken against the plaintiff. He had sent in his resignation as a member of the Union on the same day on which he was elected a member of the Council. By the articles of association of the Union any member might withdraw by giving two months' notice of his intention. Before such two months had expired the inquiry was held. It was held that the member was not disqualified from taking part in the inquiry. For an earlier case in which MELLOR, J., laid down the rule, see R. v. Allan (1864), 4 B. & S. 915; and cf. R. v. Tyrone JJ., [1909] 2 I. R. 763.

In proceedings taken at the instance of the council of the Incorporated Law Society against an unqualified person for acting as a solicitor, it was held that a justice was not disqualified from adjudicating by reason of the fact that he was a member of the society (R. v. Burton, [1897] 2 Q. B. 468; 61 J. P. 727). Cf. R. v. Deal JJ. (1881), 46 J. P. 71; 45 L. T. 439 (a prosecution for cruelty to animals); Ex parte Chamberlain (1870), 34 J. P. 773.

The Fishery Act, 1865, s. 61, contains a provision similar to that in the text. A justice who was also a member of the board of conservators of a fishery district was present at a meeting of the board, at which a resolution was unanimously passed directing the water bailiff to prosecute a person for violation of certain provisions of the Fishery Acts. He took no prominent part in the proceedings, but his name appeared as being present at the meeting when the resolution was passed. He afterwards sat with others to hear the charge, and the offender was convicted. It was held that the disqualification otherwise attaching to the justice by reason of his having acted as a member of the board authorising the prosecution, was not removed by s. 61 of the Fishery Act, 1865, and that the conviction must therefore be quashed (R. v. Henley, [1892] 1 Q. B. 504; 56 J. P. 391). In a similar case of a prosecution by a fishery committee, a justice who was a member of the committee afterwards sat on the bench when the case was heard. The court quashed the conviction, though the justice deposed that he had taken no part in the case, and only retired with his brother magistrates out of curiosity; and they intimated that in future they might award costs against any justice so offending (Harvey v. Gibb (1892), Times, May 17th).

The interest which is sufficient to disqualify need not be a direct interest. Thus, at a special sessions for appeals against poor rates the chairman of the magistrates, who was himself appellant in one of the cases for hearing, took part in the decision of all the cases except his own. When his own case was called on, he left the bench, and went to the body of the court and conducted the case himself. On a rule for a certiorari to bring up all the orders for the purpose of quashing them:—Held, that the chairman being a litigant in a matter similar to the other matters before the court, was disqualified from acting as a justice, and that the orders were bad (R. v. Great Yarmouth JJ. (1882), 8 Q. B. D. 525; 46 J. P. 148). Cf. Ex parte Nantwich U. D. C. (1899), Times, November 18th, where a justice who had been himself served with notice to provide a water-closet under s. 36, protested against it and expressed his intention of sitting on the hearing of a summons against another householder for default in complying with a similar notice. On application for a prohibition the court expressed an opinion that he ought not to sit. A member of a Nonconformist council which was opposed to the renewal of licences was present at a meeting of that council at which it was resolved to oppose the transfer of a licence; but he had, it was stated, left the meeting before the resolution was passed. It was held that he was incapable of sitting as a justice at the hearing of the application for the transfer, and the proceedings were quashed (R. v. Fraser (1893), 9 T. L. R. 613). Upon the hearing of a summons under the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, s. 361, a justice who was a qualified pilot belonging to the pilotage district within which the alleged offence was committed was held, by reason of his membership of the class in whose interests the proceedings were taken, to be disqualified from acting as a justice, even though by reason of the peculiar nature of his own pilotage work he was not actually brought into competition with unqualified pilots (R. v. Huggins, [1895] 1 Q. B. 563; 59 J. P. 104).

The fact that a justice has strong views on the subject appertaining to the offence of which a defendant is charged does not disqualify such justice (Ex parte Wilder (1902), 66 J. P. 761). For cases where justices have made statements as to the matters in issue, see R. v. Alcock (1878), 42 J. P. 311; 37 L. T. 829; R. v. Halifax JJ., Ex parte Robinson (1912), 76 J. P. 233; 28 T. L. R. 288; R. v. Cork JJ. (1911), 45 Ir. L. T. 3. For cases of alleged personal animus, see R. v. Cork JJ., [1910] 2 I. R. 271; R. v. Cork JJ., [1910] 2 I. R. 658; R. v. Tyrone JJ., [1909] 2 I. R. 763.

Where a justice is shown to have taken an active part in defending an appeal against a decision of which he approves, but to which he was no party, he is disqualified on the ground of possibility of bias from taking part in deciding the appeal (R. v. Cumberland JJ. (1888), 52 J. P. 502; 58 L. T. 491). Cf. R. v. Great Yarmouth (1836), 5 L. J. M. C. 73. At a vestry meeting, summoned by a district surveyor to consider (inter alia) the obstruction of a highway by the defendant, who had deposited a heap of earth by the side of a highway, a justice moved a resolution calling upon the defendant to remove the heap. The defendant having failed to do so a summons was taken out against him by the surveyor for depositing the heap to the obstruction of the highway, and for failing to remove it after notice. The justice, who had moved the resolution, and who was a ratepayer of the parish, sat and adjudicated with another justice, and made an order directing the heap to be removed and sold, and the proceeds to be applied to the repair of the highway:—Held, that the justice was disqualified from adjudicating, for the part taken by him in moving the resolution afforded ground for a reasonable suspicion of bias on his part, though there might not have been bias in fact, and upon the further ground that as a ratepayer he was pecuniarily interested in the result of the summons (R. v. Gaisford, [1892] 1 Q. B. 381; 56 J. P. 247). The second ground of this decision is, however, open to question, for it appears to lose sight of s. 2 of the Justices of the Peace Act, 1867, post, p. 579. The fact that a subpœna to give evidence in a particular case has been served upon a magistrate is not of itself sufficient to disqualify him from hearing and adjudicating upon such case (R. v. Tooke (1884), 48 J. P. 661; 32 W. R. 753). A justice, who was a surgeon, attended a patient professionally for injury caused by an assault. He endeavoured to induce his patient not to prosecute for the assault, and conveyed to him a message from the assailant offering an apology and suggesting a settlement. A summons having been issued for the assault, and the justice having been subpœnaed by the prosecution, a prohibition was obtained to prohibit him from sitting at the hearing. The justice moved to set aside the prohibition, and it was held that his acts did not show that he had such a substantial interest in the result as to make it likely that he had a bias, and that the fact of his being subpœnaed did not disqualify him from sitting; the prohibition was therefore set aside (R. v. Farrant (1887), 20 Q. B. D. 58; 52 J. P. 116). See also R. v. Tyrone JJ. (1911), 45 Ir. L. T. 264, and cf. Fobbing Commissioners v. R. (1886), 11 App. Cas. 449; 51 J. P. 227. And see Mitchell v. Croydon JJ. (1914), 78 J. P. 385.

The mere fact of receipt of a circular sent round to justices particularly requesting their attendance at a certain sessions at which certain business will be taken without asking them to vote in any particular way does not disqualify such justices (R. v. London JJ., Ex parte Kerfoot (1896), 60 J. P. 726; 45 W. R. 58).

Certain licensing cases in which the question of bias on the part of justices has been raised may also be referred to. In R. v. Stockport JJ. (1896), 60 J. P. 552, the corporation of S., who had acquired a licensed house for purposes of improvement, appointed an alderman a member of a committee for the purpose of negotiating for the disposal of the house. The result of these negotiations was an arrangement that application should be made for a licence for other premises, and the sale was effected on the condition that the licence for these "other" premises should be obtained. The alderman had sat as a member of the licensing committee on the hearing of the application for the grant of the new licence, and it was sought to upset the decision on the ground of bias. The Divisional Court thought that there was no real ground on which to quash the decision; but this case was soon afterwards expressly overruled in R. v. Sunderland JJ., [1901] 2 K. B. 357; 65 J. P. 598, where the facts were similar. A corporation had bought a publichouse for a street improvement, and then entered into an agreement with a firm of brewers, by which the brewers agreed that if they obtained a new licence for a publichouse in another street they would pay the corporation £10,000 on condition that the corporation closed the publichouse which they had purchased. Certain members of the corporation who had taken an active part in negotiating the agreement sat as justices both on the licensing committee and at the confirming meeting when the new licence was granted. In the Divisional Court a rule nisi for a certiorari was discharged, but the Court of Appeal reversed their decision on the ground that in their opinion there was a real likelihood of bias. In a still more recent case the Court of Appeal granted a writ of certiorari where it was alleged that upon applications for the renewal of certain licences the licensing justices had acted pursuant to an arrangement previously entered into with the corporation of Leeds, who were the owners of the premises, and did not properly consider objections made to the renewal of the licences (R. v. Woodhouse, Ex parte Ryder, [1906] 2 K. B. 501; 70 J. P. 485). On appeal however, this decision was reversed on the ground that the justices were entitled to act as they had done (Leeds Corporation v. Ryder, [1907] A. C. 420; 71 J. P. 484). For decisions as to bias in other licensing cases, see also R. v. Fraser (1893), 57 J. P. 500 n.; 9 T. L. R. 613; R. v. Ferguson (1890), 54 J. P. 101; R. v. Hain (1896), 12 T. L. R. 323; R. v. Taylor, Ex parte Vogwill (1898), 14 T. L. R. 185; R. v. Gee (1901), 17 T. L. R. 374; R. v. Tempest (1902), 66 J. P. 472; 86 L. T. 585; R. v. Howard (or Farnham JJ.), [1902] 2 K. B. 363; 66 J. P. 579; R. v. Dublin JJ., [1904] 2 I. R. 75; Goodall v. Bilsland, [1909] S. C. 1152; R. v. Halifax JJ., p. 577, ante; McGeehen v. Knox, [1913] S. C. 688. Three cases relating to rating appeals in which attempts to disqualify justices on the ground of possibility of bias failed might also be noticed: R. v. Suffolk JJ., Estates Gazette, May 19th, 1906; R. v. London JJ. (1908), 72 J. P. 137; R. v. Middlesex JJ. (1908), 72 J. P. 251.

There is no restriction here as in 16 Geo. 2, c. 18, as to the justice acting at quarter sessions.

By the Justices of the Peace Act, 1867, s. 2, in order that justices may act in the execution of Acts in some cases in which they would otherwise be incapable of acting, it is provided that a justice shall not be incapable of acting as a justice at any petty or special or general or quarter sessions on the trial of an offence arising under an Act to be put in execution by a municipal corporation, or a local board of health, or improvement commissioners or trustees, or any other local authority, by reason only of his being as one of several ratepayers, or as one of any other class of persons liable in common with the others to contribute to or to be benefited by any fund to the account of which the penalty payable in respect of such offence is directed to be carried, or of which it will form part, or to contribute to any rate or expenses in diminution of which such penalty will go. See R. v. Bolingbroke, [1893] 2 Q. B. 347; 58 J. P. 118; Ex parte Workington Overseers, [1894] 1 Q. B. 416; 58 J. P. 381.

"Acting."

As to what amounts to acting, see R. v. Middlesex JJ. (1854), 2 W. R. 459; R. v. Surrey JJ. (1856), 4 W. R. 86; R. v. Herefordshire JJ. (1844), 2 D. & L. 500 n.; R. v. Hertfordshire JJ. (1845), 6 Q. B. 753; 14 L. J. M. C. 73; R. v. Suffolk JJ. (1852), 18 Q. B. 416; 21 L. J. M. C. 169; R. v. London JJ. (1852), 18 Q. B. 421 n.; R. v. Meyer, ante, p. 575; R. v. O'Grady (1857), 7 Cox C. C. 247; Ex parte Clarke (1890), 26 L. R. Ir. 1; R. v. Budden (1896), 60 J. P. 166; R. v. London C. C., [1892] 1 Q. B. 190; 56 J. P. 8; R. v. Louth JJ. (1904), 39 Ir. L. T. 23; R. v. Lancashire JJ. (1906), 75 L. J. K. B. 198; 70 J. P. 337; R. v. Byles (1913), 77 J. P. 40; 108 L. T. 270; R. v. Armagh JJ., [1913] 2 I. R. 410.

Waiver objection.

Where a justice is disqualified on the ground of interest, it is open to the parties to waive the objection. If they acquiesce in his acting after knowledge of the disqualification, they cannot afterwards object; and knowledge of the disqualification must be denied in the affidavit. See R. v. Richmond JJ. (1860), 24 J. P. 422; 8 W. R. 562; Ex parte Ilchester (1861), 25 J. P. 56; R. v. Kent JJ. (1880), 44 J. P. 298; Wakefield L. B. v. West Riding and Grimsby Rail. Co. (1865), L. R. 1 Q. B. 84; 30 J. P. 628; R. v. Antrim JJ., [1895] 2 I. R. 603; R. v. Byles, supra; R. v. Williams, [1914] 1 K. B. 608; 78 J. P. 148. A magistrate who invites the parties to waive any objection to his acting must explain accurately what his interest in the matter is (R. v. Cumberland JJ., p. 578, ante).

If one disqualified justice takes part in a decision, it is vitiated no matter how many qualified justices agreed with it: see R. v. Lancashire JJ. and other cases, supra; but an acquittal by justices, one of whom is afterwards discovered to be disqualified, must stand (R. v. Simpson (1913), 78 J. P. 55; 30 T. L. R. 31). In R. v. Hammond, p. 575, ante, an order of sessions confirming on appeal a conviction made by interested justices was quashed with the conviction.

A justice cannot sit to hear an appeal against a decision of a court of which he was a member (R. v. Lancashire JJ., supra; R. v. Herts JJ., supra).

Section 259. Appearance of local authorities in legal proceedings.

259. Any local authority may appear before any court, or in any legal proceeding by their clerk, or by any officer or member authorised generally or in respect of any special proceeding by resolution of such authority, and their clerk, or any officer or member so authorised shall be at liberty to institute and carry on any proceeding which the local authority is authorised to institute and carry on under this Act.

What is "appearance."

The appearance mentioned in this section refers to the appearance in court. It does not give the authority a right to be heard by their clerk where there is a rule of the court that parties are only to be heard by counsel (R. v. London JJ., [1896] 1 Q. B. 659; 60 J. P. 420). The clerk may appear without any authority, but any other officer must have an authority, either given generally or for the special proceeding. Thus the inspector of nuisances may have such general authority, but it should be in writing, containing a copy of the resolution as entered in the minutes. 29 & 30 Vict. c. 90, s. 48, from which this section is taken, extended the provision in 18 & 19 Vict. c. 121, s. 5, which had restricted the appearance of the officer to the particular case in which directions had been given. See Isle of Wight Ferry Co. v. Ryde Commissioners (1861), 25 J. P. 454. Special authorisation is necessary however in every prosecution for penalties in respect of local taxation licenses transferred to county and borough Councils by the Finance Act, 1908 (Jones v. Wilson, [1918] 2 K. B. 36; 82 J. P. 277). In a case where justices refused to determine a complaint under the P. H. A., 1848, without the attendance of the clerk of the local board, the court refused to interfere (Ex parte Leamington L. B. (1862), 5 L. T. 637). It has been held that an inspector of weights and measures does not require a "specific consent" to enable him to prefer an information under the Weights and Measures Act, 1904, a general resolution of the authority consenting to his prosecuting any information, etc., arising under the Act, or in discharge of his duties as inspector, being all that is required by s. 14 of that Act (Tyler v. Ferris, [1906] 1 K. B. 94; 70 J. P. 88). It is apparently unnecessary that an officer prosecuting for an authority should be fortified with the resolution appointing him to the office (see Smith v. Hirst (1871), 35 J. P. 247; 23 L. T. 665). If an officers' statement that he is such officer is not questioned, no further proof of his appointment is necessary (Ross v. Helm, [1913] 3 K. B. 462). If in any case express proof is required it can be supplied by production of the minute book which contains a minute of the appointment. See Sched. I., Part I., r. 10, post, p. 674. If a defendant does not take the point before the justices that there has been no proved proof of authorisation of the officer to take the proceedings, the point cannot be taken upon a case stated upon other grounds (Kates v. Jeffery, [1914] 3 K. B. 160). In Bowyer, Philpott & Payne v. Mather, [1919] 1 K. B. 419; 83 J. P. 50, it was held that the authorisation of an officer after the institution of proceedings was insufficient, a general or special authority must be given before the proceedings are instituted by the laying of the information.

"Institution" of proceedings.

It has been questioned whether the word institute applies to notices of nuisances, and of other matters which may or may not be followed by proceedings in court. The better opinion appears to be in the negative. Proceedings are "instituted" by the laying of the information (Thorpe v. Priestnall, [1897] 1 Q. B. 159; 60 J. P. 821). In St. Mellon's R. D. C. v. Edwards (1903), 67 J. P. 396, Monmouthshire Quarter Sessions held to be valid a notice of appeal which was given by the clerk of a rural district council, but was subsequently ratified by a resolution of the council under seal approving and confirming the notice and authorising the clerk to enter into the necessary recognizance and to prosecute the appeal.

Delegation to police.

A local board passed a resolution that the superintendent and sergeants of the county police for the time being acting within the district should be authorised as officers of the board to institute and prosecute all such proceedings as might be necessary under specified clauses of a local Act which embodied the provisions of this section. It was held that the board had no power under this section to delegate prosecutions to members of the police, not being their officers or under their control (Kyle v. Barber (1888), 52 J. P. 725; 58 L. T. 229).

260. In any proceeding instituted by or aganist a local authority under this Act it shall not be necessary for the plaintiff to prove the corporate name of the local authority or the constitution or limits of their district (a) : Provided that this section shall not abridge or prejudice the right of any defendant to take or avail himself of any objection which he might have taken or availed himself of if this Act had not been passed. Section 260. —— Name of local authority need not be proved.

(a) See Fearon v. Warrenpoint in note to the P. H. A., 1907, s. 94, post.

261. Proceedings for the recovery of demands below fifty pounds (a), which local authorities are empowered to recover in a summary manner (b), may, at the option of the local authority, be taken in the county court as if such demands were debts within the cognizance of such courts (c). Demands below £50 may be recovered in county court.

(a) This is an increase of the limit in the statute 24 & 25 Vict. c. 61, s. 24.

(b) See s. 251, ante, p. 551. This section applies, therefore, only to sums which can be recovered summarily—not to those which can be recovered in other ways, as, for example, the costs, etc. to which s. 104, ante, p. 189, relates.

(c) The six months' limitation for summary proceedings is also applicable to the proceedings taken in the county court (Tottenham L. B. v. Rowell (1876), 1 Ex. D. 514 ; following West Ham L. B. v. Maddams (1876), 1 Ex. D. 516 n. ; 40 J. P. 470). The principle of these cases as applied to this particular Act has been since accepted ; but they were distinguished in Leeds (Mayor, etc. of) v. Robshaw (1887), 51 J. P. 441, a case under the Leeds Improvement Act, 1877. Section 96 of that Act provided that summary proceedings before justices for the recovery of expenses must be brought within one year, and s. 109 provided that when any person neglected to pay any sum due to the corporation, such sum might be recovered in any court of competent jurisdiction for the recovery of debts of the like amount. Other remedies were given for the recovery of these sums, one by an Act of 1842 by way of distress, in which there was no limit of time, and another by an Act of 1866 by action at law. It was held that the limitation of one year did not apply to proceedings by way of action of debt in the county court. They were again distinguished in the Court of Appeal in Blackburn (Mayor, etc. of) v. Sanderson, [1902] 1 K. B. 794 ; 66 J. P. 452, a case decided on a local improvement Act ; and again in Metropolitan Water Board v. Bunn, [1913] 3 K. B. 181 ; 77 J. P. 156, 353, and Bolton Corporation v. Scott (1913), 77 J. P. 193 ; 108 L. T. 406. Hammersmith Vestry v. Lowenfeld, [1896] 2 Q. B. 278 ; 60 J. P. 600, a case under the P. H. (London) A., 1891, in which they were applied to that statute, has been doubted, if not overruled (see Metropolitan Water Board v. Bunn, supra). Limitation of time in county court.

It would seem that if the authority take summary proceedings and fail, they could not afterwards bring an action in the county court, or vice versa (Metropolitan Water Board v. Bunn, supra). But the failure in either case does not affect their power in respect of the charge on the premises under s. 257. See the remarks of BRETT, L.J., in the notes to that section.

In Eccles v. Wirral Sanitary Authority, ante, p. 306, MATHEW, J., says : "By s. 261 jurisdiction is conferred on the county court in cases of this kind (i.e., to recover expenses due under s. 150), and although I cannot find any provision which in terms gives the superior court jurisdiction, I should infer that where the amount is above £50 an action would lie in the superior court." But this dictum appears to be contrary to the rule that where a debt is created by a statute which expressly provides for its recovery, the remedy so provided must be followed, and an action will not lie : see St. Pancras Vestry v. Batterbury, and other cases cited at p. 305, ante. And there are dicta in later cases that no action will lie in a superior court for the recovery of such expenses : see In re Willesden L. B. and Wright, [1896] 2 Q. B. 412 ; In re Hanwell U. D. C. and Smith (1904), 68 J. P. 496. Under the Private Street Works Act, 1892, s. 14, post, actions may be brought in any court of competent jurisdiction

Note to Section 261.

Application of Bills of Sale Act, 1882, to proceedings for recovery of general district rate.

By the Bills of Sale Act, 1882, s. 14, a bill of sale shall be no protection in respect of personal chattels included in such bill of sale, which but for such bill of sale would have been liable to distress under a warrant for the recovery of taxes and poor and other parochial rates. It was held that that section did not apply where proceedings for the recovery of a general district rate had been taken in the county court under the text (Wimbledon L. B. v. Underwood, [1892] 1 Q. B. 836; 56 J. P. 633). It has since been held that a general district rate is not a tax or poor or other parochial rate within the meaning of s. 14 (Richards v. Kidderminster Overseers, [1896] 2 Ch. 212).

Proceedings not to be quashed for want of form.

262. No rate order conviction or thing made or done or relating to the execution of this Act shall be vacated quashed or set aside for want of form, or (unless otherwise expressly provided by this Act) be removed or removable by certiorari or any other writ or process whatsoever into any of the superior courts (a): Provided that nothing in this section shall prevent the removal of any case stated for the opinion of a superior court, or of any rate order conviction or thing to which such special case relates (b).

When certiorari lies.

(a) For an instance of express exception, see s. 246, ante, p. 540. The Act does not contain any definition of the term "superior court," but the text evidently refers to the High Court of Justice. Apart from this provision, certiorari does not lie to remove other than judicial acts. See R. v. Watermen's and Lightermen's Co., [1897] 1 Q. B. 659; 61 J. P. 388; R. v. Sharman, [1898] 1 Q. B. 578; 62 J. P. 296; R. v. Bowman, [1898] 1 Q. B. 663; 62 J. P. 374. The phrase "judicial act" must, however, be taken in a very wide sense, including many acts that would not ordinarily be termed "judicial." The true view of the limitation appears to be that the term "judicial act" is used in contrast with purely ministerial acts. See Leeds Corporation v. Ryder, ante, p. 579, when in the Court of Appeal (sub nom., R. v. Woodhouse, Ex parte Ryder, [1906] 2 K. B. 501; 70 J. P. 485), in which case R. v. Sharman, supra, on this point, was not followed. See also R. v. Dublin Corporation (1878), 2 L. R. Ir. 371, where MAY, C.J., said: "It is established that the writ of certiorari does not lie to remove an order merely ministerial, such as a warrant, but it lies to remove and adjudicate upon the validity of acts judicial. In this connection the term 'judicial' does not necessarily mean acts of a judge, or legal tribunal sitting for the determination of matters of law, but for the purpose of this question, a judicial act seems to be an act done by competent authority, upon consideration of facts and circumstances, and imposing liability or affecting the rights of others." This passage was cited with approval by PALLES, C.B., in R. v. Kerry C. C., [1905] 2 I. R., at p. 303, and was adopted by the Irish Court of Appeal in R. v. Local Government Board for Ireland, [1902] 2 I. R. 349, where the difference between "judicial" and "ministerial" acts was elaborately discussed. See also R. v. Dublin Corporation, [1911] 2 I. R. 245, and R. v. Doherty (1910), 74 J. P. 304; 26 T. L. R. 502, where a warrant of commitment was quashed. The point was raised but not decided in Ex parte Stott, [1916] 1 K. B. 7, as to whether a notice prohibiting the exhibition of a film was a proper subject-matter for a certiorari.

Notwithstanding this provision, a writ of certiorari may be granted where the proceedings show on the face of them a want of jurisdiction (R. v. Gosse (1860), 3 El. & El. 277; 30 L. J. M. C. 41; Re Broughton L. B. (1865), 12 L. T. 310; R. v. Staffordshire JJ. (1867), 16 L. T. 430; R. v. Rose (or Wood), ante, p. 440; R. v. Slater (1903), 67 J. P. 299; Colonial Bank of Australasia v. Willan (1874), L. R. 5 P. C. 417). In the case last mentioned it was laid down that when a certiorari is said to be taken away by statute, the superior court is not absolutely deprived of the power to issue the writ; but its action as to the writ is controlled and limited, and it cannot quash the order removed by certiorari except upon the ground either of a manifest defect of jurisdiction in the tribunal that made the order, or a manifest fraud in the party procuring it. Matters on which the defect of jurisdiction depends may be apparent on the face of the proceedings, or may be brought before the superior court by affidavit, but they must be intrinsic to the adjudication impeached.

Note to Section 262.

Objections on the ground of defect of jurisdiction may be founded on the character and constitution of an inferior court, the nature of the subject-matter of the inquiry, or the absence of some preliminary proceeding which was necessary to give jurisdiction to the court. The objection of defect of jurisdiction cannot be entertained if it rests solely on the ground that the judge has erroneously found a fact which was essential to the validity of his order, but which he was competent to try (ibid.). And see Ex parte Bradlaugh (1878), 3 Q. B. D. 509; 43 J. P. 125; R. v. Bradford, [1908] 1 K. B. 365; 72 J. P. 61; R. v. Queen's County JJ., [1908] 2 I. R. 285; Ex parte Stott, [1916] 1 K. B. 7; 80 J. P. 169; cases cited in Paley on Convictions, 7th ed., at p. 354, and Short and Mellor's Crown Office Practice, 2nd ed., p. 43. See generally as to the effect of a clause taking away certiorari, R. v. Mahony, [1910] 2 I. R. 695.

Waiver of objection.

Where both parties agreed to waive a similar provision, and a recorder stated a case for the opinion of the court, the fact that the corresponding section in the Municipal Corporations Act, 1835, had taken away the certiorari was held not to prevent the court from determining the question (R. v. Dickenson (1857), 7 El. & Bl. 831; 22 J. P. 243).

Practice.

As to the practice relating to the removal of convictions, etc. by certiorari, see Paley on Convictions, 7th ed., Chap. V., sect. 2. See also the Crown Office Rules, 1906, Nos. 20—31. It was held that the six days' notice to the justice, under the old rules, as a preliminary to the grant of a writ of certiorari, must precede the motion for a rule nisi, and not merely the motion for the rule absolute (Ex parte Roberts (1886), 50 J. P. 567). But it appears now from r. 21 of the new rules that the notice need only be given six days before the return day. An application for certiorari to the King's Bench Division does not lie after conviction and judgment in the superior court (Nally v. R. (1884), 16 L. R. Ir. 1).

The time limitation in r. 21 of the Crown Office Rules does not apply to the issue of a writ of certiorari at the instance of the Attorney-General on behalf of the Crown (R. v. Amendt, [1915] 2 K. B. 276; 79 J. P. 324).

Certiorari will not issue to quash a conviction by justices pending an appeal to quarter sessions (R. v. Barnes (1910), 74 J. P. 231; 102 L. T. 860).

Object of proviso.

(b) This proviso was inserted to meet the difficulties which arose in cases such as R. v. Fielding (1853), 17 J. P. 343; R. v. Staffordshire JJ. (1867), 16 L. T. 430; R. v. Chantrell (1875), L. R. 10 Q. B. 587; 39 J. P. 472. It is now rendered unnecessary, so far as regards cases stated by quarter sessions, for the S. J. A., 1879, s. 40, provides that a writ of certiorari or other writ shall not be required for the removal of any conviction, order, or other determination for the purpose of obtaining the judgment of a superior court. In Clark v. Alderbury Union (1880), 29 W. R. 334, it was held that the provision rendered a certiorari unnecessary to bring up a case stated by sessions on a rating appeal, and that the clerk of the peace, on receiving notice from the solicitor of the party requiring it, should send up the case to the Crown Office. As to the recognizances in such a case, see the Crown Office Rules, 1906, Nos. 24—26.

False evidence punishable as perjury.

263. Any person who on any examination on oath, under any of the provisions of this Act, wilfully and corruptly gives false evidence shall be liable to the penalties inflicted on persons guilty of wilful and corrupt perjury.

See now the Perjury Act, 1911, which repealed this section.

Notice of action against local authority, etc. [Repealed by 56 & 57 Vict. c. 61.]

264. A writ or process shall not be sued out against or served on any local authority, or any member thereof, or any officer of a local authority, or person acting in his aid, for anything done or intended to be done or omitted to be done under the provisions of this Act, until the expiration of one month after notice in writing has been served on such local authority member officer or person, clearly stating the cause of action, and the name and place of abode of the intended plaintiff, and of his attorney or agent in the cause; and on the trial of any such action the plaintiff shall not be permitted to go into evidence of any cause of action which is not stated in

Section 264. the notice so served; and unless such notice is proved the jury shall find for the defendant.

Every such action shall be commenced within six months next after the accruing of the cause of action, and not afterwards, and shall be tried in the county or place where the cause of action occurred, and not elsewhere.

Any person to whom any such notice of action is given as aforesaid may tender amends to the plaintiff his attorney or agent, at any time within one month after service of such notice, and, in case the same be not accepted, may plead such tender in bar; and in case amends have not been tendered as aforesaid, or in case the amends tendered are insufficient, the defendant may, by leave of the court, at any time before trial, pay into court under plea such sum of money as he may think proper; and if upon issue joined, or upon any plea pleaded for the whole action, the jury find generally for the defendant, or if the plaintiff be non-suited or judgment be given for the defendant, then the defendant shall be entitled to full costs of suit, and have judgment accordingly.

Repealed by the Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893, post.

Protection of local authority and their officers from personal liability.

265. No matter or thing done, and no contract entered into by any local authority or joint board or port sanitary authority, and no matter or thing done by any member of any such authority or by any officer of such authority or other person whomsoever acting under the direction of such authority, shall, if the matter or thing were done or the contract were entered into bonâ fide for the purpose of executing this Act, subject them or any of them personally to any action liability claim or demand whatsoever; and any expense incurred by any such authority member officer or other person acting as last aforesaid shall be borne and repaid out of the fund or rate applicable by such authority to the general purposes of this Act (a).

Provided that nothing in this section shall exempt any member of any such authority from liability to be surcharged with the amount of any payment which may be disallowed by the auditor in the accounts of such authority, and which such member authorised or joined in authorising (b).

Before dealing with the cases bearing directly on this section it may be mentioned that the common law provides a drastic remedy where libels are published in relation to the conduct of members of a local authority in the exercise of their duties. The High Court may in its discretion grant a criminal information to protect a person exercising a public official duty imposed upon him by statute, though he may not be acting in a judicial capacity, from a libel published of him in the exercise of that duty (R. v. Russell (1905), 69 J. P. 450; 93 L. T. 407).

A member of a council must not act as juryman in a case to which the council are parties (Atkins v. Fulham Borough Council (1915), 31 T. L. R. 564).

Effect of section.

(a) "The effect of clauses of this sort is not to leave a complaining party remediless, but to oblige him to bring his action against the public board or against the commissioners as a body. . . . And any damages that may be recovered will be payable out of the funds at their disposal under the provisions for payment for damages and costs" (Addison on Torts, 5th ed. p. 669). In similar clauses in other Acts, it is provided that the action shall be brought against the clerk. In such a case it has been held that the clerk is not liable personally (Wormwell v. Hailstone (1830), 8 L. J (o.s) C. P. 264; 6 Bing. 668; and see Hall v. Smith (1824), 3 L. J. (o s) C P. 263; 2 Bing. 156, 267; Emery v. Day (1834), 3 L. J. Ex. 307; 1 C. M. &

Note to Section 265.

R. 245; Cane v. Chapman (1836), 6 L. J. K. B. 49; 5 A. & E. 647). It may be observed, however, that Wormwell v. Hailstone, supra, was questioned in Cobbett v. Wheeler (1860), 3 El. & El. 358; 30 L. J. Q. B. 64; and Hall v. Smith, supra, discussed in Scott v. Mayor, etc. of Manchester (1857), 26 L. J. Ex. 406; 1 H. & N. 59; 2 H. & N. 204, and Mersey Docks Trustees v. Gibbs (1866), L. R. 1 H. L., at p. 115, per BLACKBURN, J. Under the present Act, the authority must be sued in their corporate name See s. 7, ante, p. 39. The effect of this section is, therefore, to exempt from personal liability everyone who has bonâ fide contracted with the local authority to do some act under their direction, though he may thereby cause damage to another person which the Act itself does not justify or excuse. Thus, where the defendants were contractors acting under the direction of the Metropolitan Commissioners of Sewers, and while so acting injured the plaintiff's premises, it was held that they were not liable (Ward v. Lee (1857), 21 J. P. 179; 7 El. & Bl. 426). In Le Feuvre v. Miller (1857), 21 J. P. 436; 8 El. & Bl. 321, a question was raised and argued whether a bailiff who executed a warrant of distress to enforce payment of a rate alleged to be illegal was within this section. The question was not decided, but the court seemed to be of opinion that the case was within the principle of Ward v. Lee; and see Southampton and Itchin Floating Bridge Co. v. Southampton L. B. (1858), 8 El. & Bl. 801; 27 L. J. Q. B. 128. But the effect of the section is not to relieve a contractor from liability for the negligence of himself or his servants. "Where there is no negligence, a party doing an act in obedience to the board of health is not liable—in that case he is very properly absolved, and the superior alone is liable; but if he is guilty of negligence in doing the act, and damage ensues, he is personally liable" (per Lord CAMPBELL, C.J., in Arthy v. Coleman (1857), 21 J. P. 771; 6 W. R. 34; and see Jones v. Bird (1822), 24 R. R. 579; 5 B. & A. 837; Clothier v. Webster (1862), 12 C. B. (N.S.) 790; 31 L. J. C. P. 316). But a person who contracts for works under a local authority is not liable for an injury which arises out of those works long after they are completed; for example, when after a sewer has been laid in a road by the contractor, there is a subsequent subsidence, it being the duty of the authority to look after such occurrences (Hyams v. Webster (1867), L. R. 2 Q. B. 264; 31 J. P. 439; and see Smith v. West Derby L. B., ante, p. 261). The cases in which a contractor has been held liable are to some extent discussed in the notes to the Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893, post. In Mill v. Hawker (1875), L. R. 10 Ex. 92; 39 J. P. 181, a highway board directed their surveyor to break open a gate on a disputed highway; in an action of trespass by the landowners it was held that, assuming the plea of justification to fail, the surveyor would be personally liable, but not the clerk who merely wrote out the order. The Court of Exchequer also held that the individual members of the board would be liable and not the board as a body. The Court of Exchequer Chamber gave no decision on the point; but see Campbell v. Paddington Borough Council, [1911] 1 K. B. 869; 75 J. P. 277. In Monks v. Dillon (1883), 12 L. R. Ir. 321, works were executed by the contractor of a drainage board, pursuant to contract with them, and by their authority, under the superintendence of their engineer and his assistants, and according to plans and specifications prepared by the engineer, who directed and instructed the contractor, was frequently present on the ground, and saw the works in progress. Some of the works were admittedly acts of trespass to the plaintiffs' lands, as the board had not obtained an assessment of, or paid, compensation before entry. It was held that the engineer was liable for the trespass so committed.

Liability of local authority for negligence.

The effect of the rule, as above stated, is to render the local authority liable to be sued in respect of damages arising out of their negligence in omitting to cause proper precautions to be taken in the exercise of works which they order to be done. This was stated in Ward v. Lee, supra, and held in Southampton and Itchin Floating Bridge Co. v. Southampton L. B., supra; and see Fairbrother v. Bury Rural Sanitary Authority (1889), 37 W. R. 544. In the latter case the authority were held liable to an action for so negligently and improperly constructing a sewer as to cause a nuisance by its discharge and an injury to the plaintiffs. Again, where a local board had ordered a new sewer to be constructed in their district, under a contract and plans which did not provide for a penstock or flap required to prevent the plaintiffs' premises from being flooded by the influx of a river through the sewer, and in consequence of such omission the premises were flooded and damaged, it was held that the board were liable (Ruck v. Williams (1858), 22 J. P. 420; 3 H. & N. 308). Where a corporation provided an improper machine in a washhouse, they were held liable for damage caused thereby (Cowley v. Sunderland (Mayor of) (1861), 25 J. P. 439; 6 H. & N. 565), and similarly as to a defective heating apparatus in a school (Abbott v. Isham (1921), 85 J. P. 30; 18 L. G. R. 719). The negligence must be the effective cause of the damage (McDowall v. G. W. Rail. Co., [1903] 2 K. B. 331). But when injury is primarily caused by the negligence of the authority, the contributory negligence or wrong of a mere stranger is no defence (Engelhart v. Farrant, [1897] 1 Q. B. 240; Sullivan v. Creed, [1904] 2 I. R. 317; cf. McDowall v. G. W. Rail. Co., supra; Ely Brewery Co. v. Pontypridd U. D. C. (1903), 68 J. P. 3). On the other hand, where there has been no negligence on the part of the authority but the injury or damage is caused by the malicious act of a third party the authority is not liable (Simpson v. Metropolitan Water Board (1917), 15 L. G. R. 629; Ruoff v. Long & Co., [1916] 1 K. B. 148; 80 J. P. 158).

Note to Section 265.

A vestry acting as a sewer authority laid a new sewer, and their contractor in so doing laid bare a wrought-iron service water-pipe, about two and a half feet below the surface. The surveyor of the vestry knew that the pipe was old and rusty, and likely, therefore, to become leaky. In filling in the trench some clay was put round the pipe, but not in such a quantity or in such a manner as to prevent it from leaking. A few months afterwards the pipe leaked; and the surrounding clay and earth, being moistened, gave way under a van driven by the plaintiff, and the van being overturned the plaintiff was seriously injured. Upon an action to recover damages from the vestry, it was held that they knew or ought to have known the character and condition of the pipe at the time it was laid bare, and consequently were liable for negligence in not having taken special precautions against its leaking in the future (Cox v. Paddington Vestry (1891), 64 L. T. 566).

Trees surrounded by iron-spiked guards with bent-over tops were planted in a highway. The guards were about five feet three inches high and about three inches out of the perpendicular. The plaintiff sustained injuries by coming into contact with one of the guards whilst crossing the road at night in darkness and whilst the public lighting of the road was restricted under Orders issued under the Defence of the Realm regulations. In an action to recover damages for negligence the jury found that in the darkness the guard was dangerous, and that reasonable measures had not been taken by the defendants to neutralise the danger. It was held that it was the duty of the defendants, notwithstanding the restricted lighting Order to provide reasonable safeguard against the danger to the public (Morrison v. Sheffield Corporation, [1917] 2 K. B. 866; 81 J. P. 277).

The defendants' workmen employed in an unoccupied house in the course of their work left a hole in the floor of a landing on an upper floor into which the plaintiff fell and sustained injuries whilst viewing the house on an order to view from a house agent. The landing was dark at the time and the workmen who were on the lower floor directed the plaintiff upstairs but did not warn her of the danger. It was held that the defendants were liable, as their workmen having created the danger were under a duty to warn the plaintiff of the existence of the hole, that this duty arose independently of occupation or of invitation or licence (Kimber v. Gas Light and Coke Co., [1918] 1 K. B. 439; 82 J. P. 125).

By a general system of drainage made by the defendants, various farms were drained by several underground drains, which carried the water through all such farms. The defendants let one of these farms to the plaintiff, with the usual covenant for quiet enjoyment against acts of the lessors or any persons lawfully claiming through or under them. They had previously let another of the farms adjoining, but lying above the plaintiff's farm, to C., with a right to use the drains through the plaintiff's land, so far as they were adequate to carry the water from C.'s farm. C., during the plaintiff's tenancy, by excessive user of the drainage system, which was properly constructed for the purpose of drainage, caused the water passing down the drains in his farm to escape on to the plaintiff's farm and damage his crops. Further, by a proper user by C. of the drains passing through the plaintiff's farm, damage was done to a field in plaintiff's farm by the escape of water; but this arose from one of the drains there having been imperfectly and improperly constructed. It was held that the defendants were liable to the plaintiff for a breach of their covenant for quiet enjoyment in respect of this last damage, as there had been within the meaning of such covenant a substantial interruption by a person who lawfully claimed through the defendants, but that they were not liable for the damage done by the excessive user by C. of the drainage system, which was properly constructed, either under their covenant for quiet enjoyment, or under the law of trespass or nuisance (Sanderson v. Mayor, etc. of Berwick 1884), 13 Q. B. D. 547; 49 J. P. 6).

Liability of local authority for contractor.

It has already been observed that when a contractor is employed by a local authority, this section does not free him from the consequences of his own negligence, or that of his servants. Where negligence on the part of such contractor is proved, and the authority have not in any way by interference or the like contributed towards the wrongful act of the contractor or his servants, the authority are not liable. See Humphreys v. Mears (1827), 1 M. & Ry. 30; 6 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 89; Duncan v. Findlater (1839), 6 Cl. & F. 894; Steel v. S. E. Rail. Co. (1855), 16 C. B. 550; Butler v. Hunter (1862), 31 L. J. Ex. 214; 7 H. & N. 826; Bayley v. Wolverhampton Waterworks Co. (1860), 30 L. J. Ex. 57; 6 H. & N. 241; Foreman v. Canterbury (Mayor of), ante, p. 255; Smith v. L. & S. W. Rail. Co. (1870), L. R. 6 C. P. 14; Hill v. New River Co. (1868), 9 B. & S. 303; 18 L. T. 355; Daniel v. Metropolitan Rail. Co. (1871), L. R. 5 H. L. 45; 35 J. P. 708; and see Padbury v. Holliday and Greenwood (1912), 28 T. L. R. 494, as to "collateral" negligence of a contractor's workman. But if the damage arises out of the works themselves, or if the authority are really the party executing the works, they are liable. See Scott v. Manchester (Corporation of) (1856), 1 H. & N. 59; Hole v. Sittingbourne Rail. Co. (1861), 30 L. J. Ex. 81; 6 H. & N. 488; Blake v. Thirst (1863), 2 H. & C. 20; Pitts v. Kingsbridge Highway Board (1871), 25 L. T. 195; 19 W. R. 884. Where a duty is imposed upon a public body they are not excused from omitting to perform it, or from the imperfect or improper performance of it, by reason of their having engaged a contractor to do it. See Pickard v. Smith (1861), 10 C. B. (N.S.) 470; 4 L. T. 470; Gray v. Pullen (1864), 29 J. P. 69; 5 B. & S. 970; Hardaker v. Idle U. D. C., [1896] 1 Q. B. 335; 60 J. P. 196; Penny v. Wimbledon U. D. C., [1899] 2 Q. B. 72; 63 J. P. 406; Hill v. Tottenham U. D. C. (1898), 79 L. T. 495; The Snark, [1900] P. 105; Maxwell v. British Thomson-Houston Co. (1902), 18 T. L. R. 278; Clements v. Tyrone C. C., [1905] 2 I. R. 542; Jacob v. Mayor, etc. of Southend-on-Sea (1902), Times, December 16th, (1903), May 21st; Sanders v. Reid and London C. C. (1904), 68 J. P. N. 557; Mileham v. Marylebone Borough Council and Latter, post, p. 588; Hurlstone v. London Electric Rail. Co. (1913), 30 T. L. R. 398; Pinn v. Rew (1916), 32 T. L. R. 451. Where work is ordered to be done which is lawful in itself, but from which in the natural course of things injurious consequences are likely to arise, the employer must see that means are adopted to prevent such consequences. He cannot relieve himself of his liability by employing someone else to do what is necessary to prevent the act which he orders to be done from becoming wrongful (Bower v. Peate (1876), 1 Q. B. D. 321; 40 J. P. 789; Dalton v. Angus (1881), 6 App. Cas. 740; 46 J. P. 132; Hughes v. Percival (1883), 8 App. Cas. 443; 47 J. P. 772; Black v. Christchurch Finance Co., [1894] A. C. 48; 58 J. P. 332; Holliday v. National Telephone Co., [1899] 2 Q. B. 392; Hewinson v. Cheltenham R. D. C. (1903), Times, July 8th; Stephen v. Thurso Commissioners (1876), 3 R. 535). Cf. Wilson v. Hodgson's Kingston Brewery Co. (1917), 80 J. P. 39; 32 T. L. R. 60, where it was held that the dangerous act done by the contractor was not one which was contemplated on his employment.

A council acting under s. 42, ante, p. 107, undertook the duty of cleansing the cesspools of their district. For this purpose they contracted for the removal of the sewage from the cesspools, the contractor using their sewage cart and depositing the filth upon the lands of neighbouring farmers by arrangement which he made with them. The council did not instruct him where to deposit the sewage. The contractor, without the permission of the plaintiffs, deposited sewage removed from the cesspools upon the plaintiffs' land. It was held that the council were responsible; on the terms of the contract they had not contracted for the disposal (as distinct from the removal) of the filth; but per BUCKLEY, L.J., even if they had done so, they would have been responsible for the contractor's failure to dispose of it (Robinson v. Beaconsfield R. D. C., [1911] 2 Ch. 188; 75 J. P. 353). When persons are incorporated by statute for a particular purpose, and have full powers given them to effect that purpose, if the effecting of it may occasion (not only in the course of originally executing the necessary works for the required purpose, but at recurring intervals afterwards) inconvenience or injury to others, they may be treated as under an obligation to take, from time to time, measures to prevent the occurrence of such inconvenience and injury (Geddis v. Bann Reservoir (Proprietors of) (1878), 3 App. Cas. 430; Bligh v. Rathangan River Drainage District Board, [1898] 2 I. R. 205).

An agreement by a contractor to indemnify his principal against claims arising out of his negligence in carrying out works is not void as against public policy, although the principal may in law be a joint tortfeasor in respect of such negligence (Newcombe v. Yewen and Croydon R. D. C. (1913), 29 T. L. R. 299).

Non-liability for negligence outside employment.

A public board is not of course answerable for damage which results from the negligence of the party injured, or of some other person independent of the public body, or acting contrary to or beyond their directions (see Holden v. Liverpool New Gas Co. (1846), 3 C. B. 1; 15 L. J. C. P. 301); nor for the act of their officer or agent done without their knowledge and beyond the scope of his employment (Bolingbroke v. Swindon L. B. (1874), L. R. 9 C. P. 575). In that case a local board, being in occupation of a sewage farm, gave to B. plenary powers for the management thereof in the most beneficial manner. A ditch ran between the farm and the land of the plaintiff. With a view to rendering such ditch more capable of carrying off the drainage from the farm B. wrongfully went upon the plaintiff's land, pared away his side of the ditch, and cut down so much of the brushwood and underwood as impeded the flow of the ditch:—Held, that B.'s acts were not within the scope of his employment, and consequently that the local board were not liable for them, there being no implied authority from the board to do them. And see Charleston v. London Tramways Co. (1888), 36 W. R. 367. Whether or no an officer is acting within the scope of his authority is a question of fact which should be decided by the jury: see Hutchins v. L. C. C. (1916), 80 J. P. 193; 14 L. G. R. 313; Recketts v. Tilling, [1915] 1 K. B. 644.

Negligence of driver supplied by contractor.

D. contracted with the defendants, an urban authority, to supply by the day a driver and horse to drive and draw their watering cart. The driver was employed and paid by D., and was not under the defendant's direction and control except that their inspector directed him what streets to water. In an action for damages for injuries caused by the negligent conduct of the driver whilst in charge of his cart, it was held (following Quarman v. Burnett (1840), 6 M. & W. 499, and distinguishing Rourke v. White Moss Colliery Co. (1877), 2 C. P. D. 205) that the defendants were not liable (Jones v. Liverpool Corporation (1885), 14 Q. B. D. 890; 49 J. P. 311).

A plaintiff sustained injury to his person and cab by reason of the vehicle colliding with an upright key left standing in a watercock on the roadway by a driver of one of the watercarts of the defendant council. The defendant L. was under agreement to supply the council for a period of three years with horses, harness and drivers on certain terms and conditions, amongst which was one placing the drivers under the orders of the council's surveyor in respect of the particular work to be done on each day. The driver referred to was supplied under the agreement. In an action against both defendants the jury found that the driver was negligent, that he was the servant of L., but that at the time of the accident he was acting under the control of the defendant council in the act of filling his cart. It was held, following Penny v. Wimbledon U. D. C., ante, p. 587, that judgment should be entered against the council, and that on the construction of the agreement, and on the authority of Jones v. Liverpool Corporation, supra, judgment should also be entered against the defendant L. (Mileham v. Marylebone Borough Council and Latter (1903), 67 J. P. 110; 1 L. G. R. 412).

See a county court case in 127 L. T. Jo. 38, on the subject of an authority's liability for a nuisance arising out of the use of a steam roller let out by them to a third party.

Non-liability for accidents arising out of extraordinary causes.

Neither are a local authority responsible for accidents arising out of extraordinary causes, where all reasonable care has been taken to prevent such as would arise from ordinary causes. See Blyth v. Birmingham Waterworks Co. and the other cases cited in the notes to s. 66, ante, p. 144; and see Ridley, Whitley & Co., Limited v. Metropolitan Water Board (1905), Times, June 7th; East Ham Corporation v. Ilford Gas Co. (1905), Times, July 13th; Ocean Accident and Guarantee Corporation v. Ilford Gas Co. (1905), Times, July 29th. of a thoroughfare to clean the sewer, set up a winch over the hole, and protected three sides of it. Two men were at work. A boy of nine years running along the street, and looking over his shoulder, fell into the hole. It was held that the authority were not liable, as they were doing an ordinary act in a proper way with sufficient precautions (Adams v. Aberdeen Magistrates (1884), 11 Ct. of Sess. Cas. (4th ser). 852; and see McClelland v. Johnstone (1902), 4 F. 459; Plantza v. Glasgow Corporation, [1910] S. C. 786). Cf. Crane v. South Suburban Gas. Co., [1916] 1 K. B. 33; 80 J. P. 51. In that case workmen placed a firepail in which was a ladle containing molten lead, on vacant land near a highway. The fire was left unattended and unguarded. A passer-by accidentally knocked over the firepail and the molten metal was spilled on the plaintiff—a young child who was playing near with other children. It was held that the defendants were liable as what they were doing was a danger unless precautions were taken to guard the public using the highway.

Liability of local authority charging tolls.

Where a public board let the navigation of a river and omitted to give notice to the lessee to repair a lock, and in consequence of such want of repair a barge owner sustained loss, the board were held not to be liable, as the loss did not necessarily result from the omission (Walker v. Goe (1859), 4 H. & N. 350). Where a corporation were empowered to improve the navigation of a river, and for that purpose erected staunches, the effect of which, combined with the accumulation of filth and the growth of weeds, was that the river overflowed and damaged the lands adjoining, it was held that the riparian owner had no ground of action against the corporation, though he might have a remedy by applying for compensation under a section corresponding to s. 308, post, p 642 (Cracknell v. Thetford (Mayor of) (1869), L. R. 4 C. P. 629).

The principle on which a private person or company is liable for damages occasioned by the neglect of servants applies to a corporation which has been entrusted by statute to perform certain works and to receive tolls for the use of those works, although the tolls, unlike the tolls received by the private person or company, are not applicable to the use of the individual corporators or to that of the corporation, but are devoted to the maintenance of the works (Mersey Docks and Harbour Trustees v. Gibbs (1866), L. R. 1 H. L. 93; 30 J. P. 467). Therefore, conservators of a river having in part constructed and in part acquired a towing path, and having taken tolls for the use of it, were held liable for damages caused by its defective condition (Winch v. Thames (Conservators of) (1874), L. R. 9 C. P. 378; 36 J. P. 646).

When public commissioners are guilty of negligence in the management of their works, and persons, to avert or remove damage which would result from such negligence to themselves, do an act which damages a third person, he has a right of action against the commissioners whose negligence was the primary cause of the damage (Collins v. Middle Level Commissioners (1869), L. R. 4 C. P. 279). See also Harrison v. G. N. Rail. Co. (1864), 33 L. J. Ex. 266; 3 H. & C. 231; Burrows v. March Gas Co. (1872), L. R. 7 Ex. 96; 36 J. P. 517.

General liability for civil injuries.

A local authority will be liable for breaches of contract and for civil injuries to the same extent as any other corporate body. Hence in Higgs v. Godwin (1858), 27 L. J. Q. B. 421; 31 L. T. (o.s.) 196, an action was brought against a local board for infringing a patent.

In order to maintain an action against a local authority for payment of claims upon them payable out of particular funds, it must be shown that they are in possession of those funds, and that they are available for payment of the claims. See Pardoe v. Price (1847), 16 L. J. Ex. 192; 16 M. & W. 451; Lloyd v. Burrup (1868), L. R. 4 Ex. 63. But in a case where a local board, in default of owners executing works, contracted with a third person to execute them, and the contract contained a provision to pay him when the money was collected from the owners, it was held that he was entitled to recover for the work done by him, though the money could not be recovered from the owners by reason of a defect in the notices (Worthington v. Sudlow, ante, p. 304).

Where a vestry took possession of highways in respect of which a rent was payable to the representative of a former owner of the land, they were held liable to an action for non-payment of the rent (Sansom v. Shoreditch (Vestry of) (1869), L. R. 4 C. P. 654; cf. Foley's Charity Trustees v. Dudley Corporation, [1910] 1 K. B. 317; 74 J. P. 41).

As to the liability of a local authority to be sued for salaries due to officers, see the notes to s. 189, ante, at p. 450.

Where a municipal corporation was sued for a debt owing by them in that character, it was held that they could set off a debt due to them as a local board (Pedder v. Preston (Corporation of) (1862), 12 C. B. (N.S.) 535; 6 L. T. 540).

An action for malicious prosecution will lie against a corporation (Cornford v. Carlton Bank, [1899] 1 Q. B. 392; affirmed on other grounds, [1900] 1 Q. B. 22; and see Citizens' Life Assurance Co. v. Brown, [1904] A. C. 423). See also Wiffen v. Bailey and Romford U. D. C., [1915] 1 K. B. 600; 79 J. P. 145.

As to the liability of a corporate body in respect of a libel or slander published by one of its servants acting within the scope of his employment, see Beaton v. Glasgow Corporation, [1908] S. C. 1010; Glasgow Corporation v. Lorimer, [1911] A. C. 209.

As to "punitive" damages in an action against a local authority for trespass, see Davis v. Bromley U. D. C. (1903), 67 J. P. 275; 1 L. G. R. 668; and as to such damages where the defendant is not the actual wrongdoer but is responsible only as his principal, see Black v. N. B. Rail. Co., [1908] S. C. 444, per the LORD PRESIDENT.

An action for damages will not lie against an authority for maliciously disapproving building plans (Davis v. Bromley Borough Council, [1908] 1 K. B. 170; 71 J. P. 513).

Enforcing judgment against local authority.

It becomes necessary to consider how a judgment recovered against a local authority can be enforced. Where a judgment was recovered against the clerk of commissioners under an Improvement Act, and the sheriff had on a fi. fa. seized certain goods of the commissioners vested in them for public purposes, the Court of Exchequer refused to set aside the writ of fi. fa. and subsequent proceedings, but left the parties to bring an action of trespass, or to take such other step as they might think proper (Saunders v. Slack (1864), 11 L. T. 484). This case was approved in Worral Waterworks Co. v. Lloyd (1866), L. R. 1 C. P. 719. There land, which had been conveyed to a local board for the purposes of the Public Health Acts, was used as a reservoir for the supply of water to the district. A judgment having been obtained against the board in the name of their clerk, it was held that the land was liable to be taken under a writ of elegit. WILLES, J., said: "We have been anticipated by the Exchequer in Saunders v. Slack, and by the decision of the House of Lords in the case of Mersey Docks Trustees v. Gibbs, ante, p. 590. It has been said that the House of Lords only referred to the right of the plaintiff to judgment, and not to the execution; but the principle upon which their decision rests is equally applicable to the right to execution as to judgment, and it was so understood in Coe v. Wise (1866), L. R. 1 Q. B. 711." If there be no property of the authority available to satisfy the debt, the proper remedy is by mandamus to the authority to pay or satisfy the judgment out of moneys in their hands or rates which they can make. A local authority has implied power to make a rate to pay damages for injuries caused by the negligence of their servants in the exercise of their statutory powers (R. v. Selby Dam Drainage Commissioners, [1892] 1 Q. B. 348; 56 J. P. 356; Parker v. Carrigrohane Drainage Board, [1902] 2 I. R. 138). The decisions on mandamus in such cases have already been noticed. See the notes to s. 210, ante, at pp. 474 et seq. That section, however, affords no defence to an action to recover a debt more than six months old, for judgment may be enforced by the ordinary process of execution without recourse to a mandamus (South Metropolitan Gas Co. v. Bermondsey Borough Council (1901), Times, May 18th). See also Webb v. Herne Bay Commissioners, ante, p. 476, where it was held that an action for a mandamus might be maintained to compel the board to pay the amount due out of moneys in their hands without making a rate for the purpose; and Bush v. Beavan, ante, p. 451, where a mandamus was refused to enforce payment of a debt against commissioners, the debt not being a charge on the local rate, but due from the commissioners personally. The mandamus may be claimed in the same action as that to establish the debt (Ward v. Lowndes (1859), 1 El. & El. 940; 29 L. J. Q. B. 40).

In 1885 the plaintiff obtained judgment with costs against the defendants in an action to restrain them from discharging sewage into a watercourse on his property. In 1890 the costs were taxed and the plaintiff obtained a garnishee order nisi attaching all money belonging to the defendants in the hands of their treasurer. This order was discharged on the ground (following Waddington v. City of London Union (1858), El. B. & E. 370) that the funds attached were raised by rates to meet expenses of the current year and not past liabilities. The plaintiff then issued a writ of elegit against the lands of the defendants, and the defendants moved to discharge it on the ground that execution ought not to issue against their lands to satisfy a debt which they could not legally pay. The sheriff had not made his return to the writ, and there was no evidence to show whether the defendants had any lands which could be lawfully applied in payment of the debt. It was held that the motion was premature and must be dismissed (Jersey (Lord) v. Uxbridge R. S. A. (No. 1), (1891), 55 J. P. 165; 7 T. L. R. 294). Afterwards the sheriff delivered under the writ land acquired for a sewage farm on behalf of a contributory place. It was held that such land could not be taken in execution to satisfy a debt payable out of general expenses, having been purchased out of a loan borrowed on the credit of the separate rates on the contributory place, and all proceedings under the writ and inquisition were stayed (Jersey (Lord) v. Uxbridge R. S. A. (No. 2), [1891] 3 Ch. 183).

When a local authority enter into any contract, they will be liable to the contractor in an action on the contract if it is broken by them, and he will not be compelled to proceed in equity, or by mandamus, in the first place, or in an action on the case for not paying money which the defendants may have in their hands (Nowell v. Worcester (Mayor of) (1854), 9 Ex. 457; 23 L. J. Ex. 139; Payne v. Brecon (Mayor of) (1858), 22 J. P. 690; 3 H. & N. 572). A judgment against a municipal corporation will not, however, operate as a charge upon the real estate belonging to it, unless the Local Government Board (51 & 52 Vict. c. 41, s. 72) so order (Arnold v. Gravesend (Mayor of) (1856), 25 L. J. Ch. 777); nor, as it seems, upon other property of the corporation, according to Pallister v. Gravesend (Mayor of) (1850), 9 C. B. 774; Arnold v. Ridge (1853), 13 C. B. 745; 22 L. J. C. P. 235; but see Worral Waterworks Co. v. Lloyd, ante, p. 591.

See s. 249, ante, p. 549, with reference to the taxation of the bill of a solicitor employed by a local authority.

Where a local authority enter into a contract ultra vires, and cannot pay the contractor out of their funds, the individual members of the board are not personally liable on that contract (Bailey v. Cuckson (1858), 32 L. T. (o.s.) 124; 7 W. R. 16). Whether they can be made liable as on a personal guarantee may be a question; but according to Mountstephen v. Lakeman (1870), L. R. 5 Q. B. 613, no action would be maintainable unless there was a written document in conformity with the Statute of Frauds. This decision was reversed in error upon a different view of the facts ((1871), L. R. 7 Q. B. 196), and the House of Lords confirmed the judgment of the Court of Error, holding that there was a personal pledge of credit ((1874), L. R. 7 H. L. 17). As to the liability of individual members of a board for an illegal act committed by their officer, but by their direction, see Mill v. Hawker, ante, p. 585. In a more recent case a metropolitan vestry passed resolutions authorising certain illegal expenditure out of the rates. An action was brought by the Attorney-General at the relation of a ratepayer, and by the ratepayer as plaintiff against the vestry and six of the vestrymen who had voted for the resolution, to restrain the proposed application of the rates. It was not alleged that any of the rates had been applied as proposed, but merely that the vestry intended to so apply them. It was held that the individual defendants were not properly made parties for the purpose of obtaining costs from them, and that the action must be dismissed as against them (Att.-Gen. v. Bermondsey (Vestry of) (1883), 23 Ch. D. 60; 47 J. P. 453). It would seem from this case that if the money had in fact been paid for the illegal purpose, the individual members might have been compelled to recoup the money and pay the costs, according to Att.-Gen. v. Compton (1842), 1 Y. & C. C. C. 417. See also O'Shea v. Cork R. D. C., on p. 500, ante.

It will be remembered that under 29 & 30 Vict. c. 90, s. 46, re-enacted in s. 7, ante, p. 39, every local board was incorporated and rendered competent to sue and be sued in the corporate name. But under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 138, local boards in non-corporate districts were to sue and be sued in the name of their clerk. Where proceedings were taken in the name of the clerk after the passing of the Act which incorporated the board, the court allowed them to be amended by substituting the local board for the clerk. See Deeks v. Bailey (1869), 21 L. T. 581; Bolingbroke (Lord) v. Townsend (1873), L. R. 8 C. P. 645; 37 J. P. 7; Mills v Scott (1873), L. R. 8 Q B. 496; 37 J. P. 807; Prior v. West Ham L. B. (1866), 15 L. T. 250.

Where a local board were defendants in a Chancery suit, and no answer was put in to the bill, all the members of the board having resigned, the Vice-Chancellor allowed the plaintiff to take a decree in the terms of the petition (Hardinge v. Southborough L. B. (1875), 32 L. T. 250).

If a local authority and their contractor are sued on a joint tort and the contractor pays into court with a denial of liability a sum sufficient to satisfy the plaintiff's claim, such payment does not disentitle the plaintiff to judgment for costs against the authority (Penny v. Wimbledon U. D. C., ante, p. 260).

Separate and distinct causes of action cannot be joined in one action against a local authority and another tort feasor, though both torts result in but one injury (Thompson v. London C. C., [1899] 1 Q. B. 840).

Remedies of local authority.

As the local authority are liable to proceedings in the courts of law, so they are entitled to the remedies of other suitors. Thus, where a local board had contracted with a sewage company for the latter to execute works for the removal of sewage, and the company so improperly carried on the works that they drove back large quantities of the sewage into the district, it was held that the board might maintain a bill for an injunction, and that it was not required that the Attorney-General should file an information (Nuneaton L. B. v. General Sewage Co. (1875), L. R. 20 Eq. 127). The intervention of the Attorney-General was held not to be necessary because the action was based on contract and there was an interference with property of the plaintiffs (see Wallasey L. B. v Gracey, ante, p. 207, per STIRLING, J.).

See the R. S. C. Order XXXI., r. 5, as to interrogatories in actions by or against local authorities See also as to discovery of documents, Finlay v. Glasgow Corporation, [1915] S C. 615.

See Munday v. London C. C., [1916] 2 K. B. 331, as to the right of a defendant to pay into court with a notice admitting negligence but denying damage and in this manner denying liability. Note to Section 265.

Notices.

266. Notices orders and other such documents under this Act may be in writing or print, or partly in writing and partly in print; and if the same require authentication by the local authority the signature thereof by the clerk to the local authority or their surveyor or inspector of nuisances shall be sufficient authentication. Notices, etc. may be printed or written.

It is presumed that this should be read reddendo singula singulis, so that the notices referred to must be such as each officer by virtue of his office can properly sign.

37 & 38 Vict. c. 89, s. 40, rendered the notice sufficient if it purported to be signed by the officer; but as these words are omitted, the signature must be proved in any proceedings where the notice is of importance, unless it be admitted by the opposite party.

The provision in the text was of importance under the P. H. A., 1848, in respect of non-corporate districts, where a certain number of members were required to sign special documents. But as there are now no such districts, all being incorporated, and there is no requisition as to signature by members, the section seems to be one of extreme caution.

This section does not make it necessary for the clerk to sign a demand for expenses incurred under s. 36, ante, p. 96, where such demand is issued and signed by the council's rating surveyor and collector in the course of his ordinary work (Willis v. Rotherham Corporation (1911), 75 J. P. 421; 105 L. T. 436).

A notice under s. 150 on a printed form filled up with the name of the clerk in print at the foot was held a sufficient signature in Brydges v. Dix (1891), 7 T. L. R. 215. The court distinguished R. v. Cowper (1890), 24 Q. B. D. 60, 553. It is doubtful whether signature by a clerk in the name of the clerk to the authority would be sufficient: See France v. Dutton, [1891] 2 Q. B. 208.

267. Notices orders and any other documents (a) required or authorised to be served under this Act may be served by delivering the same to or at the residence (b) of the person to whom they are respectively addressed, or where addressed to the owner (c) or occupier of premises (c) by delivering the same or a true copy thereof to some person on the premises, or if there is no person on the premises who can be so served by fixing the same on some conspicuous part of the premises (d); they may also be served by post (e) by a prepaid letter, and if served by post shall be deemed to have been served at the time when the letter containing the same would be delivered in the ordinary course of post, and in proving such service it shall be sufficient to prove that the notice order or other document was properly addressed and put into the post. Service of notices.

Any notice by this Act required to be given to the owner or occupier of any premises may be addressed by the description of the "owner" or "occupier" of the premises (naming them) in respect of which the notice is given, without further name or description (f).

Note to Section 267.

(a) It seems that these words include a summons, which may therefore be served as provided by this section (R. v. Mead, [1894] 2 Q. B. 124; 58 J. P. 448; R. v. Braithwaite, [1918] 2 K. B. 319; 82 J. P. 242).

Summons included.

(b) It was held in R. v. Braithwaite, supra, that for the purposes of a summons (being a document within the meaning of the above section) the ratepayer's place of business is to be treated as his "residence." In Blackwell v. England (1858), 27 L. J. Q. B. 124, the court said that meaning of the word "residence" must be determined with reference to the purpose of the statute in which it was used: Therefore, although for the purposes of the Poor Law Acts it meant the place where a person lived with his family, yet for the purpose of a Bill of Sale Act, which required the residence of an attesting witness to be stated, a business address was sufficient. See also W. R. Yorkshire C. C. v. Colne Corporation (1918), 82 J. P. 14, and Berks C. C. v. Reading Corporation, [1921] 2 K. B. 787; 85 J. P. 173. And see Mason v. Bibby, and other cases in note (d), infra. A person may have more than one residence, for he may have houses in different places, each of which may be called his residence (Walcot v. Boyfield (1854), 1 Kay, 534; 18 Jur. 570). Except when a notice is addressed to the owner or occupier of premises and is served on someone on, or is affixed to, the premises to which it relates, such notice must, in the case of a limited company, apparently be left at or posted to the registered office of the company: see the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, ss. 116, 285, and Pearks, Gunston and Tee, Ltd. v. Richardson, [1902] 1 K. B. 91; 66 J. P. 119.

"Residence."

Mode of service.

(c) See the definitions of owner and premises in s. 4, ante, pp. 7, 8.

(d) What is a "conspicuous" part of the premises is a question of fact (West Ham Corporation v. Thomas (1908), 73 J. P. 65; 6 L. G. R. 1043).

The P. H. A., 1848, s. 150, provided that in all cases in which any notice was required to be given to the owner or occupier of any premises, it should be sufficient to address the notice to them by the description of the "owner" or "occupier" of the premises, and that the notice should be served either personally or by delivering to same to some inmate of the owner's or occupier's place of abode:—Held, that service of a notice properly addressed to an owner by name by delivering it to his clerk at his place of business was sufficient, s. 150 being merely in aid of service of notices; per MARTIN, B., the service was good under s. 150, a place of business being a place of abode, and a clerk an inmate for the purposes of that section (Mason v. Bibby (1864), 33 L. J. M. C. 105; 28 J. P. 121). A similar service was held sufficient under the present section in Newport (Mayor, etc. of) v. Lang (1892), 57 J. P. 199, and, as stated above, in R. v. Braithwaite, [1918] 2 K. B. 319; 82 J. P. 242. See, however, R. v. Lilley (1911), 75 J. P. 95; 104 L. T. 77, as to the meaning of "place of abode" in the S. J. A., 1848, s. 1; followed in R. v. Rhodes (ex parte McVittie) (1915), 79 J. P. 527; 85 L. J. K. B. 830; and see McVittie v. Marsden, [1917] 2 K. B. 878; 81 J. P. 109. For a case under a local Act as to the service of a notice on the parent of a verminous child, see Hope v. Devaney (1914), 78 J. P. 343; 12 L. G. R. 1286.

In a case decided under the Valuation (Metropolis) Act, 1869, it was held that it was not sufficient to serve a notice that an Order under that Act had been made, there should be service of the Order or a copy thereof; see Curtis v. Crow (1916), 80 J. P. 175; 14 L. G. R. 395.

In Woodford U. D. C. v. Henwood (1899), 64 J. P. 148, service by affixing a notice on the premises was held good, although the residence of the owner was well known to the council. See also to the same effect, Sharpley v. Bear (1903), 67 J. P. 442, where the name and residence of the owner were known to certain of the council's officials but not to the clerk who addressed the notice to "the owner" and fixed it on the premises.

The London Building Act, 1894, s. 188, provides that "any notice, order or other document required or authorised to be served under this Act the service of which is not provided for by the Summary Jurisdiction Acts . . . may be served by delivering a copy thereof at or by sending a copy thereof by post in a registered letter to the usual or last known residence in the United Kingdom of the person to whom it is addressed, or by delivering the same to some person on the premises to which it relates, or if no person be found on the premises, then by fixing a copy thereof on some conspicuous part of the building to which it relates. . . ." It was held that in the absence of evidence that reasonable inquiry had been made to find out who was the owner so that he could be served under the S. J. A., 1848, s. 1, the provisions of s. 188 were not applicable (R. v. Mead, [1898] 1 Q. B. 110; 61 J. P. 759).

As to the meaning of the words "last known address" in the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, s. 142 (now s. 146 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1914), see Re Follick (1908), 97 L. T. 645.

As to the necessity or non-necessity for a notice to produce in order that secondary evidence may be given of a notice, see Doe d. Fleming v. Somerton (1845), 7 Q. B. 58; Andrews v. Wirral R. D. C. (1916), 80 J. P. 29.

As to service of proceedings to enforce a charge, where the owner of the property is not known, see Wealdstone U. D. C. v. Evershed, ante, p. 572.

A person might in certain circumstances be estopped from setting up "no notice." See Pierson v. Altrincham U. D. C. (1917), 81 J. P. 149; 15 L. G. R. 228.

(e) The P. H. A., 1848, s. 150, allowed service by post only when the owner's place of abode was not within the district: there is no such distinction in the text. Prepayment of the letter must be proved in order to prove service (Walthamstow U. D. C. v. Henwood, [1897] 1 Ch. 41; 61 J. P. 23). In a case decided under the Valuation (Metropolis) Act, 1869, where the wording of s. 65 is very similar to this section, it was held that the presumption that a notice had been received when properly addressed, prepaid and delivered to the post office is not merely a presumption of fact unless the contrary be shown, but is a presumption of law whether in fact the notice was received by the addressee or not (R. v. Westminster Union (ex parte Woodward), [1917] 1 K. B. 832; 81 J. P. 93). See also Watts v. Vickers, Ltd. (1917), 86 L. J. K. B. 177; 33 T. L. R. 137.

(f) Notwithstanding this permission, it will be found in general expedient to ascertain, if possible, the names of the owners and occupiers: embarrassment often arises in dealing with unknown persons. In case of doubt a notice may be addressed to "Mr. A. B. or other the owner of" the premises, etc. Cf. Woodford U. D. C. v. Henwood, ante, p. 594; Butler v. Gravesend Urban Sanitary Authority (1894), 58 J. P. 446.

If the address is on the outside it may be that the omission to repeat it in the body of the notice would be regarded as immaterial (Linforth v. Butler, [1899] 1 Q. B. 116).

Appeal.

Appeal in certain cases to Local Government Board.

268. Where any person deems himself aggrieved by the decision of the local authority in any case in which the local authority are empowered to recover in a summary manner any expenses incurred by them, or to declare such expenses to be private improvement expenses, he may, within twenty-one days (a) after notice of such decision (b), address a memorial to the Local Government Board, stating the grounds of his complaint, and shall deliver a copy thereof to the local authority (c); the Local Government Board may make such Order in the matter as to the said Board may seem equitable, and the Order so made shall be binding and conclusive on all parties (d).

Any proceedings that may have been commenced for the recovery of such expenses by the local authority shall, on the delivery to them of such copy as aforesaid, be stayed; and the Local Government Board may, if it thinks fit, by its Order (e), direct the local authority to pay to the person so proceeded against such sum as the said Board may consider to be a just compensation for the loss damage or grievance thereby sustained by him.

(a) The Appeal is now to the Ministry of Health and the memorial of appeal must be received by them on or before the twenty-first day after the receipt of the notice of decision (i.e., the demand for payment—see following note). See also note (c).

Appeals can be made against "decisions" of local authorities in proceedings under ss. 23, 36, 41, 46, 47, 62, 70, 98, 120, and 150 of the Act. Appeals against rates (even water rates) cannot be made under this section.

What is a "decision."

an owner, and demand of payment having been made after three months had expired (see s. 257), the owner deeming himself aggrieved by the decision of the authority, addressed a memorial, by way of appeal, to the L. G. B., stating the grounds of his complaint. On a rule for prohibition to the Board, the Court of Appeal held that an appeal lay to the Board, and that no prohibition ought to be granted. The court held that the demand of payment was the first decision from which an appeal would lie under the section. With regard to the power of the Board on such appeal, BAGGALLAY, L.J., said: "That while they might properly refuse to travel beyond the grounds of complaint alleged in the memorial, yet that they had jurisdiction to inquire into the whole matter, and to inquire whether the aggregate amount of the expenses was unreasonable or unnecessary, as well as whether the proportion assessed upon the appellant was right." And BRETT, L.J., said: "It seems to me obvious from the construction of the Act, that the Board have power to inquire into every circumstance, however remote, which could reasonably determine the question whether it was equitable or not that a particular sum should be paid" (R. (or Penarth) v. Local Government Board (1882), 10 Q. B. D. 309; 47 J. P. 228). In the same case BRETT, L.J., also expressed an opinion that the decision of the Board was judicial, and that it was their duty to hear the parties presenting the memorial, though not necessarily by hearing oral evidence. It was their duty, however, to allow the appellant to know the answer of the authority to his memorial, so as to let him reply to it. The decision in the Penarth Case was applied by the Divisional Court in R. v. L. G. B. (Ex parte Thorp) (1915), 79 J. P. 248; 13 L. G. R. 402, to a decision of a local authority to substitute water-closets in lieu of privies under s. 36, ante. It was held that the decision referred to in s. 268 is a decision of the local authority that the expenses incurred by them should be recovered in a summary manner or that they shall be declared to be private improvement expenses, and is not any decision of the local authority in a case in which the expenses may ultimately be recovered summarily or be declared to be private improvement expenses. As to this see further notes (c), (d), post, pp. 598, 599, and comments on this case in 78 J. P. N. 367.

Upon the hearing of a complaint to recover expenses under s. 150, the defendant objected that the plans referred to in the notice showed that part of the work had been executed upon land belonging to private owners. The magistrate found as a fact that the land did not belong to private owners, but formed part of the street when the notice was given, and made an order for payment of the amount apportioned. On application for certiorari upon affidavits which satisfied the court that the magistrate's finding was contrary to the fact, it was held, assuming that the magistrate had jurisdiction to inquire whether the case was within the statute, that the matter was at least partly within the statute, so as to give the magistrate jurisdiction, and that the remedy was not by certiorari. See s. 262, ante, p. 582. It was further held that the proper remedy was by appeal under this section against the decision of the authority (Ex parte Wake, R. v. Sheffield (Recorder of) (1883), 12 Q. B. D. 142; 48 J. P. 197. See also Derby (Mayor, etc. of) v. Grudgings, ante, p. 307).

In Ex parte Wake, supra, the ground of the decision was that as part of the work was executed upon a street, there was some jurisdiction to make the apportionment. "The complaint," said BRETT, M.R., "is, that although the local authority might properly have determined to pave the street, and might properly have fixed the amount to be expended thereon, yet the sum expended was not on the street only, but was partly on the street and partly on private land, and that therefore the decision of the local authority was wrong; that is to say, that it fixed a wrong sum to lay before the surveyor to apportion, because it had not confined the sum to that which had been expended on the street, but had extended it to a larger sum, part of which had been expended elsewhere than on the street. The complaint, therefore, if anything, is, that the appellant is aggrieved by the decision of the local authority, and consequently it comes within the exact terms of s. 268, which has pointed out the remedy the appellant has, namely, that in respect of that grievance he is to appeal to the Local Government Board. That is the particular remedy pointed out by the statute, and it being one for a grievance in respect of a new liability, it is the only remedy which can be taken. If, therefore, the case was within the statute, the magistrate, upon the summons before him for an order for payment, could not determine whether the decision of the local authority was right or wrong; but could only inquire whether the proper notice had been given, and if it had, he could only make the order of payment. It was then said that the magistrate was bound to inquire whether the case was within the statute at all, and that if the local authority had assumed to cast a liability on a person to do that which was not within the Act, as to contribute to the expenditure of paving that which was not a street, and the magistrate found that that was so, and that it was not within the Act at all, then he had no jurisdiction to make the order. But, on the other side, it was said that if the magistrate had jurisdiction to make that inquiry he had jurisdiction in the matter, and if he came to a wrong conclusion there was an appeal to the quarter sessions, but that there it must end, and there was no appeal from the sessions. Now, it may be that the magistrate has power to inquire whether the case is within the Act at all, and if so, and he finds that it is not within the Act, it may be that he has no jurisdiction to make any further order. It may be that he is bound to make that inquiry, and that the only appeal from the conclusion he may come to is to the quarter sessions, or it may be that he has no power to make such inquiry at all. It seems to me to be unnecessary to decide that matter, for even if the magistrate had jurisdiction to inquire whether the case was or was not within the statute at all, and if supposing it was not, he had no jurisdiction to make any further order, I have come to the conclusion that this matter was not wholly without the statute. It would be without the statute if no order at all could have been made by the local authority, but if any part of the expenditure had been made in respect of a street within the meaning of the statute it is obvious that as to that part the local authority might fix the proper sum to be apportioned by the surveyor. Here it cannot be denied that a part of the expenditure was in respect of that which was a street within the meaning of the statute and that the appellant was a frontager on that street, and it therefore follows that an order might be made upon him which would be an order within the meaning of the statute, and all that could be said against it would be that although it might lawfully be made it was a wrong order." And see Bournemouth Commissioners v. Watts (1884), 14 Q. B. D. 87; 49 J. P. 102. In that case an action was brought by a local authority to recover paving expenses under s. 150. It appeared that part of the work, exceeding £50, had been done by contractors employed by the authority, but that no written contract under the authority's seal had been executed as required by s. 174. It was assumed by SMITH, J., that the objection, if valid, would have been an objection to the apportionment which could have been raised in the time and manner provided by s. 257. But according to the above cases the point might have been raised by appeal under this section. See also Midland Rail. Co. v. Watton (1886), 17 Q. B. D. 30; 50 J. P. 405. The assumption of SMITH, J., supra, is also opposed to Walthamstow L. B. v. Staines, [1891] 2 Ch. 606, where the court held that an objection to the legality of certain charges for legal and other expenses included in an apportionment under s. 150 could only be raised by way of appeal under this section; and the decision in this case was followed by STIRLING, J., with regard to a similar section in a local Act in West Hartlepool (Mayor, etc. of) v. Robinson (1897), 61 J. P. 200; 75 L. T. 677; affirmed (1897), 62 J. P. 35; 77 L. T. 387. See also In re Hanwell U. D. C. and Smith, and the cases cited therewith, at p. 313, ante.

In Eccles v. Wirral Sanitary Authority (1886), 17 Q. B. D. 107; 50 J. P. 596, MATHEW, J., referring to the judgment of the MASTER OF THE ROLLS in the Penarth Case, ante, p. 596, said: "I should have thought that there was much weight in the argument that the Local Government Board could not be treated as a court having exclusive jurisdiction in a case of this kind. It may be that if a party chooses to resort to that tribunal, he should be bound by what it does. But that it should otherwise be conclusive, is opposed to all principle. It is not a court. No procedure is pointed out, and the idea is that the Board are to pronounce what judgment they choose, though opposed to law and principles of equity, so long as they think it equity. That question is well deserving of very careful consideration, and far more elaborate argument than it was necessary to address to us in this case." The court (MATHEW and SMITH, JJ.) left it undecided whether, on a question whether a street was a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large, a frontager could appeal to the L. G. B. under this section; but an appeal on this ground against a demand for payment would certainly be entertained.

The only mode of questioning an order of a local authority under s. 36, ante, p. 96, is an appeal to the M. of H. under this section after a demand has been made for the expenses (Robinson v. Mayor, etc. of Sunderland (No. 2), [1899] 1 Q. B. 751; 63 J. P. 341). If under that section the authority decide not only that the existing accommodation is insufficient, but also that under the particular circumstances of the case a different kind of accommodation is required, e.g., a water-closet instead of a privy, there is an appeal on both points to the Board (Nicholl v. Epping U. D. C., [1899] 1 Ch. 844; 63 J. P. 841).

Note to Section 268.

Section 229, ante, p. 510, provides for another appeal to the M. of H. against an order of a rural authority apportioning special expenses between contributory places.

It will be observed from s. 257 that, where expenses have to be apportioned, an authority are not in a position to serve a notice of demand until the expiration of three months from the service of the notice of apportionment, or if the apportionment is disputed, until such dispute has been settled by arbitration or withdrawn. In cases where a premature demand has been served by an authority and an owner has appealed against it to the M. of H. the Ministry have pointed out that, as the demand was invalid, there was no statutory notice of decision against which any appeal could be made.

An appeal will apparently lie to the Ministry even if an owner has paid the amount claimed in compliance with a demand for same, but the appeal must of course be within twenty-one days.

Memorial of complaint.

(c) The memorial should be to the Minister of Health, and should be forwarded to the Secretary, Whitehall, S.W.1. It should be signed by the party aggrieved, and should state his case clearly, but as concisely as possible. The Ministry will require to be furnished with all the original notices served upon the appellant endorsed with dates of their receipt. The appellant must not omit to send a copy of his memorial to the authority, and it would be well for him to state in his memorial that he has done so. A failure to comply with this requirement within the twenty-one days will probably result in the Ministry refusing to entertain the appeal. When documents required by the Ministry have been mislaid or destroyed, copies should be obtained from the clerk to the authority. The usual practice of the Ministry is to obtain the observations of the authority upon the memorial (of which they should be in possession of a copy), and then, unless the questions in dispute are of such a character that they can be decided otherwise, to direct one of their inspectors to hold a local inquiry, at which both the authority and appellant can be present or represented. Upon consideration of the inspector's report an order is issued.

In Local Government Board v. Arlidge, [1915] A. C. 120; 79 J. P. 97, the House of Lords held (reversing R. v. Local Government Board, Ex parte Arlidge, [1914] 1 K. B. 160; 78 J. P. 25), that the Board, on an appeal to them under the Housing, Town Planning, etc. Act, 1909, may act upon written evidence, and need neither hear the appellant orally, nor disclose to him the reports and documents placed before them, and further, that the appellant is not entitled to know the name of the official whose decision the Board's order represents. And see hereon R. v. Housing Tribunal of Appeal, [1920] 3 K. B. 334; 84 J. P. 252.

Powers of M. of H.

(d) As to the powers and duties of the Ministry on such appeal, see R. v. Local Government Board, ante, p. 596. See also Cook v. Ipswich L. B., ante, p. 306. Where on an apportionment of paving expenses under s. 150, ante, p. 286, a frontager addressed a memorial stating the grounds of his complaint to be that the works were unnecessary, and were executed improperly and at too high a price, and that it was inequitable to charge him with the whole expenses, and the L. G. B., after a local inquiry confirmed the apportionment, it was held that on summary proceedings to enforce the apportionment the frontager might take the objection that the street was a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large (Seabrook v. Grays Thurrock L. B. (1891), 8 T. L. R. 19).

In Bristol Corporation v. Sinnott, [1918] 1 Ch. 62; 82 J. P. 9 (see ante, p. 303), frontagers objecting to a notice under s. 150, ante, presented a memorial to the L. G. B. under this section appealing against an apportionment on the ground that the time allowed them to carry out the works was unreasonable. The Board after an inquiry intimated that they were prepared to confirm the apportionment, but the Board made no order, whereupon with the sanction of the Board the appeal was withdrawn. It was held that as no order had been made and the withdrawal of the appeal had been with the Board's sanction the proceedings before the Board did not estop the frontagers from raising the point as to the validity of the notice in an action to recover the amount of the private streets works charges. Note to Section 268.

It is not the practice of the Ministry to furnish either to local authorities or appellants reasons for their decisions or details on which they are based.

(e) It is a question how this Order can be enforced. It is not an Order to which s. 294, post, p. 627, applies. But according to R. v. Walker (1875), L. R. 10 Q. B. 355 ; 40 J. P. 230, the local authority might perhaps be indicted for a misdemeanor if they disobeyed it ; and probably obedience might be compelled by mandamus ; cf. R. v. Fulham Guardians, [1909] 2 K. B. 504 ; 73 J. P. 397. Enforcement of order.

Section 295, post, p. 627, provides for the publication of the Order if the Ministry should require it to be published.

269. Where any person deems himself aggrieved (a), by any rate made under the provisions of this Act (b), or by any order conviction (bb) judgment or determination of or by any matter or thing done by any court of summary jurisdiction (c), such person may appeal therefrom, subject to the conditions and regulations following (d) : Appeal to quarter sessions. [Repealed as to words in italics by 47 & 48 Vict. c. 43, so far as relates to an appeal against an order or conviction of a court of summary jurisdiction.]

(1) The appeal shall be made to the next court of quarter sessions (e) for the county division or place in which the cause of appeal has arisen, holden not less than twenty-one days after the demand of the rate or the decision of the court from which the appeal is made :

(2) The appellant shall, within fourteen days after the cause of appeal has arisen, give notice to the other party and to the authority or court of summary jurisdiction by whose act he deems himself aggrieved, of his intention to appeal, and of the ground thereof :

(3) The appellant shall, immediately after such notice, enter into a recognizance before a justice of the peace, with two sufficient sureties, conditioned personally to try such appeal, and to abide the judgment of the court thereon, and to pay such costs as may be awarded by the court, or give such other security by deposit of money or otherwise as the justice may allow :

(4) Where the appellant is in custody the justice may, on the appellant entering into such recognizance or giving such other security as aforesaid, release him from custody :

(5) On appeals under this Act against any rate the court of appeal shall have the same power to amend or quash any rate or assessment (f), and to award costs between the parties to the appeal, as is or may by law be vested in any court of quarter sessions with respect to amending or quashing any rate or assessment, or awarding costs, on appeals with respect to rates for the relief of the poor (g) ; and the costs awarded by the said court under this Act may be recovered in the same manner in all respects as costs awarded on the last-mentioned appeals (h) : Provided that, notwithstanding the quashing of any rate appealed against, all moneys charged by such rate shall, if the court of appeal think fit so to order, be levied as if no appeal had been made, and such moneys, when paid, shall be taken as payment on account of the next effective rate for the purposes in respect of which the quashed rate was made (i) :

Section 269.

(6) In the case of other appeals the court of appeal may if it thinks fit adjourn the appeal, and on the hearing thereof may confirm reverse or modify the decision of the court of summary jurisdiction, or remit the matter to the court of summary jurisdiction with the opinion of the court of appeal thereon, or make such other order in the matter as the court thinks just. The court of appeal may also make such order as to costs to be paid by either party as the court thinks just (k) :

(7) The decision of the court of appeal shall be binding on all parties (l), Provided that the court of appeal may, if such court thinks fit, state the facts specially for the determination of a superior court (m).

Party aggrieved.

(a) As to who is a party "aggrieved," see the note to s. 253, ante, p. 560. An Improvement Act gave a right of appeal against any order of the commissioners to any person aggrieved by it. At a meeting of ratepayers it was resolved that the commissioners be empowered, out of funds raised under the Act, to promote a Bill for a local Act. The Bill being rejected, the commissioners made an order for payment of the expenses out of the funds. The mover of the original resolution appealed as a ratepayer against this order:—Held, that he was precluded from appealing as aggrieved by an act which he had sanctioned (Harrup v. Bayley (1856), 20 J. P. 627 ; 6 El. & Bl. 218). A mortgagee of licensed premises was held entitled to appeal, as a person aggrieved, against the refusal of justices to renew the licence (Garrett v. Middlesex JJ. (1884), 12 Q. B. D. 620 ; 48 J. P. 357) ; but an owner of licensed premises is not aggrieved by a conviction of the licensee (R. v. Andover JJ. (1886), 16 Q. B. D. 711 ; 50 J. P. 549). Nor is the owner of a film which has been hired out a person aggrieved by a notice prohibiting the exhibition of the film served in pursuance of a condition attached to a licence granted under the Cinematograph Act, 1909 (Ex parte Stott, [1916] 1 K. B. 7 ; 80 J. P. 169). See also R. v. London JJ., infra ; Drapers' Co. v. Hadden (1892), 57 J. P. 200 ; 9 T. L. R. 36 ; Moss v. Hancock, [1899] 2 Q. B. 111 ; 63 J. P. 517). It would seem that a person who is, by agreement, ultimately liable to pay a rate, may be a person aggrieved by the rate, for it has been held that the words "any person who may feel himself aggrieved by any valuation list" in the Union Assessment Committee Act, 1862, s. 18 (which gives a right to object before the assessment committee), are not confined to a person actually entered in the rate book as a ratepayer, but include a person who, by virtue of an agreement, is under an obligation to refund to the person actually rated any rates which he may be called upon to pay (R. v. Brentford Union (1907), 71 J. P. 281).

What objections competent.

(b) A question was raised in Ricardo v. Maidenhead L. B. (1857), 21 J. P. 359 ; 2 H. & N. 257, whether an appeal lay against an order of justices ordering payment of a rate which had not itself been appealed against. The court did not decide the question. But the case was decided under the P. H. A., 1848, s. 103 of which enabled justices to enforce a rate by warrant without order. Under the present Act an order is necessary (see s. 256, ante, p. 564), and there seems to be no reason why an appeal should not lie. It may still be doubted, however, whether on such appeal an objection could be taken which goes to the validity of the rate as distinguished from the jurisdiction of justices to enforce it. In the case of the poor rate, an appeal does not lie against a warrant to enforce payment until the distress thereunder has been levied (R. v. Lindsey JJ, [1912] 2 K. B. 413 ; 76 J. P. 311). It has been said that on such an appeal an appellant cannot avail himself of objections which he might have urged against the rate itself on an appeal against it (R. v. Kent JJ., Ex parte Roots (1867), 16 L. T. 672). The report of this case is very meagre, and semble the decision must be taken with some qualification, for it would certainly seem that an objection that a party rated is not an occupier would be open on both appeals. The objections which can be taken before justices when proceedings are taken before them to enforce payment of a poor rate are discussed at 77 J. P. N. 301, 315 ; and see R. v. Hannam ; Bates v. Plumstead (Overseers of), and other cases cited therewith at p. 565, ante.

(bb) The general right of appeal given by the provision in the text is not taken away by s. 37 (1) of the Criminal Justice Administration Act, 1914, which confines the right of appeal to those who have pleaded not guilty or have not admitted the truth of the information: see Mittelmann v. Denman, [1920] 1 K. B. 519; 84 J. P. 39. Note to Section 269.

(c) For the definition "court of summary jurisdiction," see ante, p. 36.

The words "order, conviction, judgment, or determination of or by any matter or thing done by," do not necessarily enable a prosecutor in a criminal matter to appeal if the information laid by him is heard and dismissed. It is a general rule that, except where there is express statutory provision to the contrary, appeal does not lie against a dismissal or acquittal in criminal proceedings. In Payne v. Uxbridge Sanitary Authority (1881), 45 J. P. 327, information had been laid against the defendants for sending sewage into a tributary of the Thames contrary to the provisions of the Thames Conservancy Act, which gave an appeal "if any person shall feel aggrieved by any adjudication or determination of any justice with respect to any penalty or forfeiture under the provisions of this Act." Sessions having held that this enabled them to hear an appeal from the decision of the justices dismissing the information, the High Court granted a prohibition, holding that the Act gave no appeal when an information was dismissed (R. v. Middlesex JJ. (1881), 45 J. P. 420). The Highway Act, 1835, s. 105, gives a right of appeal to any person who shall think himself aggrieved by "any order, conviction, or judgment, or determination made, or by any matter or thing done by any justice or other person in pursuance of this Act." A summons under s. 72 for wilfully obstructing a highway was dismissed, and it was held that the informant had no right of appeal (R. v. London JJ. (1890), 25 Q. B. D. 357; 55 J. P. 56). Lord COLERIDGE, C.J., said: "I do not deny that this is a 'determination made' by the justice, and may be 'a matter or thing done by the justice in pursuance of this Act'; and, therefore, if it were enough to find a word or two in a section of this kind which would carry an appeal, the argument for the appellant would be entitled to succeed, for there are words capable of the meaning contended for. But that is not quite the way in which the section should be regarded, when we are asked to hold that there is an appeal after acquittal, which is primâ facie not given by law. A person is prosecuted for some breach of the law, which is to be proved in a particular way. The general principle of the law is that, if acquitted, he is not to be a second time vexed." This decision was followed under the following circumstances: An officer of the B. corporation summoned a company for allowing liquid refuse to flow into a sewer contrary to the B. Tramways and Improvement Act, 1897, s. 45. The summons having been dismissed, the corporation gave notice of appeal to sessions according to the provisions of the Summary Jurisdiction Acts, claiming a right to appeal under s. 66 of the local Act, which provides that any person deeming himself aggrieved by any conviction or order made by a court of summary jurisdiction under any provision of the Act may appeal to quarter sessions according to the provisions of the Summary Jurisdiction Acts, and that in regard to any such order the corporation may in like manner appeal. The recorder held that the appeal was an appeal against the dismissal of an information, and that inasmuch as the corporation were, in consequence of such dismissal, not persons deeming themselves aggrieved, s. 66 did not confer upon them any right of appeal:—Held, refusing a mandamus to the recorder, that the words "the corporation may in like manner appeal" referred back, not merely to the machinery of the Summary Jurisdiction Acts, but also to the words "any person deeming himself aggrieved," and, therefore, did not give the corporation a right of appeal against the dismissal of an information (R. v. Wright, Ex parte Bradford Corporation (1907), 72 J. P. 23). See also Foss v. Best, [1906] 2 K. B. 105; 70 J. P. 383. No appeal against acquittal.

(d) The S. J. A., 1879, s. 32, provides as follows: "Where any past Act, so far as unrepealed, prescribes that any appeal from the conviction or order of a court of summary jurisdiction shall be made to the next court of general or quarter sessions, such appeal may be made to the next practicable court of general or quarter sessions having jurisdiction in the county borough or place for which the court of summary jurisdiction acted, and held not less than fifteen days after the day on which the decision was given upon which the conviction or order appealed against was founded." Procedure on appeal.

The S. J. A., 1884, repealed the text from the words "for the county," in sub-s. (1) to the end of sub-s. (4), and also sub-ss. (6) and (7) so far as relates to an appeal against an order or conviction of a court of summary jurisdiction. The same Act provides (s. 6) that all appeals must now be brought subject to the conditions and regulations of the S. J. A., 1879; and the procedure under that Act must now be followed in appeals under this Act against any conviction or order of a court of summary jurisdiction. See Shingler v. Smith (1886), 17 Q. B. D. 49; 51 J. P. 152; R. v. Glamorganshire JJ. (1889), 22 Q. B. D. 628; 53 J. P. 294. That procedure is contained in s. 31 of the Act of 1879, which is as follows:

"Where any person is authorised . . . to appeal from the conviction or order of a court of summary jurisdiction to a court of general or quarter sessions, he may appeal to such court, subject to the conditions and regulations following:

"(1) The appeal shall be made to the prescribed court of general or quarter sessions, or if no court is prescribed, to the next practicable court of general or quarter sessions having jurisdiction in the county borough or place for which the said court of summary jurisdiction acted, and holden not less than fifteen days after the day on which the decision was given upon which the conviction or order was founded; and

"(2) The appellant shall, within the prescribed time, or if no time is prescribed within seven days after the day on which the said decision of the court was given, give notice of appeal by serving on the other party and on the clerk of the said court of summary jurisdiction notice in writing of his intention to appeal, and of the general grounds of such appeal; and

"(3) The appellant shall, within the prescribed time, or if no time is prescribed within three days after the day on which he gave notice of appeal, enter into a recognizance before a court of summary jurisdiction, with or without a surety or sureties as that court may direct, conditioned to appear at the said sessions and to try such appeal, and to abide the judgment of the court of appeal thereon, and to pay such costs as may be awarded by the court of appeal, or the appellant may, if the court of summary jurisdiction before whom the appellant appears to enter into a recognizance think it expedient, instead of entering into a recognizance, give such other security, by deposit of money with the clerk of the court of summary jurisdiction or otherwise, as that court deem sufficient; and

"(4) Where the appellant is in custody, the court of summary jurisdiction before whom the appellant appears to enter into a recognizance may, if the court think fit, on the appellant entering into such recognizance or giving such other security as aforesaid, release him from custody; and

"(5) The court of appeal may adjourn the hearing of the appeal, and upon the hearing thereof may confirm, reverse, or modify the decision of the court of summary jurisdiction or remit the matter, with the opinion of the court of appeal thereon to a court of summary jurisdiction acting for the same county borough or place as the court by whom the conviction or order appealed against was made, or may make such other order in the matter as the court of appeal may think just, and may by such order exercise any power which the court of summary jurisdiction might have exercised, and such order shall have the same effect, and may be enforced in the same manner, as if it had been made by the court of summary jurisdiction. The court of appeal may also make such order as to costs to be paid by either party as the court may think just; and

"(6) Whenever a decision is not confirmed by the court of appeal, the clerk of the peace shall send to the clerk of the court of summary jurisdiction from whose decision the appeal was made, for entry in his register, and also endorse on the conviction or order appealed against, a memorandum of the decision of the court of appeal, and whenever any copy or certificate of such conviction or order is made, a copy of such memorandum shall be added thereto, and shall be sufficient evidence of the said decision in every case where such copy or certificate would be sufficient evidence of such conviction or order; and

"(7) Every notice in writing required by this section to be given by an appellant shall be in writing signed by him, or by his agent on his behalf, and may be transmitted as a registered letter by the post in the ordinary way, and shall be deemed to have been served at the time when it would be delivered in the ordinary course of the post."

Note to Section 269.

The foregoing section supersedes the procedure in the text only in so far as the latter relates to an appeal from a conviction or order of a court of summary jurisdiction. Other appeals, such as appeals against rates, will continue to be regulated by the text.

Several important decisions bearing upon the construction of s. 31 of the Act of 1879 should here be noted. On the hearing of an appeal it appeared that two notices of appeal had been given within the prescribed time. The appellant elected to proceed upon the second, which was found bad for want of the prescribed recognizance. It was held that the first remained good, and that the appellant was entitled to proceed upon it after failing on the second (R. v. Wolverhampton (Recorder of) (1888), 36 W. R. 650). Under sub-s. (1):—As to the "next practicable" court, see note (e), infra; "not less than fifteen days" means fifteen "clear days" (Re Railway Sleepers Co., Ltd. (1885), 29 Ch. D. 204); Sunday counts as a day (see p. 554, ante). Under sub-s. (2):—Service of notice of appeal is sufficient if served on the justices' clerk, and it is not necessary that it should be addressed to the convicting justices (R. v. Essex JJ., [1892] 1 Q. B. 490; 56 J. P. 375; R. v. Glamorganshire JJ., [1892] 1 Q. B. 621; 56 J. P. 437). Service on the solicitor of the "other party" to the appeal is not effective unless such solicitor has received instructions to accept service (R. v. Oxfordshire JJ., [1893] 2 Q. B. 149; 57 J. P. 712). Even where a notice of appeal is not posted, personal service is not essential (R. v. Somersetshire JJ. (1900), 69 L. J. Q. B. 311; 64 J. P. 341; R. v. North Riding of Yorks JJ. (1845), 7 Q. B. 154). Service on the "other party" will be dispensed with if he dies before it can be effected (R. v. Leicestershire JJ. (1850), 15 Q. B. 88). Under sub-s. (3):—The recognizance must not be taken (nor a deposit in lieu thereof fixed) before the notice of appeal has been given (R. v. Anglesey JJ., [1892] 2 Q. B. 29; 56 J. P. 552; R. v. Cheshire JJ. (1896), 60 J. P. 585). It may be entered into before any court of summary jurisdiction, whether in the same county or not, provided the court has the notice and grounds of appeal before it (R. v. Durham JJ., Ex parte Newton, [1895] 1 Q. B. 801; 59 J. P. 264). The time limit for entering into the recognizance must be strictly observed (Ex parte Grafton Club (or Ashton) (1912), 76 J. P. 383; 28 T. L. R. 473). As to the form of recognizance where a local authority are appellants, see Cortis v. Kent Waterworks Co. (1827), 7 B & C. 314, at p. 331; R. v. Mayor, etc. of Manchester (1857), 7 El. & Bl. 453; Southern Counties Deposit Bank v. Boaler (1895), 59 J. P. 536; 73 L. T. 155. See for a full discussion of this question 60 J. P. 33; and see also as to a corporate body entering into a recognizance, R. v. Antrim JJ., [1906] 2 I. R. 298. Although quarter sessions, in consequence of a recognizance being out of time, have no jurisdiction to hear an appeal, they have jurisdiction to estreat the recognizance for non-payment of costs (R. v. Glamorganshire JJ. (1890), 24 Q. B. D. 675; 55 J. P. 39).

For a decision under a local Act that an objector to the renewal of a licence is "not a party" to an appeal against the refusal of the licence, see R. v. Ashton (1915), 79 J. P. 444; 85 L. J. K. B. 27, and for another decision under a local Act that r. 58 of the S. J. Rules, 1915, impliedly repealed a provision for a four days' notice under the local Act, see Edelsten v. L. C. C., [1918] 1 K. B. 81; 81 J. P. 294.

As a general rule the justices whose decision is appealed against should not appear at sessions to support it and cannot be ordered to pay costs (cf. Ex parte Curtis (1877), 3 Q. B. D. 13; 42 J. P. 87; R. v. London JJ., [1895] 1 Q. B. 616; 59 J. P. 820).

As to the power of sessions to amend defective grounds of appeal or recognizances, see ss. 3, 8, 9 of the Quarter Sessions Act, 1849; as to their general power over costs, see ibid., ss. 4, 5, 6; and as to their power when an appellant dies before the hearing, see R. v. Spokes (1912), 76 J. P. 354; 107 L. T. 290. If sessions refuse to award costs, exercising a judicial discretion, the High Court will not interfere (R. v. Notts JJ. (1910), 73 J. P. 183). In a "criminal cause or matter" no appeal lies from a Divisional Court to the Court of Appeal on the subject of costs given by sessions (R. v. Wilts JJ., [1912] 1 K. B. 566; 76 J. P. 169).

Apparently the death of the respondent does not cause the appeal to abate (R.

Note to Section 269.

v. Leicestershire JJ., supra ; R. v. Truelove (1880), 5 Q. B. D. 336 ; 44 J. P. 346 ; Garnsworthy v. Pyne (1871), 35 J P. 21). As to the death of an appellant, see R. v. Spokes, supra ; Cooke v. Cooper, [1912] 2 K. B. 248 ; 76 J. P. 67 ; R. v. Cork JJ. (1913), 47 Ir. L. T. 168, and cf. Finchley U. D. C. v. Blyton (1913), 77 J. P. N. 556.

An appeal to sessions is a rehearing, and either party may call fresh evidence without notifying his intention of so doing.

A "respite" of an appeal at the request of the respondents does not, semble, preclude them from taking a preliminary objection to notices, etc., when it ultimately comes on (Rhondda Valley Brewery Co. v. Pontypridd Union, [1909] 1 K. B. 652 ; 73 J. P. 177).

Appeal to what sessions.

(e) Where an adjourned sessions intervenes, the time must be calculated with reference to the first day of the next quarter sessions, and not with reference to the first day of the adjourned sessions (R. v. Lancashire JJ. (1876), 40 J. P. 438 ; 34 L. T. 124). And see Rawnsley v. Hutchinson (1871), L. R. 6 Q. B. 305 ; 35 J. P. 501.

The phrase "next sessions" means the next sessions at which an effectual trial can be had after the proper notices have been given. Therefore, where a rate was made on March 20th, and the notices for the next quarter sessions, held on April 6th, must have been given on March 22nd, it was held that the appeal might be brought at the July quarter sessions without being entered and respited at the April sessions (R. v. Surrey JJ. (1880), 6 Q. B. D. 100 ; 45 J. P. 93).

In another case all the preliminaries to an appeal at the next quarter sessions were duly observed, but at the sitting of the court sessions refused to allow the appeal to be entered, on the ground that by a rule of the sessions an appeal must be entered and grounds of appeal deposited with the clerk of the peace three clear days before the first day of the sessions ; the sessions also made an order for £10 costs to the respondents, under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 6, as on an appeal which had not been entered or prosecuted. On a rule to quash this order :—Held, that the rule of sessions amounted to imposing an additional condition to the appeal which the statute had not imposed, and was more than a mere rule of practice which it might be competent for sessions to make ; and that the order for costs must be quashed (R. v. Pawlett (1873), L. R. 8 Q. B. 491 ; 37 J. P. 775).

It has already been stated that the repeal of a portion of this section effected by the S. J. A., 1884, is only a repeal so far as relates to appeals from convictions or orders of a court of summary jurisdiction. The definition of the term "court of summary jurisdiction," in the Interpretation Act, 1889, s. 13, extends its meaning so as to include justices acting under any statute or by virtue of his or their commission or by the common law. The new procedure as to appeals will, therefore, apply to nearly every act or decision of justices under this Act. See R. v. Glamorganshire JJ., supra, and the cases cited at p. 602, ante. But there are some matters to which it will not apply, and with regard to which the procedure prescribed in the text must still be followed. Notably this is the case in appeals against rates, which are not convictions or orders. In R. v. Barnet Rural Sanitary Authority (1876), 1 Q. B. D. 558 ; 40 J. P. 341, an order was made on the appellants, under s. 48, ante, on September 6th, and served on them on the 24th. The appellants on October 2nd served notice of appeal to sessions. It was held that the time for notice of appeal ran from the date of the decision, and not from the service of the order of justices, and consequently that the notice was too late. BLACKBURN, J., said : "Where the appeal is against a rate, the 'cause of appeal' would primâ facie be upon notice of the rate, but where the appeal is from any order or conviction, one would certainly primâ facie say that as soon as the order is made the party has a right to appeal, and is not bound to wait until the order is served." Cf. s. 31 (1) of the S. J. A., 1879, supra. An appeal against a distress for poor rates is not an appeal against "an order of a court of summary jurisdiction," and is therefore not regulated by the S. J. A., 1879, s. 31 (R. v. Lindsey JJ., [1912] 2 K. B. 413 ; 76 J. P. 311).

It is to be noticed also that the new enactment requires that the notices of appeal shall be in writing ; this was formerly unnecessary.

Where sessions have refused to hear an appeal on the ground of the insufficiency of the notices, and a mandamus is applied for to compel them to hear, the court will, upon the argument against the rule, determine the question of the sufficiency or insufficiency of the notices (Curtis, Ex parte (1877), 3 Q. B. D. 13 ; 42 J. P. 87).

Note to Section 269

(f) Therefore, it was held that sessions might quash a rate which showed by the estimate prefixed to it that it was made for illegal purposes (R. v. Worksop L. B. (1857), 21 J. P. 451; see also Smith v. Southampton Corporation, in notes to s. 210, at p. 474). If an appellant does not appeal against the gross estimated rental as it appears in the rate book and valuation list, sessions may not admit evidence tendered by the rating authority to show that the gross estimated rental has been understated (Horton v. Walsall Union, [1898] 2 Q. B. 237; 62 J. P. 437; Hendon Paper Works Co., Ltd. v. Sunderland Union, [1915] 1 K. B. 763; 79 J. P. 113 (and see also (1915), 79 J. P. N. 220); John Fowler & Co. v. Hunslet Union, [1917] 1 K. B. 720; 81 J. P. 118).

Powers of court on appeal.

(g) 41 Geo. 3, c. 23, ss. 1—6, and 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96, s. 7, provide for the amending and quashing of poor rates, and 17 Geo. 2, c. 38; 41 Geo. 3, c. 23, s. 8; and 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96, s. 7, provide for the awarding and recovery of costs in appeals against such rates. In R. v. Recorder of Leeds (ex parte John Fowler & Co), [1919] 1 K. B. 671; 83 J. P. 169, an appeal had been heard at quarter sessions to reduce the gross and rateable values of certain premises. The gross value only was reduced and the appeal dismissed with costs. The Divisional Court held that the Recorder had jurisdiction to dismiss the appeal as it had really been fought on the question of rateable value, which in fact had not been reduced.

Costs.

See, as to an order in which an appeal was allowed "with costs here and below," Hendon Paper Works Co. v. Sunderland Assessment Committee (1915), 79 J. P. N. 220.

(h) That is, in one of the following modes: (1) By indictment for disobedience of the order of sessions; (2) by order enforced as provided by 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 5, i.e., by distress under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 43, s. 27 (R. v. Huntley (1854), 23 L. J. M. C. 106; 3 El. & Bl. 172); and (3) by removal of the order into the King's Bench Division to be thereafter enforced as a rule of court by the ordinary writ of execution (12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 18).

Recovery of costs.

(i) This provision is the same as that in 41 Geo. 3, c. 23, s. 1, respecting the poor rate. Under that section it was held that where a rate was reduced on appeal and the person rated had during the appeal paid on the unreduced assessment, the overseers might, in subsequent rates, credit him for the excess paid without an order of sessions (R. v. Parker (1857), 21 J. P. 549; 7 El. & Bl. 155). And see also as to the construction of the section, R. v. Kingston JJ. (1858), 27 L. J. M. C. 199; 23 J. P. 4, 5.

Levy of rate notwithstanding appeal.

(k) This sub-section and the next are repealed so far as relates to an appeal against an order or conviction of a court of summary jurisdiction by the S. J. A., 1884, s. 6 of which substitutes the corresponding provisions of the Summary Jurisdiction Acts.

Repealed provisions.

With reference to the provision as to costs, it must be observed that this enactment gives no power to award costs against convicting justices (R. v. Goodall (1874), L. R. 9 Q. B. 557; 38 J. P. 616). An information was laid by M., the surveyor of a local board, but without reference to his official position, against H., for violation of a byelaw, and H. was convicted and ordered to pay £7 10*s.* to the local board for costs. H. gave notice of appeal to the convicting justices and to M. The justices and M. handed over their notices to the board's solicitor, who conducted the defence on behalf of the board. Sessions quashed the conviction with costs, to be paid by "the respondents." The costs were taxed, and being unpaid, an application was made to justices for a warrant against the goods of M. for the amount:—Held, first, that the order of sessions was bad in ordering the costs to be paid by the respondents, who were the convicting justices, and M., and that it should have been made upon the local board, who were the real parties appealed against; and, secondly, that as the order was valid, except in so far as it related to costs, it should be quashed as to that part only (R. v. Davidson (1871) 35 J. P. 500; 24 L. T. 22).

As to the costs on reference of appeals to arbitration, see Southampton Gas Light and Coke Co. v. Southampton Union (Guardians of) (1877), 2 Q. B. D. 371; 41 J. P. 645; West London Extension Rail. Co. v. Fulham Union (1870), L. R. 5 Q. B. 361; 36 J. P. 55; R. v. Middlesex JJ. (1871), L. R. 6 Q. B. 220; N. E. Rail. Co. v. York Union (1902), 66 J. P. 457.

As to taxingcosts out of sessions, see R. v. Phillips (1873), 37 J. P. 824; 29 L. T. 100; Midland Rail. Co. v. Edmonton Union, [1895] A. C. 485; 60 J. P. 68; R. v. Cumberland JJ. (1903), 68 J. P. 153.

Note to Section 269.

(l) The procedure at the hearing of the appeal is regulated by "Baines' Act," now called the Quarter Sessions Act, 1849, to which reference should be made.

(m) A certiorari is not now necessary to bring up the case (S. J. A., 1879, s. 40).

Practice as to case stated by sessions.

As to stating a case when the statute concerned declares the decision of sessions to "be final," see Kydd v. Liverpool Watch Committee, [1908] A. C. 327; 72 J. P. 395. As a general rule a point not taken at the hearing before sessions cannot be taken upon the argument of a special case; but the case may be stated in such a form as to compel the High Court to decide a fresh point (cf. Smith's Dock Co. v. Tynemouth Corporation, [1908] 1 K. B. 315; 72 J. P. 64).

Upon an application to enter and respite an appeal, sessions have no power to state a special case; and the court will take no notice of a case so stated. Where sessions granted an application to enter and respite appeals against poor rates, subject to a case, the court heard the arguments, but after consideration, and although no objection was raised by either side, declined to express an opinion (R. v. Sutton Coldfield (Overseers of) (1874), L. R. 9 Q. B. 153; 38 J. P. 166).

When sessions consent to state a case, their order sent up with the case ought, in order to give the High Court jurisdiction, to state the fact that a case has been stated (L. & N. W. Rail. Co. v. Ampthill Union (1905), 94 L. T. 314).

After notice of appeal, a case may be stated by consent, without going to sessions, under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 11. Where this is done the case should contain a statement of the agreement of the parties that judgment in conformity with the decision of the court may be entered at sessions in manner provided by the section, otherwise it will be struck out of the paper (Peterborough (Corporation of) v. Thurlby (Overseers of) (1882), 8 Q. B. D. 586).

A case contained the following paragraph: "If the court should be of opinion that the appeal ought to have been allowed and the order quashed, judgment for the appellant is to be entered accordingly at the next quarter sessions." Before hearing counsel the court dismissed the appeal and affirmed the order, holding that the sessions ought not to state anything about afterwards entering the appeal at sessions as if the whole jurisdiction rested with them, and an opinion only was asked of the High Court. The statement of the case was an end of the jurisdiction of the sessions, which had nothing further to do with the matter. No opinion was given on the merits (R. v. Headington Union (1883), 47 J. P. 756). On appeal the Court of Appeal suggested, and the parties agreed, that the case should be treated as if the objectionable paragraph were struck out, and the case was then argued on the merits (50 L. T. 444).

A case contained the following clause: "The court are in all respects to exercise the power of the sessions to confirm, amend, alter, vary, modify, or reverse their decision in such manner and to such extent as to such court shall seem expedient and proper; costs to follow the event." The court quashed the order, but the judgment was silent as to costs. In an action to recover the costs incurred in the argument of the case, and also the cost of certain applications made to the sessions from time to time before judgment of the High Court in the plaintiff's favour was obtained:—Held (1) that the words "costs to follow the event" referred and were intended to refer to the costs claimed by the plaintiff; (2) that these words, though contained in a special case, amounted to an agreement between the parties, and rendered the defendant liable to pay the costs; and (3) that taxation of the costs was not a condition precedent to the plaintiff's right to bring an action to recover them (Lear v. Botting (1880), 45 J. P. 240; 44 L. T. 58).

Section 2 of the Judicature Act, 1894, applies to the hearing in the High Court. By sub-s. (1) of that section every case stated by a court of quarter sessions otherwise than under the Crown Cases Act, 1848, and the Quarter Sessions Act, 1849, for the consideration of the High Court, shall be deemed to be an appeal and be heard and determined accordingly. Therefore, under s. 1 (5) of the same Act it must be heard and determined by a Divisional Court constituted as may be prescribed by rules of court. By sub-s. (2) on the hearing of any appeal from a court of quarter sessions, the appellate court may draw any inference of fact which might have been drawn in the court of quarter sessions, and may give any judgment or make any order which ought to have been given or made by that court, or may remit the order, and in criminal matters the conviction with the order, and the case stated on it, with the opinion or direction of the appellate court, for rehearing and determination by the court of quarter sessions, or may remit the case for restatement. Therefore, it would seem that the Divisional Court may make any order as to costs in the court of summary jurisdiction which the court of quarter sessions ought to have made. See Barnett v. Mayor, etc. of Eccles, [1900] 2 Q. B. 423, 424 n. As to the power of the court under this sub-section to draw inferences, see Dairy Supply Co. v. Houghton (1911), 76 J. P. 43; 106 L. T. 220; Cababé v. Walton-on-Thames U. D. C., p. 275, ante, per Lord DUNEDIN; Hickton v. Hodgson (1914), 78 J. P. 93; Mitchell v. Croydon JJ. (1914), 78 J. P. 385; 111 L. T. 632; Davis & Sons v. Pontypridd Union (1916), 80 J. P. 377; 14 L. G. R. 932.

By sub-s. (3) on the hearing of any such appeal, the appellate court shall have full power to determine how and by whom the costs of the proceedings in the appellate court and in the court of quarter sessions are to be borne. And by sub-s. (4) the judgment on any such appeal, or where an appeal to a court of quarter sessions has been directed to be entered for rehearing, then that appeal shall, on the motion by any party to the appeal, be entered at the sessions next or next but one after the delivery of the judgment or the giving of the direction, and shall, unless the appellate court otherwise directs, have effect as if the judgment had been given, or, in the case of an appeal directed to be reheard, the appeal had been heard and determined by the court of quarter sessions at the time of the decision in respect of which the appeal from quarter sessions was brought, and entry and respite of any appeal to quarter sessions in respect of which a case has been stated for the consideration of the High Court shall not be necessary.

Appeal from High Court.

It was held that an appeal did not lie from the decision of the High Court on a case stated under the text, unless leave to appeal was given under 36 & 37 Vict. c. 66, s. 45 (R. v. Swindon L. B. (1880), 49 L. J. Q. B. 272; 44 J. P. 505). In that case an order had been made by justices upon one H. to pay expenses under s. 150, ante, p. 286. H. appealed to sessions, who quashed the order subject to a special case. The High Court having affirmed the decision of sessions, the local board appealed to the Court of Appeal. It was held that the High Court in hearing the case were exercising an appellate jurisdiction, as the case came before them under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 269 (7). The appeal was, therefore, an appeal from an inferior court within the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 45; and the decision of the High Court was final unless leave to appeal were given. Leave to appeal was formerly not necessary when the High Court, in the exercise of its common law jurisdiction, decided a special case stated by sessions (R. v. Savin (1880), 6 Q. B. D. 309; Illingworth v. Bulmer East Highway Board (1884), 53 L. J. M. C. 60). After notice of appeal against a poor rate had been given, the parties agreed under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 11, to state a case for the opinion of the High Court, judgment to be entered by sessions in conformity with that opinion:—Held, that the opinion given by the High Court was an order within the meaning of the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 19, and was, therefore, subject to appeal, and that the order was interlocutory and not final, as the case had to be sent back for judgment to be entered by sessions (Peterborough (Mayor of) v. Stamford Union (1883), 12 Q. B. D. 1; 48 J. P. 373). This decision was followed in Holborn Union v. Chertsey Union (1885), 15 Q. B. D. 76; 50 J. P. 36, where it was held that an appeal lay to the Court of Appeal from the decision of a Divisional Court upon a case stated under 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, s. 11, on an appeal from an order of justices to the sessions; it not being a decision of a Divisional Court on an appeal from petty or quarter sessions within the meaning of the Judicature Act, 1873, s. 45, and being an "order" within the meaning of s. 19 of that Act. And see to the same effect, Dewsbury and Heckmondwike Waterworks Board v. Penistone Union (1886), 2 T. L. R. 375. Now, it being provided by the Judicature Act, 1894, s. 2 (1), as above mentioned, that every case stated by a court of quarter sessions, otherwise than under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 78, and 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, for the consideration of the High Court, shall be deemed to be an appeal, and shall be heard and determined accordingly, this brings in s. 1 (5), providing that in all cases where there is a right of appeal to the High Court from any court or person the appeal shall be heard and determined by a Divisional Court constituted as may be prescribed by rules of court; and the determination thereof by the Divisional Court shall be final unless leave to appeal is given by that court or by the Court of Appeal. Under this subsection the Court of Appeal may give leave to appeal though the Divisional

Note to Section 269.

Court has refused leave (Holland v. Girling (1899), 43 Sol. J. 600; Godman v. Moses (1900), 69 L. J. Q. B. 823; 83 L. T. 46). And the appeal to the Court of Appeal lies notwithstanding that judgment has been entered by sessions in conformity with the decision of the Divisional Court (Lodge v. Mayor, etc. of Huddersfield (No. 2), [1898] 1 Q. B. 859; 62 J. P. 515). In a "criminal cause or matter" (see p. 552, ante), no appeal lies to the Court of Appeal.

Arbitration on appeals to quarter sessions.

It may be convenient here to set out the provisions of the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 45, as to references to arbitration on appeals to quarter sessions. It is provided by s. 12 that at any time after notice given of appeal to any court of quarter sessions against any order, rate, or other matter (except a summary conviction, or an order in bastardy, or any proceeding under or by virtue of any of the statutes relating to her Majesty's revenue of exercise or customs, stamps, taxes, or post office), for which the remedy is by such appeal, it shall be lawful for the parties, by themselves or their attorneys, and by order of a judge of her Majesty's Court of Queen's Bench, to submit the matter or matters of such appeal to the award or umpirage of any person or persons, and every award or umpirage duly made under this Act shall be as binding and effectual to all intents as if the same had been a regular judgment of the said court of quarter sessions, and shall and may, on the application of either party, be enrolled among the records of the said court of sessions. By s. 13 it shall be lawful for any court of quarter sessions before which any appeal (except against a summary conviction, etc.) shall be brought, to order, with consent of the parties or their attorneys, that the matter or matters of such appeal be referred to arbitration to such person or persons and in such manner and on such terms as the said court shall think reasonable and proper; and the award of the arbitrator or arbitrators, or umpirage of the umpire, may, on motion by either party at the sessions next or next but one after such award or umpirage shall have been finally made and published or after the decision of the Court of Queen's Bench on any motion for setting aside the same, be entered as the judgment of the court of quarter sessions in the appeal, and shall be as binding and effectual to all intents as if given by the said court.

PART VIII.

ALTERATION OF AREAS AND UNION OF DISTRICTS.

Alteration of Areas (a).

Powers of Local Government Board in relation to alteration of areas.

270. The following enactments shall be made as to alteration of areas:

(1) The Local Government Board, by Provisional Order, may dissolve any local government district, and may merge any such district in some other urban or rural district or districts; or it may by Provisional Order declare the whole or any portion of a local government or a rural district immediately adjoining a local government district to be included in such last-mentioned district; or it may by Provisional Order declare any portion of a local government district immediately adjoining a rural district to be included in such rural district; and thereupon the included area shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to form part of the district in which it is included by such Order; and the remaining part (if any) of the local government district or rural district affected by such Order shall continue subject to the like jurisdiction as it would have been subject to if such Order had not been made unless and until the Local Government Board by Provisional Order otherwise directs : Section 270.

(2) In the case of a borough comprising within its area the whole of an improvement Act district, or having an area co-extensive with such district, the Local Government Board by Provisional Order may dissolve such district (b) and transfer to the council of the borough all or any of the jurisdiction and powers of the improvement commissioners of such district remaining vested in them at the time of the passing of this Act :

(3) The Local Government Board may by Order dissolve any special drainage district (c) constituted either before or after the passing of this Act in which a loan for the execution of works has not been raised, and merge it in the parish or parishes in which it is situated, and the Local Government Board may by Provisional Order dissolve any such district in which a loan has been raised for the execution of works, and merge it in the parish or parishes in which it is situated (d).

(a) The provisions of s. 270 (1), (2), and of the succeeding five sections, are practically superseded by those of the L. G. A., 1888, s. 57 of which gives to county councils important powers as to the formation and alteration of urban and rural districts, the division of urban districts into wards, etc. : see that section and notes thereto, post. The provisions of the text are not repealed, but the M. of H. following the practice of the L. G. B. invariably decline to avail themselves of their powers thereunder.

It will be seen that the M. of H. have power under the Act of 1888 to modify certain orders made by county councils, and disallow such orders upon appeal.

(b) See the L. G. A., 1888, s. 52, post, the notes thereto, and the orders made under it.

(c) See s. 277, post, p. 614. Prior to 1875, these districts were formed under 29 & 30 Vict. c. 90, s. 5, and 30 & 31 Vict. c. 113, s. 6.

(d) Where there has been no loan, the dissolution may be effected by a simple order. Where a loan has been raised there must be a Provisional Order, to be duly confirmed by Act of Parliament : see s. 297, post, p. 629. A Provisional Order is required even if a loan has been wholly liquidated.

Procedure must first be taken under this section if it is proposed to effect an alteration of the boundaries of a special drainage district. It must be dissolved and reconstituted.

271. The Local Government Board may, by Provisional Order, declare any rural district, or any portion of any rural district or districts, to be a local government district ; and from and after the commencement of the Order, the district or portion of the district or districts therein referred to shall become a local government district (a), and shall be subject to the jurisdiction of a local board, to be elected in manner provided by Schedule II. to this Act (b). Local Government Board may by Provisional Order constitute local government district.

The Local Government Board may, by any Order constituting a local government district under this section, divide such district into wards for the election of members of the local board.

See note (a) to preceding section.

(a) A serious nuisance having been admittedly caused by a rural authority's mode of dealing with the sewage of its district, the dissolution of the rural authority and the constitution by Order of the L. G. B. of an urban authority over the district, was held not to absolve the new board from liability to an injunction for continuing the nuisance without taking any effectual steps to remedy it. Eleven months having elapsed since the constitution of the new board, the operation of the injunction was suspended for two months only (Taylor v. Friern Barnet L. B., W. N. (1885), p. 7).

Note to Section 271.

(b) This Schedule is now repealed by the L. G. A., 1894, s. 89, Sched. II., post.

Local Government Board may by order constitute local government district in pursuance of a resolution of owners and ratepayers.

272. The owners and ratepayers of any place situated in any rural district or districts, and having a known and defined boundary (a), may, by a resolution passed in manner provided by Schedule III. to this Act, declare that it is expedient that such place should be constituted a local government district; and the Local Government Board may, if it thinks fit, by Order made not less than six weeks after the receipt of a copy of such resolution by the said Board, declare such place to be a local government district, and from and after the commencement of such Order such place shall become a local government district, and be subject to the jurisdiction of a local board to be elected in manner provided by Schedule II. to this Act (b).

A petition may be presented to the Local Government Board from any place (c) so situated as aforesaid, and not having a known and defined boundary, to settle its boundary for the purposes of this Act; the petition shall state the proposed boundaries of the place, shall be signed by one-tenth of the persons rated to the relief of the poor and resident within such boundaries, and shall be supported by such evidence as the Local Government Board may require. The Local Government Board may, after local inquiry as to the genuineness of the petition, and as to the propriety of the proposed boundaries, either dismiss the petition altogether or make order as to the boundaries of the place, and may also make order as to the costs of the proceedings in relation thereto, and the persons by whom such costs are to be borne.

Any place the boundaries of which have been settled in pursuance of the foregoing provisions shall thenceforth, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to be a place with a known and defined boundary.

See note (a) under s. 270, ante, p. 609.

Boundary.

(a) Doubtless general reputation is referred to, and that is frequently a matter of considerable uncertainty. The boundaries of parishes are for the most part well known, and so are those of townships and chapelries, especially where these make their own poor rate separately. There are also many places where the boundaries have been defined by statute. It occasionally happens that districts have been settled by Orders in Council and similar authority under the general statutes applicable to new ecclesiastical parishes. Thus a district formed for ecclesiastical purposes under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37, consisting of parts of two townships, each of which separately maintained its own poor and highways, was held to be "a place having a known and defined boundary" (R. v. Northowram and Clayton (Ratepayers) (1865), L. R. 1 Q. B. 110; 30 J. P. 181). In another case the parish of L., containing 1,400 acres, comprised within its area the corporate borough of L., which was in extent 100 acres. The parliamentary borough of L. comprised the whole of the parish of L. and part of another parish. It was held that the parliamentary borough, including within its limits a less place, viz., the parish of L., was not within the corresponding provisions of the Act of 1858, but that the parish of L. was a place having a known and defined boundary (R. v. Hardy (or Home Secretary) (1868), L. R. 4 Q. B. 117; 33 J. P. 21). Note to Section 272.

(b) This Schedule is now repealed by the L. G. A., 1894, s. 89, Sched. II., post.

(c) The term place is very indefinite. As to the interpretation of this word in statutes, see R. v. Charlesworth (1851), 20 L. J. M. C. 181; Smith v. Redding (1866), L. R. 1 Q. B. 489; 30 J. P. 518; Rice v. Slee (1872), L. R. 7 C. P. 378; 36 J. P. 454.

Objection to resolution.

273. Where not less than one-twentieth of the owners and ratepayers of any place (such twentieth to be one-twentieth in number of the owners and ratepayers of the place taken together, or the owners and ratepayers in respect of one-twentieth of the rateable property in the place,) in which a resolution has been passed declaring that it is expedient that such place should be constituted a local government district, are desirous that such district should not be constituted, or that any part of such place should be excluded therefrom, they may present a petition to the Local Government Board objecting to such resolution, and specifying the grounds of their objection.

Such petition shall be subscribed by the owners and ratepayers presenting the same, and shall be presented within six weeks from the date of the passing of the resolution objected to, and shall, where the exclusion of part of the place is prayed for, state the part of the place proposed to be excluded, accompanied with an explanatory plan.

The Local Government Board may after local inquiry make Order with respect to the matter in question, and such Order shall be binding on the place in respect of which it is made.

The section may be regarded as obsolete. See note (a), to s. 270, ante, p. 609.

Appeal to Local Government Board in case of alleged invalidity of vote.

274. Any owner or ratepayer who disputes the validity of the vote for the adoption of the resolution may appeal, within six weeks from the declaration of the decision of the meeting, to the Local Government Board, setting forth the grounds on which he disputes the validity of the vote; and the Local Government Board may, on such appeal, after local inquiry, make such Order as to the said Board seems fit as to the validity or invalidity of the vote, and any other questions arising on the appeal.

But no objection shall be made, at any trial or in any legal proceeding, to the validity of the vote for the adoption of the resolution, or to any order made in pursuance thereof, or to any proceedings on which such order was founded, unless the objector gives fourteen days notice to the other parties interested in such trial or proceeding of his intention to make the same, specifying fully the nature of the objection to be made; and no objection whatever in respect of the matters mentioned in this section shall be admissible at any trial or in any legal proceeding after the expiration of six months from the date of the constitution of the district.

The section may be regarded as obsolete. See note (a), to s. 270, ante, p. 609.

General provisions as to orders.

275. Every Order made by the Local Government Board under this part of this Act shall specify a day on which such Order shall come into operation (in this Act referred to as the commencement of the Order): and from and after the commencement of the Order all the powers rights duties capacities liabilities obligations and property which under this Act are exercisable by or attaching to or vested in the local authority having, under this Act, jurisdiction in any district or part of a district which is by such Order included in some other district, shall (so far as the same relate to the district or part of a district so included) pass to and vest in the local authority of such other district (a): Provided that in the case of the constitution of a new local government district, all the powers rights duties capacities liabilities obligations and property which under this Act (b) are exercisable by or attaching to or vested in any local authority or authorities having, under this Act, jurisdiction in the area so constituted a local government district, shall continue to be exercisable by attached to and vested in such authority or authorities, until the day of the first meeting of the local board for the district so constituted.

Any Order made in pursuance of this part of this Act may, if necessary, provide for the settlement of any differences, or the adjustment of any accounts or apportionment of any liabilities arising between districts parishes or other places in consequence of the exercise of any powers conferred by this part of this Act (c), and may direct the persons by whom and to whom any moneys found to be due are to be paid, and the mode of raising such moneys; and where any local government district is diminished or increased in extent under this part of this Act, the Order shall prescribe the number of members to be elected for the district when altered.

The Local Government Board may include in the same Order provisions for the dissolution of one district, and for the inclusion of the whole or any part of such district in any other district or districts.

See note (a), to s. 270, ante, p. 609.

(a) See as to the transfer of liabilities, Sinnott v. Whitechapel Board of Works (1858), 27 L. J. C. P. 177; 22 J. P. 290; Pettiward v. Metropolitan Board of Works (1865), 34 L. J. C. P. 301; 12 L. T. 764.

(b) In 1875 a perpetual injunction was decreed against the corporation of B. as the sanitary authority of B., restraining them from allowing sewage to flow into a river so as to be injurious to health or a nuisance to the plaintiffs; but the injunction was suspended for five years, to give the corporation an opportunity to execute certain works. After the expiration of that time the plaintiffs desired to enforce the injunction, but in the meantime the B. T. & R. district board had been constituted under this Act as the sanitary authority of the district, in the place of the corporation of B. The plaintiffs brought an action against the board, claiming a declaration that they were entitled to the same benefit of the decree against the board in that action as if they had been defendants in the former suit:—Held, that the B. T. & R. board were not by this section made subject to any of the liabilities of their predecessors except those attaching under the Act, and were not, therefore, bound by the decree of 1875, and that there being no allegation of any nuisance committed by the board, the plaintiffs had no cause of action (Att.-Gen. v. Birmingham, Tame and Rea Drainage Board (1881), 17 Ch. D. 685; 46 J. P. 36).

(c) See further, s. 304, now, however, practically replaced by the L. G. A., 1888, s. 62.

276. The Local Government Board may, on the application (a) of the authority of any rural district, or of persons rated to the relief of the poor, the assessment of whose hereditaments amounts at the least to one-tenth of the net rateable value (b) of such district, or of any contributory place therein, by Order to be published in the London Gazette, or in such other manner as the Local Government Board may direct, declare any provisions of this Act in force in urban districts to be in force in such rural district or contributory place, and may invest such authority with all or any (c) of the powers rights duties capacities liabilities and obligations of an urban authority under this Act; and such investment may be made either unconditionally or subject to any conditions to be specified by the Board as to the time, portion of the district, or manner during at and in which such powers rights duties liabilities capacities and obligations are to be exercised and attach: Provided that an Order of the Local Government Board made on the application of one-tenth of the persons rated to the relief of the poor in any contributory place shall not invest the rural authority with any new powers beyond the limits of such contributory place.

Section 276. Local Government Board may invest rural authority with powers of urban authority.

See further as to investing a rural authority with urban powers, the P. H. A., 1890, s. 5, and the Private Street Works Act, 1892, s. 4, post; and see also the L. G. A., 1894, s. 25 (5), whereby rural district councils may have conferred upon them such powers, duties, and liabilities of urban authorities under the Public Health Acts as the L. G. B. shall by General Order direct, and ibid., s. 25 (7), which provides that the powers of the L. G. B. under s. 276, supra, or under any enactment applying that section, may be exercised on the application of a county council, or with respect to any parish or part of a parish, on the application of the parish council of that parish. M. of H. must of course now be read for L. G. B.

(a) The application should be addressed to the Minister of Health, under cover to the Secretary, and if it comes from the rural authority, should be forwarded by their clerk. In the case of an application by ratepayers the Ministry will probably require some proof that the applicants are together rated to the required amount. Such applications are, however, now rare, since the parish council can apply. As it is not the practice of the M. of H. to entertain applications, whether in regard to the whole or to part of a rural district, for all the powers conferred by the Public Health and other Acts upon urban authorities, every application should indicate by reference to sections or parts of sections the precise powers desired and the names of the parishes concerned, and should be accompanied by a statement of the circumstances which have led up to the proposal.

Application for order.

The practice of the M. of H. with reference to the grant of urban powers to rural authorities is explained in the notes to the sections dealing with the various subjects. See, for example, ss. 39, 66, 112, 150, 154, 160, 161, 169, of the present Act, s. 5 of the P. H. A., 1890, etc.

As to the delegation of powers by a R. D. C. to a parish council or parochial committee, see s. 202 and notes thereto.

Powers conferred upon rural sanitary authorities by Orders issued under this section prior to the L. G. A., 1894, were transferred to their successors, the rural district councils, by s. 25 of that Act. Questions sometimes arise, however, as to the survival or otherwise of powers declared to be operative by order under this section in parishes which have subsequently been altered by orders of county councils under the L. G. A., 1888 and 1894. In such cases it is advisable for the rural district council to consult the Board in the matter, and, if so advised, to apply for a new Order.

The Board do not ordinarily confer urban powers upon a rural district council in respect of part only of a contributory place, in view of the fact that the incidence of expenses cannot be so limited.

An Order under the section will not legalise expenditure incurred by a rural district council before they possessed the necessary powers.

Note to Section 276.

In some instances Orders issued under the section have been subsequently rescinded. Thus, in a case in which a parish council were desirous of undertaking the lighting of their parish under the L. G. A., 1894, s. 7, and an Order existed conferring powers in this behalf under s. 161, ante, p. 364, upon the rural authority, the Board, after communicating with the latter authority, rescinded their Order.

(b) This will appear from the valuation list of the union or of the contributory place.

(c) As to the effect of an Order which conferred lighting powers on a rural authority, see Lancs. and Yorks. Rail. Co. v. Bolton Union, ante, p. 366. An Order conferring urban powers under s. 150 on a rural authority simply confers on the rural authority the same powers with regard to actual streets as an urban authority would possess; the description of a road as a "street" in the Order does not make it a street if it is not one in fact (Fenwick v. Croydon R. S. A., [1891] 2 Q. B. 216; 55 J. P. 470).

Power of rural authority to form special drainage districts.

277. It shall be lawful for a rural authority, by resolution (a) to be approved by the Local Government Board (b), but not otherwise, to constitute any portion of the area within their jurisdiction a special drainage district for the purpose of charging thereon exclusively the expenses of works of sewerage, water supply or of other works, which by this Act are or by Order of the Local Government Board may be declared to be special expenses, and thereupon such area shall become a separate contributory place (c).

Special drainage districts were formerly constituted by the sewer authority under the Sanitary Act, 1866, by virtue of the Sewage Utilisation Act, 1867, or by the Secretary of State under the last mentioned Act, or by rural sanitary authorities under the Public Health Act, 1872.

The Editors are not aware of any complete list of such districts; they are not very numerous.

As to the dissolution of special drainage districts, see s. 270 and notes thereto.

Procedure.

(a) Although the statute does not prescribe any previous notice or other preliminaries, no such resolution should be passed by the rural authority without due deliberation and sufficient notice, so that the ratepayers of the district to be affected by it may have an opportunity of being heard by the authority before it is passed, and if necessary, of appealing to the M. of H. That department will probably direct a local inquiry before approving a resolution.

Practice of Local Government Board (now M. of H.).

(b) The L. G. B. stated that, having regard to the fact that the P. H. A., 1875, contemplates that in all ordinary cases the civil parish shall in rural districts be the area upon which special expenses incurred in respect of it shall be charged, it was contrary to their practice to approve of the constitution of a special drainage district under s. 277, save in exceptional cases where the circumstances clearly pointed to the desirability of adopting such a course. In this connection the Board pointed out that when an area was formed into a special drainage district, it became a separate contributory place for all the purposes of the Act, and in view of this fact they required in such cases to be satisfied, inter alia, that both the area proposed to be formed into the special drainage district and the remainder of the civil parish were areas of such a nature as to be suitable for separate contributory places for the purposes of the Act.

Subject to the above conditions, the Board were prepared to consider applications for their approval to the constitution of a special drainage district in any case where it was proposed to carry out, for the sole benefit of the area comprised in the proposed district, sanitary works involving a large capital expenditure, but in such cases the Board only considered the application for their approval of the constitution of the district in connection with the application for their sanction to the raising of the loan required to defray the cost of the works. The views of the M. of H. are similar.

An application to the Ministry should be made in the following manner: The rural council should proceed to pass a resolution constituting the district in terms and referring to a map showing its boundaries. An ordnance map on a scale of not less than six inches to a mile should be used for this purpose, and the boundary of the proposed special drainage district should be indicated by a continuous hard line of colour, carefully drawn with a draughtsman's pen, the outside edge of the line of colour representing the precise boundary intended. The line should be drawn in such a manner as to prevent any doubt hereafter arising as to the inclusion or exclusion of any particular roads, premises, etc. A duplicate of the map should also be prepared; and each copy should be endorsed: "This is the map (or "a duplicate of the map," as the case may be) referred to in the resolution passed by the rural district council of in the county of on the day of constituting the special drainage district." This endorsement should in each case be signed by the clerk to the council, and both copies of the map should then be forwarded to the Ministry, accompanied by a copy of the resolution referred to. The Ministry should at the same time be furnished with particulars as to the area, population, and assessable value of the parish, and of the parts of the parish which would be respectively within and without the special drainage district. A statement of the grounds upon which the rural council consider the constitution of the special drainage district to be necessary or desirable should also be submitted.

Special drainage districts for waterworks purposes.

Where application has been made to the M. of H. for their approval of the constitution of special drainage districts for the purpose of charging thereon exclusively the cost of works of water supply, the Ministry have pointed out that by the exercise of the powers possessed by rural councils of charging rates and rents for the supply of water under s. 56, ante, p. 129, and the Public Health (Water) Act, 1878, s. 9, the council may practically throw the cost of the works of water supply on the actual consumers of the water, and that in view of this fact it would not accord with the Ministry's practice to approve the formation of such a district where the principal object in view was to limit the area to be charged with the cost of works of water supply.

Special drainage district consisting of two parishes.

It is also contrary to the usual practice of the Ministry to approve the formation of two rural parishes into a special drainage district. If it is considered necessary that parishes should be amalgamated for all purposes, the matter should be brought before the county council with a view to action being taken under the L. G. A., 1888, s. 57. See s. 229, ante, p. 510, and notes thereto as to the apportionment of the cost of works which are for the common benefit of two or more contributory places.

A special drainage district may, however, be set up for parts of two or more parishes, or for one whole parish and part of another.

Special drainage districts not to consist of houses only.

It is not intended that an alteration of this kind (i.e., constitution of a special drainage district) should be effected with the object of making that part of a parish or township which is occupied by houses only a separate contributory place, as express provision is made by s. 230, ante, p. 514, for rating lands on a reduced assessment of one-fourth of the value, so that, while still forming part of the same rating area as the lands containing the nucleus of the population, they may not be subject to the full burden of the rates levied for special expenses. See also the statement quoted above as to the general policy of the Act.

Effect of constituting special drainage district upon loans.

The formation of a special drainage district including part of a parish, on mortgage of the rates of which a loan has been previously raised, has no effect in altering the incidence of the loan, which will remain chargeable upon the entire parish.

There is no statutory authority for the formation of a special drainage district to include portions of districts of separate rural authorities. Those authorities may, however, combine for the execution of works. See s. 285, post, p. 619, and also the L. G. A., 1894, s. 57.

Special drainage districts cannot overlap sanitary districts.

The section does not provide for an alteration of the boundaries of an existing special drainage district. It would seem, therefore, that the only method of effecting an alteration is to dissolve the district (under s. 270) and to constitute a new one.

Alteration of special drainage districts.

(c) That is, for all the purposes of the Act. Section 229, ante, p. 510, declares the meaning of a "contributory place," and sets forth what are special expenses.

Incidence of expenses.

As to the mode in which the expenses of a rural council in respect of a special drainage district comprising parts of more than one parish should be levied, the L. G. B. once stated that the amount required by the council should be apportioned between the portions of the drainage district in each parish according to the assessable value of each portion for the purposes of the special expenses rate, and that a separate precept should be addressed to each set of overseers requiring them to pay the sums thus apportioned. A separate rate would then, in pursuance of s. 230, ante, p. 514, be made and levied by the overseers of each parish over so much of the parish as is within the special drainage district.

Note to Section 277.

Under the Scotch Act, which is differently worded, it was held that preliminary expenses incurred in connection with, but prior to, the formation of the special district, were properly charged thereon (Inverarity v. Forfar C. C. (1906), 8 F. (H. L.) 15).

A rural district council, unlike an urban council, have no power to divide their district, irrespective of parish boundaries, for certain purposes of the Act: see s. 211 (4), ante, p. 479, and note thereto.

Power to settle disputes as to boundaries of districts.

278. On the application of any urban authority (being a local board or improvement commissioners), the Local Government Board may, by Order after local inquiry, settle any dispute as to the boundaries of the district of such authority; such Order shall be published in some local newspaper circulating in the district to which it relates, and from and after its commencement shall be conclusive on the question determined by it.

This section is superseded by the L. G. A., 1888, s. 57, post, which enables a county council to make orders for the definition of the boundaries of county districts.

Union of Districts.

Formation of united district.

279. Where, on the application (a) of the local authorities of any urban or rural districts, or of any such authorities, it appears to the Local Government Board that it would be for the advantage of such districts, or any of them, or any parts thereof, or of any contributory places (b) in any rural district or districts, to be formed into a united district for all or any of the purposes following; (that is to say,)

(1) The procuring a common supply of water; or

(2) The making a main sewer or carrying into effect a system of sewerage for the use of all such districts or contributory places (bb); or

(3) For any other purposes of this Act:

the Local Government Board may by Provisional Order (c) form such districts or contributory places into a united district (d).

All costs charges and expenses of and incidental to the formation of a united district shall, in the event of the united district being formed, be a first charge on the rates leviable in the united district in pursuance of this Act (e).

(a) See the instructions of the M. of H. as to the mode of making applications to them under this section in App. II., post, Vol. II. Those relating to the formation of united districts require that the application should be made by a resolution of the local authority of each of the districts proposed to be formed into a united district. The resolution should specify the purposes for which the united district is to be constituted and the basis upon which the representation on the joint board and the contributions to the common fund by the constituent authorities are proposed to be settled. A copy of the resolution, certified by the clerk, should be forwarded to the Ministry, together with a copy of any agreement to combine which may have been executed.

As to the advantages of constituting a joint board instead of appointing a joint committee under s. 285, see note (b) to that section.

Note to Section 279.

The Ministry would probably require exceptional reasons to be shown before including a district in a combination against the wishes of the local authority.

The following are instances of the constitution of united districts for the several purposes mentioned:—For waterworks: The Conway and Colwyn Bay Joint Water Supply District. For main sewerage: The Upper Stour Valley, and the Portslade and Southwick Joint Sewerage Districts. For hospital purposes: The Biggleswade, Burnley, Croydon and Wimbledon, and Isle of Thanet Joint Hospital Districts. For cemetery purposes: The Appleby and Whitchurch (Salop) Joint Cemetery Districts.

See the Housing, Town Planning, etc. Act, 1909, s. 38, post, Vol. II., as to joint action by local authorities for any purpose of the Housing Acts, an order under that section having the same effect as a Provisional Order under this section.

(b) As to what are contributory places, see s. 229, ante, p. 510.

(bb) The functions of a joint board set up for sewerage purposes are limited to the construction and maintenance of main sewers and works of sewage disposal. The sewerage systems of the several districts remain under the charge of the local authority. See note (c) to s. 281.

(c) See s. 297, post, p. 629.

(d) See also s. 285, post, p. 619, which enables two or more authorities to combine of themselves for the execution of works for mutual benefit. Section 28, ante, p. 91, provides for agreements for mere communications of sewers. See also s. 131, ante, p. 238, as to joint hospitals; ss. 191 and 286, ante, p. 454, and post, p. 621, as to joint medical officers of health; and the L. G. A., 1894, s. 57, post, as to joint committees.

(e) The proportion of these costs must be settled by the respective authorities. They will relate principally to the expense of promoting the Provisional Order and securing its confirmation by Parliament. See s. 298 in this connection.

Governing body of united district.

280. The governing body of a united district shall be a joint board consisting of such ex-officio members (a) and of such number of elective members as the Local Government Board may by the Provisional Order forming the district determine.

A joint board shall be a body corporate by such name as may be determined by the Provisional Order, having a perpetual succession and a common seal, with power to hold lands for the purposes of its constitution, without any licence in mortmain (b).

(a) The M. of H. must decide who are to be ex-officio members, as they are not defined or described by the Act.

(b) This is similar to the provision contained in s. 7, ante, p. 39.

Contents of Provisional Order forming united district.

281. The Provisional Order forming a united district under this Act shall define the purposes for which such united district is formed, and the powers (a) rights duties capacities liabilities and obligations under this Act which the joint board is authorised to exercise or perform, or is made subject to; and shall contain regulations as to the qualification and mode of election of elective members of the joint board, as to their continuance in office, as to casual vacancies in the joint board, as to their meetings and officers, and any other matter or thing, including the adjustment of present and future liabilities and property with respect to which the Local Government Board may think fit to make any regulations for the better carrying into effect the provisions of this Act with respect to united districts (b).

Upon the constitution of a joint board the local authorities having jurisdiction in the component districts or contributory places shall cease Section 281. to exercise therein any powers, or to perform any duties, or to be subject to any liabilities or obligations, which the joint board is authorised to exercise or perform or is made subject to (c); nevertheless, the joint board may delegate to the local authority of any component district the exercise of any of its powers or the performance of any of its duties (d).

(a) See notes to s. 279. Borrowing powers are granted to the joint board by s. 244, ante, p. 539.

(b) The Ministry will doubtless adopt, as far as practicable, the provisions of this Act applicable to single authorities.

(c) The constituent authorities only lose their powers in relation to matters strictly within the province of the joint board under the terms of the Order. Thus in the case of the formation of a united district for main sewerage purposes, the constituent authorities must provide all necessary internal sewers and works. See note (bb) to s. 279.

By the Public Health (Prevention and Treatment of Disease) Act, 1913, s. 1 (see notes thereto, post), notwithstanding this provision the M. of H. may authorise a local authority having jurisdiction in any part of a united district to exercise in relation to that part any powers which the joint board are also authorised to exercise, subject to conditions and restrictions.

(d) Care should be taken that the common object of combination is not lost sight of in any delegation of powers or duties under this clause. The power is rarely exercised.

Meetings and proceedings of joint boards.

282. Meetings of any joint board shall be held, and the proceedings thereat shall be conducted (so far as such meetings and proceedings are not regulated by the Order forming the joint board) (a) in accordance with the rules as to meetings and proceedings contained in Schedule I. to this Act.

(a) The Order here referred to is that made in pursuance of the last section.

Expenses of joint board.

283. Any expenses incurred by a joint board in pursuance of this Act, unless otherwise determined by the Provisional Order, shall be defrayed out of a common fund, to be contributed by the component districts or contributory places in proportion to the rateable value (a) of the property in each district or contributory place, such value to be ascertained according to the valuation list in force for the time being (b).

The question as to the power of a joint board to pay the travelling expenses of the members in attending meetings was submitted to the L. G. B., who, whilst disclaiming jurisdiction to decide the question in the form presented, stated that they were disposed to consider that the reasonable expenses of the members so incurred might be defrayed as part of the expenses of the joint board. It would, however, in the first instance rest with the auditor to decide as to the legality and reasonableness of any charge made.

(a) Rateable value corresponding with full net annual value which is defined in s. 4, ante, p. 15, under the word rack-rent.

(b) The valuation list is made pursuant to the Union Assessment Committee Act, 1862. See Lumley's Union Assessment Committee Acts.

A Provisional Order of the L. G. B., confirmed by a local Act, provided that the expenses incurred by the joint board for the district should be defrayed out of a common fund, to be contributed by the component districts in manner provided by s. 283, supra, and that the contributions of certain of the component districts should be contributed and raised as if they were required to defray "special expenses" within the meaning of this Act:—Held, on a special case, that the joint board should apportion the contributions of the component districts according to the rateable values of the properties in such districts, to be ascertained according to the valuation list, and that the rateable values of tithes, tithe commutation, rent-charges, land used as arable, meadow, or pasture ground only, or as woodlands, market gardens, or nursery grounds, or covered with water, or used as a canal or towing path, or as a railway, should be taken at the full value appearing in the valuation list, and not at one-fourth thereof (Darenth Main Valley Sewerage Board v. Dartford Union (1887), 19 Q. B. D. 270).

Note to Section 283.

284. For the purpose of obtaining payment from component districts of the sums to be contributed by them, the joint board shall issue their precept to the local authority of each component district, stating the sum to be contributed by such authority, and requiring such authority, within a time limited by the precept, to pay the sums therein mentioned to the joint board, or to such person as the joint board may direct.

Payment of contributions to joint board.

Any sum mentioned in a precept addressed by a joint board to a local authority as aforesaid shall be a debt due from that authority, and may be recovered accordingly (a), such contribution in the case of a rural authority being deemed to be general expenses (b).

If any local authority makes default in complying with the precept addressed to it, the joint board may, instead of instituting proceedings for the recovery of a debt, or in addition to such proceedings as to any part of a debt which may for the time being be unpaid, proceed in a summary manner as in this Act mentioned (c) to raise within the district of the defaulting authority such sum as may be sufficient to pay the sum due.

For the purpose of obtaining payment from contributory places of the sums to be contributed by them, the joint board shall have the same powers of issuing precepts and of recovering the amounts named therein as if such contributory places formed a rural district, and the joint board were the authority thereof (d).

(a) I.e., in the county court or in the High Court, according to the amount claimed. See Richardson v. Willis (1872), L. R. 8 Ex. 69, where it was said to be a general rule that if a statute gave a right to a sum of money, and provided no means of recovering it, the remedy was by action. But, as this may be a dilatory process, the next paragraph substitutes an alternative mode of proceeding.

(b) As to what are general expenses, see s. 229, ante, p. 510. And see Darenth Main Valley Sewerage Board v. Dartford Union, supra.

(c) See s. 292, post, p. 625.

(d) See s. 229, ante, p. 510, as to what are contributory places, and s. 230, ante, p. 514, as to the recovery of amounts due from them.

285. Any local authority may, with the consent of the local authority of any adjoining district, execute and do in such adjoining (a) district all or any of such works and things as they may execute and do within their own district, and on such terms as to payment or otherwise as may be agreed on between them and the local authority of the adjoining district; moreover two or more local authorities may combine together (b) for the purpose of executing and maintaining any works that may be for the benefit of their respective districts or any part thereof. All moneys which any local authority may agree to contribute

Power to execute works in adjoining district, and to combine for execution of works.

Section 285. for defraying expenses incurred under this section shall be deemed to be expenses incurred by them in the execution of works within their district.

(a) In a colonial case the word "adjacent" was contrasted with the word "adjoining," and was held to include places close to or near, and was not confined to places adjoining (Wellington (Mayor of) v. Lower Hutt (Mayor of), [1904] A. C. 773). See also as to the meaning of the word "adjoining," p. 302, ante.

Works which may be done outside the district without consent apparently include sewerage works under ss. 16, 32—34, ante, pp. 55, 94; laying of water mains under s. 54, ante, p. 128; drains under s. 22, ante, p. 81; cleansing of ditches under s. 48, ante, p. 117; abatement of nuisances under ss. 108, 115, ante, pp. 208, 217; construction of waterworks under s. 51, p. 119, ante.

The L. G. B. expressed the opinion that in the case of a combination of authorities under s. 285 for the execution of sewerage works of common benefit no sanction on their part was necessary under s. 28 to the communication of sewers, nor were notices under ss. 32, 54 necessary, unless the proposed work would lie outside the area of the combining authorities.

This section does not apply to the powers conferred by s. 131, ante, p. 238, so as to require for their exercise in an adjoining district the consent of the local authority of such district (Withington L. B. v. Manchester (Mayor, etc. of), [1893] 2 Ch. 19; 57 J. P. 340). "The object of s. 285 is to enable the local authority acting under it to do certain things as within their powers which, but for the section, would have been outside their powers. They can do certain things in an adjoining district without the imputation of acting ultra vires if they have got the consent of the local authority. But, in my opinion, that has not the effect of making the adjoining district or that portion of it their own district for all the purposes of s. 16; or, in other words, it does not dispense with the necessity, as between themselves and owners of land or other persons, of observing the requirements that have to be observed with respect to sewers where sewers are made outside the district of the board that is making them" (per NORTH, J., in Jones v. Conway and Colwyn Bay Joint Water Supply Board, [1893] 2 Ch. 603, at p. 609), and see note (f), ante, p. 59.

It would thus appear that the consent of the adjoining authority does not dispense with the necessity of giving notices under ss. 32 and 54 as to sewers and water mains outside the district for the sole benefit of the authority constructing them.

(b) As to the union of districts, see s. 279, ante, p. 616, and as to joint committees, s. 57 of the L. G. A., 1894.

Advantages of joint board over joint committee.

When works of magnitude are required for the joint benefit of two or more districts the M. of H. favour the constitution of a joint board under s. 279 rather than a combination under s. 285. A committee have no power of themselves to borrow money or to hold property or to sue or be sued. A joint board, however, is free from these disadvantages, and executes powers independently of the local authorities comprised within the united district. By s. 244 they are enabled to borrow money, and under s. 280 they are a body corporate with power to hold lands for the purposes for which they are constituted. They are also empowered to issue precepts to the local authorities within the united district for the sums to be contributed by such authorities towards the expenses of the joint board, and in case of default to proceed in a summary manner to raise such sums.

The independent powers which a joint board possesses for the borrowing of money is particularly important when one or more of the local authorities is nearing the limit of its borrowing powers under s. 234 (2).

Where a corporation and a district council combined under ss. 131, 285 to provide a joint hospital, it was held that the salaried clerk of the joint hospital committee held a paid office "under the district council," and was therefore disqualified for membership thereof (Grenville-Smith v. Tomlin, [1911] 2 K. B. 9; 75 J. P. 314).

Two authorities liable to repair a length of a road in strips agreed to each repair the whole width for half the length: Held, that one of them could not plead this agreement as a defence to an action for not performing its duty on a portion legally repairable by it, but informally transferred to the other (Gray v. St. Andrews and Cupar District Committees, [1911] S. C. 266).

286. Where it appears to the Local Government Board, on any representation made to it (a), that the appointment of a medical officer of health (b) for two or more districts situated wholly or partially in the same county (c) would diminish expense, or otherwise be for the advantage of such districts, the Local Government Board may by Order (d) unite such districts for the purpose of appointing a medical officer of health, and may make regulations as to the mode of his appointment and removal by representatives of the authorities of the constituent districts, and as to the meetings from time to time of such representatives, and the proportion in which the expenses of the appointment and of the salary and expenses of such officer are to be borne by such authorities, and as to any other matters (including the necessary expenses of such representatives) (e) which, in the opinion of the said Board, require regulation for the purposes of this section; and no other medical officer of health shall be appointed for any constituent district, except as an assistant to the officer appointed for the united districts:

Section 286.
Districts may be united for appointing a medical officer of health.

Provided that no urban district containing a population of twenty-five thousand and upwards, or (in the case of a borough) having a separate court of quarter sessions, shall be included in any union of districts formed under this section without the consent of the local authority of such district or borough (f).

Not less than twenty-eight days notice that it is proposed to make an Order under this section shall be given by the Local Government Board to the local authority of any district proposed to be included in the union, and if within twenty-one days after such notice has been given to any such authority they (g) give notice to the Local Government Board that they object to the proposal, the Local Government Board may include their district in the union by a Provisional Order (h) but not otherwise.

There may be assigned by the Local Government Board to the district medical officer of any union comprising or coincident with any constituent district such duties in rendering local assistance to the medical officer of health appointed for the united districts as the said Board may think fit; and such district medical officer shall receive, in respect of any duties so assigned to him, such additional remuneration to be paid by the local authority or authorities of the district or districts within which his duties under this section are performed as those authorities may (i), with the approval of the Local Government Board, determine (k).

Formerly under the L. G. A., 1888, s. 17, a county medical officer appointed by a county council might by arrangement perform the duties of medical officer of health in any urban or rural sanitary districts within the county; but no new agreements of the kind can now be made (Housing, Town Planning, etc. Act, 1909, s. 68 (3), post, Vol. II.).

(a) An example of an Order issued by the L. G. B. in pursuance of a representation under this section will be found in the South-West Gloucestershire United Districts (Medical Officer of Health) Order, 1906, which was confirmed (upon objection) by the Local Government Board's Provisional Orders Confirmation (No. 7) Act, 1906.

For the views of the L. G. B. (presumably those also of the M. of H.) as to combination of districts for the appointment of medical officers, reference may be made to the Board's memorandum of Dec., 1910.

(b) See as to the appointment of this officer s. 189, ante, p. 447. The M. of H. consider that, apart from any general report, it is incumbent upon the medical officer of health of a combined district to make an annual report in respect of each sanitary district included in the union.

(c) There are now very few districts situate in more than one administrative county: see the L. G. A., 1894, s. 36. It is not apparently competent to a port sanitary authority to join in a combination for the joint appointment of a medical officer of health.

(d) See s. 295, post, p. 627.

(e) This will include travelling expenses and cost of living. In some cases hotel expenses may be recognised as necessary.

(f) The consent of the majority of members assembled at a meeting specially convened for the purpose will doubtless suffice. It is to be observed that this consent is a condition precedent to the constitution of the district. A resolution proposed and carried will be sufficient, and a copy under the hand of the clerk of the authority will be sufficient evidence of it.

No mode is pointed out for ascertaining the population. The report on the last census will in many cases suffice.

(g) This applies, not to the urban district previously noticed, but to a rural district, or an urban district not within the description.

(h) As to this Order, see s. 297, post, p. 629. The confirmation of the Order by Parliament may be opposed by any party legally interested.

(i) See s. 191, ante, p. 454, as to the appointment of a district medical officer to act under this statute.

(k) Seeing that the local authority have a discretion as to what salary they will assign, they should settle this before the assignment of the duties is made by the M. of H., as the Ministry will not assign any duties, nor the officer accept the appointment, unless adequate remuneration is to be given.

PORT SANITARY AUTHORITY.

Constitution of port sanitary authority.

287. The Local Government Board may, by Provisional Order (a), permanently constitute any local authority (b) whose district or part of whose district forms part of or abuts on any part of a port (c) in England, or the waters of such port or any conservators commissioners or other persons having authority in or over such port or any part thereof, (which local authority conservators commissioners or other persons are in this Act referred to as a "riparian authority,") the sanitary authority of the whole of such port or of any part thereof (in this Act referred to as the "port sanitary authority").

The Local Government Board may also by Provisional Order (a) permanently constitute a port sanitary authority for the whole or any part of a port, by combining any two or more riparian authorities having jurisdiction within such port, or any part thereof, and may prescribe the mode of their joint action; or by forming a joint board consisting of representative members of any two or more riparian authorities, in the same manner as is by this Act provided with respect to the formation of a united district (d). Moreover the Local Government Board may by Provisional Order (a) permanently constitute a port sanitary authority for any two or more ports, by forming a joint board consisting of representative members of all or any of the riparian authorities having jurisdiction within such ports, or any part thereof.

Section 287.

In any case in which the Local Government Board are by this section authorised permanently to constitute by Provisional Order a port sanitary authority, the said Board may, if it thinks fit, until such Order has been made and confirmed by Parliament, temporarily (e) constitute by Order any such authority, and may from time to time renew any such last-mentioned Order, and may by any Order so made or renewed make any such provisions as it is by this section empowered to make by Provisional Order (f).

Any Order constituting a port sanitary authority may assign to such authority any powers rights duties capacities liabilities and obligations under this Act, and direct the mode in which the expenses of such authority are to be paid (g); and where such Order constitutes a joint board the port sanitary authority, it may contain regulations with respect to any matters for which regulations may be made by a Provisional Order forming a united district under this Act (h).

A port shall mean a port as established for the purposes of the laws relating to the customs of the United Kingdom (i).

Constitution of port sanitary authority.

(a) See s. 297, post, p. 629. The Public Health (Ships, etc.) Act, 1885, s. 3, varied the provisions of this section by allowing a port sanitary authority to be constituted by an Order of the L. G. B., a Provisional Order being required only in the event of objections being lodged to the proposal. See the section in extenso, post.

The L. G. B. stated that they were advised that a port sanitary authority to whom they had by Order under s. 287, supra, as amended by the Public Health (Ships, etc.) Act, 1885, applied the powers, rights, duties, capacities, liabilities, and obligations of s. 189 of the Act of 1875, was a local authority within the meaning of the L. G. A., 1888, s. 24 (2) (c), and, as such, entitled to repayment from the county fund in respect of the salaries of medical officers of health and inspectors of nuisances as provided for in the last-mentioned enactment.

As to the appointment, duties, etc., of medical officers and inspectors of nuisances in the case of port sanitary authorities, reference may be made to an Order and Circular of the L. G. B., dated Dec. 21 and 22, 1910.

The M. of H. hold the view that a port sanitary authority is not a local authority within the meaning of the Public Health and Local Government Conferences Act, 1885, and that legislation would be necessary to enable them to issue an Order applying the Act to such sanitary authorities.

(b) Note the general character of this term, which is defined in s. 4, ante, p. 7.

(c) See definition of "port" at the end of this section.

(d) See s. 279, ante, p. 616.

(e) As to the conclusiveness of this temporary Order while it is in force, see s. 295, post, p. 627.

(f) These words, providing for the renewal of the Order, did not exist in 35 & 36 Vict. c. 79, s. 20. Some doubt existed as to whether the Board possessed the power of renewal under that Act, and accordingly s. 325 of this Act, post, p. 656 (now repealed), was passed to ratify and confirm their renewed Orders.

Assignment of powers, etc.

(g) By the Public Health (Ports) Act, 1896, s. 1, post, the M. of H. may by Order assign to any port sanitary authority any powers, rights, duties, capacities, and obligations under the Infectious Disease Prevention Act, 1890, post, with the necessary modifications, and by s. 2 the Act is to be construed as one with this Act. Where such an Order is in force, the powers and duties of the local authorities in the places referred to are pro tanto superseded. See Clark v. Rochford R. D. C. (1897), 13 T. L. R. 371. The latest General Order on the subject is dated July 14, 1920.

By way of illustration reference may be made to the Provisional Order permanently constituting a port sanitary authority for the port of Plymouth, which will be found in Glen's Local Government Orders, at p. 258. It provides for the number and qualification of the members of the port sanitary authority, for their continuance in office, casual vacancies, meetings, powers of the authority, expenses, accounts, audit, and the settlement by arbitration of any disputes between the joint board and any riparian authority, or between any two or more riparian authorities respecting any matter arising out of the provisions of the Order. See also the General Order for the accounts of such authorities, Stat. R. & O., 1896, p. 451.

Powers of borrowing are given to port sanitary authorities by s. 244, ante, p. 539.

(h) See s. 279, ante, p. 616.

Port for customs.

(i) See the Customs Laws Consolidation Act, 1876, ss. 11—16. These sections provide that the Treasury may, by their warrant, appoint any port in the United Kingdom, and declare the limits thereof, and may annul the limits of any port already appointed or to be thereafter set out, and may declare the same to be no longer a port; Provided that such alterations or variations in limits shall not affect any lawful rights or privileges co-extensive with such pre-existing limits (irrespective of matters relating to her Majesty's Customs) granted to any person or body by any Act of Parliament, etc., but they shall be deemed to be and remain the same for the purposes of such Act as if no such alteration or variation had been made. The Treasury may, from time to time, revoke or alter any warrant made by them.

Jurisdiction of port sanitary authority.

288. The Order of the Local Government Board constituting a port sanitary authority shall be deemed to give such authority jurisdiction over all waters within the limits of such port, and also over the whole or such portions of the district within the jurisdiction of any riparian authority as may be specified in the Order.

As to what is a riparian authority, see the last section.

Delegation of powers by port sanitary authority.

289. A port sanitary authority may, with the sanction of the Local Government Board, delegate to any riparian authority within or bordering on their district the exercise of any powers conferred on such port sanitary authority by the Order of the Local Government Board; but, except in so far as such delegation may extend, no other authority shall exercise any powers conferred on a port sanitary authority by the Order of the Local Government Board within the district of such port sanitary authority (a).

(a) This is merely an emphatic reiteration of what has been provided in the previous sections.

Expenses of port sanitary authority.

290. Any expenses incurred by a port sanitary authority constituted temporarily in carrying into effect any purposes of this Act shall be defrayed out of a common fund to be contributed by the riparian authorities in such proportions as the Local Government Board thinks just.

Such port sanitary authority, if itself a local authority under this Act independently of its character of a port sanitary authority, shall raise the proportion of expenses due in respect of its own district in the same manner as if such expenses had been incurred by it in the ordinary manner for the purposes of this Act (a).

For the purpose of obtaining payment from the contributory riparian authorities of the sums to be contributed by them, such port sanitary authority shall issue their precept to each such authority, requiring such authority, within a time limited by the precept, to pay the amount therein mentioned to such port sanitary authority, or to such person as such port sanitary authority may direct.

Section 290.

Any contribution payable by a riparian authority to such port sanitary authority shall be a debt due from them, and may be recovered accordingly (b), such contribution in the case of a rural authority being deemed general expenses of that authority (c). If any riparian authority makes default in complying with the precept addressed to it by such port sanitary authority, such port sanitary authority may, instead of instituting proceedings for the recovery of the debt, or in addition to such proceedings, as to any part of the debt which may for the time being be unpaid, proceed in the summary manner in this Act mentioned (d) to raise within the district of the defaulting authority such sum as may be sufficient to pay the debt due.

Where several riparian authorities are combined in the district of one port sanitary authority the Local Government Board may by Order (e) declare that some one or more of such authorities shall be exempt from contributing to the expenses incurred by such authorities.

See now as to grants by the M. of H. the General Order of the M. of H. of July, 1920.

(a) As to these expenses in an urban district, see s. 207, ante, p. 469. In a rural district they will ordinarily be general expenses, as to which see s. 229, ante, p. 510.

(b) That is by action. See note (a) to s. 284, ante, p. 619.

(c) See s. 229, ante, p. 510.

(d) See s. 292, infra.

(e) See as to this Order, s. 295, post, p. 627.

Provision as to port of London. [Repealed by 54 & 55 Vict. c. 76.]

291. The mayor aldermen and commons of the city of London shall be the port sanitary authority of the port of London, and shall pay out of their corporate funds all their expenses as such port sanitary authority.

This section was repealed by the P. H. (London) A., 1891, and re-enacted by s. 111 of that Act. See also s. 112. The L. G. B. issued an Order under these provisions dated March 25th, 1892.

The General Order of July 14th, 1920, referred to on p. 623, note (g), does not apply to the Port of London.

The limits of the Port of London were set out in a Treasury Warrant dated August 10th, 1883.

Proceedings for raising a sum for payment of debt within district of defaulting authority.

292. Where any port sanitary authority joint board or other authority are authorised, in pursuance of this Act, to proceed in a summary manner (a) to raise within the district of a defaulting authority such sum as may be sufficient to pay any debt due to them, the authority so authorised for the purpose of raising such sum shall, within the district of the defaulting authority, have, so far as relates to the raising such sum, the same powers as if they were the defaulting authority, and as if such sum were expenses properly incurred by the defaulting authority within the district of such authority (b).

Where the defaulting authority have power to raise any moneys due for their expenses by levy of a rate from individual ratepayers (c), the authority so authorised as aforesaid shall have power to levy such a rate by any officer appointed by them, and the officer so appointed shall have the same powers, and the rate shall be levied in the same manner and be subject to the same incidents in all respects as if it were being levied by the officer of the defaulting authority for the payment of the expenses of that authority (d); and where the defaulting authority (e) have power to raise moneys due for their expenses by issuing precepts, or otherwise requiring payments from any other authorities, the authority so authorised as aforesaid shall have the same power as the defaulting authority would have of issuing precepts, or otherwise requiring payment from such other authorities (d).

Any precepts issued by the authority so authorised as aforesaid for raising the sum due to them may be enforced in the same manner in all respects as if they had been issued by the defaulting authority (b).

The authority so authorised as aforesaid may, in making an estimate of the sum to be raised for the purpose of paying the debt due to them, add such sums as they think sufficient, not exceeding ten per cent. on the debt due, and may defray thereout all costs charges and expenses (including compensation to any persons they may employ) to be incurred by such authority by reason of the default of the defaulting authority; and the authority so authorised as aforesaid shall apply all moneys raised by them in payment of the debt due to them, and such costs charges and expenses as aforesaid, and shall render the balance, if any, remaining in their hands after such application to the defaulting authority.

(a) See s. 284, ante, p. 619, and s. 290, ante, p. 624.

(b) Refer for these powers to Part VI., ante, p. 469.

(c) This, in the case of an urban sanitary authority in default, applies where a borough rate, improvement rate, or district rate can be levied. A rural authority cannot levy a rate directly; see s. 230, ante, p. 514.

(d) See Part VI. and s. 256, ante, p. 564.

(e) This applies to the case of a rural authority, so that where the rural district council comprised in a joint district make default, the joint board may issue their precepts to the overseers of the parishes in the district.

PART IX.

LOCAL GOVERNMENT BOARD.

Inquiries by Board.

Power of Board to direct inquiries.

293. The Local Government Board may from time to time cause to be made such inquiries as are directed by this Act, and such inquiries as they see fit in relation to any matters concerning the public health in any place, or any matters with respect to which their sanction approval or consent is required by this Act.

These powers in relation to the public health were assigned to the Privy Council by 21 & 22 Vict. c. 97, s. 3, and transferred to the L. G. B. by 34 & 35 Vict. c. 70. This passage, therefore, only repeated earlier provisions. It will be seen that certain inquiries are directed by the Act; as to these the M. of H. (successors of the Board) have no discretion. See ss. 33, 53, 176, 234, 272—274, and 278, ante, and s. 297, post. They have, however, a discretion as to other inquiries for the purposes of the Act. Under the Housing of the Working Classes Act, 1890, s. 85, post, Vol. II., for the purposes of the execution of their duties under that Act, the M. of H. may hold such local inquiries as they see fit, and ss. 293 to 296, both inclusive, of this Act relating to inquiries by them, shall apply. See also the L. G. A., 1888, s. 87, post.

Note to Section 293.

The M. of H. hold that reports made to them by their inspectors in relation to such matters as the proposed borrowing of money, or applications for the issue of orders of various kinds under the Act, are intended solely for their own information, and they consequently decline to furnish copies either to local authorities or private persons. In the case of legal proceedings the Board do not refuse to nominate one of their officers, who can be served with a subpœna duces tecum for the production of official papers in court; but the officer is always instructed to claim that a report is privileged, and that it would be injurious to the interests of the public service to put it in evidence. Such an objection is usually upheld.

In an action to restrain the use of a small-pox hospital, as being a source of danger to health, an inspector of the L. G. B., who was subpœnaed, stated that the President of the Board had ordered him not to produce a report which he had made on the hospital, on the ground that it might be prejudicial to the public service. The inspector was not examined, but the court respectfully protested against the action of the Board (Att.-Gen. v. Nottingham Corporation, [1904] 1 Ch. 673; 68 J. P. 125).

Reports of the medical inspectors of the Board, however, giving results of the inspection of sanitary districts, and containing recommendations as to their sanitary requirements, are usually printed by the department, and communicated to the district councils concerned.

See also the provisions of s. 13 (5) of the Gas and Waterworks Facilities Act, 1870, Amendment Act, 1873, with regard to reports of commissioners appointed by the Board for the purpose of that Act.

294. The Local Government Board may make Orders (a) as to the costs of inquiries or proceedings instituted by, or of appeals to the said Board under this Act, and as to the parties by whom or the rates out of which such costs shall be borne; and every such Order may be made a rule of one of the superior courts (b) of law on the application of any person named therein.

Orders as to costs of inquiries.

(a) As to these Orders, see next section. The L. G. B. always interpreted this section as applying to their own costs, but the Ministry of Health recently reconsidered the matter and now announce that they consider themselves empowered to make orders under the section as to the costs of the parties appearing at a local inquiry. See also note to s. 54 of the L. G. Act, 1888. The Ministry usually recover from local authorities the personal and travelling expenses incurred by their inspectors in the investigation of applications made to them under the Act. The debt does not accrue until the date of their Order.

(b) That is, a division of the High Court of Justice. 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110 contained provisions for enforcing payment of costs upon rules of court, and these will be available against individuals; but with regard to costs awarded against the local authority, the effectual remedy will be by mandamus.

295. All Orders made by the Local Government Board in pursuance of this Act shall be binding and conclusive in respect of the matters to which they refer, and shall be published in such manner as that Board may direct.

Orders of Board under this Act.

Questions of some difficulty have arisen as to the effect of Orders which are alleged to exceed the powers given by this Act, or with respect to which the preliminaries prescribed by this Act have not been strictly complied with. The confirmatory Acts formerly only confirmed the Orders so far as they were authorised by the Acts. In such cases it became important to determine how far the requisite preliminaries were conditions precedent to the validity of the Order although confirmed by statute. The following cases illustrate these remarks. The General Board of Health made a Provisional Order extending the P. H. A., 1848, to T., a district within which were parts of turnpike roads made under local turnpike Acts. A local sanitary Act also applied to the district, which was altered by this Order, and it was directed that after confirmation of the Order by Parliament, s. 50 of the Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, which forbids trustees of any turnpike road from levying toll within the limits of the special Act, should be incorporated with the sanitary Act. This Provisional Order was confirmed by the statute so far as authorised by the above Act. It was held that this part of the Provisional Order was not authorised, and consequently was void. The court considered that toll on the turnpike road was not a matter which came within the scope of the Public Health Act (Clayton v. Fenwick (1856), 20 J. P. 180; 6 El. & Bl. 114). An Order of the General Board of Health rendering the same Act applicable to the borough of T., but excepting the operation of so much of s. 88 as provided for the rating of pasture lands, railways, etc., at a reduced rate, was held to be invalid in respect of this exception (N. E. Rail. Co. v. Tynemouth (Mayor, etc., of) (1868), L. R. 3 Q. B. 723; 32 J. P. 822). But where an Order, confirmed by statute, repealed a local Act which created a district rate, but exempted certain property from such rate, and the clause containing the exemption was preserved by such Order, the court held that the Order had no operation with regard to rates imposed by the Public Health Act, for the rating clause of the Act having been repealed, there was nothing to which the exception could apply (Turner v. Halifax (Mayor of) (1868), 9 B. & S. 623 n).

In Att.-Gen. v. Hanwell U. D. C., [1900] 1 Ch., at p. 56, in dealing with an argument that this section was conclusive as to the jurisdiction of the L. G. B. to make an Order under s. 175, directing land to be applied to purposes inconsistent with the purpose for which it was originally acquired, KEKEWICH, J., after citing this section, said: "But that does not prevent the court from considering the question of jurisdiction. It cannot be intended that an Order of the L. G. B. made without jurisdiction is to be held conclusive in a court of justice. It must be the duty of the court to inquire whether the Order could properly be made. If it could properly be made, it would be conclusive under s. 295, though there might be some irregularities about it, and though perhaps it ought not to have been made." On appeal, this part of the judgment was not questioned, and the decision on the main point was affirmed ([1900] 2 Ch. 377).

In R. v. Robinson (1851), 17 Q. B. 466, it was held that an order of the Poor Law Commissioners (whose powers are now vested in the Ministry of Health) might be quashed in part on certiorari if the parts were sufficiently divisible. But see s. 262, ante, p. 582.

See a discussion on the conclusiveness of orders of the L. G. B. made under s. 33 of the Local Government Act, 1894, and as to the right to make an amending Order (Jones v. Lewis (1918), 83 J. P. 61).

As to the force and effect of departmental orders which affect the rights of property, see Frewin v. Lewis (1837), 9 Sim. 66; Foster v. Dodd (1866), L. R. 1 Q. B. 475; (1867), L. R. 3 Q. B. 67; 32 J. P. 20. In Att.-Gen. v. Manchester (Bishop of) (1867), L. R. 3 Eq. 436, at p. 455; 31 J. P. 516, STUART, V.-C., quoted the following passage from the judgment of COTTENHAM, L.C., in Frewin v. Lewis, supra, as laying down the rule of law: "I apprehend that the limits within which the court interferes with the acts of public functionaries constituted like the Poor Law Commissioners are perfectly clear and unambiguous. So long as those functionaries strictly confine themselves within the exercise of those duties which are confided to them by the law, this court will not interfere to see whether any alteration or regulation which they may direct is good or bad; but if they are departing from that power which the law has vested in them—if they are assuming to themselves a power over property which the law does not give them—this court no longer considers them as acting under the authority of their commission, but treats them, whether they be a corporation or individuals, merely as persons dealing with property without legal authority."

For a case where an award of partition was disregarded as being made without jurisdiction notwithstanding s. 105 of the Inclosure Act, 1845, see Jacomb v. Turner, [1892] 1 Q. B. 47.

Where a statute authorised the making of rules and orders, and declared that they should have effect as if enacted in the Act, but should be laid before Parliament, and if either House so resolved within 60 days should be annulled, it was held that a court could not consider whether Orders so made and not annulled were ultra vires (Patent Agents' Institute v. Lockwood, [1894] A. C. 347); and see Re London, etc. Bank, [1895] W. N. 155. The decision in the Patent Agents' Institute case was distinguished in Waterford v. Murphy, [1920] 2 I. R. 165, which dealt with byelaws whose scope was limited, and it was held that the limit had been exceeded. Note to Section 295.

Where an Act declares that an Order made under it shall be final and have effect as if enacted in the Act, and that confirmation by the L. G. B. or M. of H. shall be conclusive evidence that the requirements of the Act have been complied with, and that the Order has been duly made and is within the powers of the Act, the courts cannot interfere if some requirement has not been complied with (Ex parte Ringer (1909), 73 J. P. 436; 25 T. L. R. 718; R. (Eustace) v. Local Government Board (1910), 44 Ir. L. T. 176, not following R. (Whyte) v. Local Government Board (1909), 43 Ir. L. T. 216); and see R. v. L G. B. for Ireland, [1917] 2 I. R. 454.

An Order of the L. G. B. made under s. 276, declared s. 150 of the Act to be in force as to a particular road, which road the Order purported to declare to be a "street." It was held that the matter to which it referred was, first, the application of s. 150 (among other sections) to the so-called street; and, secondly, the investing of the rural authority with the powers of an urban authority, so far as regards the so-called street, but that the mere description of the road as a street in the Order could not make it one if it was not one in fact (Fenwick v. Croydon Rural Sanitary Authority, [1891] 2 Q. B. 216; 55 J. P. 470). See also Att.-Gen. v. Hanwell U. D. C., ante, p. 628.

Besides other modes of enforcing such Orders, they may be enforced under certain circumstances by mandamus, and perhaps by indictment. See R. v. Walker (1875), L. R. 10 Q. B. 355; 40 J. P. 230.

With regard to defaulting authorities, see s. 299, post, p. 632.

As to evidence of Orders see s. 135, ante, p. 247, and R. v. Lowe, in the note thereto.

296. Inspectors of the Local Government Board shall, for the purposes of any inquiry directed by the Board (a), have in relation to witnesses and their examination, the production of papers and accounts, and the inspection of places and matters required to be inspected, similar powers to those which poor law inspectors have under the Acts relating to the relief of the poor for the purposes of those Acts (b). Power of inspectors of Local Government Board.

(a) Note the limitation to inquiries directed by the Board (now M. of H.).

(b) 10 & 11 Vict. c. 109, ss. 20, 21, contain the provisions as to the powers of poor law inspectors. Under these sections an inspector may summon any person to be examined before him, or to produce and verify on oath any books, contracts, agreements, accounts, or copies of the same, and not relating to or involving any question of title to land (except the property of the local authority). He may examine witnesses on oath or require the party examined to make and subscribe a declaration of the truth of his evidence. Disobedience of any summons, refusing to produce, altering, or concealing any books, etc., are misdemeanors. As to false evidence given before the inspector, see the Perjury Act, 1911.

Provisional Orders by Board (a).

297. With respect to Provisional Orders authorised to be made by the Local Government Board under this Act, the following enactments shall be made: As to Provisional Orders made by Local Government Board.

(1) The Local Government Board shall not make any Provisional Order under this Act unless public notice of the purport of the proposed Order has been previously given by advertisement in two successive weeks in some local newspaper circulating in the district to which such Provisional Order relates (b):

(2) Before making any such Provisional Order, the Local Government Board shall consider any objections which may be made

thereto by any persons affected thereby, and in cases where the subject matter is one to which a local inquiry is applicable (c), shall cause to be made a local inquiry, of which public notice shall be given in manner aforesaid, and at which all persons interested shall be permitted to attend and make objections (d) :

(3) The Local Government Board may (e) submit to Parliament for confirmation any Provisional Order made by it in pursuance of this Act, but any such Order shall be of no force whatever unless and until it is confirmed by Parliament (f) :

(4) If while the Bill confirming any such Order is pending in either House of Parliament, a petition is presented against any Order comprised therein, the Bill, so far as it relates to such Order, may be referred to a Select Committee, and the petitioner shall be allowed to appear and oppose as in the case of private Bills (g) :

(5) Any Act confirming any Provisional Order made in pursuance of any of the Sanitary Acts (h) or of this Act, and any Order in Council (i) made in pursuance of any of the Sanitary Acts, may be repealed altered or amended by any Provisional Order made by the Local Government Board and confirmed by Parliament :

(6) The Local Government Board may revoke, either wholly or partially, any Provisional Order made by them before the same is confirmed by Parliament, but such revocation shall not be made whilst the Bill confirming the Order is pending in either House of Parliament :

(7) The making of a Provisional Order shall be primâ facie evidence that all the requirements of this Act in respect of proceedings required to be taken previously to the making of such Provisional Order have been complied with (k) :

(8) Every Act confirming any such provisional Order shall be deemed to be a public general Act (l).

Preliminary procedure.

(a) See also notes to ss. 176, 295 and 303.

In In re Morley (1875), L. R. 20 Eq. 17, the M.R., referring to a Provisional Order made by the Board of Trade, observed : " The legislature, instead of allowing proceedings to be taken before a committee of either House, decided that these inquiries " (i.e., preliminary to the making of the Order) " might be prosecuted more cheaply and more beneficially before a local tribunal or persons appointed to inquire into the matters locally. These proceedings are instituted, and the parties interested, instead of applying to Parliament, apply to the Board of Trade, and after making a proper investigation in the locality, the Board of Trade makes a Provisional Order, and then if Parliament thinks fit, that Provisional Order, generally with a great many more, is confirmed by an Act which is not procured at all by the applicants, but by the Board of Trade ; that is, by the executive government of the country. The result is that there has been an entire change of system, and all that the applicant obtains is the Provisional Order, and there is no proceeding in Parliament with which he really has anything to do directly." Note the limitation of these last words.

The L. G. B. annually issued Circular Letters and Instructions relating to applications for Provisional Orders by local authorities, and the practice is continued by the M. of H. These should be carefully attended to. The current Circular and Instructions will be found in App. II., post, Vol. II.

As to the application of s. 297 under the Rivers Pollution (Border Counties) Act, 1898, see s. 2 of that Act in App. I., post, Vol. II. And see also s. 29 (4) of the Mental Deficiency Act, 1913.

Note to Section 297.

(b) This advertisement is usually combined with that announcing the local inquiry which is directed. The advertisement is framed by the Ministry, and forwarded to the local authority for publication at their own expense. Reference should be made to s. 176, ante, p. 417, as to the advertisements, etc., necessary before applying for a Provisional Order to authorise the compulsory purchase of land. Advertisements.

(c) In some cases the Act itself requires an inquiry. In others the Ministry deem it advisable for the purpose of guiding their action. It seems that under s. 176 (4), ante, p. 418, the inquiry may in exceptional instances be dispensed with. Inquiry.

(d) It is obvious that persons may also attend and be heard in support of the proposal. The Ministry frame the Order themselves.

(e) The Ministry can exercise their discretion as to submitting the Order to Parliament at all, and, consequently, as to when they will do so. They generally group several Orders together in one Bill in such a manner as to prevent, as far as practicable, unopposed Orders from being delayed by association with such as may be contested. They can choose in which House to bring in the Bill, and accordingly at the latter part of the session they frequently introduce it in the House of Lords. Submission to Parliament.

(f) Therefore the Order cannot be quashed on certiorari (R. (or Frewin) v. Hastings L. B. (1865), 29 J. P. 711; 6 B. & S. 401; In re Local Government Board, Ex parte Kingstown Commissioners (1886), 18 L. R. Ir. 509; R. v. Enniskillen U. D. C., [1902] 2 I. R. 452). In the Kingstown Commissioners Case, supra, it was held that the L. G. B. in exercising its functions as to Provisional Orders is not a court; that purely legislative powers, or powers of promoting legislation, are not on principle, subject to prohibition; but that an usurpation of jurisdiction of a judicial character might be prohibited. The Chancery Division will by injunction restrain a local board from prosecuting an application for a Provisional Order when the application is contrary to equity, and will not drive the applicant to petition Parliament against the Bill (Telford v. Metropolitan Board of Works (1872), L. R. 13 Eq. 574; 36 J. P. 628; and cf. Levenshulme U. D. C. v. Manchester Corporation (1908), 72 J. P. 470).

(g) As most Provisional Orders are made for the benefit of some particular locality, and are not framed by the Ministry spontaneously, if there is opposition to an Order, its defence before the committee is left to the promoters of the proposition contained in it, notwithstanding the observations of the M. R., ante, p. 630; at the same time, the Ministry reserve a power of withdrawing any Order from the Bill, if this seems to them to be expedient pending its passage through Parliament. Opposition.

33 & 34 Vict. c. 1, gave power to the Select Committee of either House of Parliament, to whom Bills confirming Provisional Orders are referred, to award costs under 28 Vict. c. 27, and to examine witnesses on oath as under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 78. It was repealed, but re-enacted with a slight addition not affecting these Orders by 34 & 35 Vict. c. 3, which is still in force as to costs, but has been repealed as to the power to examine witnesses upon oath by 34 & 35 Vict. c. 83, which gives a general power to any committee to examine witnesses on oath.

The next section provides for the costs of the promoters.

(h) See the definition in s. 4, ante, p. 35. "Sanitary Acts."

(i) Orders in Council were made under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, but quære whether any were made under any other Act. See further as to such Orders, s. 339, post, p. 665. As to the exercise of the powers conferred by this sub-section, see In re Local Government Board, supra. Orders in Council.

(k) The Ministry are therefore strict in seeing that all preliminaries are in order: see particularly notes to s. 176, ante, p. 417. It is open to any petitioner to show before the committee that there has been some default in this respect. Whether advantage can be taken of any such defect after the passing of the Confirming Act is yet to be decided. Proof of preliminaries.

(l) Hence it is the practice of the Ministry to insert in the body of the Bill clauses which alter the general law in respect of the district to which any Provisional Order relates, where the Order renders some alteration necessary, or some special privilege, exemption, or requirement expedient. But such provision must arise out of the Order or be connected with it. The Board will not propose extraneous alterations of the law in a confirming Bill. Public general Act.

Though these are public general Acts, they are now printed with the local Acts in the authorised edition of the Statutes.

Section 298.

Costs of Provisional Orders.

298. The reasonable costs of any local authority in respect of Provisional Orders made in pursuance of this Act, and of the inquiry preliminary thereto (a), as sanctioned by the Local Government Board, whether in promoting or opposing the same, shall be deemed to be expenses properly incurred for purposes of this Act by the local authority interested in or affected by such Provisional Orders, and such costs shall be paid accordingly (b); and if thought expedient by the Local Government Board, the local authority may contract a loan for the purpose of defraying such costs (c).

Taxation of costs.

(a) Though a contrary opinion was once held by the L. G. B. this section applies even when the expenses incurred have not resulted in the issue of a Provisional Order. It does not apply to Provisional Orders under the Gas and Waterworks Facilities Acts, or the Electric Lighting Acts.

With reference to the costs of the preliminary inquiries previous to the issuing of the Provisional Order, the M.R. in In re Morley, ante, p. 630, said as to the bill of costs of the solicitor engaged by a local authority:—"These are not parliamentary costs, they are simply costs of obtaining an Order from the Board of Trade, and they must be taxed under the ordinary rules applicable to costs. There is a reason for this. In former days, when application had to be made to Parliament, great expenses were incurred in consequence of the necessity of employing parliamentary agents and so on; but on these local inquiries there is no necessity for anything of the kind; you may employ an ordinary solicitor, and the notices may be served in the ordinary way, and no great expenditure is incurred." But, by the House of Commons Costs Taxation Act, 1879, all the powers and provisions of the House of Commons Costs Taxation Act, 1847, are extended and applied to the costs, charges, and expenses of any parliamentary agent, solicitor, or other person in respect to the obtaining or promotion of or opposition to any Provisional Order or Provisional Certificate or any Bill for confirming the same; and in respect to the promotion of any Bill by any public trustees or commissioners, or by any municipal or other public authority, and in respect to the opposition to any public and general Bill.

An application to the M. of H. under this section should be accompanied by taxed bills of all law costs, vouchers for other payments, and the certificate of taxation by the taxing officer of one of the Houses of Parliament. It is unnecessary to submit the costs to the clerk of the peace. See also notes to s. 249.

The costs incurred by a rural district council in promoting or opposing a Provisional Order are not "special expenses" unless so declared by order under s. 229.

(b) Hence it will not be necessary for the local authority to obtain in this case the sanction required by the Borough Funds Acts, 1872 and 1903, where a Bill to confirm a Provisional Order is being promoted. Nor, prior to the passing of the Borough Funds Act, 1903, was it necessary to obtain any sanction to enable the local authority to oppose a Provisional Order Bill (see Brooks, Jenkins & Co. v. Torquay Corporation, [1902] 1 K. B. 601).

Loan for costs.

(c) The local authority may obtain this loan from the Public Works Loan Commissioners under s. 242, ante, p. 537. The Ministry usually allow only a short term for the repayment of loans of this character.

Power of Board to enforce Performance of Duty by Defaulting Local Authority.

Proceedings on complaint to Board of default of local authority.

299. Where complaint (a) is made to the Local Government Board that a local authority has made default in providing their district (b) with sufficient sewers, or in the maintenance of existing sewers (c), or in providing their district with a supply of water, in cases where danger arises to the health of the inhabitants from the insufficiency or unwholesomeness of the existing supply of water, and a proper supply can be got at a reasonable cost (d), or that a local authority has made default in enforcing any provisions of this Act which it is their duty to enforce (e), the Local Government Board, if satisfied, after due inquiry (a), that the authority has been guilty of the alleged default, shall make an Order (f), limiting a time for the performance of their duty in the matter of such complaint. If such duty is not performed by the time limited in the Order, such Order may be enforced by writ of mandamus (g), or the Local Government Board may appoint some person to perform such duty (h), and shall by Order direct that the expenses of performing the same, together with a reasonable remuneration to the person appointed for superintending such performance, and amounting to a sum specified in the Order, together with the costs of the proceedings, shall be paid by the authority in default; and any Order made for the payment of such expenses and costs may be removed into the Court of Queen's Bench (i), and be enforced in the same manner as if the same were an order of such court (k). Section 299.

Any person appointed under this section to perform the duty of a defaulting local authority shall, in the performance and for the purposes of such duty, be invested with all the powers of such authority other than (save as hereinafter provided) the powers of levying rates; and the Local Government Board may from time to time by Order change any person so appointed (h).

(a) The section contains no indication of the requirement of a qualifying interest on the part of a person preferring a complaint. It may therefore be made by any person. No particular form has been prescribed, but it should be in writing, addressed to the Minister of Health (successor of the L. G. B.) under cover addressed to the Secretary, should closely follow the terms of the section, and state, with as much conciseness as practicable, the facts of the case which show the default of the authority. The complaint.

The Ministry decline to indicate in detail the nature of the evidence which should be submitted at a local inquiry to substantiate a complaint of default. See, however, the next note as to what will be required of the complainant when the complaint relates to water supply. If the complainant does not himself attend the inquiry, it is probably sufficient if some person conversant with the facts attends on his behalf, makes a statement in support of the complaint, and answers any questions the inspector may put.

See also the L. G. A., 1888, s. 19 (2), as to representations to the Ministry by county councils that a district council have failed to properly put in force the P. H. A., 1875, or that any other matter affecting the public health of a district requires to be remedied; also the L. G. A., 1894, s. 16, as to complaints by parish councils to the county council, of the default of rural district councils, in the matter of sewers, water supply, the enforcement of the P. H. A., or highway maintenance.

By an unrepealed provision in the Housing of the Working Classes Act, 1885 (s. 7), it is the duty of every local authority entrusted with the execution of the laws relating to public health and local government to put in force from time to time, as occasion may arise, the powers with which they are invested, so as to secure the proper sanitary condition of all premises within their area.

(b) The complaint need not relate to the district as a whole, though the Ministry cannot be expected to make an Order unless an appreciable part of the district is concerned. In the case of the city of Rochester, in which both the complaint and Order referred to "the village of Borstal," it was held by the court that the portion of the city thus described was sufficiently defined and well known, and that the Order should be enforced by mandamus (Times, November 22nd, 1892). Meaning of "district."

(c) As to the duty of a local authority to provide and maintain sewers, see s. 15 and notes thereto. It will be seen that a complaint cannot be sustained under s. 299 that a local authority have failed to provide sewers for the purpose of carrying off liquid trade refuse. Complaint as to sewers.

It will be observed that no reference is made to works of sewage disposal. Therefore, mere failure to provide proper works for the purification of sewage cannot be the subject of complaint under the section. Procedure under the Rivers Pollution Prevention Acts is appropriate in such cases.

Note to Section 299.

In cases where there is a dispute whether a sewer vests in the local authority under s. 13, the Ministry of Health will not settle this question upon a complaint of default.

A neglect to cleanse existing sewers is not a default in respect of which a complaint may be made under this section: therefore an action will lie in respect of injury occasioned thereby (Baron v. Portslade U. D. C., [1900] 2 Q. B. 588; 64 J. P. 675).

By a Provisional Order, confirmed by Act of Parliament, a local authority were required to carry out within a fixed time works approved by the L. G. B. for the disposal of the sewage of their district, and in case of default these requirements were made enforceable in manner provided by the above section. The local authority constructed sewage works approved by the Board, and the works, though constructed without negligence, created both a public and a private nuisance. It was held that the Order was only a direction to the local authority to exercise the powers of s. 27, ante, p. 89, within a given time, and did not exempt them from their obligation under that section not to create a nuisance, and an injunction was granted (Att.-Gen. v. Dorchester Corporation (1906), 70 J. P. 281; 94 L. T. 682).

Where the remedy under this section is applicable, no action for damages will lie at the suit of a private person. See Robinson v. Mayor, etc. of Workington; Pasmore v. Oswaldtwistle U. D. C.; Dent v. Mayor, etc. of Bournemouth, and Jones v. Barking Urban District Council, in notes to s. 15, ante, p. 54; Baron v. Portslade U. D. C.; Harrington (Earl of) v. Derby Corporation, in notes to s. 15 at p. 55, s. 17 at p. 69, and s. 19 at p. 75. See, however, Att.-Gen. v. Lewes Corporation on p. 55, ante. In an action claiming damages and an injunction to restrain an authority from managing a sewage farm in such a way as to cause a nuisance to the plaintiff, the defendants contended that the action would not lie by reason of this section; but this contention was overruled (Hewinson v. Cheltenham R. D. C. (1903), Times, July 8th). And see Bainbridge v. Chertsey U. D. C., [1915] 84 L. J. Ch. 626; 79 J. P. 134.

Complaint as to water supply.

(d) A complaint under the present section in regard to water supply must allege that the district council have made default in providing their district (or part thereof) with a supply of water, that danger arises to the health of the inhabitants from the insufficiency or unwholesomeness of the existing supply, and that a proper supply can be got at a reasonable cost. Before directing a local inquiry in such cases the Ministry require a definite assurance from complainants that they are prepared with adequate evidence to support the complaint, including proof that the use of the source or sources of supply suggested, together with all necessary rights, can be obtained by the local authority under the Act. Evidence is also required that the water obtainable from the source suggested is sufficient in quantity and of good quality, that the supply is likely to be permanent, and that the cost of providing and distributing the water would be reasonable.

In the case of a district which is within the statutory limits of a water company it would seem that the section is inoperative so long as the company are able and willing to afford a supply: see s. 52, ante, p. 125, and notes thereto.

See also the Public Health (Water) Act, 1878, ss. 3 et seq., post.

Complaint as to non-enforcement of Act.

(e) The L. G. B. stated that they were advised that these words do not apply to duties which the local authority ought themselves to perform, but only to those which they ought to require others to perform. In the case of a complaint that a local authority had failed to take steps under the Act to secure the abatement of a nuisance, the Board stated that even if it could be contended that the section was literally applicable there were practical difficulties in taking effectual proceedings thereunder, as the powers of the section, and the action contemplated by it, were unsuitable for the purposes in view. The M. of H. have presumably adopted these views. The remedy open to persons aggrieved will be found in s. 105.

The M. of H. do not regard the section as applicable to such matters as the non-enforcement of byelaws by a local authority, the provision of privies, the making up of private streets, the levying of water rates, or the provision of hydrants. Practically, therefore, it would seem that the operation of the section is confined to cases of the default of local authorities in the matter of sewerage and water supply.

In a case under the corresponding provision (s. 100) of the P. H. (London) Act, 1891, it was held that failure by a sanitary authority to take proceedings under the provisions relating to offensive trades was a "default in doing their duty" which enabled the L. C. C. to institute proceedings and recover the expenses incurred from the sanitary authority (London C. C. v. Bermondsey Borough Council, [1915] 3 K. B. 305; 79 J. P. 449).

As to highways, see the Highways and Locomotives (Amendment) Act, 1878, s. 10, and the L. G. A., 1894, s. 16.

Note to Section 299.

(f) This order is in itself binding and conclusive: see s. 295, ante, p. 627. It must be directed to and served upon the defaulting authority. The obtaining of such an order does not prevent the person, who has obtained it for the purpose of putting an end to a nuisance, from proceeding by action for an injunction to restrain the continuance thereof (Whitefield v. Newquay L. B. (1882), 72 L. T. Jo., p. 349).

The Order.

It was formerly held that a refusal by the department to make an order might be considered by the court sufficient to justify their refusing a mandamus if a complainant applied directly for the writ (R. v. Tottenham L. B. (1893), 9 T. L. R. 414); but according to the decision of the House of Lords in Pasmore v. Oswaldtwistle U. D. C., ante, p. 52, a complainant cannot go to the court at all.

(g) In several cases a writ of mandamus was obtained by the L. G. B. Upon an application for a writ, the court do not inquire whether there has been a due inquiry under this section. The court is bound to grant the writ at the request of the department, unless there has been some legal error or some omission to apply the ordinary legal procedure (R. v. Staines Union and Staines L. B. (1893), 62 L. J. Q. B. 540; 58 J. P. 182). The writ against the Staines local board was afterwards made peremptory, notwithstanding a return that the local board required time to prepare a scheme and estimate for obtaining the necessary funds (R. v. Staines L. B., Times, February 27th, 1894). A fresh mandamus was asked for after the passing of the L. G. A., 1894, against the successors of the local board, and the rule was eventually made absolute (R. v. Sunbury-on-Thames U. D. C., Times, June 4th and July 20th, 1896).

Mandamus.

Upon application of the L. G. B. a peremptory writ of mandamus issued to the W. corporation requiring the execution of certain sewage works. The writ being disobeyed, writs of attachment against certain members of the council were ordered to issue, but to lie in the office for a specified period, which was extended from time to time. The corporation afterwards asked that, having satisfied the L. G. B. that the sewage works were in process of execution with due diligence, the time should be still further extended. The court, being satisfied that the work was being diligently carried on, ordered the writs to remain in the office for an unspecified period, the matter to stand over generally with liberty to apply (R. v. Worcester Corporation (1905), 69 J. P. 296; 3 L. G. R. 468).

(h) The alternative procedure open to the Ministry of Health under the section—of appointing some person to perform the duty—is never adopted by them, and was not favoured by the L. G. B. It was once stated on behalf of the L. G. B. in proceedings in the High Court that they had found it practically impossible to perform the duty of a defaulting authority by means of some other person, and that it was not for them as the central authority to descend into the arena of local difficulties and to undertake to do for a defaulting authority that which the statute clearly required the authority to do.

(i) Now the King's Bench Division of the High Court of Justice.

(k) Under the corresponding enactment in 29 & 30 Vict. c. 90, s. 49, an order was made that "the said authority do its duty, and begin to set about the works for the purpose within one month from the date of this order, and proceed therewith until completion." After the month, the authority having done nothing, a second order was made appointing J. B. to perform the said duty of the authority as he should be directed. It was held that the two orders were justified by the section (R. v. Cockerell (1871), L. R. 6 Q. B. 252; 35 J. P. 693). It was also held that it was not necessary to provide for the expenses in the latter order.

As to the enforcing of the Order, see 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 18, and the R. S. C., Order XLII., r. 31, which enables an order against a corporation to be enforced by sequestration or attachment. See also the next section.

300. Any sum specified in an Order of the Local Government Board for payment of the expenses of performing the duty of a defaulting local authority, together with the costs of the proceedings, shall be deemed to be expenses properly incurred by such authority, and to be a debt

Further provision for recovery of expenses.

Section 300.

due from such authority, and payable out of any moneys in the hands of such authority or of their officers, or out of any rate applicable to the payment of any expenses properly incurred by such authority, which rate is in this part of this Act referred to as "the local rate." If the defaulting authority refuses to pay any such sum, with costs, as aforesaid, for a period of fourteen days after demand, the Local Government Board may by Order empower any person to levy, by and out of the local rate, such sum (the amount to be specified in the Order) as may, in the opinion of the Local Government Board, be sufficient to defray the debt so due from the defaulting authority, and all expenses incurred in consequence of the nonpayment of such debt.

Any person or persons so empowered shall have the same powers of levying the local rate, and requiring all officers of the defaulting authority to pay over any moneys in their hands, as the defaulting authority would have in the case of expenses legally payable out of a local rate to be raised by such authority; and the said person or persons, after repaying all sums of money so due in respect of the Order, shall pay the surplus, if any, (the amount to be ascertained by the Local Government Board,) to or to the order of the defaulting authority.

This section is practically inoperative. See note (h) to s. 299, ante, p. 635.

Power of Board to borrow to defray expenses of performing duty of defaulting authority.

301. The Local Government Board may from time to time certify the amount of expenses that have been incurred, or an estimate of the expenses about to be incurred, by any person appointed by the said Board under this Act to perform the duty of a defaulting local authority; also, the amount of any loan required to be raised for the purpose of defraying any expenses that have been so incurred, or are estimated as about to be incurred; and the certificate of the said Board shall be conclusive as to all matters to which it relates.

Whenever the Local Government Board so certifies a loan to be required, the Public Works Loan Commissioners may advance to the Local Government Board, or to any person appointed as aforesaid, the amount of the loan so certified to be required on the security of the local rate, without requiring any other security; and the Local Government Board, or the person so appointed, may, by any instrument duly executed, charge the local rate with the repayment of the principal and interest due in respect of such loan, and every such charge shall have the same effect as if the defaulting local authority were empowered to raise such loan on the security of the local rate, and had duly executed an instrument charging the same on the local rate.

This section is practically inoperative. See note (h) to s. 299, ante, p. 635.

Recovery of principal and interest.

302. Any principal money or interest for the time being due in respect of any loan under this Act made for payment of the expenses incurred or to be incurred in the performance of the duty of a defaulting local authority shall be taken to be a debt due from such authority, and, in addition to any other remedies, may be recovered in the manner in which a debt due from a defaulting authority may be recovered in pursuance of the provisions of this part of this Act.

The surplus (if any) of any such loan, after payment of the expenses aforesaid, shall, on the amount thereof being certified by the Local Government Board, be paid to or to the order of the defaulting authority. Section 302.

"Expenses," for the purposes of the provisions of this part of this Act relating to defaulting local authorities, shall include all sums payable under those provisions by or by the Order of the Local Government Board, or the person appointed by that Board.

This section is practically inoperative. See note (h) to s. 299, ante, p. 635.

Powers of Board in relation to Local Acts, etc.

303. The Local Government Board may, on the application of the local authority of any district (a), by Provisional Order (b), wholly or partially repeal alter (c) or amend any local Act, other than an Act for the conservancy of rivers (d), which is in force in any area comprising the whole or part of any such district (e), and not conferring powers or privileges on any persons or person for their or his own pecuniary benefit, which relates to the same subject-matters as this Act. Power to repeal and alter local Acts.

Any such Provisional Order may provide for the extension of the provisions of the local Act referred to therein beyond the district or districts within the limits of such Act, or for the exclusion of the whole or a portion of any such district from the application of such Act; and may provide what local authority shall have jurisdiction for the purposes of this Act in any area which is by such Order included in or excluded from such district.

See also the L. G. A., 1888, s. 59, which provides that any scheme or order under that Act may extend to any altered area the provisions of any local Act.

A further power of amending local Acts may (on the application of a local authority or an order declaring any part of the Act or any section thereof to be in force in their district) be exercised by the Ministry of Health on declaring any part or section of the P. H. A., 1907, to be in force. Section 3 (1) of the Act provides that the department may declare any enactments in any local Act which appear to contain provisions similar to or inconsistent with any part or section to be no longer in force. See the Act, post.

(a) Printed instructions are annually issued by the M. of H. as to applications for Provisional Orders under this section, and a copy of the latest instruction will be found in App. II., Vol. II.

In Monmouth (Mayor, etc. of) v. Monmouth (Churchwardens of) (1878), 38 L. T. 612, LINDLEY, J., referring to this section, said: "Nothing can be clearer than that the legislature did not intend by the Public Health Act to interfere with the local Acts. It did give power to the Local Government Board to deal with them by Provisional Orders; but that was only where they did not confer powers or privileges on any persons or person for their or his pecuniary benefit." Reference may also be made to Walsall (Overseers of) v. L. and N. W. Rail. Co., in notes to s. 207, ante, p. 470, and N. E. Rail. Co. v. Tynemouth (Mayor, etc. of) (1868), L. R. 3 Q. B. 723; 32 J. P. 822.

By an Order under this section, confirmed by a local Act, the emission of black smoke "from any chimney, not being the chimney of a private dwelling-house," is in certain circumstances made an offence in the borough of B. By s. 334, post, p. 663, nothing in this Act is to extend "to the calcining, puddling and rolling of iron and other metals, nor to the conversion of pig iron into wrought iron, so as to obstruct or interfere with any of such processes respectively":—Held, that the enactment contained in the above Order was not subject to the provisions of s. 334 (Bessemer & Co., Ltd. v. Gould (1912), 76 J. P. 349; 107 L. T. 298).

Note to Section 303.

(b) See s. 297, ante, p. 629.

(c) As to the acquisition of lands for the purposes of a local Act, see note (b) to s. 176. The law officers advised that the corresponding provision in 35 & 36 Vict. c. 79, s. 33, enabled a local Act to be altered in provisions not within the purview of the sanitary Acts, if it were brought within the operation of the section at all. Several Provisional Orders have been framed accordingly, and have been confirmed by Parliament. But there is no general power conferred upon the M. of H. to alter any local Act which relates to local matters.

(d) This appears to signify an Act relating exclusively to the conservancy of a river, so that when an Act provides for the conservancy of a river, and also for other matters, subjects of this Act, application may be made with reference to the latter matters.

(e) These words extend the provision in previous Acts, which was confined to a local Act in force in a district co-extensive with the sanitary district. A local Act is now brought within the operation of this section, though it applies to a much larger or a much less area than that of the sanitary district.

Settlement of differences arising out of transfer of powers or property to local authority.

304. On the application of any authority from whom or to whom any powers rights duties capacities liabilities obligations and property, or any of them, are at any time transferred or alleged or claimed to be transferred in pursuance of this Act, or any Provisional Order made thereunder, or on the application of any person (a) affected by such transfer, the Local Government Board may by Order (b) settle any doubt or difference, and adjust any accounts arising out of or incidental to such powers rights duties capacities liabilities obligations or property, or to the transfer thereof, and direct the parties by whom and to whom any moneys found to be due are to be paid, and the mode of raising such moneys ; and any provisions contained in any Order so made shall be deemed to have been made in pursuance of and to be within the powers conferred by this section, subject to this proviso, that where any such Order directs any rate to be made, or other act or thing to be done, which the party required to make or do would not, apart from the provisions of this Act, have been enabled to make or do by law, such Order shall be provisional only until it has been confirmed by Parliament (c).

Any settlement or adjustment under this section may be included in any Provisional Order which gives rise to the same.

See the similar provision in the L. G. A., 1888, s. 62, post, p. 775, as to adjustment of property and liabilities between authorities affected by Orders under that Act. As alterations of boundary are not now made under the powers of this Act, the present section may be regarded as superseded. See notes to s. 270, ante, p. 608.

(a) The L. G. B. declined to entertain questions of disputed liabilities or disputed accounts between local authorities and contractors, considering that such disputes and questions should be settled by arbitration or in a court of law. It is to be observed that this section did not constitute the Board the sole tribunal for any of the disputes to which the section refers. In this respect it differs from the local Act in question in Bexley L. B. v West Kent Sewerage Board (1882), 9 Q. B. D. 518 ; 46 J. P. 519. In that case the sewerage board was incorporated by a local Act (38 & 39 Vict. c. clxiii), of which s. 93 enacted that if any difference should arise between the board on the one hand and any constituted authority on the other hand, or between any two or more constituted authorities, or between any constituted authority and any parish or person, respecting any assessment of a main sewer rate, or any determination of the board, or any controversy or other matter under the Act, the same should by virtue of the Act stand referred for decision to the L. G. B., whose decision thereon and with reference to the cost of the reference was to be final and binding. A dispute having arisen between the sewerage board and the Bexley L. B. respecting a claim made by the latter for compensation for damage done to the highways, etc., of the district, the disputants, with the consent of the L. G. B., stated a case for the opinion of the Queen's Bench Division. It was held that it was not competent for them to do so, the L. G. B. being by s. 93 constituted the tribunal, whose decision on the matter was to be final and binding, and the statement of the case not being a submission to arbitration within the meaning of the Common Law Procedure Act, 1854, s. 5, which applied only to compulsory references under the Act, or to references by consent of parties where the submission was or might be made a rule of court. Note to Section 304.

PART X.

MISCELLANEOUS AND TEMPORARY PROVISIONS.

Miscellaneous.

305. Whenever it becomes necessary for a local authority or any of their officers to enter examine or lay open any lands or premises for the purpose (a) of making plans surveying measuring taking levels making keeping in repair or examining works, ascertaining the course of sewers or drains, or ascertaining or fixing boundaries (b), and the owner or occupier of such lands or premises refuses to permit the same to be entered upon examined or laid open for the purposes aforesaid or any of them, the local authority may, after written notice (c) to such owner or occupier, apply to a court of summary jurisdiction (d) for an order authorising the local authority to enter examine and lay open the said lands and premises for the purposes aforesaid or any of them. Entry on lands for purposes of Act.

If no sufficient cause is shown against the application the court may make an order accordingly (e), and on such order being made the local authority or any of their officers (f) may, at all reasonable times between the hours of nine in the forenoon and six in the afternoon, enter examine or lay open the lands or premises mentioned in such order, for such of the said purposes as are therein specified, without being subject to any action or molestation for so doing: Provided that, except in case of emergency (g), no entry shall be made or works commenced under this section unless at least twenty-four hours' notice of the intended entry, and of the object thereof, be given to the occupier of the premises intended to be entered.

(a) Care must be taken not to claim an entrance for any purpose not specified here. An entrance for the purpose of examining drains and privies, as to nuisances, and as to unsound meat, etc., can be obtained under ss. 41, 102, and 119, ante, pp. 105, 188, 226. See also the power of entry given by the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, s. 84, which may be incorporated herewith by Provisional Order; and the provision in the next section for the admission of owners by occupiers to execute works. Access may be obtained to water meters under s. 58, ante, p. 133, and to common lodging-houses under s. 85, ante, p. 159. Entry for the purpose of executing regulations as to epidemic disease may be obtained under s. 137, ante, p. 247, and to tents, vans, etc., used for human habitation under the Housing of the Working Purposes of entry.

Note to Section 305.

Classes Act, 1885, s. 9, post, Vol. II., entry on dairies, cowsheds, and milkshops under the Milk and Dairies (Consolidation) Act, 1915, s. 15, post, Vol. II.; entry for inspection of water supply in rural districts under the Public Health (Water) Act, 1878, s. 7, post. p. 708; entry for cleansing and disinfecting premises under the Infectious Disease (Prevention) Act, 1890, s. 17, post, p. 818; for examining whether chemical refuse has been turned into sewers under the P. H. A., 1890, s. 17 (2), post, p. 831; on places of public resort for the purpose of enforcing the law as to ingress and egress under the P. H. A., 1890, s. 36, post, p. 852; for searching for petroleum under the Petroleum Act, 1871, s. 13, post, Vol. II.; on canal boats under the Canal Boats Act, 1877, s. 5, post, Vol. II.; on bakehouses under the Factory and Workshop Act, 1901, s. 102, in App. I., Vol. II. See also the power of entry given by the Housing, Town Planning, etc. Act, 1909, s. 36, Vol. II., post.

This section does not enable an authority to obtain an order in the case of an owner's refusal to permit an entry for purposes connected with the laying of a sewer under s. 16 (Lamacraft v. St. Thomas R. S. A. (1880), 44 J. P. 441; 42 L. T. 365). See what is said hereon at p. 58, ante, and see also Diss Urban Sanitary Authority v. Aldrich, infra. In Wheatcroft v. Matlock L. B. (1885), 52 L. T. 356, DENMAN, J., thought that the section would not apply where a landowner had refused to permit an authority to enter his land for the purpose of covering in or otherwise improving a sewer under ss. 18 and 19, ante, p. 74. In Robinson v. Sunderland Corporation, infra, CHANNELL, J., expressed the opinion that the words "for the purpose of doing works which they have statutory authority to do" may be read into s. 305, but the attention of the court was not called to Wheatcroft v. Matlock L. B., or Lamacraft v. St. Thomas R. S. A., supra.

Fixing and ascertaining boundaries.

(b) It does not appear that the local authority have any power to fix boundaries, but the power to enter to ascertain boundaries may perhaps be exercised for the purposes of s. 272, ante, p. 610.

Notice.

(c) As to the authentication and service of this notice, see ss. 266, 267, ante, p. 593.

(d) See the definition, ante, p. 36.

Powers of justices on hearing of application; statement of case by them.

(e) With regard to "sufficient cause" it has been held, on an application by a local authority for an order under this section, in consequence of default having been made in compliance with a notice under s. 36, ante, p. 69, and permission to enter having been refused, that the justices have no jurisdiction to review the notice, nor to receive evidence on the part of the owner as to the sufficiency of the existing sanitary arrangements (Robinson v. Mayor, etc. of Sunderland (No. 2), [1899] 1 Q. B. 751; 63 J. P. 341). They may, however, inquire into the regularity of any necessary preliminary notices or as to compliance with any necessary condition precedent, and otherwise whether the case is a proper one in which to make an order (ibid.; see also Sutcliffe v. Sowerby U. D. C. (1909), 73 J. P. 385, as to what is a sufficient notice when entry is demanded for purposes of s. 36, ante, p. 96, and Vines v. North London Collegiate School and Wimbledon U. D. C. v. Hastings, in the notes to s. 102, ante, p. 189). In a case decided before the passing of the S. J. A., 1879, it was held that justices had no power to state a case on refusing to make such an order, as there was no determination of a complaint with in 20 & 21 Vict. c. 43, s. 2 (Diss Urban Sanitary Authority v. Aldrich (1877), 2 Q. B. D. 179; 41 J. P. 549). But if they make an order, and any question is raised as to its being in excess of jurisdiction, it would seem that a case might be stated under the S. J. A., 1879, s. 33. See Robinson v. Sunderland Corporation, and Sutcliffe v. Sowerby U. D. C., supra, where justices made such orders, and cases stated were argued without any objection being taken. It may also be that, under s. 33, there is power to state a case if justices decide to make no order. See Sandgate L. B. v. Pledge (1885), 14 Q. B. D. 730, and Oaten v. Auty (1919), 83 J. P. 173.

Authority for officer.

(f) The officer should be provided with some authority from the council.

Case of emergency.

(g) The person who enters must determine at his peril whether the case be one of emergency. Therefore, it will be safest to give notice, unless the emergency is obvious.

Penalty on obstructing execution of Act.

306. Any person who wilfully obstructs (a) any member of the local authority, or any person duly employed in the execution of this

Act, or who destroys pulls down injures or defaces any board (b) on which any byelaw notice or other matter is inscribed, shall, if the same was put up by authority of the Local Government Board (c) or of the local authority, be liable for every such offence to a penalty not exceeding five pounds (d). Section 306.

Where the occupier of any premises prevents the owner thereof from obeying or carrying into effect any provisions of this Act, any justice to whom application is made in this behalf shall, by order in writing (e), require such occupier to permit the execution of any works required to be executed, provided that the same appear to such justice to be necessary for the purpose of obeying or carrying into effect the provisions of this Act; and if within twenty-four hours after the making (f) of the order such occupier fails to comply therewith, he shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds for every day during the continuance of such non-compliance (g).

If the occupier of any premises, when requested by or on behalf of the local authority to state the name of the owner of the premises occupied by him, refuses or wilfully omits to disclose or wilfully mis-states the same, he shall (unless he shows cause to the satisfaction of the court for his refusal) be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds (g).

(a) Wilful obstruction need not amount to actual physical violence (Borrow v. Howland (1896), 60 J. P. 391; 74 L. T. 787). See also Bastable v. Little, [1907] 1 K. B. 59; 71 J. P. 52; Betts v. Stevens, [1910] 1 K. B. 1; 73 J. P. 486. In Baker v. Ellison, [1914] 2 K. B. 762, a passenger on the top of an omnibus who refused to go inside at the conductor's request on reaching a hill which it was dangerous to descend with passengers on the top, and thereby caused the omnibus to be delayed, was held properly convicted of "obstructing" the conductor. In Swallow v. London C. C. (1916), 80 J. P. 164, it was held that a refusal on the part of the person in charge of a vehicle containing coal to put the coal on the weighing machine or to assist a weights and measures officer in the weighing did not amount to "obstructing" the weighing under s. 27 (2) of the Weights and Measures Act, 1889. Obstruction.

A notice having been served by a council upon the owner of premises requiring him to abate a nusiance thereon, certain members of the council went to the premises, and, without the owner's permission, some of them entered the premises to make an inspection, the rest remaining outside. The owner thereupon locked the door, thus preventing the members who were outside from entering, and those who were inside from getting out. Upon an information charging him with having wilfully obstructed the members in the execution of this Act, it was held that the members had no power under s. 102 to enter premises except by permission of the owner, or by order of a magistrate, and that therefore they were not lawfully there, and the owner was not guilty of obstructing them in the performance of their duty (Consett U. D. C. v. Crawford, [1903] 2 K. B. 183; 67 J. P. 309).

(b) See the next section.

(c) Notices as to inquiries which the M. of H. direct to be put up are here referred to. Defacing notices.

(d) As to the recovery of this penalty, see s. 251, ante, p. 551. It is not necessary that the justices should be acting for the petty sessional division in which the matter of complaint arises. See R. v. Brodhurst (1863), 27 J. P. 580. See also note (d) under s. 251, ante, p. 558. Penalty.

The defendant is not necessarily entitled to have the case dismissed because the obstruction took place in assertion of a claim of right, nor are the justices for that reason alone justified in refusing as frivolous an application for a special case (R. v. Pollard (1866), 14 L. T. 599).

Where the P. H. A., 1890, has been adopted in any district the provisions of this section are extended to persons who destroy, pull down, injure or deface any Note to Section 306. advertisement, placard, bill, or notice, put up by, or under the direction of, a local authority. See ibid., s. 48, post, p. 859.

Form of order.

(e) See the Form E. in Sched. IV., post, p. 691, which recites the issue of a summons to the party complained of, and his failure to show sufficient cause against the order.

Default.

(f) In 18 & 19 Vict. c. 121, s. 37, service was substituted for making in 11 & 12 Vict. c 63, s. 16. It is, perhaps, to be regretted that there has been this change. The order may be made in the absence of the occupier or without his knowledge, and the time may run from an act of which he knows nothing, whereas he could not have pleaded ignorance of the service.

(g) See as to the recovery of this penalty, s. 251, ante, p. 551.

Penalty on damaging works, etc., of local authority.

307. Any person who wilfully damages any works or property belonging to any local authority shall, in cases where no other penalty is provided by this Act (a), be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds (b).

Wilful damage.

(a) See s. 60, ante, p. 135, and the last section. An offender might also be punished under the Malicious Damage Act, 1861, s. 51, and the Criminal Justice Administration Act, 1914, s. 14. The latter Act amended s. 51 of the Act of 1861, and repealed s. 52 of the same Act. The difference between the language of these sections and that of the text should be noticed. The words of s. 51 are "unlawfully and maliciously," and of s. 14 "wilfully or maliciously"; the text simply says "wilfully." In White v. Feast (1872), L. R. 7 Q. B. 353; 36 J. P. 436, BLACKBURN, J., said: "It is obvious that very many injuries may be done to property wilfully, without being malicious, by persons so poor that a civil action would be no remedy, so that it might well be desirable to protect property, and yet not desirable that the person, though poor, should be ousted of his civil rights if the act were done under a fair and reasonable supposition of right"; and see Watkins v. Major (1875), L. R. 10 C. P. 662; 39 J. P. 808; R. v. French, [1902] 1 K. B. 637; 66 J. P. 487; and Croydon R. D. C. v. Cowley (1909), 73 J. P. 205; 100 L. T. 441.

Penalty.

(b) See as to the recovery of this penalty, s. 251, ante, p. 551. And see per CHANNELL, J., in Welsh v. West Ham Corporation, [1900] 1 Q. B. at p. 329.

Compensation in case of damage by local authority.

308. Where any person sustains any damage (a) by reason of the exercise of any of the powers of this Act (b), in relation to any matter as to which he is not himself in default (c), full compensation shall be made to such person by the local authority exercising such powers (d); and any dispute as to the fact of damage or amount of compensation (e) shall be settled by arbitration in manner provided by this Act (f), or if the compensation claimed does not exceed the sum of twenty pounds, the same may, at the option of either party (g), be ascertained by and recovered before a court of summary jurisdiction (h).

The provisions of this section are now superseded to some extent by the Acquisition of Land (Assessment of Compensation) Act, 1919, e.g., the laying of a sewer in private land would appear to be a compulsory acquisition of "land" because by s. 12 (2) of that Act "land" includes any interest in land and any easement or right in, to, or over land.

Damage, what included.

(a) In Herring v. Metropolitan Board of Works, post, p. 643, a point was raised as to the kind of damage which could be recovered under the corresponding section of the Metropolis Management Act. It was not necessary to decide the point but SMITH, J., expressed an opinion that the section was confined to something like actual damage to land. See, however, the criticisms on this case in Lingke v. Christchurch Corporation, post, p. 644. It has been held, too, in accordance with the principle of the decision in Ricket v. Metropolitan Rail. Co., post, p. 643, that in order to entitle a claimant to compensation under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, s. 68, injury must be done to land or some interest in land, and that a mere personal injury, though connected with the enjoyment of particular land, is not ground for compensation (R. v. Metropolitan Board of Works (1869), L. R. 4 Q. B. 358; 33 J. P. 710; and see Metropolitan Board of Works v. McCarthy (1874), L. R. 7 H. L. 243; 38 J. P. 820). The language of the Lands Clauses Act, however, differs materially from that used in the present section; and in view of the "unsound meat" cases referred to on p. 644, post, it seems clear that the damage here referred to cannot be regarded as similarly limited.

The language of the text is perfectly general, and appears to include almost every kind of loss caused by the action of the authority, though it only applies to such damage as the Act is required to excuse or justify. See Broadbent v. Imperial Gas Co. (1857), 26 L. J. Ch. 276; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 221; Southampton and Itchin Bridge Co. v. Southampton L. B. (1858), 8 El. & Bl. 801; 27 L. J. Q. B. 128. "Acts which give to parties injured a right of compensation must be taken to mean that while they take away from the owners of property the right to bring actions, they provide that parties injured by the exercise of those powers shall not be damnified by being deprived of their right of action; and, correlatively, that such persons shall have no right of compensation unless the injury which they have sustained by the exercise of the powers is such as would, but for the provisions of the Acts, have been actionable": per COCKBURN, C.J., in New River Co. v. Johnson (1860), 29 L. J. M. C. 93; 24 J. P. 244. And it was held by the House of Lords that unless an injury occasioned by the act of a public company would have been the subject of a claim for damages before the company obtained statutory powers to do that which occasioned the injury, it could not, unless it were expressly so provided, be a subject for compensation when occasioned by something done in the exercise of those powers (Ricket v. Metropolitan Rail. Co. (1867), L. R. 2 H. L. 175; 31 J. P. 484). See also Anglo-Algerian Steamship Co. v. Houlder Line, Ltd., [1908] 1 K. B. 659, for a discussion of the ratio decidendi in Ricket's Case.

This principle was further illustrated in Hall v. Bristol (Mayor of) (1867), L. R. 2 C. P. 322; 31 J. P. 376, an action on an award of compensation for damage caused by the making of a sewer. BLACKBURN, J., left it to the jury to say whether the making of the sewer caused the plaintiff's land to give way independently of the weight put upon it during the last twenty years, and told them that if they thought the damage would not have been caused unless the extra weight had been put upon it, they ought to find for the defendants. It was held that the direction was right, for compensation could not be claimed for any damage which would not have been actionable if the local board had not been acting under statutory authority; and see Rhodes v. Airedale Drainage Commissioners (1876), 1 C. P. D. 402. Again, in Cessford v. Dover Harbour Board (1898), Times, April 2nd, WILLS, J., said that it was settled law that to bring a case within the doctrine of compensation as distinguished from action, three things must concur: (1) the Act must be a lawful exercise of statutory powers; (2) the damage must be such as would be actionable but for the Act of Parliament; and (3) the damage must arise from the execution of the works, and not merely from the use of them after they had been constructed.

Where persons exercising statutory powers do so negligently or unreasonably, and thereby cause damage, an aggrieved person's remedy is by action, and not by a claim for compensation (see p. 646, post). But, semble, in order to defeat a claim for compensation the onus of proving negligence is on the undertakers. A public body was empowered to carry out certain works by a statute, which also provided for the payment of compensation to any person sustaining damage by reason or in consequence of the exercise of such power. The public body, in answer to a claim for compensation, pleaded that the damage was due to its contractor's negligence, and that, therefore, a claim for compensation was not the proper remedy. It was held that the onus was on the public body to prove such negligence (St. James's and Pall Mall Electric Light Co. v. R. (1904), 73 L. J. K. B. 518; 68 J. P. 288).

In Herring v. Metropolitan Board of Works (1865), 34 L. J. M. C. 224, the defendants had, for the purpose of making a sewer, erected a hoarding in a street which rendered the access to the plaintiff's premises less convenient than before, but no part of the plaintiff's premises was taken, nor did it appear that the hoarding was kept up beyond a reasonable time. It was held that the plaintiff was not entitled to compensation for the damage sustained by the erection of this hoarding, for such an obstruction might lawfully have been made by a private person, and a fortiori might be made by a public body in the discharge of its duties. This decision was, however, observed upon, if not overruled, in Lingke v. Christchurch Corporation, [1912] 3 K. B. 595; 76 J. P. 433. In that case the defendant corporation in carrying out sewerage works obstructed the access to the plaintiff's premises. It was expressly found that they had not acted negligently or unreasonably in the exercise of their powers; but it was held that the plaintiff was entitled to compensation under the present section, because the act done by the defendants was an act which if done by a private individual would have given the plaintiff a cause of action.

Where a local authority made sewers discharging into a natural stream under the powers conferred by ss. 15—17, ante, p. 50, and such sewers brought down quantities of sand and silt into the stream, it was assumed that they were liable to make compensation under this section (Durrant v. Branksome U. D. C., [1897] 2 Ch. 291).

A local authority laid certain sewers through the claimant's land and paid compensation in respect thereof. They then proceeded to construct on neighbouring land not belonging to him a pumping station, reservoir, and outfall sewer, which, together with the sewers laid through his land, were intended to form one system of sewage works. The claimant claimed compensation for damage caused to his land by the construction of the works on the neighbouring land. It was held that as the works were not being constructed on land belonging to him, he was not entitled to compensation, although such works formed one system with and were connected with the sewers laid through his land (Horton v. Colwyn Bay and Colwyn U. D. C., [1908] 1 K. B. 327; 72 J. P. 57). See also R. v. Mountford, [1906] 2 K. B. 814; 70 J. P. 511; and In re L. & N. W. Rail. Co. and Reddaway (1907), 71 J. P. 150, where PHILLIMORE, J., refused to follow the decision of BIGHAM, J., in Horton v. Colwyn Bay U. D. C., supra. When, however, the last-mentioned case was in the Court of Appeal, Lord ALVERSTONE, C.J., stated that the decision of PHILLIMORE, J., was in no way inconsistent with the decision of BIGHAM, J.

It was held in Re Bater and Birkenhead Corporation, [1893] 2 Q. B. 77; 58 J. P. 7, that when a justice refuses to condemn as unwholesome meat seized under s. 116, ante, p. 218, the owner is entitled to include in the amount of full compensation recoverable by him under this section from the local authority the costs incurred through the attendance of himself and his witnesses before the justice to resist condemnation. In In re Davies and Rhondda U. D. C. (1899), 80 L. T. 696, it was held that the costs of successfully defending a prosecution for exposing for sale unsound meat, which meat is the subject of the claim for compensation, cannot be recovered as damages upon an arbitration under s. 308. In a later case the Court of Appeal held that where meat has been condemned and destroyed, and the owner claims compensation, the arbitrator has jurisdiction to decide whether the meat was in fact sound, and to award as part of the compensation, the expenses incurred by the claimant in successfully defending a prosecution (Walshaw v. Brighouse (Mayor, etc. of), [1899] 2 Q. B. 286). This decision was, however, questioned by the Court of Appeal in Hobbs v. Winchester Corporation, [1910] 2 K. B. 471; 74 J. P. 413; and see also In re Smith and Belfast Corporation, [1910] 2 I. R. 285. In the latter case an Irish judge held that compensation could not be recovered for general trade loss due to the publicity of the proceedings; in Hobbs v. Winchester Corporation, [1910] 2 K. B. 46; 74 J. P. 165 (reversed, see supra, on another point, CHANNELL, J., had held reluctantly on the authority of Walshaw's Case, supra), that such general loss was recoverable.

A court of summary jurisdiction made an order under s. 96, ante, p. 182, upon the owner of premises to comply with a notice served upon him by the local authority requiring him to abate a nuisance upon the premises. Quarter sessions dismissed an appeal against the order, but stated a case. The High Court ordered that the order of quarter sessions should be quashed, and instead thereof judgment entered for the owner, and that the local authority should pay to the owner the costs of the two appeals. These costs were taxed, and paid to the owner by the local authority. The expenses incurred by the owner in promoting the appeals exceeded the costs so paid to him. All the expenses incurred by the owner throughout the proceedings were reasonably and properly incurred:—Held, that the owner's expenses of the proceedings in the court of summary jurisdiction, and the difference between his costs taxed as between party and party and his actual expenses of the two appeals, were not damage for which he was entitled to compensation under s. 308 (Barnett v. Eccles (Mayor, etc. of), [1900] 2 Q. B. 423; 64 J. P. 692).

Note to Section 308.

A local board gave notice to pave and level a street under the section of the P. H. A., 1848, corresponding to s. 150, ante, p. 286. Upon default of the owners they did the work themselves, and in so doing altered the level of the street so as to render the access to a house difficult and dangerous. It was held that though the owner might be liable to pay his proportion of the expenses, he was entitled to compensation for the special damage he had sustained (R. v. Wallasey L. B. (1869), L. R. 4 Q. B. 351 ; 33 J. P. 677). Where the footpath of a street which was a highway and also a turnpike road was altered by a local board under an agreement with the turnpike trustees, so as to raise its level in front of the plaintiff's house and cause him damage, it was held that the street was not, by reason of its being a turnpike road, excluded by the interpretation clause from the operation of the section giving the board power to alter the street ; and that as they were exercising powers given by the Act, the plaintiff was entitled to compensation (Nutter v. Accrington L. B. (1878), 4 Q. B. D. 375 ; 43 J. P. 635 ; and see Arnott v. Whitby U. D. C., p. 646, post). In Nutter's Case, BRAMWELL, L.J., dissented, holding that as the board had all the powers of the turnpike trustees to alter the level of the road, and as no action would lie against the trustees, the principle of Boulton v. Crowther, post, p. 646, was applicable, being apparently of opinion that the raising of the road was done in exercise of powers other than those created by the Act. This view was adopted in a subsequent case, where there had been a subsidence of a road in front of certain houses and the houses also had subsided, and the local board raised the road to its original level. It was held that the owners of the houses could not claim compensation, as the work was not done in "the exercise of any of the powers of the Act" within the meaning of this section. These words the court held to apply to powers created by the Act, and not to powers simply transferred by s. 144 from surveyors to the board ; and as the raising of the road was done by the board either in pursuance of their duty as surveyors of highways, or in exercise of such powers as surveyors have, the owners of the houses were not entitled to compensation (Burgess v. Northwich L. B. (1880), 6 Q. B. D. 264 ; 45 J. P. 256).

In Ballard v. Leek U. D. C. (1917), 81 J. P. 232, EVE, J., said, "The only right which the defendants have to act as highway authority, and to exercise the powers conferred by the Highway Act of 1835, is the express statutory right conferred upon them by s. 144 of the Act of 1875. It comes, therefore, to this, that they are not exercising the powers of a highway authority under the Highway Act, but under this Act."

In so far therefore as a local authority can be said to have acted as surveyors of highways, no compensation can be claimed, but damages will be recoverable if they do not use reasonable care to do no unnecessary damage (East Fremantle Corporation v. Annois, [1902] A. C. 213 ; 67 J. P. 103, and cases cited therewith on p. 646, post).

As to the right to compensation of a person whose property has been destroyed because of its having been exposed to infection, or has been damaged during disinfection, reference may be made to Foster v. East Westmoreland R. D. C., in the notes to s. 120, and Garlick v. Knottingley U. D. C., in the notes to s. 121.

A plaintiff claimed on an award of compensation. The defence was that the claim was for damage alleged to have been caused by the laying of a sewer, and that the sewer had been laid before the plaintiff's title accrued. KENNEDY, J., held that the plaintiff could not recover (Helmore v. East Ham L. B. (1893), Times, December 13th ; affirmed (1894), February 9th). It would, however, appear that on a sale of land the right to claim compensation might be assigned to the purchaser (Dawson v. G. N. and City Rail. Co., [1905] 1 K. B. 260 ; 69 J. P. 29).

A notice to lay a sewer was given under s. 16, ante, p. 55, and the owner of the land claimed compensation "for the damage or injury to be sustained by the construction and execution of the works." Both parties appointed arbitrators, but after they had met, the authority withdrew their notice, the works not having been commenced, and offered to pay the owner's taxed costs up to the time of such withdrawal. The offer was refused and the arbitrators awarded £10 for damages and also costs. It was held that the arbitrators had no jurisdiction to award either damages or costs under the submission in question (Davis v. Witney U. D. C. (1899), 63 J. P. 279 ; 15 T. L. R. 275). Semble, however, that compensation might have been allowed for damage between the date of the notice and the abandonment if this question had been submitted (ibid.).

Note to Section 308.

Exercise of powers of Act.

(b) In illustration of the words "the exercise of any of the powers of this Act," reference may be made to the cases cited in the notes to the Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893, post, p. 892. A sanitary authority, on account of an epidemic of measles, ordered a board school to be closed for a fortnight, whereby the master lost his fees, amounting to 30*s.* a week. He claimed compensation under the above section; but it was held that he had no valid claim, the power to close the school being given by the Education Code, 1886, s. 98, and not by this Act (Roberts v. Falmouth Urban Sanitary Authority (1888), 52 J. P. 741).

The cases cited in the preceding note show that the damage is limited to acts done in pursuance of powers given by this Act which the provisions of this Act are necessary to justify. Where an act is done by a public body in pursuance of powers given to them by statute, no action lies against them at the suit of a private individual for injuries sustained by him by reason of the exercise of those powers if reasonable care be taken to do no unnecessary damage (Boulton v. Crowther (1824), 2 B. & C. 703). Therefore, it was held that no action would lie against a local board for damage caused by the lowering of the soil of a street under the section corresponding to s. 149, ante, p. 273 (Bold v. Williams (1857), 21 J. P. 84). So, too, where an authority altered a bridge and its approaches under a local Act, the purposes of which were held to be purposes of the present Act, it was decided that a plaintiff whose access to her house was interfered with could claim compensation under this section, but could not maintain an action (Arnott v. Whitby U. D. C. (1909), 73 J. P. 369; 101 L. T. 114). If, however, the damage is due to an absence of reasonable care to do no unnecessary damage in the exercise of the statutory powers, an action will lie (East Fremantle Corporation v. Annois, ante, p. 645; Canadian Pacific Rail. Co. v. Roy, [1902] A. C. 220; Ash v. G. N., Piccadilly and Brompton Rail. Co. (1903), 67 J. P. 417; Roberts v. Charing Cross, etc. Rail. Co. (1903), 87 L. T. 732; Wallace v. McCartan, [1917] 1 I. R. 377). Thus, where by the construction of a sewer an ornamental pond and rivulet in the plaintiff's grounds were drained, it was held that the board constructing the sewer could not be restrained by injunction, as they had not exceeded their statutory rights. It was also held that if the injury had been caused by the unskilful or improper construction of the sewer the court would have interfered to prevent it, but as this was not the case, the rights of the plaintiffs were limited to a claim for compensation (Stainton v. Woolrych (1857), 23 Beav. 225; 26 L. J. Ch. 300). "The distinction is clearly established between damage from works authorised by statutes, where the party generally is to have compensation and the authority is a bar to an action, and damage by reason of the work being negligently done, as to which the owner's remedy by action remains": per CROMPTON, J., in Brine v. G. W. Rail. Co. (1862), 2 B. & S. 402, 411; 26 J. P. 516. This distinction was followed in Clothier v. Webster (1862), 6 L. T. 461, where the court held that if damage was caused by the negligent laying of a sewer, the owner of the property damaged might bring his action, and was not put to his claim for compensation. For a case where a local authority were held liable in respect of the negligent filling in of a trench in which a sewer had been laid, see Cox v. Paddington Vestry (1891), 64 L. T. 566, on p. 258, ante. See also Jacob v. Southend-on-Sea (Mayor of) (1902), Times, December 16th; (1903), Times, May 21st, and London General Omnibus Co., Ltd. v. Tilbury Contracting and Dredging Co., Ltd. (1907), 71 J. P. 534, where damages were recovered from contractors for negligence in constructing a sewer.

The dictum of CROMPTON, J., supra, was adopted by the House of Lords in Mersey Docks v. Gibbs (1866), L. R. 1 H. L. 93, 112; 30 J. P. 467. See also Hall v. Batley (Corporation of) (1877), 47 L. J. Q. B. 148; 42 J. P. 151; Coe v. Wise (1866), L. R. 1 Q. B. 711; 30 J. P. 484; Raleigh Corporation v. Williams, [1893] A. C. 540.

"The liability of a body created by statute is governed by the statutes which create it. The powers conferred when exercised at all must be exercised with due care. In the absence of a contrary intention, its duties and liabilities are the same as those imposed by the general law on a private person doing the same thing. But for mere nonfeasance no action lies except in regard to a duty towards the plaintiff imposed by the statute and negligently omitted" (Gibraltar Sanitary Commissioners v. Orfila (1890), 15 App. Cas. 400. And see Loader v. London and India Docks Joint Committee (1891), 56 J. P. 165; 8 T. L. R. 5).

There may be a right of action for compensation under a statute, as where the tribunal appointed by the statute to assess the compensation has ceased to exist

Note to Section 308.

(Bentley v. M. S. and L. Rail. Co., [1891] 3 Ch. 222), but such a state of circumstances can never arise under this Act.

When the damage is caused by work, the doing of which is not authorised by the statute, the remedy is by action, and not by a claim for compensation under this section (R. v. Darlington L. B. (1865), 6 B. & S. 562 ; 29 J. P. 419). The plaintiff must, however, prove that he has been injured specially (as distinct from the public generally), directly and substantially (Martin v. London C. C. (1899), 80 L. T. 866).

An action will in some cases lie if there is a departure from the statutory provisions (Dominion Iron Co. v. Burt, [1917] A. C. 179).

When a local board interfered with a watercourse in a manner not authorised by 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 68 (3), corresponding to s. 327 (4), post, p. 657, it was held that they might be restrained from so doing, and that the person injured would not be left to his remedy by compensation (Grand Junction Canal Co. v. Shugar (1871), L. R. 6 Ch. 482 ; 35 J. P. 660).

The fact that a claim for compensation has been made under this section will not estop the plaintiff from obtaining relief by injunction or damages, if he is in law entitled to bring an action for such relief (Pentney v. Lynn Paving Commissioners (1865), 12 L. T. 818).

A local board assuming to act under s. 39, ante, p. 102, erected a public urinal, partly upon a highway, and partly upon a strip of land belonging to the plaintiff, and so near to other adjoining land of the plaintiff as to be a nuisance to her, and her tenants, and to depreciate the value of her property. It was held that the plaintiff was entitled to an injunction to restrain the board from continuing the urinal upon her land, or so near thereto as to cause injury and annoyance to her or her tenants, and that it was not a matter in respect of which her remedy was by compensation under this section (Sellors v. Matlock Bath L. B. (1885), 14 Q. B. D. 928). On the other hand, in the same case, it appeared that the plaintiff had land abutting upon the highway, on which an inn and some stabling were erected. These stood back from the highway, and in front of them was an open space forming part of the same land which had been left open to and on a level with the highway, until the defendants in exercise of their powers under s. 149, ante, p. 273, and for the convenience of the public, placed kerbstones and a raised footpath at the side of the highway, leaving openings so that carriages could still pass at convenient places to and from the plaintiff's land and premises. It was held that the plaintiff was not entitled to a mandatory injunction directing the defendants to remove the kerbstones, and that in the absence of any unreasonable conduct, the remedy for any injury caused by the kerbstones would be by compensation under this section.

The defendants were owners of a quay over which there was a public right of way to their docks. The G. E. Rail. Co. by their private Act were empowered to enter and did enter into an arrangement with the defendants to lay tramways connecting the docks with the railway system. The company were to keep the tramways in good working order. Under the Tramways Act, 1870, the company as promoters gave notice to the defendants of their intention to open and break up the road for the purposes of doubling the rails at a particular point. The company did break up the highway for their tramway purposes. The plaintiff was injured by being thrown from his cart through the defective condition of the roadway at the place where the works were being carried out, and brought his action for damages against the defendants as owners of the highway. The jury at the trial found that the accident was due to the negligence of the company who were in possession of the spot when the occurrence took place, and that the roadway was in a defective condition owing to a breach of duty on the part of the railway company, and gave the plaintiff substantial damages. It was contended in argument on behalf of the plaintiff that on these findings he was entitled to have the verdict entered for him, but it was held that as the company were carrying out their works not under the orders or as licensees of the defendants, but under their statutory powers, and were in sole possession of the place where the accident happened, which was entirely under their control, and as the negligence causing the accident was that of the company, and not of the defendants, the verdict ought to be entered for the defendants (Barham v. Ipswich Dock Commissioners (1885), 54 L. T. 23).

If a public body do something in the exercise of their statutory powers they are not liable in respect of annoyance, not amounting to nuisance, of a temporary character in the execution of the work (Harrison v. Southwark and Vauxhall Water

Note to Section 308.

Co., [1891] 2 Ch. 409). Cf. Colwell v. St. Pancras Borough Council, [1904] 1 Ch. 707; 68 J. P. 286; Knight v. Isle of Wight Electric Light and Power Co., Ltd. (1904), 73 L. J. Ch. 299; 68 J. P. 266; Clark v. Lloyds Bank (1910), 74 J. P. 429.

The diversion by a local authority of sewage from one sewer into another already surcharged with sewage, whereby damage is occasioned to an occupier of premises, is the commission of a legal wrong in respect of which the occupier can maintain an action for damages (Dent v. Bournemouth Corporation (1897), 66 L. J. Q. B. 395). See also Hawthorn Corporation v. Kannuluik, noticed with the last-mentioned case at p. 584, ante.

See generally for instances of actions against local authorities the cases cited on pp. 584 et seq., ante.

Absence of default.

(c) These words were new in 1875. Where meat belonging to a plaintiff was seized and condemned under ss. 116, 117, ante, pp. 218, 220, and it was found that some of it was in fact unsound, though the plaintiff was unaware of such unsoundness, and could not have discovered it by any reasonable examination, it was held that he was nevertheless "in default," and therefore not entitled to compensation (Hobbs v. Winchester Corporation, [1910] 2 K. B. 471; 74 J. P. 413). Apparently, too, the words would apply to cases where, owing to the default of an owner of a house or land, the authority are compelled to interfere with his property. But where work was done in excess of that required by a notice under a section in a local Act (corresponding to s. 36 of this Act), it was held that the owner was not "in default" so as to preclude him from obtaining compensation under the section corresponding to s. 308 (Place v. Rawtenstall Corporation (1916), 80 J. P. 433; 14 L. G. R. 901).

Where a private Act provided that all houses for slaughtering horses within a certain distance of a workhouse should be deemed public nuisances and removed, provided, however, that if they existed before the Act the owners were to be entitled to compensation, it was held that a defendant might be indicted at common law if his house was so conducted as to be a public nuisance apart from the Act, and that in such case he would not be entitled to any compensation (R. v. Watts (1826), 2 C. & P. 486).

Full compensation.

(d) As to "full" compensation, see Barnett v. Eccles (Mayor, etc. of) on p. 644, ante, and the cases arising out of the seizure of meat on p. 221, ante.

In ascertaining the proper amount of damage in respect of the making of a sewer, an arbitrator is entitled to take into consideration future as well as present damage, such as the impossibility of building over it. But quære whether he may take into consideration the possible defective construction of it, and the annoyance likely to arise from the opening of manholes and from stenches caused thereby (Uttley v. Todmorden L. B. (1874), 44 L. J. C. P. 19; 39 J. P. 56).

Prospective damage, as well as actual injury, must be taken into consideration: per BRETT, L.J., in Re Dudley, p. 649, post; and see Colac v. Summerfield, [1893] A. C. 187; Re Brewer and Hankin's Contract (1899), 80 L. T. 127.

Where a corporation were under a local Act empowered to make a conduit for water through a field at some distance below the surface, it was held that it was not necessary for them to make compensation for damage by severance of minerals when they were not required by the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847, to purchase them (In re Huddersfield Corporation and Jacomb (1874), L. R. 10 Ch. 92). See with reference to the purchase of minerals the Public Health (Support of Sewers) Act, 1883, post, p. 717.

A local authority constructed a sewer under a public footpath, the soil of which belonged to the plaintiff, and made a shaft thirty feet deep into the sewer, with an entrance or manhole upon the footpath at a point where there was a junction of two sewers. It was held that they were justified in so doing, a manhole being part of the sewer, and that the plaintiff's remedy was compensation under this section (Swanston v. Twickenham L. B. (1879), 11 Ch. D. 838; 43 J. P. 380). Followed and applied in Metropolitan Water Board v. L. B. & S. C. Rail. Co., [1914] 3 K. B. 787; 79 J. P. 337.

It seems from the judgment of JESSEL, M.R., in Taylor v. Oldham (Corporation of) (1876), 4 Ch. D. 395, that if a local authority lay a sewer in a private street, their so doing amounts to a compulsory taking of that part of the subsoil occupied by the sewer, and that they are bound to compensate the owner of the soil; but see Leith Magistrates v. Field, post, p. 649. It would appear from a recent decision that the owner of the subsoil of a highway under which a sewer is laid is entitled to compensation for damage done to the subsoil (Northam Bridge and Roads (Proprietors of)

v. South Stoneham R. D. C. (1907), 71 J. P. 345). It follows from the remarks of JESSEL, M.R., in Roderick v. Aston L. B. (1877), 5 Ch. D. 328, 333 (and see Jary v. Barnsley Corporation, [1907] 2 Ch. 600; 71 J. P. 468), that this section would warrant a claim for compensation for lateral support to a sewer. In a subsequent case it was held that the Act imposed upon landowners, through whose land a sewer was laid, an obligation to preserve to such sewer subjacent support, and gave them a right to immediate compensation for being deprived of free power to work subjacent mines, but not for the risk of percolation of sewage into the subjacent mines, as such percolation could only be caused by wrongful working of the mine (Re Dudley (Corporation of) (1881), 8 Q. B. D. 86; 46 J. P. 340). These decisions as to support have, however, been to some extent affected by the Public Health (Support of Sewers) Act, 1883, post, p. 717. The Gasworks Clauses Act, 1847, gives a gas company incorporated under it a right of support for their pipes, and a correlative right of compensation to the landowner for the burden thus cast upon him and for the limitation thus put upon the uses of his land: see Normanton Gas Co. v. Pope (1883), 52 L. J. Q. B. 629; 49 L. T. 798; Benfieldside L. B. v. Consett Iron Co. (1877), 3 Ex. D. 54; 47 L. J. Ex. 491; L. & N. W. Rail. Co. v. Evans, [1893] 1 Ch. 16. Note to Section 308.

By a Scotch Act (25 & 26 Vict. c. 101, s. 186), commissioners were empowered to cause to be made under the streets, public or private, such main and other sewers as should be necessary, and if needful, to carry such sewers through and across all underground cellars and vaults under any such streets, doing as little damage as might be, and making full compensation for any damage done; and if, for completing any of the aforesaid works, it should be found necessary to carry them into or through any enclosed or other lands, to carry the same into or through such lands accordingly, making full compensation. The owner of two private streets lodged a statutory claim of £1,250 for (1) ground permanently taken for sewage and drainage works; (2) surface and underground damage, loss, and inconvenience; (3) right of way for the sewers and other works, including right of access. It was held (1) that the commissioners were not liable in compensation for damage done by merely carrying sewers under a private street, or for way-leave; (2) that under the above claim an issue of damage to certain small parts of the line of streets alleged not to have been converted into private streets or dedicated to the public could not be tried (Leith Magistrates v. Field (1878), 6 Ct. of Sess. Cas. (4th ser.) 185).

With reference to the principles of valuing land for compensation, see Mordue v. Durham (Dean and Chapter of) (1873), L. R. 8 C. P. 336; and in regard to mines, In re Corporation of Huddersfield and Jacomb, ante, p. 648, and G. W. Rail. Co. v. Smith (1876), 2 Ch. D. 235; 40 J. P. 469.

It would seem that the local authority are not bound to make or tender compensation before doing an act which will have the effect of causing damage. See Lister v. Lobley (1837), 6 L. J. K. B. 200; 7 A. & E. 124; Att.-Gen. v. Parish, on p. 326, ante.

Quære whether there is any limitation of the time within which a claim must be made under this section: see Pettiward v. Metropolitan Board of Works (1865), 19 C. B. (N.S.) 489; 34 L. J. C. P. 301; Turner v. Midland Rail. Co., [1911] 1 K. B. 832; 75 J. P. 283. The limitation in s. 264, ante, p. 583 (now replaced by the Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893, post, p. 890), has been held not to apply: see Delany v. Metropolitan Board of Works in the notes to that Act, post, p. 899, and Glasgow Corporation v. Smithfield, etc. Meat Co., [1912] S. C. 364.

Semble an award once made must be sued on within six years from its date (Turner v. Midland Rail. Co., supra).

(e) Under the P. H. A., 1848, it was generally accepted that an arbitrator had no jurisdiction if there was any dispute as to liability outstanding. A local board made a sewer through the land of B., who claimed compensation. The board maintained that the land was not damaged, and consequently that B. was not entitled to any compensation. B. called upon them to appoint an arbitrator under the section of the P. H. A., 1848, corresponding with s. 180, ante, p. 426. The board refused to do so. B. appointed an arbitrator, who ultimately made an award ex parte. On motion to set aside this award, it was held that as admittedly the local board had made the sewer and were liable to make compensation if there was any damage, the dispute was one as to the "amount" of compensation alone, and therefore cognisable by an arbitrator, though he might assess the damage at nothing (Bradby v. Southampton L. B. (1855), 4 El. & Bl. 1014; 19 J. P. 644). It was assumed by the court that had there been a question of liability, the proceedings Jurisdiction of arbitrator.

Note to Section 308.

by arbitration would not have been valid. In Bradford L. B. v. Hopwood (1858), 6 W. R. 818, WOOD, V.-C., refused to restrain a claimant from proceeding by arbitration, the motion for the injunction being founded on the allegation that there was a dispute as to liability, and not merely as to the amount of compensation; but in a subsequent case the ground of the decision was that an arbitrator would have had no jurisdiction to make an award if the liability, as distinguished from the amount of the compensation, was in dispute (R. v. Burslem L. B. (1859), 28 L. J. Q. B. 345; 24 J. P. 563). These cases were discussed in Brierley Hill L. B. v. Pearsall (1884), 9 App. Cas. 595; 49 J. P. 84, which, if it does not overrule them, at least decides that they are not to be taken as applicable to the construction of this section. The court there decided that a person who claims compensation for damage, sustained by reason of the exercise of the powers of the Act, is entitled under s. 308 to have the amount of compensation determined by arbitration in the manner provided by the Act, even though a dispute exists as to the liability of those from whom he seeks to recover compensation; and that the prior determination of the question of liability is not a condition precedent to the claimant's right to go to arbitration to settle the question of amount. If, therefore, the authority dispute liability, they ought to refuse to fulfil the award and leave the claimant to sue on it: see Re Walker and Beckenham L. B. (1884), 48 J. P. 264; 50 L. T. 207.

As to the right to interest upon a sum awarded if not paid upon a formal demand being made, see Fletcher v. Birkenhead Corporation, [1907] 1 K. B. 205; 71 J. P. 111.

Where an award of compensation was proved satisfactorily by extraneous evidence to include a sum in respect of an item of loss not legally the subject of compensation the award was remitted (In re Smith and Belfast Corporation, [1910] 2 I. R. 285).

Arbitration.

(f) See s. 179, ante, p. 425. But in cases where that Act applies, see now the provisions of the Acquisition of Land (Assessment of Compensation) Act, 1919.

Option for summary process.

(g) This statement of the option is new. It is not quite clear how it is to be determined. The authority do not seek to recover any amount, and if the claimant decline to go before the justices, it is difficult to see how he can be compelled to do so; but, if he select that court, the authority must follow. This option will not be open in any case which comes within the above-mentioned Act of 1919.

Court of summary jurisdiction.

(h) See s. 251, ante, p. 551. The justices may add to the compensation the costs of the application to them (Huddersfield (Corporation of) v. Shaw (1890), 54 J. P. 724).

Compensation in certain cases to officers.

309. If any officer of any trustees commissioners or other body of persons entrusted with the execution of any local Act, whether acting exclusively under the local Act, or partly under the local Act and partly under the Local Government Acts (a), or any officer of any sanitary authority under the Sanitary Acts (b) by this Act repealed, or of any local authority under this Act, is, by or in pursuance of the Public Health Act, 1872, or of this Act, or of any Provisional Order made in pursuance of either of those Acts (c), removed from his office, or deprived of the whole or part of the emoluments (d) of his office, and does not afterwards receive remuneration to an equal amount in respect of some office or employment under or by the authority of any district under this Act, the Local Government Board may (e) by order award to such officer such compensation as the said Board may think just (f); and such compensation may be by way of annuity or otherwise, and shall be paid by the local authority of the district in which such officer held his office out of any rates applicable to the general purposes of this Act within that district.

Local Government Acts.

This section is now superseded, see the L. G. A., 1888, s. 120; and the L. G. A., 1894, s. 81 (7), and notes thereto.

Sanitary Acts.

(a) See the definition in Schedule V., Part 1, post, p. 698.

(b) See the definition in s. 4, ante, p. 35.

Provisional Orders.

(c) See s. 303, ante, p. 637.

(d) As to what are "emoluments," and who is an "officer" within the meaning of the section, see the cases collected under s. 81 (7) of the L. G. A., 1894, post.

Note to Section 309.

(e) But semble the section "entitled" the officer to compensation (R. v. Local Government Board (1874), L. R. 9 Q. B. 148; 38 J. P. 165).

Emoluments.

(f) Prior to 1909 it was usual for the Board in fixing compensation to follow the Treasury "practice"—as to which see notes to the L. G. A., 1894, s. 81 (7), post. After 1909 the practice varied.

Awards of compensation.

Most of the officers appointed under this Act hold office at the discretion of the local authority, nevertheless the Board considered them, as a general rule, officers entitled to compensation for a reasonable term. See R. v. Norwich (1838), 8 A. & E. 633; R. v. Poor Law Board (1871), L. R. 6 Q. B. 785.

Whether an order under this section can be questioned is doubted, regard being had to s. 295, ante, p. 627.

310. Where after the passing of this Act a district or part of a district under the jurisdiction of improvement commissioners (a), or a district or part of a district under the jurisdiction of a local board, is constituted or included in a borough, all the powers rights duties capacities liabilities obligations and property exercisable by attaching to or vested in such improvement commissioners or local board (as the case may be) under this Act or under any local Act for purposes the same as or similar to those of this Act, or under any general Act of Parliament (b), within or for the benefit of such district or part of a district, shall pass to and be exercisable by and vested in the council of such borough (c).

Provision where Improvement Act district or local government district becomes a borough.

The transfer by virtue of the Public Health Act, 1872, of the powers rights duties capacities liabilities obligations and property of any local board or improvement commissioners to an urban sanitary authority, shall be deemed to have included all powers rights duties capacities liabilities obligations and property exercisable by attaching to or vested in such local board or improvement commissioners as a burial board under any general Act of Parliament (d).

(a) See the definition in s. 4, ante, p. 4.

Improvement commissioners.

(b) It is doubtful whether these words carry powers other than sanitary powers possessed by these Commissioners. In the case of a new borough the "scheme" under the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, will probably make provision in similar terms.

Other powers.

As regards the extension of boroughs by the inclusion of urban areas the Act or the Provisional Order will deal with the matter. See hereon ss. 54 and 59 of the L. G. A., 1888, post, pp. 768 and 773.

(c) The words "council of such borough" mean the mayor, aldermen and burgesses acting by the council. The effect of the section, therefore, is that, when the district is incorporated as a borough, all the property of the board (now the urban district council) (including property acquired by them by purchase after the passing of the Act) vests at once in the corporation without the necessity of any conveyance or transfer. In such a case the Bank of England are bound, on the request of the corporation, to register in their corporate name government stock previously standing in the books of the bank in the name of the district council without requiring any transfer to be executed (Hyde (Corporation of) v. Bank of England (1882), 21 Ch. D. 176). See also Oldham Corporation v. Bank of England, [1904] 2 Ch. 716; 68 J. P. 584; and cf. Morton v. Bank of England, [1904] 1 Ch. 664; 68 J. P. 268; Re Wallsend Corporation and Northumberland County Council, [1906] 2 Ch. 506; 70 J. P. 434; Re Leeds Institute of Science and Leeds City Council, [1909] 1 Ch. 500; 73 J. P. 201.

Council of borough.

Vesting of property.

(d) This is a provision which was omitted in 35 & 36 Vict. c. 79, s. 7. See 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 49, re-enacted in Schedule V., Part III., post, p. 699.

Burial board powers.

Section 311. Power of local boards to change name.

311. Any local board constituted either before or after the passing of this Act, may, with the sanction of the Local Government Board, change their name. Every such change of name shall be published in such manner as the Local Government Board may direct. No such change of name shall affect any rights or obligations of the local board, or render defective any legal proceedings instituted by or against the local board; and any legal proceedings may be continued or commenced against the local board by their new name which might have been continued or commenced against the local board by their former name.

See as to the name of the local board, s. 7, and notes thereto, ante, p. 39.

The present section is superseded by the L. G. A., 1894, s. 55, by which any district council may, with the sanction of the county council, change their name and the name of their district.

As to election of certain improvement commissioners, etc. [Repealed by 56 & 57 Vict. c. 73, s. 89.]

312. The retirement and mode of election of members of any authority invested by any local Act with powers of town government and rating, whose retirement and mode of election were at the time of the passing of this Act regulated by the Local Government Acts, shall be regulated in all respects by the rules for election of local boards contained in Schedule II. to this Act; but this enactment shall not affect the qualification fixed for members of such authority by the local Act under which such authority are constituted, or the qualification and tenure of office of any ex-officio members of such authority.

This section is now repealed by the L. G. A., 1894, s. 89, post.

Substitution in other Acts of provisions of this Act for provisions of repealed Acts.

313. Where in any Act, or Order made by one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State or by the Local Government Board and in force at the time of the passing of this Act, or in any document, any provisions of any of the Sanitary Acts (a) which are repealed by this Act are mentioned or referred to, such Act Order or document shall be read as if the provisions of this Act applicable to purposes the same as or similar to those of the repealed provisions were therein mentioned or referred to instead of such repealed provisions and were substituted for the same; nevertheless those substituted provisions shall have effect subject to any modification or restriction in such Act Order or document expressed in relation to the repealed provisions therein mentioned or referred to.

(a) See the definition in s. 4, ante, p. 35, and s. 323, post, p. 655.

The question was raised whether by virtue of an Order of the L. G. B. prior to 1875, which invested a rural sanitary authority with urban powers under the Local Government Act, 1858, with reference to such a matter as byelaws, a rural district council possessed the additional powers given by this Act in relation to the same kind of byelaws. The answer was in the affirmative.

Byelaws as to hop-pickers.

314. Any local authority may, if they think fit, make byelaws for securing the decent lodging and accommodation of persons engaged in hop-picking within the district of such authority.

This section is extended to fruit-pickers by 45 & 46 Vict. c. 23, post, p. 717.

Note to Section 314.

See s. 182, ante, p. 439, as to the making of byelaws, and s. 251, ante, p. 551, as to enforcing them.

Byelaws upon this subject will be made chiefly, if not entirely, by rural authorities. Model byelaws are issued by the M. of H.

As to byelaws inconsistent with this Act.

315. Any byelaw made by any sanitary authority under the Sanitary Acts (a) which is inconsistent with any of the provisions of this Act shall so far as it is inconsistent therewith be deemed to be repealed (b).

(a) See definition in s. 4, ante, p. 35.

(b) See s. 326, post, p. 656, as to byelaws made by sanitary authorities before the passing of this Act.

This section doubtless applies to byelaws made under local Acts which incorporate any of the sanitary Acts as well as to those made under these Acts.

As to construction of incorporated Acts.

316. In the construction of the provisions of any Act incorporated with this Act the term (a) "the special Act" includes this Act, and, in the case of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Acts, 1845, 1860, and 1869, any Order (b) confirmed by Parliament and authorising the purchase of lands otherwise than by agreement under this Act; the term "the limits of the special Act" means the limits of the district; and the urban or rural authority shall be deemed to be "the promoters of the undertaking," "the commissioners," or "the undertakers," as the case may be.

All penalties incurred under the provisions of any Act incorporated with this Act shall be recovered and applied in the same way as penalties incurred under this Act (c).

(a) These terms are found in such incorporated Acts as the Lands Clauses Act, the Waterworks Clauses Act, the Markets and Fairs Clauses Act, etc. All the incorporated statutes will be found in App. I., post, Vol. II.

(b) It would have been more correct to say any Act confirming an Order.

(c) See ss. 251—254, ante, pp. 551—562.

This provision creates some difficulty. It will be remembered that s. 253, ante, p. 559, provides that no proceedings are to be taken to recover penalties except by a party aggrieved, by the local authority, or by a person having the consent of the Attorney-General. In some cases arising under incorporated Acts the police are authorised by such Acts to arrest offenders and take them before justices. See, for example, the Town Police Clauses Act, 1847, s. 28, and Jobson v. Henderson, ante, p. 395.

Construction of Schedules.

317. The Schedules to this Act shall be read and have effect as part of this Act.

The forms contained in Schedule IV. to this Act, or forms to the like effect, varied as circumstances may require, may be used and shall be sufficient for all purposes.

As to the construction and effect of Schedules to an Act see Att.-Gen. v. Lamplough (1878), 3 Ex. D. 214; 42 J. P. 356; Dean v. Green (1882), 8 P. D. 79; Woodward v. Sarsons (1875), L. R. 10 C. P. 733; 39 J. P. 776.

The forms in Schedule IV. need not be followed precisely, but they indicate what the forms used by a local authority shall contain (Stourbridge U. D. C. v. Butler and Grove, [1909] 1 Ch. 87; 73 J. P. 3); and see also R. v. Baines (1840), 12 A. & E. 210; Bartlett v. Gibbs (1843), 5 M. & G. 81; Rayner v. Stepney Corporation, [1911] 2 Ch. 312; 75 J. P. 468.

Certain orders made by a court of summary jurisdiction for the abatement of a nuisance under s. 96 were signed and sealed by one only of the justices who were present. Form C. in Sched. 4 purports to be under the hands and seals of two justices. It was held that the orders were bad, notwithstanding that the general forms prescribed by the S. J. Rules, 1886 showed a place for the signature of one justice only (Wing v. Epsom U. D. C., [1904] 1 K. B. 798; 68 J. P. 259). But quære whether this decision now applies in view of the new S. J. Rules made under s. 40 of the Criminal Justice Administration Act, 1914 (4 & 5 Geo. 5, c. 58), and see as to the power of the court to amend on appeal or certiorari, R. v. Tabrum (1907), 71 J. P. 325; 97 L. T. 551.

Note to Section 317.

In Ireland it has been held that a majority of the court should authenticate an order (R. v. Londonderry JJ., [1910] 2 I. R. 458).

Temporary Provisions.

As to clerk and treasurer of certain authorities [Repealed by 46 & 47 Vict. c. 39.]

318. Nothing in this Act shall affect the rights or position of any clerk or treasurer the tenure of whose office is regulated by section twelve of the Public Health Act, 1872.

This section has been repealed by the S. L. R. A., 1883.

As to special district rates.

319. Nothing in this Act shall affect the making and levying of any special district rates, or the discharge of sums borrowed on the credit of any special district rates, or any right or remedy for the recovery of the same, under any provision of the Local Government Acts in force at the time of the passing of this Act.

Special district rates were authorised by the P. H. A., 1848, s. 86, but the making of them for the future was prohibited by 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 54. As, however, charges upon them had in some cases been created under the former Act, such charges had still to be provided for by the levying of such rates. The 24 & 25 Vict. c. 61, s. 12, enabled the special district rate to be levied as part of the general district rate when the areas of the two rates were the same; and s. 13 provided for the payment of such rates when made for a part of the district only out of the general district rate with the consent of the creditors and of the owners and ratepayers by means of a fresh loan. These charges are, however, extinguished in all or in nearly all cases.

Division of expenses between landlord and tenant in certain cases.

320. Where under the provisions of any local Act in that behalf any expenses directed by this Act to be paid in the case of a council of a borough out of the borough fund or borough rate were, before the passing of the Public Health Act, 1872, divided between landlord and tenant in moieties or otherwise, the Local Government Board may, on the application either of landlord or tenant, by Order make provision for the continuance of such division of expenses during the continuance of any contract existing between them at the passing of the last-mentioned Act.

This section can hardly be applicable to many cases at this date.

Validity of certain securities.

321. Where by any sanction to a loan given or by any Provisional Order made under the Sanitary Acts, it is directed that the sums borrowed shall be repaid within a limited period of years from the date of the borrowing thereof, any security which has been given for a sum so borrowed shall not be invalid by reason of the sum having been made repayable within a period less than the period so limited.

See the definition of Sanitary Acts in s. 4, ante, p. 35. It does not appear that any court of law had decided that when a statute required a loan to be liquidated within a certain time, it was not lawful to make it repayable within a shorter period. But opinions having been given by counsel of repute to that effect, this section was apparently framed to meet the point. Note to Section 321.

322. Where by any local Act powers are conferred on any turnpike trustees for any purposes the same as or similar to any of the purposes of the Sanitary Acts or of this Act, such trustees shall not be deemed to be an urban authority under this Act, but all their powers and obligations under such local Act for such purposes shall be transferred to the local authority within whose district the area to which such local Act applies is contained. As to certain turnpike trustees.

This section might perhaps originally have been appropriately appended to s. 6, ante, p. 37. It dealt with a very special and unusual case, which was provided for by 37 & 38 Vict. c. 89, s. 3, and the transfer took effect under that Act. It is now repealed by the S. L. R. A., 1898.

323. Where any district has been constituted in pursuance of the provisions of the Public Health Act, 1848, for the purposes of main sewerage only (a), or where a district has been formed subject to the jurisdiction of a joint sewerage board in pursuance of the Sewage Utilization Act, 1867 (b), the Local Government Board may by Provisional Order (c) dissolve such district, or may constitute such district a united district subject to the jurisdiction of a joint board in manner provided by this Act, without application previous to the making of any such Order (d); and until an Order has been made by the Local Government Board under this section, the authority of any such district shall continue to be the authority thereof and their members shall be elected as if this Act had not passed: Provided that the provisions of this Act applicable to purposes the same as or similar to those of any enactments of the Sanitary Acts (e) which are in force within the district of any such authority at the time of the passing of this Act and are repealed by this Act shall be deemed to be substituted for those enactments (f). As to main sewerage districts and joint sewerage boards. 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63.

Any Order (g) made under this section may if necessary provide for the settlement of any differences or the adjustment of any accounts or the apportionment of any liabilities arising between districts parishes or other places in consequence of the exercise of any of the powers conferred by this section, and may direct the persons by and to whom any moneys found to be due are to be paid and the mode of raising such moneys.

(a) In the P. H. A., 1848, s. 10, reference was made to a district formed for the purposes of main sewerage. No other statutory provision was made for such a district, and it does not appear how the district was to be formed, constituted, regulated, or provided with funds. The General Board of Health did, however, form one or two such districts, and their existence was recognised in 37 & 38 Vict. c. 89, s. 57. Main sewerage districts.

(b) The Act referred to is 30 & 31 Vict. c. 113, ss. 10–14. It is now repealed, but the provisions of it relating to the formation of joint sewerage boards are practically re-enacted in ss. 279–284, ante, pp. 616—619. Joint sewerage districts.

(c) See s. 297, ante, p. 629, as to Provisional Orders.

(d) United districts are now formed under s. 279, ante, p. 616; under that section, however, the M. of H. must be applied to before they can constitute the united district while under this section they can act ex mero motu. United districts.

Note to Section 323.

(e) See the definition in s. 4, ante, p. 35.

(f) See further s. 313, ante, p. 652.

(g) See s. 275, ante, p. 611, and s. 304, ante, p. 638. This Order is not provisional, but according to s. 295, ante, p. 627, is final and conclusive.

Effect of order.

As to audit of certain accounts. [Repealed by 46 & 47 Vict. c. 39.]

324. The accounts of any urban or rural sanitary authority under the Sanitary Acts by this Act repealed, not audited at the time of the passing of this Act, shall be deemed for the purposes of audit to be accounts of such authority under this Act.

As to certain orders under s. 20 of 35 & 36 Vict. c. 79. [Repealed by 46 & 47 Vict. c. 39.]

325. The power conferred by section twenty of "The Public Health Act, 1872," of temporarily constituting a port sanitary authority shall be deemed to have authorised a renewal from time to time of any Order made under that section.

This and the preceding section were repealed by the S. L. R. A., 1883.

PART XI.

SAVING CLAUSES AND REPEAL OF ACTS.

Saving Clauses.

Provision as to the sanitary authorities existing at the passing of this Act, and their officers, etc.

326. All urban sanitary authorities and rural sanitary authorities existing (a) at the time of the passing of this Act shall be deemed to be urban authorities and rural authorities under this Act (b); and all joint boards, port sanitary authorities, committees of rural sanitary authorities, and parochial committees, and all local government districts constituted in pursuance of the Sanitary Acts (c), and existing at the time of the passing of this Act, shall be deemed to be joint boards, port sanitary authorities, committees of rural sanitary authorities, and parochial committees, and local government districts under this Act; and the members of all the above-mentioned bodies shall hold office (subject to the provisions of this Act respecting the election of members of local boards) (d) for such time as they would respectively have held office if this Act had not been passed; and the officers and servants of all the above-mentioned bodies shall continue to hold their several offices and employments on the same terms and subject to the same conditions, as to duties remuneration and otherwise, as they would have held them if this Act had not been passed (e); and all byelaws duly made under any of the Sanitary Acts (c) by this Act repealed and not inconsistent with any of the provisions of this Act shall be deemed to be byelaws under this Act (f); and all the provisions of this Act shall apply to all such bodies existing at the time of the passing of this Act, and to their several officers and servants, in substitution for the provisions of the Sanitary Acts (c) by this Act repealed, but so as not to affect any right acquired or liability incurred under the Sanitary Acts (c) or any of them, before the passing of this Act, and existing at the time of the passing of this Act (g).

(a) They are assumed to be legally constituted, but the section does not in itself confer legality on the acting bodies.

(b) Consequently they would be able to execute all the powers and be subject to all the duties provided by the Act; but the last part of the section enacts the proposition in terms. Note to Section 326.

(c) See the definition in s. 4, ante, p. 35.

(d) These provisions were contained in Sched. II., Part 1, now repealed by the L. G. A., 1894, post, as obsolete.

(e) See also s. 318, ante, p. 654.

(f) See ss. 182, ante, p. 432, and 251, ante, p. 551, and James v. Wyvill, ante, p. 358. In Watson v. Winch, [1916] 1 K. B. 688, it was held that the byelaws there in question were abrogated by reason of the Act under which they were made having been repealed without a saving clause for the byelaws.

(g) See s. 343, post, p. 668. In Reay v. Mayor, etc. of Gateshead (1886), 50 J. P. 805, 821; 55 L. T. 92, ante, p. 358, DENMAN, J., said: "The intention of the legislature cannot have been as strong as to make that valid which was invalid by an Act which was the very Act in force at the time the byelaw was made. I do not think that is the effect of the Act of 1875 (in the text). All it means to do, as it seems to me, is to enact that if there be a byelaw which is valid at the time it is made under a former Act, and that byelaw is not inconsistent with the provisions of the later Act, then, in that case, it shall be deemed to be a good byelaw, and it shall not be necessary to make it over again. But it seems to me it would be going too far to hold that a byelaw is duly made under the new Act, when it was not properly made under the old Act and without jurisdiction, and to say that it is validated and made good merely by the passing of the subsequent Act, under which if it were made it would be a good byelaw."

327. Nothing in this Act (a) shall be construed to authorise any local authority— Saving for works and property of certain authorities, and for navigation and water rights, etc.

(1) To use injure or interfere with any sluices floodgates sewers groynes or sea defences or other works, already or hereafter made under the authority of any commissioners of sewers appointed by the Crown (b), or any sewers or other works already or hereafter made and used by any body of persons or person for the purpose of draining preserving or improving land under any local or private Act of Parliament, or for the purpose of irrigating land (c); or,

(2) To disturb or interfere with any lands or other property vested in the Lord High Admiral of the United Kingdom or the Commissioners for executing the office of the Lord High Admiral for the time being or in her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the War Department for the time being; or,

(3) To interfere with any river canal dock harbour lock reservoir or basin, so as to injuriously affect the navigation thereon, or the use thereof, or to interfere with any towing-path so as to interrupt the traffic thereof (d), in cases where any body of persons or person are or is by virtue of any Act of Parliament entitled to navigate on or use such river canal dock harbour lock reservoir or basin, or to receive any tolls or dues in respect of the navigation thereon or use thereof; or,

(4) To interfere with any watercourse in such manner as to injuriously affect the supply of water to any river canal dock harbour reservoir or basin, in cases where any such body of persons or person as last aforesaid would, if this Act had not passed, have been entitled by law to prevent or be relieved against such interference (e); or,

Section 327.

(5) To interfere with any bridges crossing any river canal dock harbour or basin, in cases where any body of persons or person are or is authorised by virtue of any Act of Parliament to navigate or use such river canal dock harbour or basin, or to demand any tolls or dues in respect of the navigation thereon or use thereof; or,

(6) To execute any works in through or under any wharves quays docks harbours or basins, to the exclusive use of which any body of persons or person are or is entitled by virtue of any Act of Parliament, or for the use of which any body of persons or person are or is entitled by virtue of any Act of Parliament to demand any tolls or dues,—

Without the consent in every case of such Lord High Admiral or Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral, Secretary of State, commissioners, body of persons or person as are hereinbefore in that behalf respectively mentioned, such consent to be expressed in writing (f) in the case of a corporation under their common seal, and in the case of any body of persons not being a corporation under the hand of their clerk or other duly authorised officer or agent (g). And nothing in this Act shall prejudice or affect the rights privileges powers or authorities given or reserved to any person under such local or private Acts for draining preserving or improving land as are in this section mentioned.

Effect of section.

(a) The effect of this and the following sections is apparently to prohibit the local authority from acting, without the necessary consent, in the matters prohibited, even although they may be prepared to pay compensation under s. 308, ante, p. 642. In the case of schemes submitted to the M. of H., which involve interference with any of the rights mentioned in this section or in s. 332, the Ministry invariably require evidence of the requisite consents before proceeding with the application. See also notes to s. 332, post, p. 662.

Sewers under commissioners.

(b) It is the duty of the Crown to protect the realm from the inroads of the sea by maintaining the natural barriers, or by raising artificial barriers; and therefore no subject is entitled to destroy a natural barrier against the sea. And if the destruction of such natural barrier would cause an injury to a neighbouring landowner, he is entitled by injunction to restrain it (Att.-Gen. v. Tomline (1880), 14 Ch. D. 58; 44 J. P. 617, followed and applied in Holien v. Tipping, [1915] 1 I. R. 210, and Canvey Island Commissioners v. Preedy, [1922] 1 Ch. 179; 86 J. P. 21). See, however, as to this so-called "duty" of the Crown or of the nation, the Report (1906) of the Commission upon "Coast Erosion." The Sewers Act, 1833, s. 10, which declares that certain walls, banks, and other defences by the coasts of the sea and navigable and tidal rivers are within and subject to the jurisdiction of commissioners of sewers does not of itself vest such defences in the commissioners, and in order to show that they are so vested it must be shown that the commissioners have, in fact, exercised jurisdiction over them (West Norfolk Farmers' Manure Co. v. Archdale (1886), 16 Q. B. D. 754; 50 J. P. 500; and see Stracey v. Nelson (1844), 12 M. & W. 535; Nesbitt v. Mablethorpe U. D. C. (1918), 82 J. P. 161).

Irrigation sewers.

(c) It will be remembered that by s. 13, ante, p. 45, such sewers do not vest in the local authority as other sewers do. In L. & N. W. Rail. Co. v. Runcorn R. D. C., [1898] 1 Ch. 34, 561; 62 J. P. 9, 643, the defendants were restrained from connecting their sewers with a land drain belonging to the railway company.

The protection afforded by this sub-section applies where works are proposed to be done by an urban authority under powers conferred by the Highway Act, 1835, because the powers of that Act are only exercisable by an urban authority because of the statutory right conferred by s. 144 of this Act (Ballard v. Leek U. D. C. (1917), 81 J. P. 232).

Note to Section 327.

(d) An urban council resolved to construct a system of surface water drains to discharge into the Thames by an outfall drain, carried into, through, and under the towing path, the soil of which was vested in the Thames Conservators, who are "entitled by virtue of an Act of Parliament to navigate on or use such rivers, or to receive tolls or dues in respect of the navigation thereon or use thereof." It appeared from a special case stated in an action against the council that the execution of the works would temporarily interfere with the traffic upon the towing path, but that it was the intention of the council to so carry out the works as not at any time to interrupt the traffic over more than one-half of the path, and to avoid, as far as possible, any interference with the towing of vessels. It was held upon such statement that the execution of the works would interfere with the towing path so as to interrupt the traffic thereof within the meaning of s. 327 (3), and that, therefore, the council had no right to carry the outfall drain into, through, or under the towing path, without first obtaining permission and submitting to such restrictions and conditions as the conservators thought proper to impose (Thames Conservators v. Walton-upon-Thames U. D. C. (1907), 71 J. P. 202; 96 L. T. 555).

Navigable rivers and sea-shore.

There is no exception of public navigable rivers or the sea-shore. The local authority cannot disturb any private interest therein, but even if they avoid all such disturbance they may still be prevented from doing any act which will interfere with the rights of the Crown. The Board of Trade or the Admiralty must be consulted with reference to the sea-shore and harbours.

It must be noted that the text does not refer to pollution, but to interference with navigation. Reference should be made to s. 17, ante, p. 60, and the notes thereon, as to the pollution of streams by sewage. See also the Rivers Pollution Prevention Acts, 1876 and 1893, in App. I., post, Vol. II.

In R. v. Bradford Navigation (1865), 34 L. J. Q. B. 191; 29 J. P. 613, the Queen's Bench laid down the principle, that statutory powers, though framed for the public benefit, are only co-extensive with the power to exercise them without any infringement of the general law. Where the exercise is not compulsory on the grantees, and new and unforeseen circumstances subsequently arise which render the exercise of them a nuisance, such exercise of them is unlawful. Hence, when a navigation company were empowered by statute to take water from certain streams for the supply of their canal, and the streams became polluted so that the water of the canal caused a public nuisance, it was held that the lessees of the company were properly convicted on indictment. This decision was supported by WOOD, V.-C., who granted an injunction against the company and their lessees to restrain them from drawing the polluted water from the streams into the canal, though he granted some time to enable the defendants to provide a remedy if possible (Att.-Gen. v. Bradford Canal Co. (1866), L. R. 2 Eq. 71).

(e) The words injuriously affect may possibly include pollution as well as diminution in quantity.

Injurious affection.

An authority cannot, under cover of legislative powers, make a sewer which will have the effect of polluting the water of a canal:—Held, therefore, that a local board must be restrained from permitting sewage communication to be made between houses and their sewer so long as it should discharge into a canal:—Held, also, that power given to the canal company by their Act to supply the canal with water from all brooks, streams, and watercourses within 1,000 yards did not so far comprise rain and other surface water which, being collected on the road, ran along an open gutter into the canal, as to preclude the local board from allowing it to fall through gratings into their sewer (M. S. & L. Rail. Co. v. Worksop L. B. (1857), 26 L. J. Ch. 345; 23 Beav. 198).

A watercourse, though artificial, may have been originally made under such circumstances, and so used, as to give to "riparian" owners all the rights that they would have had if it had been a natural stream. See cases in notes to s. 51, p. 123, ante.

Any violation of the provisions in this section will be restrained by injunction, and the party injured will not be restricted to his claim for compensation (Grand Junction Canal Co. v. Shugar, ante, p. 73).

A local board made certain sewers, and in so doing injuriously affected a stream

Note to Section 327.

without the consent of T., the occupier of a mill upon it. It was held that the corresponding provisions of 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 73, were not confined to cases in which a court of equity would grant an injunction against the local board, and that T. was in the position of a person who would, if the Act had not been passed, have been entitled by law to prevent the injuriously affecting of the stream. It was also held that the works not being authorised by s. 73, the claim of T. was not the subject of compensation, but ground of action (R. v. Darlington L. B., ante, p. 647).

The words of the concluding part of this clause reserve to the local authority power to challenge the right claimed by the parties referred to, and dispute that right independently of any justification under the Act.

Necessary consents.

(f) Although written consent is here required, it has been sought to stay summary applications in Chancery for injunctions against the works of local authorities by averments of laches, it being argued that such laches was equivalent to consent. This defence was not successful in Att.-Gen. v. Luton Local Board (1856), 2 Jur. (N.S.) 180, where there had been much negotiation and correspondence before the commencement of the suit. See, however, the judgment of WOOD, V.-C., in Att.-Gen. v. Bradford Canal Co., ante, p. 659.

It is to be observed that 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 68, prohibited the doing of the works adverted to without consent in writing first obtained; and this prevented the operation of the law laid down in Stainton v. Woolrych (1857), 26 L. J. Ch. 300; 23 Beav. 225, that works planned by public boards under statutes may be executed though they tend to the injury of neighbouring landowners, and consequently may be executed even without notice to them, though they may be entitled to compensation. Though the words first obtained are here omitted, it is presumed that the effect will be the same.

The consent in the text if given will not operate to protect the local authority from the consequences of their committing a public nuisance by their action.

(g) The consent of the directors or other board of management is doubtless referred to, as it would be quite impracticable to refer to the shareholders or general proprietors for their consent, unless by the constitution of the company some means be given for summoning and collecting the body into one meeting.

Reference to arbitration in case of works not within preceding section.

328. Where any matters or things proposed to be done by any local authority, and not being within the prohibition aforesaid (a), interfere with the improvement of any river canal dock harbour lock reservoir basin or towing-path which any body of persons or person are or is entitled by virtue of any Act of Parliament to navigate on or use, or in respect of the navigation whereon or use whereof to demand any tolls or dues, or interfere with any works belonging to such river canal dock harbour or basin, or with any land necessary for the enjoyment or improvement thereof, the local authority shall give to such body of persons or person a notice (b) specifying the particulars of the matters and things so intended to be done. If the parties on whom such notice is served do not consent to the requisitions thereof, the matter in difference shall be referred to arbitration; and the following questions shall be decided by such arbitration (c); (that is to say,)

(1) Whether the matters or things proposed to be done by the local authority will cause any injury to such river canal dock harbour basin towing-path works or land, or to the enjoyment or improvement of such river canal dock harbour or basin as aforesaid:

(2) Whether any injury that may be caused by such matters or things, or any of them, is or is not of a nature to admit of being fully compensated by money (d).

Note to Section 328.

(a) It is not easy to say what are the matters or things referred to, for the previous section appears to prohibit almost all acts without consent; but it is contemplated that there may be some acts which do not come within the prohibition, and then this section provides for dealing with them.

It will be seen that the section refers to companies or persons authorised to act by some Act of Parliament, but such Act need not be a private or local statute.

(b) See ss. 266, 267, ante, p. 593, as to authentication and service of notices.

(c) See s. 179, ante, p. 425.

(d) Note the object of this inquiry, namely full compensation. That may be obtained by a money payment, or it may be that such payment will not be adequate; it may be necessary that some work should be executed, and the arbitrator is to determine this question.

This section does not contemplate that the arbitrator shall ascertain the amount of compensation for the injury, if any be experienced, but the next section does.

Effect of arbitration.

329. The result of any such arbitration shall be final, and the local authority shall do as follows (a); (that is to say,)

(1) If the arbitrators (b) are of opinion that no injury will be caused, the local authority may forthwith proceed to do the proposed matters and things:

(2) If the arbitrators are of opinion that injury will be caused, but that such injury is of a nature to admit of being fully compensated by money, they shall proceed to assess such compensation (c); and on payment of the amount so assessed, but not before, the local authority may proceed to do the proposed matters and things:

(3) If the arbitrators are of opinion that injury will be caused, and that it is not of a nature to admit of being fully compensated by money, the local authority shall not proceed to do any matter or thing in respect of which such opinion may be given (d).

(a) This section and the preceding section are expressed with some little inaccuracy. First, it is stated in s. 328 that two questions are to be submitted to the arbitrators, and then in this section it is shown that another question may be submitted to and decided by them. Again, this section states that the authority shall do as follows, and having required the arbitrators in a certain event to do a particular act, it empowers the authority to proceed; then afterwards, upon a decision of the arbitrators to a certain effect, it prohibits the authority from acting.

(b) It is presumed that the word arbitrators includes umpires. See s. 180 (7) ante, p. 426.

(c) It would have been better to provide for compensation after the works have been completed and the amount of the damage actually ascertained, inasmuch as the estimate of the arbitrators may prove too high or too low; it is clear, however, that the payment is here made a condition precedent to the execution of the works.

(d) This will not prevent the local authority from negotiating with the party referred to for the execution of such works as will remove the objection which cannot be fully compensated with money.

Provision as to transfer of powers, etc.

330. No transfer of powers and privileges under this Act (a) shall deprive any body of persons or person authorised by virtue of any Act of Parliament to navigate on any river or canal, or to demand for their or his own benefit in respect of such navigation any tolls or dues, of such powers and privileges as are vested in them by any Act of Parliament in relation to such river or canal.

(a) See ss. 10, 270, 275, and 310, ante.

Section 331.
Provision as to alteration of sewers.

331. Any body of persons or person authorised by virtue of any Act of Parliament to navigate on or use any river canal dock harbour or basin, or to demand any tolls or dues in respect of the navigation on such river or canal, or the use of such dock harbour or basin, may, at their own expense, and on substituting other sewers drains culverts and pipes equally effectual, and certified as such by the surveyor to the local authority (a), take up, divert, or alter the level of any sewers drains culverts or pipes constructed (b) by any local authority, and passing under or interfering with such rivers canals docks harbours or basins, or the towing-paths thereof, and may do all such things as may be necessary for carrying into effect such taking up diversion or alteration.

(a) Though the certificate of the surveyor is required, it does not appear that it will conclude the local authority if they can show that the new sewers or pipes are not equally effectual as the old ones; and s. 333, post, p. 663, accordingly provides for the reference of such question to arbitration.

According to the language of the section, no consent is required from the local authority previous to the commencement of the works. The certificate of the surveyor is to be given after the works have been done. Nevertheless, if it should appear that the parties referred to are working in such a manner as obviously to be unprotected by this Act, an injunction would probably be granted.

(b) Presumably these works of the local authority must have been executed with the consent of the parties referred to. It will be prudent, when such a consent is given, to reserve power to make alterations as above contemplated.

Saving for water rights generally.

332. Nothing in this Act shall be construed to authorise any local authority to injuriously affect (a) any reservoir canal river or stream or the feeders thereof or the supply quality or fall of water contained in any reservoir canal river stream or in the feeders thereof, in cases where any body of persons or person would, if this Act had not passed, have been entitled by law (b) to prevent or be relieved against the injuriously affecting such reservoir canal river stream feeders or such supply quality or fall of water, unless the local authority first obtain (c) the consent in writing of the body of persons or person so entitled as aforesaid.

See for the general law as to interference with water rights, the notes to ss. 17, 51, pp. 60, 119, ante; see also s. 327, ante, p. 657, and notes thereto.

(a) In the report of the Select Committee of the House of Commons on the Public Health Act (1875) Amendment Bill (1878), R. No. 134, p. xiv., it is stated that "several Provisional Orders have been obtained under the belief that the compulsorily taking of water rights by Provisional Order was legal under the meaning assigned to the word 'lands,' the word 'lands' being defined to include 'messuages, buildings, lands, easements, and hereditaments of any tenure'"; and it was thought that under the definition a local authority could purchase water rights compulsorily under s. 176 of the Act of 1875. But a committee of the House of Lords, when considering a Provisional Order for the purchase of water rights under that section by the local board of the Westhoughton district, decided that the order was ultra vires, and therefore it was not confirmed. The law officers of the Crown were then consulted, and they advised: "We are of opinion that in issuing a Provisional Order under s. 176, the Local Government Board cannot confer upon a local authority power to purchase for the purposes of the Act and otherwise than by agreement any right to abstract water from any stream." See also evidence of the Secretary of the L. G. B. (Sir S. B. Provis) before the Royal Commission on Market Rights and Tolls, vol. 2, question 50, and the admission in argument in Roberts v. Gwyrfai R. D. C., infra, and cf. O'Callaghan v. Balrothery U. D. C., [1907] 1 I. R. 494. It follows from this that no Provisional Order which proposes to take water rights otherwise than by agreement can be made under this Act. A local authority could still obtain compulsory powers by a private Bill if prepared to bear the expense. By s. 14 of the Housing, Town Planning, etc. Act, 1919, post, Vol. II., power is given to acquire water rights in connection with housing schemes.

It may be pointed out, however, that although the law is as stated above there is nothing to prevent a local authority from applying to the Ministry of Health for a Provisional Order under s. 176 for the compulsory purchase of lands with the necessary consequence that they will acquire with those lands any water rights arising thereon. These powers will sometimes be sufficient for the object in view.

By altering the flow of water in a stream, although it is not diminished but only regulated, a local authority "injuriously affects" the rights of riparian proprietors, and will be restrained from doing so, although there is no proof of sensible damage (Roberts v. Gwyrfai R. D. C., [1899] 2 Ch. 608; 64 J. P. 52).

(b) See the notes on s. 327, ante, p. 657. See also Ripon (Earl of) v. Hobart (1834), 3 L. J. Ch. 145; 3 My. & K. 169, for the principle upon which the court proceeds in interposing by injunction in cases of apprehended mischief or nuisance. For a case in which damage resulted from interference with the natural course of a stream, see Greenock Corporation v. Caledonian Rail Co., [1917] A. C. 556; 81 J. P. 269. For cases as to intercepting percolating water which otherwise would have fed streams, see notes to s. 17, p. 73, ante.

If a local authority injuriously affects the rights of any company or individual in respect of matters to which this section applies, without the requisite consent, the remedy is not by compensation, but by action for injunction or damages (R. v. Darlington L. B., ante, p. 647).

(c) Note these words and compare the language of s. 327, ante, p. 657. It is not easy to understand how any public company can properly give their consent to the authority injuring their reservoirs or streams of water. They may indeed sell the interest of the company in the same for adequate compensation, but the section appears to go further, and enables consent to be given without sale. When properly considered, however, it will be seen that it only operates to protect the local authority, and leaves the directors or managers to settle with their constituents whether they shall or shall not give their consent to the proceedings proposed.

Arbitration as to alteration of sewers injuriously affecting supply of water, etc.

333. Any difference of opinion that may arise between a local authority and any such body of persons or person as aforesaid (a), whether any sewers drains culverts or pipes substituted under the powers of this Act (b) for sewers drains culverts or pipes constructed or laid down by any local authority are equally effectual with those for which they are substituted, or whether the supply quality or fall of water in any such reservoir canal river or stream as last aforesaid is injuriously affected by the exercise of powers under this Act, may, at the option of the party complaining, be determined by arbitration in manner by this Part of this Act provided (c). The arbitrators shall decide the same questions as to the alleged injury, and the local authority shall proceed in the same way as is by this Act provided with regard to arbitrations in cases of alleged injury to rivers canals docks harbours and basins (d).

(a) Reference is here made to s. 331, ante, p. 662.

(b) This is under the powers in s. 331, ante, p. 662.

(c) See s. 328, ante, p. 660. The exact meaning of the words "at the option," etc., is not obvious, as no alternative is stated; the meaning appears to be that the complainant may sue, or if he chooses can compel a reference.

(d) See s. 329, ante, p. 661.

Saving for mines, etc.

334. Nothing in this Act shall be construed to extend to mines of different descriptions so as to interfere with or to obstruct the efficient

Section 334. working of the same ; nor to the smelting of ores and minerals, nor to the calcining puddling and rolling of iron and other metals, nor to the conversion of pig iron into wrought iron, so as to obstruct or interfere with any of such processes respectively.

In Re Dudley (Corporation of) (1881), 8 Q. B. D. 86, 96 ; 46 J. P. 340, LINDLEY, L.J., said, referring to this section : " It is put that that section authorises the uncontrolled working of mines, and no doubt the first part of the section logically goes that length, and even further, for logically it prohibits the taking of mines by purchase ; but when the second part of the section is considered, it is clear that the whole section applies to nuisances only." BRETT, L.J., took the same view.

It was held that the corresponding provisions of 18 & 19 Vict. c. 121, s. 44, prevented the application of that Act to manufacturers of the produce of ores and minerals, so that justices had no power to order the abatement of a smoke nuisance arising from a bichrome manufactory (Norris v. Barnes (1872), L. R. 7 Q. B. 537). But that Act excepted " the manufacturing of the produce of such ores and minerals," while the text does not. Further, the text excludes the operation of the Act only if its enforcement would interfere with the working of the mine. Therefore s. 91, which provides for smoke nuisances, was held to apply to the chimney of a coal mine, unless it could be shown that smoke from it could not be prevented without interfering with the efficient working of the mine (Patterson v. Chamber Colliery Co. (1892), 56 J. P. 200 ; 8 T. L. R. 278).

By an Order of the L. G. B. made under s. 303, ante, p. 637, and confirmed by Parliament, the emission of black smoke from any chimney not being the chimney of a private dwelling-house was made an offence in the borough of B. :—Held, on appeal from a conviction thereunder, that this section did not apply (Bessemer & Co., Ltd. v. Gould (1912), 76 J. P. 349 ; 107 L. T. 298).

This section does not relieve the owners of mines, etc. from liability for a public nuisance in a suit brought by the Attorney-General for its abatement, nor from their ordinary common law liability to a person whose property is affected by it (Att.-Gen. v. Logan, [1891] 2 Q. B. 100 ; 55 J. P. 615).

With reference to the right to work mines or minerals under sanitary works, see now the Public Health (Support of Sewers) Act, 1883, post, p. 717.

Saving for collegiate bodies and Government departments.

335. Any collegiate or other corporate body required or authorised by or in pursuance of any Act of Parliament to divert its sewers or drains from any river, or to construct new sewers, and any public department of the Government, shall have the like powers and be subject to the like obligations under this Act as they had or were subject to under the Sewage Utilization Act, 1867 ; and for that purpose the provisions of this Act applicable to purposes the same as or similar to those of the Sewage Utilization Act, 1865, and the Sewage Utilization Act, 1867 (a), shall apply in substitution for the last-mentioned provisions.

(a) These Acts are 28 & 29 Vict. c. 75, and 30 & 31 Vict. c. 113. See also 35 & 36 Vict. c. 79, s. 56.

Saving for Metropolitan Board of Works.

336. Nothing in or done under this Act shall affect any outfall or other works of the Metropolitan Board of Works (although beyond the metropolis), executed under the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, and the Acts amending the same, or take away, abridge, or prejudicially affect any right power authority jurisdiction or privilege of the Metropolitan Board of Works.

The Metropolitan Board of Works was by virtue of the L. G. A., 1888, s. 40 (8), superseded by the London County Council.

Section 337.

Saving for payment in certain cases to local authority.

337. Nothing in this Act shall affect the payment or recovery of any yearly sum payable at the time of the passing of this Act in pursuance of the Local Government Act, 1858, Amendment Act, 1861, to any local authority in respect of any premises without their district which have a drain communicating with a sewer within their district (a): Provided that any such sum shall cease to be payable, if and when the connexion between the drain and the sewer is discontinued, from the time of such discontinuance; but if after the discontinuance the connexion is re-established, the yearly sum shall again become payable, and so from time to time.

(a) 24 & 25 Vict. c. 61, s. 8 (repealed by s. 343, post, p. 668), was in the following terms: "Where already or hereafter any premises not being within the limits of the local board have a drain communicating, directly or indirectly, with a sewer within the district, and maintained by the local board, and any sewage flows into the sewer, there shall (except in cases where the owner is entitled to use such sewer without making any payment) be paid to the local board in respect thereof such a yearly sum as is agreed on between them and the owner of the premises, or failing agreement between them, as on the application of the local board is determined by two justices; and the yearly sum so agreed on or determined, shall be private improvement expenses, and shall be charged on the premises, and be paid and recoverable accordingly as if the premises were within the district"; then follows a proviso as in the text above. It will be remembered that ss. 22 and 28, ante, pp. 81, 91, provide for a similar payment in future.

Saving for acts of authorities under certain local Acts. [Repealed by 46 & 47 Vict. c. 39.]

338. All rates orders acts or things made assessed performed or done, before the passing of this Act, by any authority purporting to act under the powers conferred on them by a local Act with respect to any sanitary purposes shall be valid, notwithstanding the passing of the Public Health Act, 1872, or of this Act.

This section was repealed by the S. L. R. A., 1883.

Saving for certain local boards.

339. Nothing in this Act shall affect the composition of any local board constituted by any Order in Council or any Provisional Order made under the Public Health Act, 1848 (a), and confirmed by Parliament, or the qualification or number of members of any such board; but any such Order in Council, or Order so confirmed, or the Act confirming any such last-mentioned Order, may be repealed altered or amended in manner provided by this Act (b).

(a) That is, 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63. A similar restriction as to qualification was contained in s. 312, ante, p. 652, in reference to boards under local Acts.

(b) See s. 297 (5), ante, p. 630.

Saving for proceedings under local Acts.

340. Where within the district of a local authority any local Act is in force, providing for purposes the same as or similar to the purposes of this Act, proceedings may be instituted (a) at the discretion of the authority or person instituting the same, either under the local Act or this Act, or under both, subject to these qualifications:

(1) That no person shall be punished for the same offence both under a local Act and this Act; and

(2) That the local authority shall not, by reason of any local Act in force within their district, be exempted from the performance of any duty or obligation to which they may be subject under this Act (b).

Section 340.

(a) That is, actions may be brought or informations laid under either Act, or under both. This section meets the decision in the case of Parry v. Croydon Commercial Gas and Coke Co. (1862), 11 C. B. (N.S.) 579; 15 C. B. (N.S.) 568.

It is sometimes of considerable importance to determine whether a local authority are acting under this Act, or under a local Act: see Burton v. Salford (Corporation of), ante, p. 266. This section shows that the Act was not intended to repeal previous local Acts (Monmouth (Mayor of) v. Monmouth (Overseers, etc. of) (1878), 38 L. T 612, 617).

Whether this clause provides for any proceedings other than actions or informations is doubtful. If the local Act is superseded by the transference of its powers to the urban authority, it is difficult to see how any such proceedings under the local Act can take place, except, indeed, where actions for penalties are open to common informers. In such cases it is to be remarked that whereas under this Act the consent of the Attorney-General may be necessary, this preliminary will probably not be required by the local Act.

(b) The effect of this second qualification was considered in Ashton-under-Lyne (Mayor, etc. of) v. Pugh, [1898] 1 Q. B. 45; 61 J. P. 788. It only means that the existence of the special provisions of the local Act is not to afford an excuse to the authority for neglecting any duty imposed upon them by this Act. Thus, where a local Act of 1849 gave power to a municipal corporation to order that any street, whether a public highway or not, should be sufficiently sewered, levelled, paved, and otherwise completed by the frontagers, and provided that if they made default, the corporation might cause the work to be executed, and recover the expenses from them, it was held that s. 149, ante, had not the effect of repealing the provisions of the local Act as regards streets which were highways repairable by the inhabitants at large. This case was followed in Lodge v. Mayor, etc. of Huddersfield, [1898] 1 Q. B. 847; 62 J. P. 387 (affirmed on the facts, [1898] 1 Q. B. 859; 62 J. P. 515), where, with regard to similar provisions in a local Act, it was held that although the borough had become a county borough, the L. G. A., 1888, s. 11, had not the effect of repealing the provisions of the local Act as regards streets which were main roads.

Powers of Act to be cumulative.

341. All powers given by this Act shall be deemed to be in addition to and not in derogation of any other powers conferred by Act of Parliament law or custom, and such other powers may be exercised in the same manner as if this Act had not passed; and nothing in this Act shall exempt any person from any penalty to which he would have been subject if this Act had not passed.

Provided that no person who has been adjudged to pay any penalty in pursuance of this Act shall for the same offence be liable to a penalty under any other Act.

But if proceedings can be taken under both, how is the proviso to be met? One Act may impose a penalty for a nuisance; the other may impose a penalty and provide for abatement, or may provide for abatement only. If proceedings be instituted under both, one penalty only is to be recovered, but the penalty may be recovered under one, and abatement enforced under the other.

It will be seen that penalties are imposed by the Gasworks Clauses Act, 1847, in App. I., post, Vol. II., for offences committed under that Act identical with those committed under this Act.

In Blake v. Mayor, etc. of Croydon (1886), 2 T. L. R. 336, the court held that by virtue of this section the power given to the clerk of the peace to tax bills under s. 249, ante, p. 549, did not prevent an order to tax by a Master of the High Court.

The effect of this Act, in making improvement commissioners under local Acts urban sanitary authorities, was to reconstitute them as new bodies under the Act, vesting in them as such new bodies the powers given by the local Acts as well as those given by this Act. "The newly created body is to exercise not only the functions that were exercised by that body before, in the same way as before, but also it is to exercise all the powers given by this Act besides": per WILLS, J., in Lea v. Facey (1886), 17 Q. B. D. 139; 50 J. P. 295. See also Douglass v. Rhyl U. D. C., [1913] 2 Ch. 407; 77 J. P. 373. Note to Section 341.

Upon the corresponding section (s. 138) of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, it was held that with that section in the Act, no other part of the Act could oust the jurisdiction of the High Court to grant an injunction at the suit of the Attorney-General to enforce the performance by an owner of land of his common law duty to prevent it from being so used as to be a public nuisance (Att.-Gen. v. Tod Heatley, [1897] 1 Ch. 560).

Oxford (a).

Constitution of local board of the Oxford district.

342. The local government district of Oxford shall be subject to the jurisdiction of a local board consisting of the vice-chancellor of the university of Oxford and the mayor of Oxford for the time being, of forty-five other members, fifteen to be elected by the university of Oxford, sixteen by the town council of Oxford, and fourteen by the ratepayers of the parishes situated within the area formerly within the jurisdiction of the commissioners for amending certain mile-ways leading to Oxford, and making improvements in the university and city of Oxford, the suburbs thereof and the adjoining parish of St. Clement, and of the members for any parishes or parts of parishes which may have been or may hereafter be added to the Oxford district.

After the passing of this Act (b), a district formed out of the rural sanitary districts of the city of Oxford, and the Abingdon union, to be termed the "Grandpont district," shall be defined by an Order of the Local Government Board, and on a day to be mentioned in such Order, the said district shall form part of the said local government district of Oxford. The election of members of the said local board by the town council and by the ratepayers of the parishes and parts of parishes respectively shall be conducted at the same time, in the same way, and subject to the same regulations in and subject to which such election is conducted at the time of the passing of this Act.

As regards the district of Cowley now comprised in the said local government district of Oxford, and the district of Grandpont when added to the same district, the chairman of the said local board or, in his absence, the clerk to the local board, shall summon a meeting of the several persons rated to the relief of the poor in respect of hereditaments situated in the said Cowley and Grandpont districts respectively, by public notices under his hand, to be affixed three clear days previously to the principal doors of every church and chapel in the districts, such meeting to be held on the day when the members for the parishes are elected, and at a place in each such district to be fixed by the chairman or clerk; and the appointment of a chairman and all other the business of such meetings shall be conducted as if the meetings respectively were the meetings of a vestry in a parish.

An election of the member for the Grandpont district shall take place as soon as convenient after that district has been added to the Oxford local government district as aforesaid, and he shall continue in office until the next annual election of the said local board.

Section 342.

The fifteen members to be elected by the university shall be elected as follows: namely, four members shall be elected by the university in convocation, and eleven members shall be elected by the heads and senior resident bursars of the several colleges entitled by any statute of the university or otherwise to matriculate students, and by the heads of the several halls; any member of the university, being of the degree of Master of Arts, Bachelor of Civil Law, or Bachelor in Medicine, or any superior degree of the university, shall be qualified to be elected; and the elections shall be conducted by the said university, and by the colleges and halls respectively, at the same time, and in the same way, and subject to the same regulations, in and subject to which guardians of the poor for the university and for the colleges and halls are now or may hereafter be chosen by them respectively, save that in the election of members the heads and bursars of all the colleges and the heads of all the halls shall be summoned by the vice-chancellor for that purpose, and shall be entitled to vote.

Except as above provided, nothing in this Act shall affect the provisions of any Order confirmed by Parliament relating to the local government district of Oxford, and in force at the time of the passing of this Act.

(a) By a Provisional Order made under the Local Government Act, 1888, and confirmed by 52 & 53 Vict. c. xv., the city of Oxford was extended and made a county borough, and all powers, duties, etc. of the local board were transferred to the corporation as urban sanitary authority, the local board being abolished.

See also the further Acts 53 & 54 Vict. c. ccxxiii., and 59 & 60 Vict. c. cv., confirming subsequent Provisional Orders relating to Oxford.

And see the special provisions as to Oxford contained in ss. 6, 67, and 228, ante.

(b) These words were repealed by the S. L. R. A. (No. 2), 1893.

Repeal of Acts.

Repeal of Acts in Schedule V.

343. The Acts specified in the first and second parts of Schedule V. to this Act are hereby repealed to the extent in the third column in the said parts of that schedule mentioned, with the following qualification; (that is to say,)

That so much of the said Acts as is set forth in the third part of that schedule shall be re-enacted in manner therein appearing, and shall be in force as if enacted in the body of this Act.

Provided also, that this repeal shall not affect (a)—

(a) Anything duly done or suffered under any enactment hereby repealed (b); or

(b) Any right or liability (c) acquired accrued or incurred under any enactment hereby repealed; or

(c) Any security given under any enactment hereby repealed; or

(d) Any penalty forfeiture or punishment incurred in respect of any offence committed against any enactment hereby repealed; or

(e) Any investigation legal proceeding or remedy in respect of any such right liability security penalty forfeiture or punishment as aforesaid; and any such investigation legal proceeding and remedy may be carried on as if this Act had not been passed.

The italicised words were repealed by the S. L. R. A. (No. 2), 1893. Note to Section 343.

(a) See s. 326, ante, p. 656. And see the similar provision in the Interpretation Act, 1889.

(b) The P. H. A., 1848, s. 72, required certain notices to be given to the local board before laying out, making, or building upon any new street. This provision was repealed by 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, except (s. 9) as to "proceedings, matters, and things respectively begun or made" under any section of the former Act:—Held, that where the proper notices had been given and plans lodged, this was a matter or thing begun or made within the last-mentioned section, although little or nothing appeared to have been done towards the formation of the streets of which notice had been given (Felken v. Berridge (1863), 15 C. B. (N.S.) 257; 27 J. P. 776). The same view was taken in regard to similar clauses in byelaws in Withington U. D. C. v. Moore (1896), 60 J. P. 408, by HALL, V.-C., in the Lancaster Palatine Court. See, however, White v. Sunderland Corporation and Harrogate Corporation v. Dickinson, cited at p. 351, ante.

A notice was given by a local board of intention to make a rate under the sanitary Acts, and the estimate was deposited, but before the notice expired this Act was passed. The local board, not being aware of the repeal, made a rate purporting to be made under the repealed Act. It was held that the notice was a thing done within this proviso, and that the reference to the repealed Act was immaterial (R. v. West Riding JJ. (1876), 1 Q. B. D. 220; 40 J. P. 820).

(c) Where justices had made an order to abate a smoke nuisance, and prohibited its continuance under 18 & 19 Vict. c. 121, before the passing of this Act, it was held that the defendant thereby incurred a liability which was continued by this section, so as to be subject to a penalty for allowing the smoke to continue after the passing of this Act (Barnes v. Eddleston (1876), 1 Ex. D. 102; 40 J. P. 663).

But where under the repealed enactment a liability has been incurred for penalties, proceedings to recover such penalties cannot be brought after the time limited by the S. J. A., 1848, s. 11, in cases to which that enactment applies (R. v. Cluer (1897), 67 L. J. Q. B. 36; 77 L. T. 439).

SCHEDULES.

SCHEDULE I.

RULES AS TO MEETINGS AND PROCEEDINGS.

(1) Rules applicable to Local Boards (a).

1. Every local board shall from time to time make regulations (b) with respect to the summoning notice (c) place (d) management and adjournment (e) of their meetings (e), and generally with respect to the transaction and management of their business under this Act.

(a) By the L. G. A., 1894, s. 59, post, this schedule, so far as it is unrepealed, shall apply in the case of every urban district council other than a borough council, and every rural district council, as if such district council were a local board, except that the chairman of the council may be elected from outside the councillors. The schedule does not apply to municipal corporations, the meetings and proceedings of which are regulated by s. 198, ante, p. 464. Application of Schedule.

All correspondence between local authorities and the Central Authority (now the Ministry of Health) should be conducted in accordance with the following directions: 1. All correspondence should be conducted by the clerk, and no document, except returns, should be transmitted to the office, without a covering letter. 2. Every distinct subject should be dealt with in a separate letter. 3. Foolscap paper should be preferably used. 4. When previous correspondence has taken place on the subject, the official number and date of the last communication should be quoted. Correspondence with M. of H.

Schedule 1. 5. The name of the authority, and the address of the clerk should be placed at the head of all communications.

Part 1.

Use of Welsh language.

The L. G. B. once expressed the opinion, in reply to a Welsh district council, that the proceedings might be carried on either in English or Welsh, and that the minutes should follow the language used, but that any minutes relating to receipts or expenditure of money should be entered also in English, if Welsh is used: cf. M'Bride v. M'Govern, [1906] 2 I. R. 181.

Regulations.

(b) The P. H. A., 1848, s. 34, required every local board to make byelaws for these subjects, to be published and confirmed in the manner therein provided. Under this Act the district council are to make regulations, but such regulations are not byelaws, nor to be treated as such. The council may cause them to be published as they think fit. See s. 188, ante, p. 446.

Rescinding resolutions.

In Mayer v. Burslem L. B. (1875), 39 J. P. 437, a local board had made the following byelaw: "That no resolution of the local board be altered or rescinded unless one month's notice be given by the clerk to each member of the board, setting forth the proposed alteration, nor unless there be at least as many members of the board present at the meeting as were present at the meeting when such resolution was adopted." BLACKBURN, J., said that the last part of this byelaw might be invalid (see now rr. 2, 7, post, pp. 672, 673), but that the first part was valid, and was a very salutary and competent byelaw. Where a resolution is rescinded and later the rescinding resolution is itself rescinded, semble, the original resolution is as a general rule revived (Weir v. Fermanagh C. C., [1913] 2 I. R. 63, 193); and see also as to rescission, R. v. Tralee U. D. C., [1913] 2 I. R. 59. As to whether a resolution dismissing an officer is a resolution rescinding the resolution by which he was appointed, see Ex parte Richards (1878), 3 Q. B. D. 368; 42 J. P. 614.

It is doubtful whether a departure from any standing orders or regulations can be restrained except by means of an action brought in the name of the Attorney-General (Watson v. Hythe Borough Council (1906), 70 J. P. 153; 22 T. L. R. 245; Weir v. Fermanagh C. C., supra.

Notice of meeting.

(c) When a meeting is required to be summoned by notice care must be taken to serve the notice on every member, as a default in this respect may render the meeting invalid. See Dobson v. Fussey (1831), 7 Bing. 305. The general rule as to the adjournment of meetings is that notice of such adjournment is not requisite (Kerr v. Wilkie (1860), 24 J. P. 211; 1 L. T. 501; Wills v. Murray (1850), 4 Ex. 843; 19 L. J. Ex. 209). But a previous byelaw or a future regulation may make a difference in this respect, and must, therefore, be looked to. For a case where an appointment of a local pension committee failed because such appointment was not on the agenda paper, see R. v. McDonald, [1913] 2 I. R. 55.

Invalid adjournment.

Where a chairman illegally declared a meeting to be adjourned and left, and the other members elected a chairman and transacted business, their acts were upheld as valid (R. v. Doris (1908), 45 Ir. L. T. 267).

Place of meeting.

(d) By the L. G. A., 1894, s. 61, a meeting of a district council shall not be held in premises licensed for the sale of intoxicating liquor, except in cases where no other suitable room is available for such meeting either free of charge or at a reasonable cost. By ibid. s. 59 (3) any rural district council shall be entitled to use for the purpose of their meetings and proceedings the board room and offices of any board of guardians for the union comprising their district at all reasonable hours, and if any question arises as to what hours are reasonable it may be determined by the Local Government Board. See also s. 197 and notes thereto.

Admission of public.

(e) It was recognised as clear in Purcell v. Lowler (1877), 2 C. P. D. 215; 41 J. P. 789, that meetings of boards of guardians might be held in private; and COCKBURN, C.J., intimated that this was the proper course to take when matters affecting the conduct of a particular person were being discussed. It was held, too, in Tenby Corporation v. Mason, [1908] 1 Ch. 457; 72 J. P. 89, that neither burgesses nor reporters could claim to be present at meetings of a borough council. In consequence of this decision, however, the law was altered; and, subject to a proviso for excluding them temporarily, representatives of the press must be admitted to all meetings of a "local authority." They may also be admitted to meetings of committees; and, of course, the public may (as formerly) be admitted to meetings, if the authority see fit. See the Local Authorities (Admission of the Press to Meetings) Act, 1908, post.

In Purcell v. Lowler, supra, at a meeting of a board of guardians, the conduct of the medical officer, P., was discussed, several accusations of neglect of duty being made against him during the discussion. S., the proprietor of a newspaper, published a fair report of the proceedings, whereupon P. sued S. for libel. It was held that though the subject-matter was of public interest, yet as the accusations were made ex parte, there was no privilege to protect S., and he was liable. This decision, however, was discussed and explained in Pittard v. Oliver, [1891] 1 Q. B. 474; 54 J. P. 100. In that case, at a meeting of a board of guardians, of which the plaintiff had been the clerk, the defendant, a member of the board, in the course of a discussion concerning the plaintiff's accounts, made certain defamatory statements concerning the plaintiff without malice and bonâ fide, believing what he said to be true. In accordance with the regular custom of the board reporters were present at the meeting. It was held that the privilege which would have attached to the statements if made in the presence of guardians only was not taken away by the presence at the meeting of reporters or persons other than guardians. "The effect of what the court said in Purcell v. Lowler was, that though the occasion was privileged as regards the time and place at which the words were spoken, and as regards the person who spoke them, yet the matter was not one of public interest, and therefore the publication in the newspaper was not privileged. COCKBURN, C.J., seems to have suggested that it would have been better if reporters had not been present when the words were spoken; but he did not suggest that it was illegal for them to be there or that their presence took away the privilege." In Mapey v. Baker (1909), 73 J. P. 289; 53 Sol. J. 429, at a meeting of a board of guardians the chairman (the defendant) uttered certain defamatory statements concerning the method in which the rates were collected by the plaintiff as assistant overseer of a parish in the union. It was held that the board had an interest in the proper collection of rates within their union, that the occasion was therefore privileged, and that in the absence of malice the plaintiff could not succeed. On the same subject reference may be made to Royal Aquarium Summer and Winter Garden Society, Limited v. Parkinson, [1892] 1 Q. B. 431; 56 J. P. 404, where it was held that a county councillor making defamatory remarks at a meeting of the council is not entitled to absolute immunity in respect of such statement; but is entitled only to the ordinary privilege which applies to a communication made without express malice on a privileged occasion. See also Botterill v. Halse (1895), Times, June 25th, and 73 J. P. N. 13, 49; Attwood v. Chapman, [1914] 3 K. B. 275; Smith v. Wall, 79 J. P. N. 195; Siddall v. Wallasey Corporation, 79 J. P. N. 196; Slack v. Barr (1918), 82 J. P. 91.

A motion for an interlocutory injunction to restrain a local authority from publishing what was alleged to be a libellous report of a special committee was, on the facts, refused by JOYCE, J. The publication proposed was the inclusion of a copy of the report as part of the proceedings of the authority at the last meeting, a print of which was sent out to members (and to any ratepayers who applied for it) with the agenda paper for the next meeting (Plant v. East Ham Corporation (1906), Times, May 19th).

See as to the protection given by the Law of Libel Amendment Act, 1888, to the publication of the reports of meetings, Sharman v. Merritt (1916), 32 T. L. R. 360.

Disorder at meetings.

As to the removal of a disorderly member or stranger, reference may be made to Doyle v. Falconer (1866), L. R. 1 P. C. 328; Dobson v. Fussey (1831), 7 Bing. 305; Barton v. Taylor (1886), 11 App. Cas. 197. Generally speaking, the expulsion of a member, except for disorderly conduct of a serious character, is illegal, unless it be done under a byelaw or standing order (Vaughan v. Hampson (1875), 33 L. T. 15), and such byelaw or standing order must not only have the necessary sanctions, but also be within the powers of the statute.

With reference to disorderly conduct at a meeting of a district council, the L. G. B. stated that they had no authority in the matter, but that as regards the rule of law applicable to cases where the transaction of business by a local authority is materially interfered with, they considered that every deliberative body was empowered to protect itself in its deliberations. If these deliberations are materially obstructed by the disorderly conduct of any person present thereat, whether a stranger or a member, the general body are justified in removing that obstruction by requiring such person to leave the meeting, and if such requisition be not obeyed, by using such an amount of force as may be requisite to compel his retirement. The Board thought that this view applied in the case of a district council. They, however, pointed out that it is, of course, desirable that any force which it may be necessary to use should be applied by an officer or servant of the council, or, where the opportunity offers, by a peace officer. They added that this is the general power, but how far in any particular case there may or may not be such conduct as materially obstructs or impedes the deliberations of the body is a question which that body must determine for itself. See a police-court case, 31 M. C. C. 364. See also the Public Meeting Act, 1908, in App. I., Vol. II.

As to the power of amotion incident to every corporation as such, see Booth v. Arnold, [1895] 1 Q. B. 571; 59 J. P. 215.

Quorum.

2. No business shall be transacted at any such meeting unless at least one-third of the full number of members be present thereat, subject to this qualification, that in no case shall a larger quorum than seven members be required.

The regulations generally provide for the action of the clerk in case a quorum do not attend. They usually require him to enter due notice of any failure of the meeting in the minutes.

Seven members of a local board consisting of nine members, resigned, so that the quorum required by this rule was not left. The two remaining members proceeded to fill up the vacancies. The board, as thus constituted, prescribed a building line under s. 155. It was held by the Court of Appeal that the filling up of the vacancies was "business" within the meaning of this rule, that the two members were not competent to transact it, and that the new members, therefore, were not duly elected, but that by r. 9, post, the objection to the building line, founded on the fact that some of the members of the board were not duly elected, was removed (Newhaven L. B. v. Newhaven School Board (1885), 30 Ch. D. 350).

Chairman.

3. Every local board shall from time to time at their annual meeting (a) appoint one of their number (b) to be chairman for one year at all meetings at which he is present.

(a) The annual meeting is held as soon as convenient after April 15th in each year. See r. 11, post, p. 675.

In R. v. Rowlands, [1910] 2 K. B. 930; 74 J. P. 453, it was held that when a district council meets for the first time after its election (the members of the preceding council having all gone out of office together) the former chairman, though re-elected as a councillor, has no right as such to take the chair and preside at the election of a chairman. This is so though less than a calendar year has elapsed since his own appointment as chairman. The proper course is to elect a temporary chairman to preside at the election; cf. also as to a parish council, R. v. Jackson (1913), 77 J. P. 443.

Before the decision in R. v. Rowlands, supra, the L. G. B. had advised, in reply to an inquiry, that if a chairman is elected from outside the council, he remains in office until the appointment of his successor at the annual meeting, although the annual meeting may not be held until after April 15th.

At an annual meeting of a rural district council at which the chairman and vice-chairman were absent, one of the councillors was elected chairman of the meeting. The retiring chairman was re-elected, and in his absence it was contended that the newly-elected vice-chairman should immediately on election take the chair. The L. G. B. stated that they had no authority to determine the question, but that as the temporary chairman was expressly appointed to act for the meeting, it did not appear to them that there was any legal objection to his presiding at the meeting, notwithstanding that a vice-chairman had been appointed at and was present at the meeting.

A chairman cannot be elected by ballot. There is no provision for electing one by lot in case of an equality of votes as there is in Ireland (see R. v. McCarthy, [1912] 2 I. R. 440). Quo warranto will lie to remove a person who has been elected chairman if it appears that he was disqualified or improperly elected (R. v. Moriarty, [1915] 2 I. R. 375).

(b) The chairman of a district council other than a borough council can now be elected from outside the councillors. See L. G. A., 1894, s. 59, post, p. 974.

As to the power to elect a vice-chairman, see the same section.

Vice-chairman.

4. If the chairman so appointed dies resigns or becomes incapable of acting, another member shall be appointed to be chairman for the period during which the person so dying resigning or becoming incapable would have been entitled to continue in office, and no longer.

Vacancy in office of chairman.

If the chairman becomes disqualified to act as a member, he will become incapable of acting within these words. Sickness may also produce incapacity. It should, however, be observed that in the case of an urban district council no qualification appears to be necessary for an "outside" chairman.

Absence of chairman.

5. If the chairman is absent from any meeting at the time appointed for holding the same, the members present shall appoint one of their number to act as chairman thereat.

This rule will apply only in the absence from a meeting of both chairman and vice-chairman, when the latter is appointed.

If the chairman arrive after the commencement of business, it is the usual course to allow him to take the chair.

Names of members present and votes to be recorded.

6. The names of the members present, as well as of those voting on each question, shall be recorded, so as to show whether each vote given was for or against the question.

The concluding words of this rule prevent the votes from being given by ballot. The provision as to the recording of the names appears to be directory. In a case, however, where the sanction of the L. G. B. was sought by a rural district council to the appointment of an inspector of nuisances, the Board observed that the names of the councillors who voted for and against the appointment were not recorded on the minutes, and pointed out that under the circumstances the appointment was invalid and of no effect.

Decisions of questions.

7. Every question at a meeting shall be decided by a majority of votes of the members present, and voting on that question.

The words "voting on that question" removed the difficulty which had been found in cases when some of the members present did not vote on the question, but did not leave the room. As to what amounts to voting on the question, see Ex parte Orde (1871), L. R. 6 Ch. 881.

See also Mayer v. Burslem L. B., ante, p. 670, as to the number of members who must vote in order to rescind a resolution.

No action lies against the chairman for ruling a motion out of order, unless he do so maliciously (Breay v. Browne (1896), 41 Sol J. 159). If a chairman refuses to put a resolution to the meeting, the proper remedy is to bring an action for an injunction to restrain him from refusing to put it and for a mandamus to hold a fresh meeting for the purpose (Pender v. Lushington (1877), Ch. D. 70). See also R. v. Doris, p. 670, ante.

Chairman's casting vote.

8. In case of an equal division of votes the chairman shall have a second or casting vote.

The opinion of the L. G. B. was once asked as to the power of the chairman of an urban district council to give a casting vote. The Board stated that it would seem from the observations of the judges in the case of In re Louth Municipal Election, Nell v. Longbottom, [1894] 1 Q. B. 767, that if before the chairman of the council votes it is found that the votes for and the votes against a question are equal, the vote which he is then entitled to give would be in the exercise of his right to vote as a duly qualified member of the council, and his right to give a second or casting vote would not in that case arise. If the chairman has voted as a member, and there is an equal division of votes, he would then, in pursuance of rule 8 of the First Schedule to the P. H. A., 1875, as applied to the meetings and proceedings of urban district councils by section 59 (1) of the L. G. A., 1894, be entitled to give, as chairman, a second or casting vote.

Schedule 1. Part 1.

Validity of proceedings.

9. The proceedings of a local board shall not be invalidated by any vacancy or vacancies among their members, or by any defect in the election of such board, or in the election, or selection, or qualification of any members thereof.

This is similar to the provision in 5 & 6 Vict. c. 57, s. 12, in regard to boards of guardians, which was merely declaratory of a decision of the Exchequer Chamber in R. v. Todmorden and Warden (Overseers of) (1841), 1 Q. B. 185; and see Newhaven L. B. v. Newhaven School Board, cited in the notes to r. 2, ante, p. 672, and see also Harries v. Crawford (1919), 83 J. P. 197.

The acts of the council are not invalidated by reason of one of the members present having a personal interest in the subject-matter under discussion, and being allowed to speak and use his influence, and succeeding in inducing the council to take his view (Murray v. Epsom L. B., [1897] 1 Ch. 35; 61 J. P. 71).

Cf. Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, ss. 42 (now, in part, repealed by 7 & 8 Geo. 5, c. 64), 102; and see In re Louth Municipal Election, Nell v. Longbottom, ante p. 674; Bland v. Buchanan, [1901] 2 K. B. 75; 65 J. P. 404.

Minutes to be kept and to be evidence.

10. Any minute made of proceedings at a meeting, and copies of any orders made or resolutions passed at a meeting, if purporting to be signed by the chairman of the meeting at which such proceedings took place or such orders were made or resolutions passed, or by the chairman of the next ensuing meeting, shall be received as evidence in all legal proceedings (a); and, until the contrary is proved (b), every meeting where minutes of the proceedings have been so made shall be deemed to have been duly convened and held, and all the proceedings thereat to have been duly had.

(a) In a case to which a local board were parties, the Court of Chancery ordered the minute book of the board to be sent up to London for inspection by the other side (Att.-Gen. v. Whitwood L. B. (1871), 40 L. J. Ch. 592; 19 W. R. 1107).

It is common in bye-laws and regulations to provide that the minutes of a meeting shall be read and confirmed at the ensuing meeting. Lord CAMPBELL, C.J., in R. v. York (Mayor of) (1853), 1 El. & Bl., at p. 594, says that "public bodies confirm the minutes of their last meetings, not meaning thereby that they give them force, but merely that they declare them accurate." See also In re Lands Allotment Co., [1894] 1 Ch. 616.

See, as to the evidence of minutes, Inglis v. G. N. Rail. Co. (1852), 16 Jur. 895; Miles v. Bough (1842), 3 Q. B. 845; 12 L. J. Q. B. 74; Sheffield, etc. Rail. Co. v. Woodcock (1841), 7 M. & W. 574. Notwithstanding the provisions in the text as to the signing at the meeting, or at the next ensuing meeting, it seems that it is not a condition precedent to the admissibility of the minute, provided it has been signed at a subsequent time by the person who actually presided as chairman at either meeting (see Southampton Dock Co. v. Richards (1840), 1 M. & G. 448); and it would also seem that it is sufficient if the minutes of the adjourned meetings are signed (Inglis v. G. N. Rail. Co. (1852), 1 Macq. H. L. Cas. 112).

Inquiry was made of the L. G. B. as to whether the minutes of proceedings at the meetings of an urban district council and their committee might be printed and duly signed, instead of being written, and the Board stated that the matter would seem to be one as to which the council might make regulations under r. 1, ante, p. 669 (as rendered applicable to proceedings of urban district councils by the L. G. A., 1894, s. 59 (1)), and under Schedule I., Part IV., r. 1, to the Act of 1894. The Board added that no approval on their part was requisite, provided a record of the financial transactions of the council was duly entered in the minute book, as directed by Art. 3 of the Board's General Order for Accounts of March 22nd, 1880.

When, in proceedings before justices, proof of the minute authorising the proceeding was omitted to be given, but objection to the absence of the evidence was not then taken, but was sought to be taken on a case stated, the Divisional Court would not entertain the objection (Kates v. Jeffery, [1914] 3 K. B. 160).

(b) Note that the minutes are only to be primâ facie evidence of regularity; but as this force is given to them, great care is required in keeping them.

Annual meeting.

11. The annual meeting of a local board shall be held as soon as may be convenient after the fifteenth of April in each year.

By the P. H. A., 1848, s. 34, an annual meeting was required, but it was left to the local board to fix the time. 37 & 38 Vict. c. 89, s. 27, required it to be as soon as convenient after the annual election.

The L. G. B. once stated that it appeared to them that at any meeting held on April 15th the newly-elected members would be entitled to attend, and the retiring members would not. The newly-elected members come into office and the outgoing members retire at the earliest moment of April 15th (L. G. A. 1894, s. 23 (6)). The Board also intimated that there is no reason why a meeting should not be held on that day; but that such meeting would not be the "annual meeting," the annual meeting being required to be held as soon as may be convenient after April 15th.

First meeting in new district.

12. The first meeting of a local board for a district constituted after the passing of this Act, shall be held at such place and on such day (not being more than ten days after the completion of the election) as the returning officer may by written notice to each member of the board appoint; and the members shall appoint one of their number to be chairman at such meeting, and shall also appoint one of their number to be chairman for one year at all meetings at which he is present.

The same person may be chairman of the meeting and for the year.

Saving for Oxford.

13. Nothing in these rules contained with respect to the appointment of chairman shall apply to the Oxford district, and in that district a chairman shall be appointed as heretofore.

This is no longer applicable. See the note to s. 342, ante, p. 668.

(2) Rules applicable to Committees of Local Authorities, other than Councils of Boroughs, and to Joint Boards.

So much of this Schedule as relates to committees is repealed by the L. G. A., 1894, s. 89, post, p. 996. See now ibid., s. 56, post, p. 970, as to committees.

Meetings.

1. A committee or joint board may meet and adjourn as it thinks proper.

See ss. 280—282, ante, pp. 617, 618, as to joint boards.

Quorum.

2. The quorum of a committee or joint board shall consist of such number of members as may be prescribed by the authority that appointed the committee or joint board, or, if no number is prescribed, of three members.

Chairman.

3. A committee or joint board may appoint a chairman of its meetings.

This chairman is intended to be appointed for the term of the board's existence, or, at least, for so long a time as he shall be qualified to act as member.

Absence of chairman.

4. If no chairman is elected, or if the chairman elected is not present at the time appointed for holding any meeting, the members present shall choose one of their number to be chairman of such meeting.

Schedule 1.

Part 1.

Decision of questions.

5. Every question at a meeting shall be determined by a majority of votes of the members present and voting on that question.

See note on Part (1), r. 7, ante, p. 673.

Chairman's casting vote.

6. In case of an equal division of votes the chairman shall have a second or casting vote.

See note on Part (1), r. 8, ante, p. 673.

Validity of proceedings.

7. The proceedings of a committee or joint board shall not be invalidated by reason of any vacancy or vacancies amongst their members, or any defect in the mode of appointment of such committee or joint board or of any member thereof.

See note on Part (1), r. 9, ante, p. 674.

Minutes to be kept and to be evidence.

8. Any minute made of proceedings at a meeting, and copies of any orders made or resolutions passed at a meeting, purporting to be signed by the chairman of the meeting at which such proceedings took place or such orders were made or resolutions passed, or by the chairman of the next ensuing meeting, shall be received as evidence in all legal proceedings; and, until the contrary is proved, every meeting where the minutes of the proceedings have been so made shall be deemed to have been duly convened and held, and all the proceedings thereat to have been duly had.

See the notes on Part (1), r. 10, ante, p. 674.

SCHEDULE II.

(I.) RULES FOR ELECTION OF LOCAL BOARDS (a).

(a) This Schedule is repealed by the L. G. A., 1894, post, but as it is incorporated to some extent by Sched. III., r. 6, post, p. 687, it is still necessary to retain the following rules:

Wards.

* * * * *

Number of votes.

8. No person entitled to vote shall give in the whole of the wards a greater number of votes than he would have been entitled to give if the district had not been divided into wards, nor in any one ward a greater number of votes than he is entitled to in respect of property in that ward.

9. Subject as aforesaid, any owner or ratepayer may, by notice in writing delivered to the clerk of the local board, or in case of the first election to the returning officer, elect in what ward or wards he will vote for the ensuing year, and determine the proportion of votes which he will give in any one or more of such wards, and if he does not give such notice he shall not be entitled to vote for any ward in which he does not reside.

Qualification of Electors, Scale of Voting, and Register of Owners.

"Owners."

10. The word "owner" when used in relation to the right of voting at any election of a local board (a), shall mean any person (b) for the time being in the actual occupation of any kind of property in the district or part of a district for which he claims to vote, rateable to the relief of the poor, and not let to him at a rack-rent (b), or any person receiving on his own account, or as mortgagee or other incumbrancer in possession, the rack-rent (b) of any such property.

(a) It will be remembered that there is another definition of owner in s. 4, ante, p. 8.

(b) The words "person" and "rack-rent" are defined in s. 4, ante, pp. 6, 15. See also r. 11, note (a), infra. Note that the word "owner" means, and not merely includes, the persons named. Hence, there may be persons who are owners in the ordinary sense, yet are not owners within the meaning of this definition. For example, the owner of land let at a ground-rent is not in occupation, nor does he receive the rack-rent. Again, a trustee appears to be excluded from the definition as he does not receive the rent on his own account.

"Ratepayers."

11. A person (a) shall not be deemed a ratepayer (b) or be entitled to vote as such at any such election unless he has been rated (c) to the relief of the poor in the district or part of a district for which he claims to vote for the space of one whole year immediately preceding the day of tendering his vote, and has also before that day paid (d) all rates made on him for the relief of the poor in such district or part of a district for the period of one whole year, and all rates due from him under this Act, except rates which have been made (e) or become due within the six months immediately preceding (f).

(a) According to the definition of person in s. 4, ante, p. 6, this word would include a corporation aggregate, but the general law relating to elections prevents such a corporation from voting. 30 & 31 Vict. c. 106, s. 10, provides a mode by which a corporation may vote as ratepayers through an officer nominated on their behalf, and that section may be considered as applicable to elections under this Act. It will be seen from r. 15, post, p. 679, that corporations who are owners can appoint proxies to vote for them in that capacity.

By the Interpretation Act, 1889, in all statutes the masculine gender includes the feminine; and as there was nothing at common law to prevent a woman from voting (see Olive v. Ingram (1739), 2 Stra. 1114), an unmarried woman if duly qualified might always vote. And see now the Sex Disqualification (Removal) Act, 1919, as to the removal of disqualification by sex or marriage.

Bankruptcy does not disqualify if the voter continues to be rated and has paid the rate.

The common law disqualification of persons who are aliens, infants, or lunatics, will apply to the ratepayer.

By 33 & 34 Vict. c. 23, s. 2, a person convicted of felony is disqualified from exercising any right of suffrage, unless he shall be pardoned under the Great Seal, or shall have suffered the sentence inflicted upon him. The Corrupt Practices Act, 1883, and the Municipal Elections (Corrupt Practices) Act, 1884, post, Vol. II., disqualify persons convicted of offences under those Acts for periods depending upon the offence of which the voter has been convicted. See also the Public Bodies Corrupt Practices Act, 1889, post.

(b) Where the owner was rated in the place of the occupier under 13 & 14 Vict. c 99, the occupier was held not to be a ratepayer competent to vote (Richardson v. Gladwin (1858), 27 L. J. M. C. 192; 26J. P. 688). But by 32 & 33 Vict. c. 41, s. 19, the name of every occupier is to be entered in the rate book, whether the rate is collected from the owner or occupier, or the owner is liable to the payment of the rate instead of the occupier, and by the same section it was provided that the occupier should be deemed to be truly rated for any qualification or franchise depending upon rating, and the occupier whose name should have been omitted should, notwithstanding such omission, and though no claim should be made, be entitled to such qualification and franchise. Now, however, s. 19 of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 41, has been repealed by the Representation of the People Act, 1918, so far as it relates to franchise and any disqualification which depends on franchise. The Court of

Schedule 2. Part 1.

Common Pleas decided that s. 19 did not operate universally, but only in the cases provided for by ss. 3 and 4 of the Act (Cross v. Alsop (1870), L. R. 6 C. P. 315; 35 J. P. 153). But the Court of Queen's Bench differed from this view, and held that the section was of general application (Smith v. Seghill (Overseers of) (1875), L. R. 10 Q. B. 422; 40 J. P. 228; Barton v. Birmingham (Town Clerk of) (1878), 48 L. J. C. P. 87; 39 L. T. 352), and this view was confirmed by 41 & 42 Vict. c. 26, s. 14. See also St. Peter's Cornhill, Re (1886), 2 T. L. R. 870; Palmer v. Wade, [1894] 1 Q. B. 268; 58 J. P. 511. Reference has already been made (ante, p. 161) to the distinction between lodgers and occupiers.

An owner who is rated and pays the poor rates under the Act just referred to is entitled to vote as a ratepayer under this Act (R. v. Hampton (1865), 6 B. & S. 923; 30 J. P. 246). And see also Richardson v. Gladwin, ante, p. 677; R. v. Kirby (1861), 31 L. J. Q. B. 3; 29 J. P. 196; Lambe v. Grieves (1862), 8 Jur. (N.S.) 288; Powell v. Jones (1865), 18 C. B. (N.S.) 83; 29 J. P. 583. But this apparently applies only to an owner who is rated under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 41, s. 4, not when the owner agrees to pay the rates under s. 3. See Mogg v. Clark (1885), 16 Q. B. D. 79; 50 J. P. 342.

(c) The rate must have been a valid rate. It must have been duly allowed and published, and be legal in other respects. Note that the provision as to rating applies only to the poor rate, not to rates made under this Act, though these must be paid to complete the qualification.

(d) 32 & 33 Vict. c. 41, s. 15, enables a poor rate to be made payable by instalments, and makes payment of each instalment available in respect of any qualification or franchise pro tanto, while s. 7 rendered payment of the poor rate by the owner available as a payment by the occupier in full for the purpose of any qualification or franchise, which, as regarded rating, depended upon the payment of the poor rate notwithstanding any allowance or deduction made to the owner. By the Representation of the People Act, 1918, the last-mentioned section is repealed so far as it relates to franchise and any disqualification which depends on franchise.

(e) A poor rate is now to be deemed to be made on the day when it is allowed by the justices (32 & 33 Vict. c. 41, s. 17).

(f) It is presumed that if the rate has been made payable by instalments, payment of such instalments, as they become due, will satisfy this enactment.

Where the occupiers of small properties are not rated to the district rate, the provisions contained in 32 & 33 Vict. c. 41, which relate to the poor rate, will not apply, but as they are not rated, it is submitted that they cannot be in default, and that, therefore, they are entitled to vote.

Scale of votes.

12. Owners of and ratepayers in respect of property situated within the district for which the election is held shall be entitled to vote according to the scale following; (that is to say,)

If the property in respect of which the person (a) is entitled to vote is rated to the poor rate on a rateable value (b) of less than fifty pounds, he shall have one vote; if such rateable value amounts to fifty pounds, and is less than one hundred pounds, he shall have two votes; if it amounts to one hundred pounds and is less than one hundred and fifty pounds, he shall have three votes; if it amounts to one hundred and fifty pounds, and is less than two hundred pounds, he shall have four votes; if it amounts to two hundred pounds and is less than two hundred and fifty pounds, he shall have five votes; and if it amounts to or exceeds two hundred and fifty pounds, he shall have six votes.

(a) As this scale applies to owners as well as to ratepayers, this word includes a corporation aggregate. See r. 11, note (a), ante, p. 677.

(b) This means net annual value as defined in s. 4, ante, p. 15.

Votes of "occupying owners."

13. Any person (a) who is owner and also bonâ fide occupier of the same property shall be entitled to vote both in respect of such ownership and of such occupation.

(a) See rr. 16 and 17, infra.

14. Owners (a) may give their votes either personally or by proxy.

(a) This word is used generally, and extends the provisions of the former Acts, in which the right of voting by proxy was given only to corporations aggregate, joint stock companies or bodies of proprietors or undertakers.

15. The instrument appointing a proxy shall be in writing under the hand of the appointor, or where the appointor is a corporation under their common seal, or where the appointor is a body of persons unincorporate under the hands of three directors or other persons having the direction or management of the undertaking or business carried on by such body of persons; and every such instrument shall be attested by a witness, and may be in the Form M. in Schedule IV. to this Act.

The Commissioners of Inland Revenue have advised that this appointment requires a 10*s.* stamp (Stamp Act, 1891, Sched. I., Proxy, Letter of Attorney (6)): see R. v. Kelk (1840), 12 A. & E. 559. An impressed stamp should be used. The penalty for making, executing, or voting, or attempting to vote under, an unstamped proxy is £50. And every vote given or tendered under an unstamped proxy is void (Stamp Act, 1891, s. 80).

The appointment of a proxy by a corporation must be under seal.

No qualification of any kind is required by a proxy, and he may be appointed by any number of owners. His appointment may be limited to the particular occasion, or it may be general, in which case it will continue until revoked, or so long as the appointing owner retains the property.

16. No member of a corporation or of any such body of persons (other than a partnership firm consisting of not more than six persons) shall be entitled to vote individually as owner in respect of property belonging to such corporation or body of persons. Votes of corporations.

It has already been pointed out that the corporation cannot vote individually as ratepayers. See the note to r. 11, ante, p. 677.

17. Partners in a firm consisting of not more than six persons may vote as owners in respect of property of the firm as if that property were equally divided among the partners. Votes of partners.

* * * * *

20. A claim (a) by an owner or proxy to be entered on the register shall state his name and address (b) within the district, and a description of the nature of the interest or estate in the property giving the qualification, and a statement of the amount of all rent service (if any) received or paid in respect thereof by him or the body of persons for whom he is proxy, and of the persons from whom or to whom the same is received or paid; and in the case of a proxy the claim shall be accompanied by the appointment of the proxy or an attested copy thereof. Claims to be registered.

(a) There is no reason for supposing that this claim requires a stamp.

(b) An address is a place to which reference may be made or a letter may be directed. It need not be a residence, or even a place of business; but note that it must be within the district.

21. A claim by an owner or proxy may be made by writing in the Form L. in Schedule IV. to this Act.

* * * * *

Election.

36. (a) The returning officer shall after the close of the revision of the register, but not less than fourteen days before the last day appointed for Returning officer's notice.

Schedule 2. Part 1.

delivery to him of nomination papers, publish a notice, signed by him, and specifying—

The number and qualification of the persons to be elected ;

The place where the nomination papers hereinafter mentioned are to be delivered or sent to him ;

The last day on which they are to be delivered or sent in ;

The mode of voting in case of a contest ;

The day or days on which the voting papers will be delivered and the day on which they will be collected ; and

The place for the examination and for the casting up of the votes ; and shall also cause copies of such notice to be affixed at the places where parochial notices are usually affixed (b).

(a) This Rule, except in so far as it is printed in italics, is incorporated by Sched. III., r. 6, post, p. 687. Having regard to that Rule, for "nomination papers" read "voting papers."

(b) The parochial notices are probably the notices of vestry, etc., which are affixed, according to 1 Vict. c. 45, on the doors of all churches and chapels within the district. The notice must be affixed to the principal door of every church or chapel, however recently built; but this applies only to churches and chapels of the Established Church, not to churches where Divine service has ceased to be celebrated, not to places other than churches or chapels in which Divine service is celebrated, nor to dissenting chapels (Ormerod v. Chadwick (1847), 16 M. & W. 367 ; 11 J. P. 138 ; Ex parte Warblington Overseers (or R. v. Deverell) (1854), 3 El. & Bl. 372 ; 23 L. J. M. C. 121 ; R. v. Whipp (1843), 4 Q. B. 141 ; 12 L. J. M. C. 64 ; Edwards v. Hatton (1866), L. R. 1 Ad. & Ec. 21 ; 30 J. P. 211). For a case in which publication on an outer gate of a churchyard was held good, see Empson v. Metropolitan Board of Works (1861), 25 J. P. 677.

List of voters.

37. The returning officer may, if he thinks fit, cause to be made an alphabetical list of the persons entitled to vote at the election.

Inspection of books, etc.

38. The clerk of the board of guardians of any union, and the overseers or other officers of every parish wholly or in part within the parts for which the election is held, and having the custody of any books or papers relating to the election of guardians of the poor, or of the poor rate books relating to any such parish, shall permit the same to be inspected and copies or extracts to be taken therefrom by the returning officer (a). Any person having the custody of any such books or papers who refuses to permit the same to be inspected, or copies or extracts to be taken therefrom, shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds (b).

(a) The clerk or overseer is not authorised to charge for the inspection, but he is not required to attend the returning officer with any document, and therefore if the latter desire such attendance he must be prepared to pay for it. Note that this Rule does not authorise the taking of the books out of the custody of the officers having the legal charge of them.

(b) See as to the recovery of this penalty s. 251, ante, p. 551.

* * * * *

Delivery of voting papers.

44. The returning officer shall, three days at least (a) before the day of collection of the voting papers, cause one of such voting papers to be delivered, by persons appointed by him for that purpose, at the address (b) stated in the register or claim of each owner and proxy, and at the residence (c) within the district of each ratepayer entitled to vote therein.

(a) These days are to be both exclusive : see Zouch v. Empsey (1821), 4 B. & A. 522 ; R. v. Salop JJ. (1838), 7 L. J. M. C. 56 ; 8 A. & E. 173.

(b) See r. 20, ante, p. 679.

(c) There is here an addition to the provision in the P. H. A., 1848, s. 24, as the residence of the ratepayer at which the delivery is to be made must be within the district. Delivery need not be made out of the district, but an elector whose residence is without the district may vote if he proceed according to the provisions of r. 49, infra.

The fact that partisans of a scheme in connection with which a poll was to be taken accompanied the messengers of a local authority, who were delivering voting papers, and at the same time distributed pamphlets intended to influence the voting, was held by the court not to be a sufficient ground for ordering a new poll to be taken. No opinion was expressed as to whether the votes in question had been rendered invalid by what had been done (R. v. Exeter Corporation (1903), Times, March 6th.

Filling up voting papers.

45. Each voter shall write his initials in the voting paper delivered to him against the name or names of the person or persons (not exceeding the number of persons to be elected) for whom he intends to vote, and shall sign such voting paper.

In R. v. Strachan (1872), L. R. 7 Q. B. 463; 36 J. P. 727, it was held that 33 & 34 Vict. c. 97, s. 102, as to the stamp on a voting paper, did not apply to such papers at municipal elections.

The voter is here required only to sign the voting paper, and there is no place for his address in the form given in the Schedule; but the directions there appended require him to state his address. It is probably sufficient to sign according to the requisition in the text.

As no voting paper should be sent to a firm, so the signature of a firm is insufficient.

A person who cannot write may mark his paper in the manner provided by r. 47, infra.

The text makes no provision for signature by an agent. See, as to the fabrication of voting papers, r. 69, post, p. 684.

Voting by proxies.

46. Any person voting as a proxy shall in like manner write his own initials and sign his own name, and state also in writing the name of the person or body of persons for whom he is proxy.

The remarks made upon the preceding Rule apply here.

Illiterate voters.

47. Any voter unable to write shall affix his mark at the foot of the voting paper in the presence of a witness, who shall attest and write the name of the voter against the mark, as well as the initials of such voter against the name of every candidate for whom the voter intends to vote.

There is a discrepancy between this Rule and the "directions for voting" appended to Form O. in Sched. IV. By this Rule the voter is to affix his mark at the foot of the paper, and the witness is then to sign his name against the mark and to write the initials of the voter against the names of the candidates voted for. By the directions for voting the voter is to make his mark instead of initials.

Collection of voting papers.

48. The returning officer shall cause the voting papers to be collected on the day of collection (which shall not be later than the seventh of April) by such persons as he may appoint.

See the provision in r. 66, post, p. 683, as to Sunday and other special days.

What voting papers to be accepted.

49. No voting paper shall be received or admitted unless the same has been delivered at the address or residence as aforesaid of the voter (a), nor unless the same is collected by the persons appointed for that purpose: Provided—

(a) That if any person entitled to receive a voting paper has not received

Schedule 2.
Part 1.

a voting paper as aforesaid (b), he shall, on personal (c) application before the day of collection to the returning officer, be entitled to receive a voting paper from him, and to fill up the same in his presence, and then and there to deliver the same to him :

(b) That if any voting paper duly delivered has not been collected, through the default of the returning officer or the persons appointed to collect the same (d), the voter in person may deliver the same to the returning officer before twelve o'clock at noon on the day or on the first day (as the case may be) appointed for the examination and casting up of the votes (e).

(a) That is, reddendo singula singulis, to the address of the owner and to the residence of the ratepayer. See r. 9, ante, p. 676, as to the residence of the ratepayer in a ward.

(b) This may happen if a ratepayer residing out of the district has not received a voting paper, or if an owner having no address in the district has not received one, or if the distributor has negligently or accidentally omitted to serve one on a person within the district. If a voting paper has been duly left, and has been lost or accidentally destroyed, the case does not appear to be within this proviso. If a paper, which has been left is defective, probably this is equivalent to there having been no paper delivered.

(c) Note the introduction of this word. The voter must apply in person.

(d) The default of the voter himself, whether accidental or negligent, gives him no right under this proviso.

(e) Note that under the first proviso application must be made before the day of collection. Under the second the paper may be delivered before twelve o'clock on the day appointed for casting up the votes.

Counting of Votes.

Method of counting.

51. The returning officer shall on the day immediately following the day of collection of the voting papers, and on as many days immediately succeeding as may be necessary, attend at the place appointed (a) for the examination and casting up of the votes, and ascertain the validity of the votes, by an examination of the rate books and such other books and documents as he may think necessary, and by examining such persons as he may see fit ; he shall cast up such of the votes as he finds to be valid, and to have been duly given collected or received, and shall ascertain the number of such votes for each candidate (b).

. . . . .

(a) The corresponding provision in 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 27, was held by CAMPBELL, L.C.J., in R. v. Cross (1852), 19 L. T. (o.s.) 36 ; 16 J. P. 214, to be merely directory. He held also that the casting up at the clerk's room, which was away from the board room, was valid. Note, however, that the place appointed must now be stated in the notice of election : see r. 36, ante, p. 679. Quære, therefore, if the provision in the text would be held to be directory only.

(b) The returning officer may at this time correct any error which he may have made in filling in the number of votes assigned to the voter. The remainder of this rule is applicable under Sched. III., r. 6, post, p. 687.

* * * * *

List of candidates.

53. The returning officer shall also cause to be made a list containing the names of the candidates, together with (in case of a contest) the number of votes given for each, and the names of the persons elected, and shall sign and certify such list, and shall deliver the same, together with the nomination and voting papers which he has received, to the local board at their first or next meeting (as the case may be), who shall cause the same to be deposited in their office.

Inspection of documents.

54. Such list shall during office hours be open to public inspection, together with all other documents relating to the election, for six months after the election, without fee or reward ; and the returning officer shall, as soon as may be after the completion of the election, cause such list to be printed, and copies thereof to be affixed at the usual places for affixing parochial notices within the parts for which the election has taken place.

Rules 53 and 54 may apply to a poll under Sched. III., so far as regards the signing and delivery of the list of votes, the deposit of the voting papers and their inspection. As to publication of the result, see Sched. III., r. 7.

General Provisions.

Excluded days.

66. Whenever the day appointed for the performance of any act in relation to any election is a Sunday, Christmas Day, or Good Friday, a Bank holiday (a), or any day appointed for public fast or thanksgiving, such act shall be performed on the day next following, unless it is one of the days excluded as aforesaid ; and in that case on the day following such excluded day.

(a) These are provided for in 34 & 35 Vict. c. 17, and 38 & 39 Vict. c. 13. They are Easter Monday, Monday in Whitsun week, the first Monday in August, December 26th, if a week day, and if not, December 27th.

* * * * *

Penalty on returning officer for default.

68. If the returning officer refuses or neglects (a) to comply with any of the provisions of this Schedule relating to elections, he shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding fifty pounds (b) ; and any person employed for the purposes of any such election by or under the returning officer who is guilty of any such neglect or refusal shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds (b).

(a) This penalty is incurred by mere neglect though not wilful or corrupt (see King v. Burrell (1840), 9 L. J. Q. B. 337 ; 12 A. & E. 460 ; Hunt v. Hibbs (1860), 29 L. J. Ex. 222 ; 24 J. P. 118). In R. v. Lofthouse (1866), L. R. 1 Q. B. 433 ; 30 J. P. 453, it was stated that erroneous entries in the voting papers might subject the returning officer to a penalty. If the chairman, knowing a voter to be qualified, maliciously refuses to receive his voting paper, he will be liable to an action at the suit of the voter ; but if he rejects the vote bonâ fide believing the voter not to be qualified, he is not liable, though his belief may be erroneous (Tozer v. Child (1857), 7 El. & Bl. 377 ; 21 J. P. 516). It has been held with respect to the duties of a returning officer under the Ballot Act, 1872, that when such duties are ministerial only, an action for the breach of them will lie at the suit of a party aggrieved, who has thereby lost the election, without malice or want of reasonable care on the part of the defendant (Pickering v. James (1873), L. R. 8 C. P. 489 ; 37 J. P. 679).

(b) See, as to the recovery of these penalties, s. 251, ante, p. 551. See also s. 253, ante, p. 559, as to the persons who may institute proceedings to recover the penalties. A chairman of a local board was charged with neglecting to deliver the voting papers to the local board (see r. 53, ante, p. 682). The prosecutor, L., though a member of the board, had not been a candidate at the election, and the persons returned at such election were properly elected. L. had not obtained the consent of the Attorney-General or of the local board to prosecute (see s. 253, ante, p. 559). It was held that as L. was not a party aggrieved, the justices had no jurisdiction to hear and determine the information (R. v. Blanshard (1866), 30 J. P. 280).

Schedule 2.

Part 1.
Offences at elections.

69. Any person who (a)—

Fabricates (b) in whole or in part or alters defaces destroys abstracts or purloins any voting paper, or

Personates any person entitled to vote at any election (c), or

Falsely assumes to act in the name or on the behalf of any person so entitled to vote (d), or

Interferes with the delivery or collection of any voting papers, or

Delivers any voting paper under a false pretence of being lawfully authorised so to do, shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding twenty pounds (e), or, in the discretion of the court, to imprisonment with or without hard labour for any period not exceeding three months.

(a) This section is taken from 14 & 15 Vict. c. 105, s. 3, with reference to the election of guardians, though the language is slightly altered. Several prosecutions have taken place upon that section, and persons have been convicted of offences under it. At the Spring Assizes for Yorkshire in 1858 three persons were convicted before BYLES, J., of a common law offence for conspiring to defeat the due election of guardians by causing forged proxy appointments to be used and acted upon at such election, and were sentenced to imprisonment (R. v. Beckwith and Others). The offences mentioned in this section are to be deemed illegal practices within the meaning of the Municipal Corporations (Corrupt Practices) Act, 1884, post, Vol. II., but without prejudice to the punishment under this rule of persons guilty of such offences (47 & 48 Vict. c. 70, s. 36).

(b) At an election of guardians a voter's wife told W. that she had authority from her husband to fill up his voting paper, and W. thereupon caused her to put her mark on the voting paper, he putting the voter's initials opposite to the candidate's name and attesting the paper, which was received as if duly marked, etc., by the voter himself. W., having been convicted under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 105, s. 3, of unlawfully fabricating a voting paper, it was held that there was no evidence to justify the conviction (Wickham v. Phillips (1883), 47 J. P. 612). And see the cases cited in note (d), infra.

(c) When the person who should have been so entitled is dead, and he is personated at the election, the case is not provided for by this section (Whiteley v. Chappell (1868), L. R. 4 Q. B. 147; 33 J. P. 244).

(d) Where a person signed the name of a voter to a paper with the consent of the voter's wife, but without his knowledge, and believing that he might do so, it was held that he was not liable to a penalty under the corresponding enactment in 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 13 (Aberdare L. B. v. Hammett (1875), L. R. 10 Q. B. 162; 39 J. P. 69).

The appellant was charged with unlawfully assuming to act for one H., a voter in an election of guardians. The appellant went to the voter's house, and the mother and brother of the voter having told him that the paper was not filled up, he offered to fill it up, and then put in a candidate's name without asking them which candidate. The paper was afterwards counted for that candidate. It was held that, though there might have been evidence to convict of fabricating a voting paper, the appellant was wrongly convicted of assuming to act, as it was not proved that H. did not afterwards agree to the filling up of the paper (Bell v. Morson (1879), 40 L. T. 128; 43 J. P. 174).

The respondent, a candidate at an election of members of a local board, called at the house of a voter to whom a voting paper had been sent, and asked her how she intended to vote and to hand him the voting paper, which she did. He then inquired if she knew how to fill it up, and she replied in the affirmative. The respondent thereupon, without any authority, express or implied, from the voter, wrote in pencil the initials of the voter against his own name. The voter objected to his doing so. The respondent left the voting paper with the voter, with her initials so written by him against his own name, but with no other mark upon it. The voter subsequently struck out the initials so written by the respondent, and placed her initials against the names of three other candidates, and signed her own name to the voting paper. It was found that the respondent so pencilled the initials of the voter with the intent of indicating on her behalf that she intended to vote for him, and of inducing and procuring her to vote for him. The respondent was successful at the poll. A petition was lodged against his return on the ground of illegal practices (inter alia) of fabricating in whole or in part a voting paper, and of falsely assuming to act in the name or on behalf of a voter:—Held, that the act of the respondent did not amount to a fabrication in whole or in part of the voting paper, nor to falsely assuming to act in the name or on the behalf of the voter within the meaning of this rule (Knighton Local Government District Election Petition; Gough v. Murdoch (1887), 57 L. T. 308; 51 J. P. 471).

(e) See, as to the recovery of the penalty, s. 251. Note that a candidate at an election is a party aggrieved by the mere fabrication of a voting paper, so as to be entitled to lay an information under this rule without the consent of the Attorney-General under s. 253, ante, p. 559 (Verdin v. Wray (1877), 2 Q. B. D. 608; 41 J. P. 484).

SCHEDULE II.

PART II.

This part is also repealed by the L. G. A., 1894.

SCHEDULE III.

Rules as to Resolutions of Owners and Ratepayers (a).

Meeting for resolution.

1. For the purpose of passing a resolution of owners (b) and ratepayers under this Act (c), a meeting shall be summoned on the requisition of any twenty ratepayers or owners, or of any twenty ratepayers and owners resident in the district or place with respect to which the resolution is to be passed.

(a) Such a resolution is required under s. 166, ante, p. 376, and was formerly required under ss. 216 (now obsolete in this connection) and 272 (also, in practice, obsolete), ante, pp. 496, 610. It was also formerly required under the Borough Funds Act, 1872, s. 4, post, Vol. II., for charging on the rates the cost of promoting or opposing Bills in Parliament. The Borough Funds Act, 1903, s. 1, substitutes, however, as to the promotion of a Bill, the requirements contained in the First Schedule to that Act; and, as to the opposition to Bills, s. 7 provides that the provision contained in the Borough Funds Act, 1872, s. 4, that no expense in opposing a Bill shall be charged unless the opposition has had the consent of the owners and ratepayers of the district, shall cease to apply.

Inquiry was once made of the L. G. B. as to whether an urban council whose district it was proposed to incorporate in a neighbouring borough could at the expense of the rates take the opinion of the inhabitants by means of a poll. The Board stated that they were not aware of any statutory authority under which the council could take a poll on the question, and that accordingly it did not seem to them that the expenses could be properly charged to the rates.

(b) See the definition of owner and ratepayer in Sched. II., rr. 10, 11.

(c) These words appear to restrict the rules of this Schedule to meetings under this Act. But this Act is, according to s. 313, ante, p. 652, to be read into any other previous Act which refers to any of the Sanitary Acts.

Summoning officer.

2. The summoning officer of such meeting shall be—

In boroughs, the mayor;

In improvement Act districts, the chairman of the improvement commissioners;

Schedule 3.

In local government districts, the chairman of the local board (a);

In places situated in any rural district or districts and having known and defined boundaries (b), the churchwardens (c) or one of them having jurisdiction co-extensive with the place; or if there are no churchwardens, the overseers or one of them having the like jurisidiction; or if there is none of the officers respectively above enumerated, or if such officer in any case neglects, is unable, or refuses to perform the duties hereby imposed on him, by any person appointed by the Local Government Board.

Where the boundaries of a place are settled by Order of the Local Government Board (b), the Board shall by such Order appoint the summoning officer.

If any summoning officer appointed by the Local Government Board dies, becomes incapable, or refuses or neglects to act, the Local Government Board may appoint another officer in his room (d).

(a) Improvement Act Districts and Local Government Districts are now known as urban districts. See the L. G. A., 1894, s. 21, post.

(b) See s. 272, ante, p. 610, and the notes thereon.

(c) It is presumed that the word churchwardens will include chapelwardens where the place is a chapelry. But it is very doubtful whether the churchwardens of a parish can act for a part of that parish, such as a township. The churchwardens of an ecclesiastical district formed under 6 & 7 Vict c. 37, are included in the term (R. v. Northowram and Clayton (1865), L. R. 1 Q. B. 110; 30 J. P. 181).

(d) To obtain this appointment there must be a communication in writing to the M. & H. who must be satisfied of the inability or refusal of the proper officer to perform the duties.

Security for costs.

3. Ratepayers or owners making a requisition for the summoning of such meeting shall, if required, give security in a bond, with two sufficient sureties, for repayment to the summoning officer, in the event of the resolution not being passed (a), of the costs incurred in relation to such meeting or any poll taken in pursuance of any demand made thereat; the amount of the security to be given by such sureties, and their sufficiency, and the amount of such costs, to be settled by agreement between the summoning officer and such ratepayers or owners, or, in case of dispute, by a court of summary jurisdiction (b).

(a) See note to r. 8, post, p. 688.

(b) See the definition, ante, p. 36.

Notice of meeting.

4. The summoning officer shall, on such requisition as aforesaid (a), fix a time and place for holding such meeting, and shall forthwith give notice thereof—

By advertisement in some one or more of the local newspapers circulated in the district or place;

By causing such notice to be affixed to the principal doors of every church and chapel (b) in the place to which notices are usually affixed.

(a) This officer must satisfy himself of the sufficiency and legality of the requisition. He has absolute discretion as to the time and place of meeting.

(b) The church and chapel must mean, according to the interpretation of similar words in 1 Vict. c. 45, church and chapel of the Established Church. See note on Sched. II., r. 36, ante, p. 680. Note that the mode of publication is here prescribed; in other sections of the Act there is no prescribed mode. See also Edwards v. Hatton (1866), L. R. 1 A. & E. 21; 30 J. P. 211.

Schedule 3.

5. The summoning officer shall be the chairman of the meeting unless he is unable or unwilling to preside (a), in which case the meeting on assembling shall choose one of its number as chairman, who may, with the consent of a majority of the persons present, adjourn the same from time to time (b). Chairman.

(a) These words removed the inconsistency which arose from 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 13, under which the meeting were to choose their chairman, but if a poll were demanded, the summoning officer had to conduct it (Ex parte Littleborough L. B. (1870), 22 L. T. 437 ; 34 J. P. 469). The summoning officer will preside throughout unless unable or unwilling.

(b) In 21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 13, the adjournment was to be from day to day, and this was interpreted to mean from one day to the next day. By the words of the text the adjournment may be to days at any intervals. But though the meeting must determine whether the adjournment shall take place, the decision as to when the adjourned meeting shall be held and when the poll shall be taken rests with the chairman (R. v. D'Oyley (1840), 9 L. J. M. C. 113, 117 ; 12 A. & E. 139). See also note (a) under the next rule.

Proceedings at meeting.

6. The chairman shall propose to the meeting the resolution, and the meeting shall decide for or against its adoption : Provided, that if any owner or ratepayer demands (a) that such question be decided by a poll of owners and ratepayers, such poll shall be taken by voting papers in the Form O. in Schedule IV. to this Act, in the same way and with the same incidents and conditions as to the qualification of electors and scale of voting, as to notice to be given by the returning officer, delivery filling up and collection of voting papers, as to the counting of votes, as to penalties for neglect or refusal to comply with the provisions of the Act, and in all respects whatsoever as is provided by the rules for the election of local boards in Schedule II. to this Act (b) ; except that in districts or places where there is no register of owners and proxies under this Act (c), any owner or proxy shall be entitled to have a voting paper delivered to him if at least fourteen days (d) before the last day appointed for delivery of the voting papers he sends a claim in writing to the summoning officer containing the particulars required by Schedule II. to this Act to be contained in claims to be entered on the register of owners and proxies, and except that the provisions with respect to certain specified days of the month shall not apply (e).

For the purposes of such poll the summoning officer shall be the returning officer (f), and shall have the powers and perform the duties of a returning officer under Schedule II. to this Act, so far as the same are applicable to a poll under this Schedule.

If no poll is demanded, or the demand for a poll is withdrawn by the persons making the same (g), a declaration by the chairman shall, in the absence of proof to the contrary (h), be sufficient evidence of the decision of such meeting.

(a) This gives to any owner or ratepayer the right to demand a poll whether the meeting wish it or not. Such a right exists as incident to similar meetings at common law, such as meetings of vestry or meetings under the Public Libraries Acts (R. v. St. Matthew, Bethnal Green (1875), 32 L. T. 558 ; 39 J. P. 502 ; R. v. Wimbledon L. B. (1882), 8 Q. B. D. 459 ; 46 J. P. 292). At a meeting of owners and ratepayers A. demanded a poll ; B., also a duly qualified voter, said, " I second the demand, if necessary " ; after the termination of the meeting, A. purported to withdraw his demand, and on the question arising whether or not a poll should be taken it was held that a mandamus must go ordering the mayor to take a poll, on the ground that B. had himself made an effective demand for one by seconding A.'s demand : semble, also that a valid demand cannot be withdrawn after the meeting, for other persons might have abstained from themselves asking for a poll upon hearing such demand made (R. v. Mayor of Dover, Ex parte Bradley, [1903] 1 K. B. 668; 67 J. P. 81). Where a meeting was adjourned on motion made, and the chairman allowed the meeting to separate without putting the resolution to them, it was held that another meeting might be called by the summoning officer (R. v. Bird (1864), 28 J. P. 279). As to the adjournment of the meeting, see R. v. Norman (1865), 29 J. P. 407. As to a case where a poll is demanded by an unqualified person, and the demand is not challenged or withdrawn, see R. v. Miles, Ex parte Cole (1895), 64 L. J. Q. B. 420; 59 J. P. 407.

(b) See the several rules of the schedule, ante, pp. 676—685.

(c) The town council of a borough was not bound under Sched. II., r. 19, to keep a register of owners and proxies for the purpose of taking a poll in the borough under the Borough Funds Act, 1872. But a reasonable time must be allowed for owners and proxies to send in their claims. Therefore, when a poll was demanded on December 28th, and a notice was published that voting papers would be delivered on January 13th, but such notice was not published until after January 1st, an injunction was granted restraining the corporation from applying the public funds in payment of parliamentary expenses until the consent of the owners and ratepayers had been duly obtained (Ward v. Sheffield (Mayor, etc. of) (1887), 19 Q. B. D. 22).

(d) The words at least signify that both days are to be excluded (R. v. Salop JJ. (1838), 7 L. J. M. C. 56; 8 A. & E. 173).

(e) See Sched. II., r. 66, ante, p. 683.

(f) It is presumed that this will not be the case when the summoning officer has been unable or unwilling to preside, and a chairman has been chosen in his place.

(g) When is this withdrawal to take place? Apparently before the papers are sent out, and perhaps before the close of the meeting at which the demand for the poll was made. See R. v. Mayor of Dover, supra.

(h) This declaration is not absolutely conclusive, so that defaults which vitiate the proceedings may be shown by persons interested who dispute the result.

Publication of resolution.

7. A copy, under the hand of the summoning officer, of every resolution so passed, shall be forwarded by him to the Local Government Board; and it shall be his duty to publish a copy thereof by advertisement for three successive weeks in some one or more of the local newspapers circulated in the district or place, and by causing a copy thereof to be affixed to the principal doors of every church and chapel in the place to which notices are usually affixed.

See as to the publication of the notices, r. 4, ante, p. 686, and the notes thereon. The requisitions of this rule are not conditions precedent to the validity of the resolution, or to its being acted upon. No notice is required to be given of the rejection of the resolution, though it will be well if the summoning officer do communicate it to the Ministry of Health in any case where they have taken action in the matter.

Costs.

8. Where in pursuance of a resolution passed in manner provided by this Schedule any place is constituted a local government district (a), all costs incurred by the summoning officer in relation to the meeting, and any poll taken in pursuance of any demand made thereat, shall be a first charge on the general district rates leviable within such district; in the case of a resolution so passed by owners or ratepayers in any urban district (b), such costs shall be paid out of the fund or rate applicable by the urban authority to the general purposes of this Act (c).

(a) See s. 272, ante, p. 610, but see note (a) under s. 270, ante, p. 609.

(b) This passage applies to such a resolution as is required under s. 166, ante, p. 376. See note (a) to r. 1, ante, p. 685. The L. G. B. expressed the opinion that whether the resolution is passed or not the expenses may properly be paid out of the general district rate.

(c) This fund and rate will be the general district rate, except in the cases provided for by s. 207, ante, p. 469.

SCHEDULE IV.

FORMS.

(As to the use of these forms see s. 317, ante, p. 653.)

FORM A.

Form of Notice requiring Abatement of Nuisance (a).

To [person causing the nuisance, or owner or occupier of the premises whereon the nuisance exists, as the case may be].

Take notice that under the provisions of the Public Health Act, 1875, the [describe the local authority], being satisfied of the existence of a nuisance at [describe premises or place where the nuisance exists], arising from [describe the cause of nuisance, for instance, want of a privy or drain; or for further instance, a ditch or drain so foul as to be a nuisance or injurious to health; or for further instance, swine kept so as to be a nuisance or injurious to health], do hereby require you within from the service of this notice to abate the same, and for that purpose to [state any things required to be done or works to be executed] (b).

If you make default in complying with the requisitions of this notice, or if the said nuisance, though abated, is likely to recur, a summons will be issued requiring your attendance to answer a complaint which will be made to a court of summary jurisdiction for enforcing the abatement of the nuisance, and prohibiting a recurrence thereof, and for recovering the costs and penalties that may be incurred thereby.

Dated this day of 18 .

FORM C.

Form of Order for Abatement or Prohibition of Nuisance (a).

To the owner [or occupier] of [describe the premises] situated [give such description as may be sufficient to identify the premises], or to A. B. of (b) .

County of / [or borough, etc. of / or district / of / or as the case may be].

WHEREAS on the day of complaint was made before Esquire, one of Her Majesty's justices of the peace acting in and for the county [or other jurisdiction] stated in the margin [or as the case may be] by that in or on certain premises situated at in the district, under the Public Health Act, 1875, of [describe the local authority], the following nuisance then existed [describing it]; and that the said nuisance was caused by the act or default of the owner [or occupier] of the said premises [or was caused by A. B.] [If the nuisance has been removed, say, the following nuisance existed on or about [the day the nuisance was ascertained to exist], and that the said nuisance was caused, etc., and although the same is now removed, the same or the like nuisance is likely to recur on the same premises].

And whereas the owner [or occupier] within the meaning of the said Public Health Act, 1875 [or the said A. B.], hath this day appeared before us [(or me) describing the court], to answer the matter of the said complaint [or in case the party charged do not appear, say], and whereas it hath been this day proved to our (or my) satisfaction that a true copy of a summons requiring the owner [or occupier] of the said premises [or the said A. B.] to appear this day before us (or me) hath been duly served according to the said Act.

Now, on proof here had before us [or me] that the nuisance so complained of doth exist on the said premises, and that the same is caused by the act or default of the owner [or occupier] of the said premises [or by the said *A. 37 & 38 Vict. c. 89 –	The Sanitary Law Amendment Act, 1874.	The whole Act, except so far as relates to the Metropolis or the Metropolitan Police District.

(a) This Part was repealed by the S. L. R. A. (No. 2), 1893.

Schedule 5. Part 1.

Of the above Acts, the following, (namely,) "The Public Health Act, 1848," and "The Local Government Act, 1858," and "The Local Government Act (1858) Amendment Act, 1861," and "The Local Government Act Amendment Act, 1863," are in this Act referred to as "The Local Government Acts" (a).

(a) This definition ought more properly to have been inserted in s. 4, ante, p. 3. It will be observed that the 37 & 38 Vict. c. 89, is not included in this definition, apparently through inadvertence.

All the above Acts, so far as they relate to the metropolis, have been repealed and consolidated by the P. H. (London) A., 1891.

PART II. (a).

Session and Chapter.	Title or Short Title.	Extent of Repeal.
12 & 13 Vict. c. 94 –	The Public Health Supplemental Act, 1849.	The whole Act, except—Section 1 (Confirmation of certain provisional orders of the General Board of Health), and section 12 (short title of Act), and the schedule.
13 & 14 Vict. c. 90 –	The Public Health Supplemental Act, 1850 (No. 2).	The whole Act, except—Section 1 (certain provisional orders of General Board of Health confirmed), and section 7 (short title of Act), and the schedule.
15 & 16 Vict. c. 42 –	The First Public Health Supplemental Act, 1852.	Sections 6 to 12, both inclusive (first election or first selection and election of certain local boards, and section 13 (11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, ss. 68, 69, as to repair of highways), and section 14 (interpretation of year), and section 15 (Act incorporated with Public Health Act).

(a) This Part was repealed by the S. L. R. A., 1883.

PART III. (a).

11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, s. 83.

As to interments within churches.

No vault or grave shall be constructed or made within the walls of or underneath any church or other place of public worship built in any urban district after the thirty-first day of August one thousand eight hundred and forty-eight; and whosoever shall bury, or cause, permit, or suffer to be buried, any corpse or coffin in any vault or grave constructed or made contrary to this enactment (b), shall for every such offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding fifty pounds (c), which may be recovered by any person (d), with full costs of suit, in an action of debt (e).

(a) In order to form a proper consolidation of the law, it was deemed necessary entirely to repeal all the statutes applicable to the general subject of sanitary law. But in some of these statutes were found certain provisions which could not be introduced into the body of the Act, but which required to be kept in force. Accordingly those provisions are re-enacted in this Part of the Schedule.

(b) The judge of the Consistory Court of London has held that these words do not extend to the placing of a sealed urn containing the cremated ashes of a deceased person in the wall of a church (In re Kerr (1894), Times, June 9th).

(c) See, as to the recovery of this penalty, s. 251, ante, p. 551.

(d) That is, by any person, without the consent of the Attorney-General under s. 253. See the notes to that section, ante, p. 559, and Fletcher v. Hudson, there cited.

(e) The form of action here referred to is now abolished, but the right of action is not affected by more recent legislation relating to procedure.

21 & 22 Vict. c. 98, s. 49 (a).

Local board to be burial board in certain cases.

When a vestry of any parish comprised in a local government district resolves to appoint a burial board, the local board may at the option of the vestry be the burial board for such parish, and all expenses incurred by such burial board shall be defrayed out of a rate to be levied in such parish in the same manner as a general district rate (b).

Provided, that if such parish has been declared a ward for the election of members of the local board, such members shall form the burial board for the parish, and shall be deemed to be a burial board elected under the Burial Acts for the time being in force.

(a) See also 29 & 30 Vict. c. 90, s. 44, post, p. 700, and the Burial Acts in App. I., post, Vol. II.

(b) Under the Burial Acts the poor rate was chargeable.

As to the liability of a burial board to be assessed to income tax in respect of surplus income, see Paddington Burial Board v. Commissioners of Inland Revenue (1884), 13 Q. B. D. 9; 48 J. P. 311; Edinburgh Southern Cemetery Co. v. Surveyor of Taxes (1889), 17 Ct. of Sess. Cas. (4th ser.) 154; Paisley Cemetery Co., Ltd. v. Reith (1898), 25 Ct. of Sess. Cas. (4th ser.) 1080; and cf. Sugden v. Leeds Corporation, [1914] A. C. 483; 77 J. P. 225; Garston Overseers v. Carlisle, [1915] 3 K. B. 381.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 61, s. 21.

Urban authorities may repair fences surrounding burial grounds.

Any urban authority constituted a burial board may from time to time repair and uphold the fences surrounding any burial ground which has been discontinued as such within their jurisdiction, or take down such fences and substitute others in lieu thereof, and shall from time to time take the necessary steps for preventing the desecration of such burial ground and placing it in a proper sanitary condition; and they may from time to time pass byelaws (subject to the provisions of this Act) (a) for the preservation and regulation of all burial grounds within their jurisdiction; and the expense of carrying this section into execution may be defrayed out of any rates (b) authorised to be levied by any urban authority constituted a burial board.

(a) See s. 182, ante, p. 432.

(b) That is, as a general rule, out of the district rate or poor rate, according to circumstances.

26 & 27 Vict. c. 17, s. 6.

Local government districts to be within highway districts for purpose of highway meetings.

Where any local government district or any other place is surrounded by or adjoins a highway district constituted under the Highway Acts, such first-mentioned district or other place shall, for the purpose of any meeting of the highway board, be deemed to be within such highway district.

This enactment is now obsolete.

Schedule 5.

Part 3.

Power to burial boards in certain cases to transfer their powers to urban authority.

29 & 30 Vict. c. 90, s. 44.

When the district of a burial board is included in or conterminous with the district of an urban authority, the burial board may, by resolution of the vestry, and by agreement of the burial board and urban authority, transfer to the urban authority all their estate property rights powers duties and liabilities, and from and after such transfer, the urban authority shall have all such estate property rights powers duties and liabilities as if they had been duly appointed a burial board under the Burial Acts for the time being in force.

34 & 35 Vict. c. 33, s. 2, enacted that "This Act shall be construed as one with the Acts mentioned in the Schedule to this Act, and those Acts and this Act may be cited together as the Burial Acts, 1852 to 1871, and each of them may be cited as the Burial Act of the year in which it was passed." The Schedule set forth the following Acts and their titles: 15 & 16 Vict. c. 85; 16 & 17 Vict. c. 134; 17 & 18 Vict. c. 87; 18 & 19 Vict. c. 128; 20 & 21 Vict. c. 81; 22 Vict. c. 1; 23 & 24 Vict. c. 64; 25 & 26 Vict. c. 100. The Short Titles Act, 1892, s. 1 (2), provides that the foregoing Acts, together with 34 & 35 Vict. c. 33; 43 & 44 Vict. c. 41; 44 & 45 Vict. c. 2; 48 & 49 Vict. c. 21, may be cited by the collective title of the Burial Acts, 1852 to 1885; and part of s. 2 of the 34 & 35 Vict. c. 33, together with the Schedule, was accordingly repealed by the S. L. R. A. (No. 2), 1893. In addition to the Acts above mentioned, see also the Burial Act, 1900. It is impossible to include all these Acts in the present volume, but some of the provisions more directly affecting sanitary authorities will be found in App. I., post, Vol. II. As to the powers of urban district councils to act as burial boards under local Acts, see the Burial Act, 1855, ss. 19, 20. On the subject of the Burial Acts, reference should be made to Brooke Little's "Law of Burials."

[Here followed 29 & 30 Vict. c. 90, ss. 51 and 52, which are now repealed by the Public Health Act, 1896, ss. 6 and 7, post.]

35 & 36 Vict. c. 76, s. 34.

As to consent of Local Government Board required in certain cases.

Where in any local Acts the consent, sanction, or confirmation of one of her Majesty's principal Secretaries of State is required with respect to the borrowing of any money, to the giving effect to any byelaws, or to the appointment of any officer for sanitary purposes, the consent, sanction, or confirmation of the Local Government Board shall be required instead of that of the Secretary of State.

The consent of the Local Government Board, and not that of the Treasury, shall be required to the borrowing of money for the purposes of the Baths and Wash-houses Acts (a).

If any question arises as to what are sanitary purposes within the meaning of this section, the determination of the Local Government Board on such questions shall be conclusive.

This provision is extended to London by 54 & 55 Vict. c. 76, s. 142. The Local Authorities (Treasury Powers) Act, 1906, s. 1, provided that the L. G. Board should exercise any power conferred on the Treasury by any enactment contained in, applied by, or incorporated with the Baths and Wash-houses Acts, 1846 to 1899, or any local or private Act, as respects dealings with property, loans, and matters connected therewith, and any such power, if exercised before the passing of that Act, whether by the Treasury or by the L. G. B., was to be deemed to have been duly exercised. The L. G. B. have now been succeeded by the M. of H.

(a) See the definition of these Acts in s. 4, ante, p. 35. The Acts themselves will be found in App. I., post, Vol. II.

35 & 36 Vict. c. 79, s. 35.

Transfer to Local Government

The powers and duties of the Board of Trade under the Alkali Act, 1863, and any Act amending the same (a), and under the Metropolis

Water Acts, 1852 and 1871 (b), shall be exercisable and performed by the Local Government Board, and "the Local Government Board" shall be deemed to be substituted for "the Board of Trade" wherever the latter expression occurs in the said Acts.

This provision is extended to London by 54 & 55 Vict. c. 76, s. 142.

(a) The Alkali Act, 1863, and the Acts amending the same (26 & 27 Vict. c. 124; 31 & 32 Vict. c. 36; 37 & 38 Vict. c. 43) were repealed by the Alkali, etc. Works Regulation Act, 1881. The last mentioned Act and the Alkali, etc. Works Regulation Act, 1892, have now been replaced by the Alkali, etc. Works Regulation Act, 1906, in App. I., post, Vol. II., which imposes upon sanitary authorities important duties with respect to alkali works. These powers are now exercised by the M. of H.

(b) See 15 & 16 Vict. c. 84; 34 & 35 Vict. c. 113. See also 60 & 61 Vict. c. 56; 62 Vict. c. 7; 2 Edw. 7, c. 41.

35 & 36 Vict. c. 79, s. 36.

Transfer to Local Government Board of powers and duties of Secretary of State under Highway and Turnpike Acts.

All powers, duties, and acts vested in, imposed on, or required to be done by or to one of her Majesty's principal Secretaries of State by the several Acts of Parliament relating to highways in England and Wales, and to turnpike roads and trusts and bridges in England and Wales, shall be imposed on and be done by or to the Local Government Board, subject to the conditions, liabilities, and incidents to which such powers, duties, and acts were respectively subject immediately before the passing of the Public Health Act, 1872, or as near thereto as circumstances admit.

This provision is extended to London by 54 & 55 Vict. c. 76, s. 142. These powers are now exercised by the Minister of Transport (see Ministry of Transport Act, 1919).

35 & 36 Vict. c. 79, s. 37.

Transfer of officers to Local Government Board.

All inspectors, clerks, and other officers who are by virtue of section thirty-seven of the Public Health Act, 1872 (a), attached to and under the control of the Local Government Board, shall hold their offices and places upon the same terms and conditions, and shall have the same powers, privileges, and immunities with respect to the performance of their duties, as if this Act had not passed.

The Local Government Board may by Order distribute the business to be performed under the Local Government Board amongst such officers and persons in such manner as the Local Government Board may think expedient.

(a) 34 & 35 Vict. c. 70, transferred certain powers to the L. G. B. and at the same time placed the officers of departments previously engaged therein under the control of the new board. 35 & 36 Vict. c. 79, transferred other powers, and in s. 37 made a similar provision as to the officers engaged therein. 34 & 35 Vict. c. 70, remains unrepealed (see the Act in App. I., post, Vol. II.); but as 35 & 36 Vict. c. 79, is wholly repealed, s. 37 is here re-enacted. These officers, etc., were transferred to the Ministry of Health by 9 & 10 Geo. 5, c. 21, s. 6.

35 & 36 Vict. c. 79, s. 38.

Salary of medical officer of Local Government Board.

Notwithstanding anything contained in any Act of Parliament now in force, there shall be paid out of moneys to be provided by Parliament to the medical officer of the Local Government Board such salary as the Treasury may from time to time determine.

See, as to the appointment of this officer, 21 & 22 Vict. c. 97, s. 4; but note that that section is repealed by the S. L. R. A., 1875, so far as relates to his salary.

Schedule 5.

35 & 36 Vict. c. 79, s. 48.

Part 3. Orders of Local Government Board: how to be published.

Every General Order of the Local Government Board, made in pursuance of the Poor Law Amendment Act, 1834, and the several Acts amending the same, shall be published in the London Gazette, and when so published shall take effect in like manner, and shall be of as much force and validity as any General Order of the Poor Law Board made and sent in the manner prescribed by the last-mentioned Acts, and no further proceeding shall be necessary in such behalf; and as regards any single Order of the said Board, made in pursuance of the said last-mentioned Acts, it shall not be necessary henceforth to send a copy thereof to the clerk to the justices of the petty sessions.

See upon this section, which refers to Orders relating to the relief of the poor, 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76, ss. 16—18; 10 & 11 Vict. c. 109, ss. 14, 17; 31 & 32 Vict. c. 122, ss. 1, 2.

And as to the publication of the Orders and their admissibility as evidence, see s. 135, ante, p. 247, and the note to that section.

The powers of the Local Government Board are now transferred to the Ministry of Health. See 9 & 10 Geo. 5, c. 21, s. 3 (1), post.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH (WATER) ACT, 1878.

(41 & 42 Vict. c. 25.)

An Act to amend the Public Health Act, 1875, so far as relates to the supply of water. [4th July 1878.]

Whereas it is expedient to amend the provisions of the Public Health Act, 1875:

This preamble is repealed by the S. L. R. A., 1894.

Short title and construction.

1. This Act may be cited as the Public Health (Water) Act, 1878, and shall be construed as one with the Public Health Act, 1875.

Commencement of Act.

2. This Act shall come into operation on the twenty-fifth day of March, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-nine, which day is in this Act referred to as the commencement of this Act.

This section is repealed by the S. L. R. A., 1894.

Duty of rural authority to provide or require provision of sufficient water supply, and procedure for enforcing such requirement.

3. It shall be the duty of every rural sanitary authority (a), regard being had to the provisions in this Act contained, to see that every occupied dwelling-house within their district has within a reasonable distance an available supply of wholesome water sufficient for the consumption and use for domestic purposes (b) of the inmates of the house.

Where it appears to a rural sanitary authority, on the report of their inspector of nuisances, or their medical officer of health, that any occupied dwelling-house within their district has not such supply within a reasonable distance (c), and the authority are of opinion that such supply can be provided at a reasonable cost not exceeding a capita sum the interest on which at the rate of five per centum per annum would amount to twopence per week, or at such other cost not exceeding a capital sum the interest on which at the rate of five per centum per annum would amount to threepence per week, as the Local Government Board may on the application of the local authority determine under all the circumstances of the case to be reasonable (d), and that the expense of providing the supply ought to be paid by the owner or defrayed as private improvement expenses (e), proceedings may be taken as follows :

(1) The authority may serve on the owner (f) of the house a notice requiring him, within a time specified in the notice and not exceeding six months from the date of the service thereof, to provide such supply, and to do all such works as may be necessary for that purpose (g) :

(2) If at the expiration of the time so specified the notice is not complied with, the authority may serve on the owner a second notice (f), informing him that if the requirements of the first notice are not complied with within one month from the date of the service of the second notice, the authority will themselves provide such supply, and that the expense of providing the supply will in that case be payable by the owner or as a private improvement expense (e) :

(3) If at the expiration of one month from the date of the service of the second notice the requirements of the first notice are not complied with, the authority may, subject as in this Act is mentioned, themselves provide the supply, and for that purpose they may enter upon the premises and execute all such works as appear to them necessary for obtaining a supply of water for the house ; and for the purposes of such entry sections one hundred and two and one hundred and three of the Public Health Act, 1875 (h), shall apply until the works are completed, in the same manner as if an order of a court of summary jurisdiction had been made for the abatement of a nuisance on the premises, and that order had not been complied with :

(4) Any expenses incurred by the authority in providing such supply and doing such works may, when the supply has been provided, be recovered in a summary manner from the owner of the house (i), or may, at the option of the authority, be declared, by their order, to be private improvement expenses (e) :

(5) Where the owners of two or more houses have failed to comply with the requirements of the notices served on them under this section, and the authority might, under this Act, execute the necessary works for providing a water supply for each house (k), the authority may, if it appears to them desirable, and no greater expense would be occasioned thereby, execute works for the joint supply of water to those houses, and apportion the expenses as they deem just.

The authority may, on cause being shown to their satisfaction why the requirements of a notice served by them under this section should not be complied with (l), withdraw the notice or modify the requirements thereof.

Provided, that nothing in this section contained shall be deemed to relieve the authority from the duty imposed upon them by the Public Health Act, 1875, of providing their district or any contributory place or part of a contributory place therein with a supply of water in cases where danger arises to the health of the inhabitants from the insufficiency or unwholesomeness of the existing supply, and a general scheme of supply is required, and such supply can be got at a reasonable cost (m).

Urban districts.

(a) Note that this applies to a rural authority only. But an urban authority may obtain the power of a rural authority under s. 11, post, p. 709. See also the notes to that section.

Effect of section.

The provisions of this Act do not repeal s. 62 of the P. H. A., 1875, ante, p. 137 (Colne Valley Waterworks Co. v. Treharne (1884), 50 L. T. 617; 48 J. P. 279). A notice may still be given, therefore, under that section.

The L. G. B. (now the Ministry of Health) state that they are advised that this section is intended to meet cases where the required supply has to be provided by means of the expenditure of a capital sum in the construction of separate works of water supply, and not to cases where mains are to be laid in the district, and where, therefore, the appropriate remedy for defect in the water supply for premises appears to be the substitution of water from such mains. In such circumstances the district council should have recourse to the powers conferred upon them by s. 62 of the P. H. A., 1875, under which the council may require houses to be supplied with water in certain cases.

"Domestic purposes."

(b) As to what are domestic purposes, see the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847. s. 53, and the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1863, s. 12, in App. I., post, Vol. II.

"Reasonable distance."

(c) Neither the L. G. B. nor their successors have fixed upon any distance which is to be considered as reasonable within the meaning of the section. The point is one to be determined in the first instance by the local authority on the report of their medical officer of health or inspector of nuisances. The Board, however, expressed the opinion generally that in determining the distance to be considered as reasonable, regard must be had to the labour involved in carrying by hand a sufficient amount of water for the purpose of an ordinary household and to the injurious results as regards cleanliness and health which are likely to arise if, in order to avoid this labour, the water used is stinted, or impure water more easily obtained is substituted for that which is purer but more distant.

"Reasonable cost."

(d) The meaning of this appears to be that when a house has not a sufficient supply of wholesome water, the rural authority may proceed under the following part of the section, provided the cost of providing a sufficient supply, i.e., of executing the works necessary for the supply, does not exceed £8 13*s.* 4*d.* If the costs would exceed that sum, the rural authority must apply to the M. of H. to determine what is a reasonable sum, not exceeding £13 in any case. Compare with this the P. H. A., 1875, s. 62, ante, p. 137. The limit under the text does not apply to s. 62 (West Lancashire R. D. C. v. Ogilvy, [1899] 1 Q. B. 377; 63 J. P. 166).

The limit of cost here laid down at which water supply to houses may be enforced by rural councils must be taken as referring to each individual house, and when the cost of providing any house considered individually would exceed the limit, the council cannot require a supply to be obtained under this section even if it appears that the cost of a supply for two or more houses would, if distributed over those houses, be within the specified limit.

(e) See the Act of 1875, s. 213, ante, p. 493.

(f) See the definition of owner, ante, p. 8. As to the service of the notice, see the Act of 1875, ss. 266, 267, ante, p. 593. For forms of notices, see the Schedule to this Act.

(g) These words may require the rural authority to specify the particular works they may think necessary: see the note to similar words as used in the Act of 1875, s. 96, ante, p. 183; but see Form A. in the Schedule to this Act. See also note (a).

(h) Ante, pp. 188, 189. No order is necessary to justify this entry, although if admission were refused a justice's order would have to be obtained.

Note to Section 3.

(i) As to the recovery of these expenses, see the P. H. A., 1875, s. 251, ante, p. 551.

(k) Note the words "for each house." The previous provisions of the section must, therefore, have been complied with in respect of each house, considered separately. See also note (d).

(l) Cause may be shown in the memorial mentioned in the next section, or the owner may be heard personally by the local authority.

(m) See as to the consequences of default in the performance of this duty, the P. H. A., 1875, s. 299, and notes thereto, ante, p. 632. See also the L. G. A., 1894, ss. 16, 19 (8).

Appeal by owner against requirement to provide water supply.

4. Where an owner of a house has been required by the notice of a rural sanitary authority to provide a supply of water for his house, and objects to such requirement on any of the following grounds; (that is to say,)

(1) That the supply is not required; or,

(2) That the time limited by the notice for providing the supply is insufficient; or,

(3) That it is impracticable to provide the supply at a reasonable cost (a); or,

(4) That the authority ought themselves to provide a supply of water for the district or contributory place (b) in which the house is situate, or to render the existing supply of water wholesome; or,

(5) That the whole or part of the expense of providing the supply, or of rendering the existing supply wholesome, ought to be charged on the district or contributory place;

he may, within twenty-one days after service on him of the second notice, address a memorial (c) to the authority, stating his objections, and in that case it shall not be lawful for the authority to proceed with the execution of the works which they might otherwise execute under this Act until they have been authorised to execute the same by a court of summary jurisdiction (d) or by the Local Government Board in manner hereinafter provided.

If the objections stated in the memorial do not include either the fourth or fifth of the above-mentioned grounds, the authority may apply to a court of summary jurisdiction (d) for an order authorising them to proceed with the works; and thereupon the court shall summon the owner, and, if satisfied on hearing the case that the objections are not well founded, shall make an order authorising the authority to proceed with the works in the event of their not being executed by the owner within a time limited by the order (e).

If the objections stated in the memorial are or include the fourth and fifth of the above-mentioned grounds, or either of them, the authority shall forward a copy of the memorial to the Local Government Board, who may either cancel the requirement of the authority, or confirm the same, with or without modifications (f).

If the Local Government Board confirm the requirement they shall issue an order (g) authorising the authority, subject to such modifications (if any) as they prescribe, to execute the works in the event of such works not being executed by the owner within a time limited by the order.

Any such order (f) may, if the Local Government Board think it equitable so to do, apportion the expense of providing the supply between the owner of the house and the authority of the district comprising the contributory place (b) in which the house is situate, or between the owner and any other person or persons.

If the Local Government Board cancel the requirement on the grounds that the authority ought themselves to provide a supply of water for the district or contributory place in which the house is situate, or to render the existing supply wholesome, the memorial shall be deemed to have been a complaint of default made to the Local Government Board against the authority under the two hundred and ninety-ninth section of the Public Health Act, 1875 (h).

The reference to the L. G. B. must now be read as a reference to the Minister of Health. See 9 & 10 Geo. 5, c. 21, s. 3.

(a) This means apparently that the supply cannot be provided without the expenditure of a sum greater than the maximum fixed by the last section.

(b) As to what is a contributory place, see s. 229, ante, p. 510.

(c) No form is prescribed for this memorial. It should, however, be carefully drawn up, and should, in fact, follow the words of this section as nearly as possible. It is not necessary to state evidence in support of the objections.

(d) See the definition, ante, p. 36.

(e) Note that the order does not require the owner to execute the works unless he chooses, and that it merely authorises the rural authority to do so.

(f) No provision is made for the hearing of the case by the M. of H. They may direct an inquiry under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 293, ante, p. 626.

The Ministry require in such cases to be supplied by the rural council with (a) copies of the notices served, (b) copy of the report of the inspector of nuisances or medical officer of health, (c) an estimate showing, as regards each house, without regard to any other houses which might be furnished with a supply at the same time, that the supply can be furnished within the cost limited by s. 3, and (d) the observations of the council upon the memorial of objection.

The functions of the Ministry under this section appear to be of a judicial or quasi-judicial character, similar to their functions on appeals under s. 268, ante, p. 595, or under the Housing Acts: see on the point, R. v. Local Government Board, ante, p. 598.

(g) This order will be conclusive as to the power of the local authority to execute the works, and as to the apportionment of the expenses. See the P. H. A., 1875, s. 295, ante p. 627. Note that this order, however, like that of the court of summary jurisdiction above mentioned, merely authorises the rural authority to execute the works.

(h) See this section, ante, p. 632.

Appeal against apportionment of expenses.

5. Where the expenses of providing a joint supply of water for two or more houses are apportioned under this Act (a) by a rural sanitary authority among the owners of the several houses, notice of such apportionment (b) shall be forthwith given to each of such owners; and if any owner objects to the apportionment as unjust, he may, within twenty-one days after service on him of notice thereof, apply to a justice, and thereupon the justice may summon the authority, and also the other owners, to show cause before a court of summary jurisdiction (c) why the apportionment should not be varied, and the court may either dismiss the application or make such order varying the apportionment as to the court may appear reasonable (d). Section 5.

(a) That is, under s. 3 (5), supra.

(b) As to service, see the P. H. A., 1875, ss. 266, 267, ante, p. 593.

(c) See the definition, ante, p. 36. Any one justice may issue the summons, but the hearing must be before a court of two or more justices, or a stipendiary magistrate.

(d) This order may be appealed from under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 269, ante, p. 599.

Houses in rural districts not to be erected or rebuilt without sufficient water supply.

6. It shall not be lawful in any rural district of the owner of any dwelling-house which may be erected after the date of the commencement of this Act, or of any dwelling-house which after that date may be pulled down to or below the ground floor and rebuilt, to occupy the same, or cause or permit the same to be occupied, unless and until he has obtained from the sanitary authority of the district a certificate that there is provided, within a reasonable distance of the house, such an available supply of wholesome water as may appear to such authority, on the report of their inspector of nuisances or of their medical officer of health, to be sufficient for the consumption and use for domestic purposes of the inmates of the house (a).

If the sanitary authority refuse to grant such certificate, the owner may apply to a court of summary jurisdiction for an order authorising the occupation of the house notwithstanding the refusal of the certificate, and thereupon the court shall summon the authority, and if the court, after hearing the case, is of opinion that the certificate ought to have been granted, the court may make an order authorising the occupation of the house (b).

Any owner (c) who occupies a house or causes or permits it to be occupied in contravention of this section shall be liable on conviction by a court of summary jurisdiction to a penalty not exceeding ten pounds (d).

(a) The effect of this section (which should be compared with the P. H. A., 1875, s. 62, ante, p. 137, which applies to all houses, whether old or new) is to prevent the occupation of any new house in a rural district until it has been properly supplied with water.

Duty of medical officer.

With regard to the reports required with a view to granting certificates under this section, the L. G. B. stated that they were advised that local authorities were empowered to call upon their medical officers of health to make such reports, and, unless the terms of appointment of the officer provided for his receiving remuneration in addition to his salary for such reports, the Board considered that his services in this respect must be regarded as covered by his salary.

Analysis of water.

In reply to an inquiry as to whether a rural council are justified in charging applicants for a certificate with the cost of the analysis made before granting the certificate, the Board pointed out that the section requires the local authority to found their decision on the report of their inspector of nuisances or medical officer; if for their own satisfaction they required a report from someone else, e.g., from an analytical chemist, it appeared to the Board that there was no legal authority which would enable them to require the owner of a house to pay for it.

(b) For the definition of a court of summary jurisdiction, see ante, p. 36. This clause gives the owner an appeal to the court. There is a further appeal to quarter sessions under s. 269, ante, p. 599, against the determination of the court whether the order is made or refused.

(c) See the definition, ante, p. 8.

Note to Section 6.

(d) For the recovery of this penalty, see the P. H. A., 1875, s. 251, ante, p. 551 and see s. 253, ante, p. 559.

An owner who gives the keys to his tenants with permission to put their furniture in, but not to reside themselves till the certificate has been obtained, commits a technical breach of the statute (Downie v. Fraser (1901), 3 F. 1044; cf. Gowen v Sedgwick on p. 347, ante).

Periodical inspection of water supply.

7. It shall be the duty of every rural sanitary authority from time to time to take such steps as may be necessary to ascertain the condition of the water supply within their district, and the authority may pay all reasonable costs and expenses incurred by them for the purpose of taking such steps. The authority, or any of their officers, or any person duly authorised in writing for that purpose by the authority, if they or he have or has reasonable ground for believing that any occupied dwelling-house within the district is without a proper supply of wholesome water sufficient for the consumption and use for domestic purposes (a) of the inmates of such house, shall be admitted into the premises for which such supply is required or from which the water supply may be derived for the purpose of ascertaining whether or not such house has such a supply within a reasonable distance; and for the purposes of any such admission sections one hundred and two and one hundred and three of the Public Health Act, 1875, shall apply in the same manner as if such admission were necessary for the purpose of examining as to the existence of any nuisance on the premises, and the person so authorised as aforesaid were an officer of the rural sanitary authority (b).

(a) See the note to these words as used in the Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847, s. 53, in App. I., post, Vol. II.

(b) See these sections, ante, pp. 188, 189. Note that the officer or other person cannot effect an entry by force. If admission is denied him he must obtain a justice's order.

Under this section a Rural District Council have greater powers of entry than an urban council have under the P. H. A. 1875. But an urban council may obtain powers under this section; see s. 11, post, p. 709.

Explanation of 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55, s. 62, as to meaning of "reasonable cost."

8. Where application is made to the Local Government Board by a local authority under section sixty-two of the Public Health Act, 1875 (a), to determine what is a reasonable cost within the meaning of that section, the Board may, for that purpose, fix, by order, a general scale of charges for the whole or any part of the district of the local authority, and the cost of the supply of water to any house within the area specified in the order shall be deemed to be determined to be a reasonable cost within the meaning of that section if it does not exceed the cost authorised by such general scale of charges (b).

(a) See this section and notes thereto, ante, p. 137.

(b) Many orders are annually made by the Ministry of Health under the combined sections. The charges fixed apply only to cases of compulsory supply of water to premises, though the authorised scale is frequently adopted for purposes of general water rate.

Rating for water supply by stand-pipes.

9. Where a rural sanitary authority have provided a stand-pipe or stand-pipes for the supply of water to any portion of their district, they may recover water rates or water rents (a) from the owner or occupier of every dwelling-house within two hundred feet of any such stand-pipe, in the same manner in all respects as if the supply had been given on the premises.

Provided that if any such dwelling-house has, within a reasonable distance, and from other sources, a supply of wholesome water sufficient for the consumption and use of the inmates of the house, no water rate or water rent shall be recoverable from the owner or occupier of the house unless and until the water supplied by the authority by means of such stand-pipes is used by inmates of the house (b).

(a) Water rates are made under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 56, ante, p. 129. Water rents are payments made to the authority under agreements between them and the consumer. See s. 56, note (a), ante, p. 129.

(b) Primâ facie water rates will be payable in respect of every house within 200 feet of a stand-pipe. But payment cannot be enforced if the person charged can show that he is within the proviso.

Where the appellants were authorised by their incorporating Act to make byelaws levying a water rate "in respect of lands and tenements distant not more than sixty yards from any main, . . . although such lands or premises are not actually connected with any main," it was held that they had no authority to levy a rate on lands without the prescribed limit, merely because such lands formed one holding with other lands within the prescribed limit (Hunter District Water Supply and Sewerage Board v. Newcastle Wallsend Coal Co., [1896] A. C. 82).

Power to require water rates to be levied. 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55.

10. Where a sanitary authority under the provisions of the Public Health Act, 1875, as amended by this Act, supply water in any urban district (a) or in any contributory place (a), and an application is made to them by any ten persons rated to the relief of the poor in such urban district, or by any five persons so rated in such contributory place, to charge water rates or water rents in respect of the water so supplied, it shall be incumbent upon the authority to exercise the powers given to them by the Public Health Act, 1875, and by this Act, of charging water rates or water rents in respect of all water supplied by them in such urban district or in such contributory place (b).

(a) As to what is an urban district, see the P. H. A., 1875, s. 6, ante, p. 37, and as to what is a contributory place, see ibid., s. 229, ante, p. 510.

(b) The effect of this is to transfer all or part of the expense of the water supply from the entire urban district or contributory place to the consumers. The default of the local authority in complying with this section is not provided for. The proper remedy is probably by mandamus. See notes to s. 56 of the Act of 1875, p. 129, ante : semble, it is for the authority to decide whether to charge by rates or by rents. It will be observed that the amount of the rates or rents is left to the discretion of the authority.

Powers of urban sanitary authorities in certain cases.

11. The Local Government Board may, if they think fit by Order (a) invest any urban sanitary authority with all or any of the powers and duties which are by this Act given to a rural sanitary authority and such investment may be made either unconditionally or subject to any conditions to be specified by the Board as to the time, portion of the district, or manner during at or in which the powers and duties are to be exercised (b).

(a) This Order will be conclusive. See s. 295, ante, p. 627.

(b) It has been suggested that this section does not enable the Board (now the Minister of Health) to apply certain of the provisions of the Act to urban districts.

Note to Section 11.

Thus, under s. 6 a duty is imposed on owners of certain dwelling-houses in rural districts, and the Board have expressed some doubt whether, if an urban council were invested with the powers of the section, the effect would be to impose on owners in the urban district the duty in question.

In connection with an application from an urban council to be invested with the powers of ss. 3—5, the Ministry require to be informed if the council have considered whether the individual supplies of wholesome water which they may require to be enforced can be provided at the reasonable cost defined by the Act, or whether the need of water could not be better met by schemes of public supply.

In the case of s. 7 specific evidence is required by the Ministry that the powers of the P. H. A., 1875, ss. 62, 70, have been found insufficient in practice. In the case of s. 9 a statement of grounds is required in support of the opinion that a supply of water by stand-pipes in the district is desirable and satisfactory. The Ministry also require to know the position of the houses it is proposed to supply by stand-pipes, and their distance from water mains and stand-pipes respectively.

Forms in Schedule.

12. The forms contained in the Schedule to this Act, or forms to like effect varied as circumstances may require, may be used, and shall be deemed sufficient for all purposes.

Cf. note to the P. H. A., 1875, s. 317, p. 653, ante.

Powers of Act cumulative.

13. All powers given by this Act shall be deemed to be in addition to and not in derogation of any other powers conferred by Act of Parliament, law, or custom.

Compare s. 341 of the P. H. A., 1875, ante, p. 666.

THE SCHEDULE.

Section 12.

FORM (A).

Form of Notice requiring Owner to provide a Supply of Water for an Occupied House.

To the owner of the house occupied by [state name of occupier] and situated at [give such description as may be sufficient to identify the premises] within the district of [describe the local authority].

Whereas it appears to the above-named [local authority] on the report of their [inspector of nuisances or their medical officer of health, as the case may be] that the said house has not within a reasonable distance an available supply of wholesome water sufficient for the consumption and use for domestic purposes of the inmates of the house by reason of the existing supply not being [wholesome or sufficient, or within a reasonable distance, as the case may be], and that the requisite supply can be provided at a reasonable cost: and whereas the said [local authority] are of opinion that such supply ought to be provided at your expense as the owner of the said house, or defrayed as private improvement expenses:

Now, therefore, we, the said [local authority], in pursuance of the Public Health (Water) Act, 1878, do hereby require you to provide an available supply of wholesome water sufficient for the consumption and use for domestic purposes of the inmates of the said house within a reasonable distance from such house, and to do all such works as may be necessary for that purpose within [state the time] from the date of the service hereof.

Dated this day of 18 .

(Signed)

Clerk to the said [local authority].

FORM (B). Schedule.

Form of Second Notice to be served where Requirements of First Notice have not been complied with. Section 12.

To the owner of the house occupied by [state name of occupier] and situated at [give such description as may be sufficient to indentify the premises] within the district of [describe the local authority].

Whereas on the day of the above-named [local authority], in pursuance of the Public Health (Water) Act, 1878, served on you a notice bearing date the day of requiring you as the owner of the said house to provide an available supply of wholesome water sufficient for the consumption and use for domestic purposes of the inmates of the said house within a reasonable distance from such house, and to do all such works as might be necessary for that purpose within [state the time] from the date of the service of such notice:

And whereas the said notice has not been complied with: Now, therefore, we, the said [local authority], do hereby give you notice that if the requirements of the said first notice dated the day of are not complied with within one month from the date of the service hereof, we [describe local authority] will ourselves provide a supply of water for the said house, and do all necessary works for that purpose, and that the cost which may be incurred therein will be recovered from you summarily or be recovered as private improvement expenses.

Dated this day of 18 .

(Signed)
Clerk to the said [local authority].

THE PUBLIC HEALTH (INTERMENTS) ACT, 1879.

(42 & 43 VICT. c. 31.)

An Act to amend the Public Health Act, 1875, as to Interments.

[21st July 1879.]

1. This Act may be cited as the Public Health (Interments) Act, 1879, and shall be construed as one with the Public Health Act, 1875, in this Act called the principal Act. Short title and construction. 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55.

2.—(1) The provisions of the principal Act, as to a place for the reception of the dead before interment, in the principal Act called a mortuary, shall extend to a place for the interment of the dead, in this Act called a cemetery; and the purposes of the principal Act shall include the acquisition, construction, and maintenance of a cemetery. The provisions of 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55, extended to cemeteries.

(2) A local authority may acquire, construct, and maintain a cemetery either wholly or partly within or without their district, subject as to works without their district for the purpose of a cemetery to the provisions of the principal Act as to sewage works by a local authority without their district. 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55, ss. 32—34.

(3) A local authority may accept a donation of land for the purpose of a cemetery, and a donation of money or other property for enabling them to acquire, construct, or maintain a cemetery.

The provisions of the principal Act here referred to are ss. 141—143, ante, pp. 249—253. The text, therefore, enables the local authority to provide and fit up a cemetery, and they must do so if the L. G. B. (now the Ministry of Health) so require. They may also make byelaws with respect to its management and charges for the use thereof.

Note to Section 2.

On August 19th, 1879, the L. G. B. issued a circular letter in which the duties and powers of local authorities are clearly set forth: and the following are extracts from such letter (with added references to the provisions of the Burial Act, 1900, the text of which with notes is set out in App. I., post, Vol. II., and other Acts):

Circumstances under which cemetery should be provided.

"The legislature has not specified the cases in which it is incumbent upon the sanitary authority to give effect to the provisions of the new statute; but, seeing that it is incorporated with the Public Health Act, there can be no doubt that wherever, in the interests of the public health, it is necessary that a cemetery should be provided in any locality, the legislature contemplated that the local authority would exercise the important powers now conferred upon them.

"The following may be referred to as circumstances under which it will be incumbent upon the sanitary authority to take action:

"1. Where in any burial ground which remains in use there is not proper space for burial, and no other suitable burial ground has been provided;

"2. Where the continuance in use of any burial ground (notwithstanding there may be such space) is by reason of its situation in relation to the water supply of the locality, or by reason of any circumstances whatsoever, injurious to the public health;

"3. Where, for the protection of the public health, it is expedient to discontinue burials in a particular town, village, or place, or within certain limits.

"There are other circumstances which might render it necessary or expedient that a cemetery should be provided, such as inconvenience of access from the populous parts of the district to the existing burial ground, or the nature of the site, or the character of the subsoil; and instances may exist where, in deference to the wishes of the inhabitants, it may be expedient to provide, in accordance with the policy of the Burial Acts, a cemetery in which persons of different creeds may be buried with their own religious rites. On all or any of the foregoing grounds the authority of the Local Government Board may be invoked, and if the application should prove well founded, a compulsory order would necessarily follow."

* * * * * *

Incidence of cost.

"In the case of an urban sanitary authority the rate liable for this cost will be the general district rate, or other rate applicable to the general purposes of the Public Health Act within the district. In the case of a rural sanitary authority the amount would come under the head of general expenses, and be defrayed out of the rate applicable to the payment of such expenses.

"If, however, the cemetery were provided for a separate contributory place, by which is meant a parish or special drainage district, or so much of a parish as is not within an urban sanitary district [now see the L. G. A., 1894, s. 36], or a special drainage district, it would be competent for the Local Government Board to order the amount to be special expenses, in which event the charge would be borne by the particular contributory place, but with this distinction in the incidence of the rate, that whereas in the case of general expenses the amount is either paid out of the poor rate or levied by a rate of an equal sum in the pound, in the case of special expenses the amount is raised by a separate rate to which lands are assessable at only one-fourth. It may be useful to add here that the rates referred to would in like manner be applicable to the maintenance of the cemetery after it is established, and also that a rural sanitary authority may depute to a parochial committee [and to a parish council (see L. G. A., 1894, s. 15)] the exercise of their powers in connection with the management of any cemetery which may be required for any contributory place."

* * * * * *

Regulation of cemetery.

"With regard to the regulation of the cemetery after it has been established, I am to state that the application to a cemetery of s. 141 of the Public Health Act, 1875, will enable the sanitary authority to make byelaws with respect to the management and charges for the use of any cemetery established by them, and in this manner to provide for the orderly conduct of all persons within its limits, for the regulation of graves, and for the payment of reasonable fees for interments therein. [As to fees, however, reference should now be made to s. 3 of the Burial Act, 1900.]

"It should be borne in mind, however, that such byelaws must be made in conformity with the Public Health Act, and be confirmed by the central authority; and the President contemplates that the department should hereafter frame a series of model byelaws to be recommended for adoption. [See Mackenzie and Handford's Model Byelaws, Vol. I., p. 489.]

Note to Section 2.

"In order to make further provision for the due maintenance and management of a cemetery, the recent statute incorporates the Cemeteries Clauses Act, 1847.

"That Act forms one of a series of statutes passed in 1847, the object being in each case to comprise in one general Act the provisions usually contained in Acts of Parliament relating to matters of local improvement or administration. Several of these Acts, as well as other Consolidation Acts, were incorporated, either wholly or partly with the Public Health Act, 1875, and the particular Act referred to has previously been incorporated with some general and several local improvement Acts. Its provisions will now form part of the Public Health Act, 1875, and will apply, subject to the necessary qualifications, to all cemeteries acquired, constructed, or maintained by a sanitary authority under the new Act.

"The President, therefore, thinks it right to direct the attention of the sanitary authority to the following obligations and powers imposed upon and exercisable by them under the incorporated enactments.

"With respect to the Making of the Cemetery.

"The cemetery is not to be constructed nearer to any dwelling-house than 200 yards, except with the consent of the owner and occupier. [Reduced to 100 yards by the Burial Act, 1906.]

"The sanitary authority may build such chapels in the cemetery for the performance of burial services as they may think fit, and lay out and embellish the grounds of the cemetery. [As to chapels, special provision is further made by the Burial Act, 1900, s. 2.]

"The cemetery must be enclosed by substantial walls, or iron railings, of the height of eight feet at least. [But the application of this provision to cemeteries provided under the Public Health (Interments) Act, 1879, is now repealed by the Burial Act, 1900, s. 10.]

"The sanitary authority must keep the cemetery, and the buildings and fences thereof, in complete repair and in good order and condition.

"With respect to Burials.

"The sanitary authority may set apart a portion of the cemetery for burials according to the rights of the Established Church, and the bishop of the diocese may, on the application of the sanitary authority, consecrate the portion so set apart. [See also s. 1 of the Burial Act, 1900.]

"A chapel, to be approved by the Bishop, must be built on the consecrated part for the performance of the burial service of the Established Church. [See also as to other chapels, s. 2 of the Burial Act, 1900.]

"A salaried chaplain is to be appointed to officiate in the consecrated part of the cemetery, the appointment and salary to be subject to the approval of the bishop.

"The sanitary authority may set apart the whole or a portion of the unconsecrated part of the cemetery as a place of burial for persons not being members of the Established Church [see also the Burial Act, 1900, ss. 6 and 9], and may allow in any chapel built in such unconsecrated part a burial service to be performed according to the rites of any church or congregation other than the Established Church. [See also the Burial Act, 1900, s. 2.]

"With respect to exclusive rights of Burial and Monumental Inscriptions.

"The sanitary authority may set apart portions of the cemetery for the purpose of granting exclusive rights of burial therein, and may sell the exclusive right of burial in such portions, and the right of placing any monument or gravestone in the cemetery or any tablet or monumental inscription on the walls of any chapel or other building in the cemetery.

"It should be observed that the Act under consideration does not extend to the metropolis, and it is scarcely necessary to point out that in other parts of the country where suitable cemeteries are in existence there can rarely be need for resorting to its provisions.

"The President trusts, however, that in other localities the sanitary authorities will not hesitate to avail themselves of the important powers conferred by the Act, having regard to their serious obligations in the interest of the public health and to the responsibilities imposed upon them by the legislature."

A memorandum as to the sanitary requirements of cemeteries has been issued by the L. G. B. A copy will be found in App. II., post, Vol. II.

Loans for cemeteries: Practice of the M. of H.

When the L. G. B. (now the Ministry of Health) are asked to sanction a loan for the provision of a cemetery under this Act, the following documents and particulars seem to be required:

(1) A copy of a resolution of the local authority authorising application to be made for sanction to a loan.

(2) A plan of the site, drawn to scale, having the position of the trial holes marked upon it.

(3) A key plan showing the locality of the site, its situation with regard to adjoining properties and the points of the compass, and the means of access to the ground and the position of any sources of domestic water supply near the site.

(4) Plans, sections and detailed estimates of the cost of all the proposed works.

(5) Financial particulars of the district (in a form supplied).

(6) A report by the medical officer of health on the suitability of the proposed site. The question of the freedom from risk of contaminating sources of domestic water supply, and of nuisance from the disposal of drainage water should receive consideration in this report.

(7) The area and precise locality of the proposed ground.

(8) Whether any part of the proposed burial ground is outside the district, and, if so, the names of the civil parish and sanitary district. Proofs similar to those required by the Board in the case of sewage works beyond district (see note to the P. H. A., 1875, s. 32), should also be supplied of the due observance of the requirements of s. 2 (2) of this Act.

(9) The average annual number of burials in the district for ten years.

(10) Whether an Order in Council has been issued prohibiting the opening of a new burial ground in the parish in which the site is situate without the consent of the Secretary of State or the Board (now the Ministry of Health). If so, a reference to it. [A local authority are frequently unable to answer this question, and the department is willing to direct a search of the records.]

(11) The distance of the site from—

(a) the nearest inhabited part of the district;

(b) the remotest part of such district;

(c) the most densely populated part of the district.

(12)—(a) Whether there are any, and if so, how many, dwellings within 100 yards of the site.

(b) Whether the consents in writing of the owners, lessees and occupiers of such dwellings have been obtained.

(13) Whether there are any sources of domestic water supply near the site. If so, a description of these sources and a statement of the distance in each case from the site.

(14) The nature of the soil as ascertained by trial holes at least eight feet deep. (The holes should preferably be sunk near each corner and the centre, and in other parts of the ground.)

(15) Whether the soil is free from water to a depth of eight feet.

If not—

(a) the depth at which water is met with;

(b) what means are available for the drainage of the subsoil to the depth of eight feet and for the disposal of the resulting water.

(16) Whether an agreement (subject to the approval of the Ministry being obtained) has been entered into for the purchase of the site.

(17) The price to be paid for the land.

The terms allowed by the Board for the repayment of loans for cemetery purposes are:—

	Maximum	Note to Section 2.
For land	60 years.
„ building and drainage works	30 „
„ laying out and planting	20 „
„ fencing and gates	15—20 „

Control of the Ministry.

It will be seen that the Ministry must be approached upon the subject of the provision or extension of a cemetery under the Act (a) if a loan is proposed, (b) if compulsory powers of purchase are required, (c) if the cemetery is to be situate beyond the district, and a statutory objection has been made, or (d) if there is an Order in Council in force prohibiting the opening of a new burial ground in the parish without the previous approval of the central department. If none of these conditions apply to the proposals of a local authority, they are at liberty to proceed without consulting the Ministry. A rural district council providing a cemetery should obtain a special expenses order under the P. H. A., 1875, s. 229, even if no loan is proposed.

Where it was proposed to purchase copyhold land for use as a burial ground, the L. G. B. required, as a condition precedent to loan sanction being given, that provision should be made for its enfranchisement, and they suggested that this should be arranged with the vendor as part of the condition of purchase and sale.

Advantages of proceeding under this Act.
